1. A child; a baby.
   Generally used of young persons in contempt.
   These will appear such chitys in story,
   Will turn all politicks to jest. —Montesquieu.
2. The shoot of corn from the end of the grain.
   A cant term with malsters.
   Barley, couched four days, will begin to show the chit or spilt at the root-end. —Mortimer's Husbandry.
3. A freckle. [from chiepeace.] In this sense it is seldom used.
CHI

To CHIT. r. n. [from the noun.] To sprout; to shoot at the end of the grain; cant.

I have known barley chit in seven hours after it had been thrown forth. Mortimer's Husbandry.

CHITCHAT. n. s. [corrupted by reduplication from chat.] Prattle; idle prate; idle talk. A word only used in ludicrous conversation.

I am a member of a female society, who call ourselves the chit-chat club. Their opinions.

CHITTERINGS. n. s. without singular. [from schyter lingh, Dut. Minchew; from kuttles, Germ. Skinber.] The guts; the bowels. Skinner.

CHITY. adj. [from chit.] Childish; like a baby.

CHIVALROUS. adj. [from chivalry.] Relating to chivalry, or errant knighthood; knighthly; warlike; adventurous; daring.

A word now out of use.

And noble minds of yore allured were
In heroes' chivalry's strong empire. Fairy Q

CHIVALRY. n. s. [chalecree, Fr. Knighthood, from cheval a horse; as eques in Latin.

1. Knighthood; a military dignity.

There be now, for martial encouragement, some degree of Knighthood; which, nevertheless, are conferred promiscuously upon soldiers and no soldiers.

2. The qualifications of a knight; as, valour, dexterity in arms.

Thus hast slain
The bow'r of Europe for his chivalry. Shakesp.

I may speak it to my shame,
I have a traitor born to chivalry. Shakesp.

3. The general system of knighthood.

Solemnly he swore,
That, by the faith which knights to knighthood bore,
And whate'er else to chivalry belongs,
He would not cease till he reveng'd their wrongs.

Dyer.

4. An adventure; an exploit. Not now in use.

They four doing acts more dangerous, though less famous, because they were but private chivalries.

Sidney.

5. The body or order of knights.

And by his light
Did all the chivalry of England move to do brave acts. Shakesp.

6. In law.

Servient militare, of the French chivalry; a tenure of land by knight's service. There is no land but is held mediately or immediately of the crown, by some service or other; and therefore are all our freetholds, that are to us and our heirs, called fousa, fees, as proceeding from the benefit of the king. The king gave to the nobles large possessions for this or that rent and service, so they parcell'd out their lands, so receiv'd for rents and services, as they thought good; and those services are by Littleton divided into chivalry and socage. The one is martial and military; the other, clovenish and rustic. Chivalry is a tenure of service, whereby the tenant is bound to perform some noble or military office unto his lord; and is of two sorts; either regal, that is, such as may hold only of the king; or such as may hold also of a common person as well as of the king. That which may hold only of the king is properly called servage; and is again divided into grand or petit, i.e., great or small. Chivalry that may hold of a common person, as well as of the king, is called scutagium. Coke.

7. It ought properly to be written chivalry. It is a word not much used, but in old poems or romances.

CHIVES. n. s. [cive, Fr. Skinner.]

1. The heads or filaments rising in flowers with seeds at the end.

The masculine or prolific seed contained in the chives or apices of the stamens. Ray on the Creation.

CHLOROSIS. n. s. [from χλωρος, green.]

The green-sickness.

To CHOH. See CHOKE.

CHOCOLATE. n. s. [chocolate, Span.]

1. The nut of the cacao tree.

The tree hath a rose flower, of a great number of petals, which, when the fruits arise from it, being a tube cut into many parts, which becomes a fruit shaped somewhat like a cucumber, and deeply furrowed, in which are contained several seeds, collected into an oblong heap, and slit down, somewhat like almonds. It is a native of America, and is found in great plenty in several places between the tropicks, and grows wild. See Cocoa. Miller.

2. The cake or mass, made by grinding the kernel of the cacao nut with other substances, to be dissolved in hot water.

The Spaniards were formerly the first who brought chocolate into use in Europe, to promote the consumption of their cacao-nuts, and other drugs, which return'd to West India's furnish'd, and with which enter'd the composition of chocolate. Chambers.

3. The liquor made by a solution of chocolate in hot water.

Chocolate is certainly much the best of these three exotick liquors: it is so esteemed both rich, spirituous, and agreeable, that it is called the panacea of the world. Pape.

CHOCOLATE HOUSE. n. s. [chocolate and hon.]

A house where company is entirely entertained with chocolate.

Ever since that time, Lisbon has been twice a day at the chocolate-house. Tatler.

CHOKE. [the old preterite from chide.]

See CHIDE.

And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban, Grecian.

CHOICELY. adj. [choise, French.]

1. Curiously; with exact choice.

Collected choicely from every county some. Shakesp.

2. Valuably; excellently.

It is certain it is choicely good. Talliam. Angler.

CHOICENESS. n. s. [from chote.]

Nicety; particular value.

Carry into the shade such auriculae, seedlings, or pions, as are for their choicenesse reserved in pots. Evelyn's Kalendar.

CHOIR. n. s. [chorea, Lat.]

1. An assembly of band of singers.

They now assist the choir of angels, who their songs admire. Weller.

2. The singers in divine worship.

The choir.

With all the choicest musick of the kingdom, Together sung Te Deum. Shakesp.

3. The part of the church where the choirs or singers are placed.

The lords and ladies, having brought the queen To the proper place to sing, caroll, fell off at distance from her. Shakesp.

To CHOKE. v. a. [accoen, Sax. from coco the check or mouth. According to Minshew, from 3; from whence, probably, the Spanish ahogar.]

1. To suffocate; to kill by stopping the passage of respiration.

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself. Shakesp.

While you thunder'd, clouds of dust did choke Contending troops. Weller.

2. To (cause) to obstruct; to block up a passage.

Men troop'd up to the king's caponiers court, Whose ports were chold with the resort. Chapman.
CHO

They are at continual expense to cleanse the ports, and keep them from being choked up, by the help of several engines.

While pray'rs and tears his destin'd progress stay,
And crowds of mourner's choke their sove'reign's way.

3. To hinder by obstruction or confinement.

As two swimmers that do cling together, And choke with water, Shakesp.

It seems the fire is so choked, as not to be able to remove the stone. Baco's Nat. Hist.

You must make the mould big enough to contain the whole fruit, when it is grown to the greatest; or else you will choke the spreading of the fruit. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The fire, which choked in ashes lay, A loud too heavy for his soul to move, Was upward blown below, and burnt down away by love. Dryden.

4. To suppress.

And yet we ventur'd; for the gain propor'd Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd. Shakesp.

Confess the freely of dry sin: For to cloath every article with oath, Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception That I do groan within. Shakesp.

5. To overpower.

And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection. Luke.

No fruitful crop the sickly fields return; But oats and darnel choke the rising corn. Dryden's Past.

CHOKE. n. s. [from the verb.] The filamentous or capillary part of an artichoke. A cant word.

CHOKE-PEAR. n. s. [from choke and pear.]

1. A rough, harsh, unpleasant pear.
2. Any aspersion or sarcasm, by which another is put to silence. A low term.

Pardon me for going so low as to talk of giving choke-pears. Clarisas.

CHOKER. n. s. [from choke.]

1. One that chokes or suffocates another.
2. One that puts another to silence.
3. Any thing that cannot be answered.

CHOKE-WEEP, n. s. [crangina.] A plant.

CHOK'Y. adj. [from choke.] That which has the power of suffocation.

CHOLAGO'GUES, n. s. [Greek bile.] Medicines which have the power of purging bile or choler.

CHO'LER. n. s. [chola, Lat. from Greek.] The bile.

1. Macarius Ficimus increases these proportions, adding two more of pure choler. Wotton on Education.

There would be a main defect, if such a feeding animal, and so subject unto diseases from bilious causes, should want a proper conveyance for choler. Brown's Vtg. Errors.

2. The humour which, by its super-abundance, is supposed to produce insensibility.

It engenders choler, planteth anger; And he that were that both of us did last, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are cholerick, Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh. Shaks.

3. Anger raging.

Put him to choker straight: he hath been used Ever to conquer, and to have his word Of contradiction. Shakesp.

CHO'LERICK. adj. [cholericus, Latin.]

1. Abounding with choler.

Our two great poets being so different in their tempers, the one cholerick and sanguine, the other phlegmastick and melancholy. Dryden.

2. Angry; irascible; of persons.

Bull, in the main, was an honest plain-dealing fellow, cholerick, bold, and of a very unconstem temper. Arbuthnot.

3. Anxious; offensive; of words or actions.

There came in cholerick haste towards me about seven or eight knights. Sidney.

Because threateneth all that read him, using his vehement and bitter words, Raleigh's History of the World.

CHO'LERICKNESS. n. s. [from cholerick.]

Anger; irascibility; peevishness.

To CHO'USE. v. a. I chose, I have chosen, or chose. [choisir, Fr. coeger, Saxon, kiesen, Germ.]

1. To take by way of preference of several things offered; not to reject. Did chuse him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest. 1 Sam. ii. 28.

I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike. Shakesp.

If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him. Dryden.

2. To take; not to refuse.

Let us choose to usel judgment; let us know among ourselves what is good. Job.

The will has still so much freedom left as to enable it to choose any act in its kind; and as also to refuse any act in its kind evil. South's Sermons.

3. To select; to pick out of a number.

How much less shall I answer him, and choose my words to him? Job.

4. To elect for eternal happiness; to predetermine to life. A term of theologians.

To CHOOSE. v. n. To have the power of a choice between different things. It is generally joined with a negative, and signifies must necessarily be.

Without the influence of the Deity supporting things, their after amutation could not choose but follow. Hooker.

Knaves abroad, Who haveing by their own importunate suit Convinced or surprised them, they cannot choose, But must blab. When a favourite shall be raised upon the foundation of merit then can he not choose but prosper. Bacon.

Throw down a golden apple in her way; For all her haste, she could not choose but stay. Dryden.

Those who are persuaded that they shall continue for ever, cannot choose but aspire after a happiness commensurate to their duration. Tillotson.

CHOSER, n. s. [from choose.] He that has the power or office of choosing; elector.

Come all into this nut, quoth she; Come close to it, be ruled by me. For room you need not wrestle. Dryden.

In all things to deal with other men, as if I might have my own favourite. Ham. and Oth. Crof. Cat.

This generality is not sufficient to make a good choosuer, without a more particular contraction of his judgment. Wotton.

To CHOP. v. a. [kappen, Dutch, couper, French.]

1. To cut with a quick blow.

What shall we do, if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our compleats? Shakesp.

Chop off his head, and say. Shakesp.

Within these three days his head is to be chopped off. Shaks.

And where the cleaver chops the heifer's spoil, By breathing nostril hold. Gay's Tristia.

2. To devour eagerly; with up.

You are for making a hasty meal, and for chopping up your entertainment like an hungry clown. Dryden.

Upon the opening of his mouth he devours his breakfast, which the fox presently chopped up. L'Estrange.

3. To mince; to cut into small pieces.

They break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot. Mason.

Some granaries are made with clay, mingled with hair, chopped straw, mulch, and such like. Mortimer's Husbandry.

By dividing them into chapters and verses, they are so chopped and minced, and stand so broken and divided, that the common people take the verses usually for different apothorisms. Locke.

4. To break into chunks.

I remember the cow's dugs, that her pretty chop hands had unfixed, Shakesp.

To CHOP. n. [cepan, Sax. koopen, Dutt. to buy.]

1. To purchase, generally by way of truck; to give one thing for another.

The chopping of bargains, when a man buys not to hold but to sell again, grindeth upon the seller and the buyer. Boren.

2. To put one thing in the place of another.

Sets up communities and senses, To chop and change intelligences. Hudibras.

Afflue the Tragick chop'd and chang'd, The warthy with the fiery rang'd. Hudibras.

We go on chopping and changing our friends, as well as our horses. L'Estrange.

3. To bandy; to alternate; to return one thing or word for another.

Let not the council at the bar chop with the judge, and wound himself into the handling of the cause a-new, after the judge hath declared his sentence. Boren.

You'll never leave off your chopping of logick, till your skin is turned over your ears for praying. L'Estrange.

CHOP. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A piece chopped off. See CHIP.

Sir William Coghill compounded for fifteen hundred pounds; yet Empson would have cut another chop out of him, if the king had not died. Bacen.

2. A small piece of meat, commonly of mutton.

Old cross condenmns all persons to be fops, That can't regale themselves with mutton chops. King's Colt.

3. A crack, or cleft.

Water will make wood to swell; as we see in the filling of the chops of bowls, by laying them in water. Bacen.

CHOP'HOUSE. n. s. [from chop and house.] A mean house of entertainment, where provision ready dressed is sold. I lost my place at the chop-house, where every man eats in publib a mess of broth, or chop of meat, in silence. Spectator.

CHOP'PIN. n. s. [French.]
1. A French liquid measure, containing nearly a pint of Winchester.

CHOPPING. participle adj. [In this sense, of uncertain etymology.] An epithet frequently applied to infants, by way of ludicrous commendation : imagined by Skinner to signify lusty, from car, Sax.; by others to mean a child that would bring money at a market. Perhaps a greedy, hungry child, likely to live.

Both Jack Freeman and Ned Wild would own the fair and chopping child. Fenton.

CHOPPING-BLOCK. n.s. [chop and block.] A log of wood, on which any thing is laid to be cut in pieces.

The straight smooth cull is good for siles, boards, chopping-blocks. Mortimer’s Hush.

CHOPPING-KNIFE. n.s. [chop and knife.] A knife with which cooks mince their meat.

Here comes Dametas, with a sword by his side, a forest bill on his neck, and a chopping-knife under his girdle.

CHOPPY. adj. [from chop.] Full of holes, clefts, or cracks.

You seem to understand me, By each at once her choppy finger laying Upon her skin pits. Shakes.

CHOPS. n.s. without a singular. [corrupted probably from Chaps, which see.]

1. The mouth of a beast.
   So soon as my chops begin to walk, yours must be walking too, for company. E’Strange.

2. The mouth of man, used in contempt.
   He never shook hands, nor bid farewell to him, Till he be ashamed from the nape to the chops. Shakes.

3. The mouth of any thing in familiar language; or of a river, of a smith’s vice.

CHORAL. adj. [from choral, Lat.]

1. Belonging to or composing a choir or concert.

All sounds on fret by string or golden wire Temper’d soft tumult internally with voice.

Choral union.

Choral symphonies. Milton.

2. Singing in a choir.

And choral seraphs ring the second day. Amhurst.

CHORD. n.s. [chorda, Lat.] When it signifies a rope or string in general, it is written cord: when its primitive signification is preserved, the h is retained.

1. The string of a musical instrument.

Who mov’d their stops and chords, was seen; his volant touch instinct thro’ all proportions, loud and low, Fled and pursued transverse the resonant quire. Milton.

2. [In geometry.] A right line, which joins the tworod’s of any arch of a circle.

To CHORD. v.a. [from the noun.] To furnish with strings or chords; to string.

What passion cannot music raise and quell? When Jubal struck the chorded shell, His listing brethren stood around. Dryden.

CHORDÉE. n.s. [from chorda, Lat.] A contraction of the freemium.

CHORION. n.s. [xara] to contain.] The outward membrane that envelops the fetus.

CHORIST. n.s. [from chorus.]

CHO. 1. A singer in cathedrals, usually a singer of the lower order; a singing boy.

2. A singer in a concert. This sense is, for the most part, confined to poetry.

And let the musing organs loudly play
   The praises of the Lord in lively notes;
   The wholes and whole, choristers, and choruses
   The joyous anthem sing. Spencer.

The new-born phoenix takes his way;
   Of airy chalizes a numerous train
   Attend his progress. Dryden.

The musical voices and accents of the choirs.

CHOROGRAPHER. n.s. [from Chorus, a region, and γράφειν to describe.] He that describes particular regions or countries.

CHOROGRAPHICAL. adj. [See chorographical.] Descriptive of particular regions or countries; laying down the boundaries of countries.

I have added a chorographical description of this terrestrial Paradise. Raleigh’s History of the World.

CHOROGRAPHICALLY. adv. [from chorographical.] In a chorographical manner; according to the rule of chorography; in a manner descriptive of particular regions.

CHOROGRAPHY. n.s. [See chorographical.] The art or practice of describing particular regions, or laying down the limits and boundaries of particular provinces. It is less in its object than geography, and greater than topography.

CHORUS. n.s. [Chorus, Lat.]

1. A number of voices in a concert.

The Grecian tragedy was at first nothing but a chorus of singers; afterwards one actor was introduced. Dryden.

2. A number of chorists, or choristers.

Never did a more full and unspotted chorus of human creatures join together in a hymn of devotion. Addison.

In praise so just let every voice be join’d,
   And fill the general chorus of mankind! Pope.

3. The persons who are supposed to behold what passes in the acts of a tragedy, and sing theirsentiments between the acts.

For supply,
   Admit me choros to this play. Shakes.

4. Verse of a song in which the company join the singer.

CHOSE. [the pretter tense, and sometimes the participle passive, from To choose.]

Our sovereign here above the rest might stand,
   And here be chose again to rule the land. Dryden.

CHOSEN. [the participle passive from To choose.]

If king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
   With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
   I’ll undertake to land them on our coast. Shakes.

CHOUGH. n.s. [ceo, Sax. choos, Fr.] A bird which frequents the rocks by the sea side, like a jackdaw, but bigger.

In birds, kites and kestrels there is a resemblance to hawks, crows with ravens, daws and chooghs. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

To crow the like impartial grace affords,
   And chooghs and daws, and such republick birds. Dryden.

CHOULE. n.s. [commonly pronounced and written jocul.] The crop of a bird.

The choule of a crop adhering unto the lower side of the bill, and so descending by the throat, is a bag or sachel. Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

CHOUSE. v.a. [The original of this word is much doubted by Skinner, who tries to deduce it from the French Bousson to laugh at; or joculuer to wheedle; and from the Teutonick koven to prattle. It is perhaps a fortuitous and cant word, without etymology.]

1. To chent; to trick; to impose upon.

Frey give us leave to bubble you once more. Dryden.

2. A trick or sham.

To CHOUSER. v.a. To grumble or mutter like a froward child. Phillips.

CHRISM. n.s. [from the verb.] This word is derived by Henshaw from kious, or chius a messenger of the Turkish court; who, says he, is little better than a fool.

1. A bubble; a tool; a man fit to be cheated.

A sottish chuse, Who, when a thief has robbed his house, Applies himself to cunning men. Hudibras.

2. A trick or sham.

CHRISTEN. v.a. [chaperman, Sax.]

1. To baptize; to initiate into christianity by water.

To CHRISTEN. v.a. [chaperman, Sax.]

2. To name; to denominate.

Where such evils as these reign, christen the thing what you will, it can be no better than a mock millennium. Bunyan.

CHRISTENDOM. n.s. [from Christ and dom.]. The collective body of Christianity; the regions of which the inhabitants profess the christian religion.

What hath been done, the parts of Christendom most afflicted can best testify.

An aner and a better soldier, none.

That christendom gives out.

His computation is universally received over all christendom. Hooker on Time.

CHRISTENING. n.s. [from the verb.]

The ceremony of the first initiation into christianity.

The queen was with great solemnity crowned at Westminster, about two years after the marriage; like an old christening that had staid long for godfathers. Bacon.

We shall insert the causes why the account of christenings hath been neglected more than that of births and deaths for unknown. Gravely.

The day of the christening being come, the house was filled with gossips. Arbuthnot and Pope.

CHRISTIAN. n.s. [christianus, Lat.]

A professor of the religion of Christ.
CHR

We Christians have certainly the best and the holiest, and most reasonable religion in the world.

Tillotson.

CHRISTIAN. adj. Professing the religion of Christ.

I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian tears, which fall like rain:
Shaks.

CHRISTIAN-NAME. n.s. The name given at the font, distinct from the gentilicium name, or surname.

CHRISTIANISM. n.s. [Christianismus, Lat.]
1. The Christian religion.
2. The nations professing Christianity.

CHRISTIANITY. n.s. [Christianita, Fr.]
The religion of Christians.

God doth will that couples, which are married,
Both indelibly, if either party be converted into Christianity, this should not make separation.
Every one, who joins in the habitual practice of any voluntary sin, cuts himself off from Christianity.
Add.

To CHRISTIANIZE. v.a. [from christian.]
To make Christian; to convert to Christianity.

The principles of Platonick philosophy, as it is now christianized.
Drudgen.

CHRISTIANLY. adv. [from christian.]
Like a Christian; as becomes one who professes the holy religion of Christ.

CHRISTMAS. n.s. [from Christ and mass.]
The day on which the nativity of our blessed Saviour is celebrated, by the particular service of the church.

CHRISTMAS-BOX. n.s. [from christmass and box.]
A box in which little presents are collected at Christmas.

When Christmas comes round, a Christmas-box they bear,
And one day makes them rich for all the year.
Gay's Travels.

CHRISTMAS-FLOWER. n.s. Hellebore.

CHRIST'S-THORN. n.s. [So called, as Skinner fancied, because the thorns have some likeness to a cross.] A plant.

It hath long sharp spines: the flower has five leaves, in form of a rose: out of the flower-cup, which is divided into several segments, rises the pulpular, which becomes a fruit, shaped like a bonnet, having a shell almost globular, which is divided into three cells, in each of which is contained a roundish seed. This is by many persons supposed to be the plant from which our Saviour's crown of thorns was composed.
Miler.

CHROMATIC. adj. [χρωματικός colour.]
1. Relating to colour.

I am now come to the third part of painting, which is called the chromatic or colouring.
Dreyden's Begins.

2. Relating to a certain species of ancient music, now unknown.

It was observed, he never touched his lyre in such a truly chromatic and enharmonic manner.
Abraham and Pope.

CHRONICAL.

1. adj. [from χρόνος time.]

CHRONIC

A chronic distemper is of length; as dropsies, asthma, and the like.
Quin.

Of diseases none are chronic, and of long duration: as quartes agues, scurvy, wherein we defer the cure unto more advantageous seasons.
Brown's Valger Errors.

The lady's use of these excellencies is to divert the old man when he is out of the pangs of a chronic disease.
Spectator.

CHRONICL. n.s. [chronique, Fr. from χρόνος time.]

1. A register or account of events in order of time.

More no yet of this;
For its a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast.
Shaks.

2. A history.

You lean too confidently on these Irish chronicles, which are most fabulous and forged.
Shaks.

If from the field I should return once more,
I and my sword will earn my chronicle.
Shaks.

I am traduce'd by tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing.
Shaks.

I give up to historian the generall and heretics
Which crowd their annals, together with those
Which you are to produce for the British chronicle.
Dryden.

To CHRONICLE. v.a. [from the noun.]
1. To record in chronicle, or history.

This to rehearse, should rather be to chronicle times than to search into reformation of abuses in that real.
Sperner.

2. To register, to record.

For now the Devil, that told me I did well.
Shaks.

Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
Shaks.

Love is your master, God forswears you:
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.
Shaks.

I shall not touch the jest of the way, nay, in too dead a
I expect to be chronicled in ditty, and sung in woeful ballad.
Congreve.

CHRONICLER. n.s. [from chronicle.]

A writer of chronicles; a recorder of events in order of time.

Here gathering chronicles, and by them stand
Giddy fantastick poets of each land.
Donne.

A historian; one that keeps up the memory of things past.

I do herein rely upon these bard's, or Irish chroniclers.
Sperner.

This custom was held by the Druids and Druids of our ancient Britons, and of latter times by the Irish chroniclers, called timers.
Religious History of the World.

CHRONOGRAM. n.s. [χρόνος time, and γράμμα to write.]

An inscription including the date of any action.

Of this kind the following is an example:

Gloria lausque Deo, sevClorVM in sevFla sunto.

A chronogrammatic verse, which includes not only this year, 1600, but numerical letters enough to reach almost a thousand years further up the year 2097.
Herod.

CHRONOGRAMMATICAL. adj. [from chronogram.]

Belonging to a chronogram. See the last example.

CHRONOGRAMMATIST. n.s. [from chronogram.]

A writer of chronograms.

There are foreign universities, where, as you praise a man in Egypt for being an excellent philosopher, or poet, it is an ordinary character to be a great chronogrammatist.
Add.

CHRONOLOGER. n.s. [χρόνος time, and γράμμα to write.]

He that studies or explains the science of computing past time, or of ranging past events according to their proper years.

Chronologists differ among themselves about most great epoches.
Holden on Time.

CHRONOLOGICAL. adj. [from chronology.]

Relating to the doctrine of time.

Thus much touched, this last philosophical account of some times and things past, without confusing myself to the exactness of years.
Hale's Origin of Mankind.

CHRONOLOGICALLY. adv. [from chronological.]

In a chronological manner; according to the laws or rules of chronology; according to the exact series of time.

CHRONOLOGIST. n.s. [See Chronologer.]

One that studies or explains time; one that ranges past events according to the order of time; a chronologer.

According to these chronologists, the prophecy of the Rabbins, that the world should last but six thousand years, has been long disproved.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

All that learned noise and dust of the chronologist is wholly to be avoided.
Locke on Education.

CHRONOLOGY. n.s. [χρόνος time, and γραμμα doctrine.]
The science of computing and adjusting the periods of time; as the revolution of the sun and moon; and of computing time past, and referring each event to the proper year.

And the measure of the year not being so perfectly known to the ancients, rendered it difficult for them to transmit a true chronology to succeeding ages.
Holden on Time.

Where I allude to the customs of the Greeks, I believe I may be justified by the strictest chronology; though a poet is not obliged to the rules that confine an historical poet.
Prior

CHRONOMETER. n.s. [from χρόνος and μέτρον.]

An instrument for the exact measurement of time.

According to observation made with a pendulum chronometer, a bullet, at its first discharge, flies five hundred and ten yards in five half seconds.
Derek.

CHRYSAULIS. n.s. [from χρυσός gold, and σαλις, a stone.] A precious stone of a dusky green, with a cast of yellow.
Woodward.

Such another world,
Of one intire and perfect chrysalis,
I'd not have sold her for.
Shaks.

If metal, part seem'd silver, part silver clear,
Histone, enthuneate most, or chrysalis.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

CHRYSPRAUSIS. n.s. [χρυσός gold, and prausis green.]

A precious stone of a yellow colour, approaching to green.

The ninth a topaz, the tenth a chryspausis.
Chub.

CHUB. n.s. [from cop a great head, Skinner.] A river fish. The choven.

The chub is in prime from M'duin and Candlemas, but best in winter. He is full of small bones: he eates water, not earth, but lufy and tasteless: nevertheless he may be an dressed as to make him very good meate.
Wotton's Angler.

CHUBB. adj. [from chub.] Bigheaded like a chub.

To CHUCK. v.n. [A word probably formed in imitation of the sound that it express'd, or perhaps corrupted from chuck.]

To make a noise like a hen when she calls her chickens.

To CHUCK. v.a.
1. To call as a hen calls her young.

Then crowing, clap'd his wings, th's appointed call.
To chucks it's voices together in the hall.
Dray. Feb.

2. To give a gentle blow under the chin, so as to make the mouth strike together.
CHU

Come, chuck the infant under the chin, force a smile, and cry, Ah, the boy takes after his mother’s relations. Congreve.

CHUCK. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. The voice of a hen.
2. A sudden small noise.

CHUCK-FARTHING. n. s. [chuck and farthing. — A play, at which the money falls with a chuck into the hole beneath. He lost his money at chuck-farting, shuffle-cap, and all-fours. Arbuthnot’s Hist. of John Hall.

To CHUCKLE. v. n. [schuchken, Dut.] To laugh vehemently; to laugh convulsively.

What tale shall I to my old father tell? ’Twill make him chuckle that’t best do’s well.

Dryden.

To CHUCKLE. v. n. [chuck;
1. To call a hen.
2. To cocker; to fiddle.

Your confessor, that parcel of holy guts and garbidge; he must chuckle you, and mean you, would have nagged his lodge to the last. Dryden.

CHUFF. n. s. [probably from To chew.]
An old word, as it seems, for forced meat.

As for chews, which are likewise minced meat, instead of butter and fat, it were good to moisten the body with cream, or increased with chocolate milk.

Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

CHUFF. n. s. [A word of uncertain derivation; perhaps corrupted from chub, or derived from knfj, Welsh, a stock.] A coarse, fat-headed blunt clown.

Hang ye, garbeiled knaves, are you undone? No, ye fat chuffs, I would your stores were here.

Shakespeare.

A less generous chuck than this in the battle, a sea of chucks to these lads. L’Extra.

CHUFFILY. adv. [from chuff.] Surily; stomatically.

John answered chuffily.

Clarius.

CHUFFINESS. n. s. [from chuffy.] Clownishness; surliness.

CHUFFY. adv. [from chuff.] Surly; fat.

CHUM. n. s. [chem, Armorick, to live together.] A chamber fellow: a term used in the universities.

CHUMP. n. s. [chump, a chock heavy piece of wood, less than a block. When one is battered, they can quickly, of a chop of wood, accommodate themselves with another.

Moxon.

CHURCH. n. s. [cypse, Sax. cypase.]
1. The collective body of Christians, usually termed the catholic church.
2. The whole, being a supernatural society, doth differ from natural societies in this; that the persons unto whom we associate ourselves in the one, are men, simply considered as men; but to whom we be joined in the other, are God, angels, and holy men.

Hooker.

The church is a religious assembly, or the large fair building where they meet; and sometimes the same word means a synod of bishops, or of presbyters; and in some places it is the pope and his consecrated clergy.

Watts’s Legacies.

3. The place which Christians consecrate to the worship of God.

It compradeth the whole church, viz. the nave, or body of the church, together with the chancel, which is also included under the word church.

That churches were consecrated unto none but the Lord’s house, Hooker.

That thou shouldest light against the churches. Shakespeare.

4. It is used frequently in conjunction with other words; as church-member, the members of a church; church-power, spiritual or ecclesiastical authority.

To CHURCH. v. a. [from the noun.] To perform with any one the office of returning thanks in the church after any signal deliverance, as from the danger of childbirth.

CHURCH-ALE. n. s. [from church and ale.] A wake, or feast, commemorative of the dedication of the church.

For the church-ale, two young men of the parish are yearly chosen to be wardens, who make collect among the parishioners of what provision it pleaseth them to bestow. Carew.

CHURCH-ATTIRE. n. s. The habit in which men officiate at divine service.

These and such like were their discourses, touching that church-attire, which with us, for the most part, is used in publick prayer.

Hooker.

CHURCH-AUTHORITY. n. s. Ecclesiastical power; spiritual jurisdiction.

In this point of church-authority, I have sifter all the little scraps alleged. Afterburry.

CHURCH-BURIAL. n. s. Burial according to the rites of the church.

The bishop has the care of seeing that all christians, after their deaths, be not denied church-burial, according to the usage and custom of the place.

Addis’s Parergon.

CHURCH-FOUNDER. n. s. He that builds or endows churches.

Whether emperors or bishops in those days were churches, or rather dedication of churches they thought not to be a work in itself either vain or superstitions.

Hooker.

CHURCHMAN. n. s. [church and man.]
1. An ecclesiastick; a clergyman; one in matters of religious things.

If any thing be offered to you, touching the church and church-men, or church-government, rely not only upon yourself. Bacon.

A very difficult work to do, to reform and remove a church into order, that had been so long neglected, and that was so ill filled by many weak and more withal. Clarendon.

Patient in want, and poverty of mind. These marks of church and churchmen he design’d, And living taught, and dying left behind.

Dryden’s Fables.

CHURCH-WARDENS. n. s. [See Warden.] Officers yearly chosen, by the consent of the minister and parishioners, according to the custom of each place, to look to the church, church-yard, and such things as belong to both: and to observe the behaviour of the parishioners, for such faults as appertain to the jurisdiction or censure of the ecclesiastical court. They are a kind of corporation, enabled by law to sue for any thing belonging to their church, or of their parish.

Cowell.

There should be two churchwardens of the gratest men in the parish, be appointed, as they be here in England.

Speew.

Feast on the silver, and give us the farthings. Gay.

CHURCH-YARD. n. s. The ground adjoining the church, in which the dead are buried; a cemetery.

I am almost afraid to stand alone here in the church-yard, yet I will adventure.

Shakespeare.

In churchyards where they bury much, the earth will consume the corps in far shorter time than other earth will.

Bacon.

CHURL. n. s. [coapl, Sax. earl, in German, is strong, rusticks being always observed to be strong bodied.]
1. A rustick; a countryman; a labourer.

He held forth himself a small and seemly work to work or use any hard labour, which he saith is the life of a peasant or churl.

Speew. State’s Ireland.

Churl, upon thy eyes I throw All the pow’r’s thic churl. Shakespeare.

From this light cause the indifferent maid prepares The country churls to mischief, hate, and wars.

Dryden.

2. A rude, surly, ill-bred man.

A churl’s courtesy rarely comes, but either for gain or falsehood.

Sidney.

3. A miser; a nigglar; a selfish or greedy wretch.

Punon. I see, hath been his timeless end! O churl, drink all, and leave no friend to help me after! Shakes.

CHURLISH. adj. [from churl.]
1. Rude; brutal; harsh; austere; sour; merciless; unkind; uncivil.

A sea of cutting words, which single call tears.

Those at her father’s churlish feet she tender’d.

Shakespeare.

The interruption of their churlish doings.

Cuts off more occasion, they are at hand To parly or to fight.

Shakespeare.

A lady in love with a lass, desired her father’s consent. The answer was churlish enough; he’d never marry his daughter to a brute. L’Estrange.

He the pursuit of churlish beasts Prefer’d to sleeping on her breasts.

Waller.

2. Selfish; avaricious.

The man was churlish and evil in his doings.

Samuel.

This sullen churlish thief.

Had all his mind plac’d upon Mally’s beef. King.

3. [Of things.] Unpliant; cross-grained; unmanageable; harsh; not yielding.

If there be emission of spirit, the body of the metal will be hard and churlish. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

The Cornish became, like metal often fired and quenched, churlish, and that would sooner break from bow. Bacon’s Hen. VII.

In the hundreds of Essex they have a very churlish blue clay. Mortimer’s Husbandry.

4. Vexatious; obstrucive.

Will you again unkind?

This churlish knot of war. Shakespeare.

Spain foun the war so churlish and longorne, as they found they should consume themselves in an endless war.

Bacon.

Spreads a path as clear as the day.

Where no churlish rub says nay. Creeke.
CHY

CHURLISHLY. adv. [from churlish.] Rudely; brusquely.

To the oak, now regnant, the olive did churlishly put over the son for a reward of the service of his sire. "Hous.

CHURLISHNESS. n. s. [from churlish; cyprian, Saxon.] Brutality; rudeness of manner.

Better is the churlishness of a man, than a courteous woman. "Arbuthnot, Eulog. 11. 13.

In the churlishness of fortune, a poor honest man suffers in this world. "L'Estrange.

CHURME. n. s. [more properly cherm, from the Saxon cýyme, a clamour or noise; or to chirse is to coo as a turtle.]

A confused sound; a noise.

He was conveyed to the tower, with the churme of a thousand taunts and reproaches. "Bacon.

To CHURN. v. a. [kern, Dutch.]

1. To agitate or shake any thing by a violent motion.

Perchance he spoke not; but like a full-second 's horn, a churning on.

Cried Oh. "Shakespeare.

Froth fills his chaps; he sends a grunting sound.

And part be churned, and part becometh the ground. "Dryden.

Churn'd in his teeth the foamy venom rose. "Addison.

The mechanism of nature, in converting our aliment consists of mixing it with animal juices, and in the action of the solid parts, churning them together. "Arbuthnot on Aliments.

2. To make butter by agitating the milk.

The churning of milk brings forth butter.

You may try the force of imagination, upon staying the coming of butter after the churning. "Bacon's Nat. Hist.

CHURRWERM. n. s. [from cyprian, Saxon.]

An insect that turns about nimbly; called also a fancier.

To CHUSE. See TO CHOOSE.

CHYLA'CEOUS. adj. [from chylica.] Belonging to chyle; consisting of chyle.

When the spirits of the chyle have half fermented the excreta mass, it has the state of drink not ripened by fermentation. "Fower on the Humours.

CHYLE. n. s. [χυλός.] The white juice formed in the stomach by digestion of the aliment, and afterwards changed into blood.

This powerful ferment, mingling with the parts, the leaven'd mass to milky chylé converts. "Blackmore.

The chyle cannot pass through the smallest vessels. "Arbuthnot.

CHYLI'FACTION. n. s. [from chylica.] The act or process of making chyle in the body.

CHYLI'FACTIVE. adj. [from chylus, and facio, to make, Latina.] Having the power of making chyle.

CHYLOPOETIC. adj. [χυλόπος and root.] Having the power, or the office, of forming chyle.

According to the force of the chylopoetic organs, more or less chyle may be extracted from the same food. "Arbuthnot.

CHYLOUS. adj. [from chyle.] Consisting of chyle; partaking of chyle.

Milk is the chylous part of an animal, already prepared. "Arbuthnot.

CHYMIC. } adj. [chymicus, Lat.]

1. Made by chymistry.

I'm tir'd with waiting for this chymick gold, Which fools us young, and beggars us when old. "Dryden.

The medicines are ranged in boxes, according to their nature, whether chymical or galenical preparations. "Watts.

2. Relating to chymistry.

Methodink already, from this chymick frame, I see a city of more precious mold. "Dryden.

With chymick art evails the mineral pow'r, And draws the aromatick souls of flow'res. " Pope.

CHYMIC. n. s. A chymist. Obsolete.

The ancient observing in that material a kind of metallic nature, seem to have resolved it into nobler use: an ancient philosopher, last, or prophet, kept up by a few chymics. "Wotton.

CHYMICALLY. adv. [from chymical.] In a chymical manner.

CHYMI'ST. n. s. [See Chymistry.] A professor of chymistry; a philosopher by fire.

CHYMY'CHY. n. s. [derived by some from χυμος, juice; or κω to melt; by others from an oriental word, κεμα black. According to the supposed etymology, it is written with y or e.]

An art whereby sensible bodies contained in vessels or capable of being contained therein, and so changed by means of certain instruments, and principally fire, that their several powers and virtues are thereby discovered, with a view to philosophy or medicine. "Boerhaave.

Operations of chymistry fall short of vital force: no chymist can make milk or blood of grass. "Arbuthnot on Aliments.

CIBA'RIOUS. adj. [cibus, Lat., from cibus food.] Relating to food; useful for food; edible.

CIBOL. n. s. [cibole, Fr.] A small sort of onion used in sallads. This word is common in the Scotch dialect; but the l is not pronounced.

Ciboles, or scallions, are a kind of degenerate onions. "Mortimer.

CICATRICE. } n. s. [cicatrix, Lat.]

1. The scar remaining after a wound.

One captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek. "Shakespeare.

2. A mark; a scar -- so used by Shakespeare less properly. "Lean upon a rush, The cicatrice and capable impressure Thy palm some moments keep'd. "Shakespeare.

CICATRISANT. adj. [from cicatrice.] An application that induces a cicatrice.

CICATRISIVE. adj. [from cicatrice.] Having the qualities proper to induce a cicatrice.

CICATRIZATION. n. s. [from cicatrice.] The act of healing the wound.

A vein bursted, or corroded, in the lungs, is looked upon to be the most part incurable, because of the mortification and corruption of the lungs, tending to the gap wider, and hindering the conglutination and cicatrisation of the vein. "Harvey.

CICIL. n. s. [from cicilium; haircloth, Lat.] Made of hair.

A garment of camel's hair, that is, made of some texture of that hair; a coarse garment, a sieveless or sackcloth habit, suitable to the austerity of his life. "Brown's Vulg. Err.
CIN

CIMAR. See SIMAR.

CIMELIARCH. n. s. [from ετοιμος.] The chief keeper of plate, vestments, and things of value, belonging to a church; a church-warden. Dict.

CIMETER. n.s. [cimenter, Span. and Port. from cimiteur, Turkish. Bluteau's Portuguese Dict.] A sort of sword used by the Turks, short, heavy, and recurved, or bend backward. This word is sometimes erroneously spelt seimiter, and seymiter; as in the following examples.

By this seymiter,
That slew the sopby and a Persian prince,
That broke three fields of sultan Soliman. Shak. Our armours now may trust, our idle seymiters Hanging by our sides for ornament, not use. Dryden.

CIRT. n.s. [cinctura, Lat.]
1. Something worn round the body.

Now happy he, whose cloak and cirture
Hold out this tempest. Colours found the American so girt.
With feather'd cinture, naked else, and wild.
He binds the sacred cinture round his breast. Milton.

2. An inclosure.

The court and prison being within the cinture of which was the rump. Bacon's Henry VII.

3. In architecture. A ring or list at the top and bottom of the shaft of a column; separating the shaft at one end from the base, at the other from the capital. It is supposed to be in imitation of the girths or ferrils anciently used to strengthen and preserve the primitive wood columns. Chambers.

CINDER. n.s. [cendre, Fr. from cineres, Lat.]

1. A mass ignited and quenched, without being reduced to ashes.

I should make very forges of my cheeks
That would to cinders burn up modesty. Did I but speak thy deeds? Shak. There is not in smiths cinders, by some admission of iron, sometimes to be found a magnetic operation. Browne.

So now on Aetna does unmelting lie.
Whose rolling flames and scatter'd cinders fly. Waller.

2. A hot coal that has ceased to flame.

If from adown the hopeful shops
The fat upon a cinder drops,
To stinking smoke it turns the flame. Swift.

CINDERWENCH. n.s. [cinder and woman.]
1. A woman whose trade is to rake in heaps of ashes for cinders.

The more so much nasty bish bad
To find out the cinderwoman's trade. Satire.

She had above five hundred suits of fine cloathes, and yet went abroad like a cinder-wench. Arbutus's Hist. of John Bull.

In the black form of cinder-wench she came, When love, the hour, the place had bosh'd shame. Gay.

CINERATION. n.s. [from cineres, Lat.]
The reduction of any thing by fire to ashes. A term of chemisty.

CINERIOUS adj. [cinerius, Lat.]
Having the form or state of ashes.

The nerves arise from the glads of the cirisious part of the brain, and are terminated in all parts of the body. Cheyne.

CINERULOUS adj. [from cineres, Lat.]
Full of ashes. Dict.

CINGULAR adj. [from cingulum, Lat.]
A girth for a horse. Dict.

CINNABAR. n.s. [cinnabaris, Lat.] Cinnamon is native or fictitious; the fictitious cinnabar is called vermilion.

CINNABAR OF ANTIMONY, is made of mercury, sulphur, and crusie antimony.

CINNAMON. n.s. [cinnamomum, Lat.] The fragrant bark of a low tree in the island of Ceylon. Its leaves resemble those of the olive, both as to substance and colour. The fruit resembles an acorn or olive, and has neither the smell nor taste of the bark. When boiled in water, it yields an oil, which, as it cools and hardens, becomes as firm and white as tallow; the smell of which is agreeable in candles. The cinnamon of the ancients was different from ours. Chambers.

Let Araby extol her happy coast,
Her cinnamon and sweet assam boast. Dry. Fab.

CINNAMON WATER is made by distilling the bark, first infused in barley water, in spirit of wine, or white wine. Chambers.

CINQUE. n.s. [cinque, Fr.] A five. It is used in games alone; but is often compounded with other words.

CINQUE-FOIL, n.s. [cinque feule, Fr.] A kind of five-leaved clover.

CINQUE-PACE, n.s. [cinque pas, Fr.] A kind of grave dance.

Wooing, wedding, and repenting, is a Scotch jigg, a measure, and a cinque-pace. The first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jigg, and full as fantastic; the wedding, mannyer and modest, as a measure full of state and gravity; and then comes repenting, with bad legs, falling into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sinks into his grave. Shak.

CINQUE-PORTS, n.s. [cinque ports, Fr.]
Those havens that lie towards France, and therefore have been highly reckoned by kings, as to be such ought most vigilantly to be observed against invasion. In which respect, the places where they are have a special government or keeper, called by his office Lord Warden of the cinque ports; and divers privileges granted to them, as a particular jurisdiction; their warden having the authority of an admiral among them, and sending out writs in his own name. The cinque ports are Dover, Sandwich, Rye, Hastings, Winchester. Romany, and Hove; of which, as the number exceeds five, must either be added to the first institution by some later grant, or accounted as appendants to some of the rest. Cicowell.

They, that bear
The cloth of state above her, are four bars
Of the cinque ports. Shak.

CINQUE-SPOTTED adj. Having five spots.

On her left breast
A mole, cinque spotted, like the crimson drops
I' th' bottom of a cowslip. Shak.

CION n.s. [siole, from Franc.]
1. A sprout or shoot from a plant.

We have reason to cool our raging motions, our clamouring stings, our unbitted lusts; whereas I take this, that you call love; to be a sect or clan. Shak.

The state of calamity, newly settled in his triumphant throne, begins with cries of his own royal stem. Hawel.

2. The shoot engraved or inserted on a stock.
To have a box where cumches sing,
And, foremost in the circle, eye a king.

I will call over to him the whole circle of beauties that are disposed among the boxes. Addison.

7. Any series ending as it begins, and perpetually repeated.
There be fruit trees in hot countries, which have blossoms and young fruit, and young fruit and ripe fruit, almost all the year, succeeding one another; but this circle of ripening cannot be but in succulent plants, and hot countries. Bacon.

8. An inconclusive form of argument, in which the foregoing proposition is proved by the following, and the following proposition inferred from the foregoing.
That heavy bodies descend by gravity: and, again, that gravity is a quality whereby a heavy body descends, is an impertinent circle, and teacheth nothing. Glascow's Nepos.

9. Circumlocution; indirect form of words.
Has he given the eye
In circle or oblique, or semicircle?
Or direct parallel? You must challenge him.

10. Circles of the German Empire. Such provinces and principalities as have a right to be present at diets. They are in number ten.
Treves.

To Circle. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To move round any thing.
The lords, that were appointed to circle the hill, had some days before planted themselves in places convenient. Bacon.

2. To inclose; to surround.
What stern magister hands
Have lopp'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornamenters,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in.
While these fond arms, thus circling you, may prove
More heavy chains than those of hopeless love.

3. To circle in. To confine; to keep together.
We term those thing dry which have a consistence within themselves, and which, with a determinate figure, do not require the stop or hindrance of another body to limit and circle them in. Digby on Bodies.

To Circle. v. n. To move circularly; to end where it begins.
The well fraught bow
Circles incessant: whilst the humble cell
With quavering laugh and rural jets resonant.

Now the circling years disclose
The day predestin'd to reward his woes, Pope's Od. 7.

Circled. adj. [from circle.] Having the form of a circle; round.
The frame thereof seem'd partly circular, and part triangular. Fairy Quean.

He first inclus'd for lists a level ground.
The form was circular. Dryden's Fables.

Chaucer.

Circlet. n. s. [from circle.]
A circle; an orb; properly a little circle.
Then take repast, till Hesperus display'd
His golden cirlet in the western shade. Pope's Od.

Circling. participial adj. [from to circle.] Having the form of a circle; circular; round.

Round he surveys, and well might, where he stood
So high above the circling canopy
Of night's extended shade. Milton's Paradise Lost.

CIRCUIT. n. s. [circuit. Fr. circuitus. Lat.]
1. The act of moving round any thing.
There are four months also perpetually rolling round the Planet Jupiter, and carried along with him in his perpetual circuit round the sun. Watts on the Mind.

2. The space inclosed in a circle.
He led me up
A woody mountain, whose high top was plain,
A circuit wide inclosed. Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Space; extent; measured by travelling round.
He attributeth unto it smallness in respect of circuit. Hooker.

The lake of Bolsena is reckoned one-and-twenty mile wide. Phillips.

4. A ring; a diadem; that by which any thing is incircled.
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage,
Until the golden circuit on my head
Do calm the fierce flame of this mad brow. Shak.

5. The visitations of the judges for holding assizes.
The circuits, in former times, went but round about the pale; as the circuit of the cynosure about the pole.

6. The tract of country visited by the judges.
7. Long deduction of reason.
Up into the watch tower get,
And we all things depend of fallacies.
Thou shalt not pass by this
Nor hear thro' the labyrinths of ears, nor lean
By circuit or collections to discern. Donne.

Circuit of action. [in law.] Is a longer course of proceeding to recover the thing sued for than is needful. Cowell.

To Circuit. v. n. [from the noun.] To move circularly.
Pining with equinoctial heat, unless
The corroboreal cup perpetual motion keep,
Quick circuiting. Philips.

Circuit. s. a. [from circuit.]
One that travels a circuit.
Like your fellow circuiter, the sun, you travel the round of the earth, and behold all the inequalities under the heavens. Pep.

Circu'tion. n. s. [circuit, Lat.]
1. The act of going round any thing.
2. Compass; maze of argument.
To apprehend by what degrees they lean to things in show, though not in deed, repugnant one to another, require more sharpness of wit, more intricate curiosities of discourse, and depth of judgment, than common ability doth yield. Pep.

Circular. adj. [circularis, Lat.]
1. Round, like a circle; circumscribed by a circle.
The frame thereof seem'd partly circular, and part triangular. Fairy Quean.

He first inclus'd for lists a level ground. The form was circular. Dryden's Fables.

Chaucer.

2. Successive in order; always returning.
From whence the innumerable race of things by circular successive order springs. Roscommon.

Vulgar; mean; circumstantial.
Has Virgil been a circular poet, and closely adhered to history, how could the Romans hav'ld Dido? Dennis.

4. Ending in itself: used of a paradoxism, where the second proposition at once proves the first, and is proved by it.
One of Carter's first principles of reasoning, after he had doubted of every thing, seems to be too circular to safely build upon; for he is for proving the being of God from the truth of our faculties, and the truth of our faculties from the being of God. Bacon's Reflexions.

5. Circular Letter. A letter directed to several persons, who have the same interest in some common affair; as in the convocation of assemblies.

6. Circular Lines. Such straight lines as are divided from the divisions made in the arch of a circle; as the lines of sines, tangents, and secants, on the plain scale and sector.

7. Circular Sailing, is that performed on the arch of a great circle.

Circul'arity. n. s. [from circular.]
A circular form.
The heavens have no diversity or difference, but a simplicity of parts, and equiformity in motion, continually succeeding each other; so that, from what point soever we compute, the account will be the same in drawing the circle, and the round of the universe. Bacon.

Circularly, adv. [from circular.]
1. In form of a circle.
The internal form of it consists of several regions, involving our other like orbs about the same centre; or of the several elements cast circularly about each other. Burton.

2. With a circular motion.
Trade, which, like blood, should circularly flow, Stopp'd in their channels, found its freedom lost.

Everybody, moved circularly about any centre, recedes, or endeavors to recede, from that centre of its motion. Ray.

To Circulate. v. a. [from circulate.]
1. To move in a circle; to run round; to return to the place whence it departed in a constant course.
If our lives motions theirs must imitate, Our knowledge like our blood must circulate.

2. To be dispersed.
As the mists of calumny are perpetually at work, a great number of curious inventions, issued out from time to time, grow current among the party, and circulate through the whole kingdom. Addison.

To Circulate. v. n. To put about.
In the civil wars, the money spent on both sides was circulated at home; no publick debts contracted. Swift.

Circula'tion. n. s. [from circulate.]
1. Motion in a circle; a course in which the motion tends to the point from which it began.
What more obvious, one would think, than the circulation of the blood, unknown till the last age? Burton's Theory.

As much blood passeth through the lungs as through all the rest of the body; the circulation is quickened and heat greater, and their texture are extremely delicate. Arbuthnot on Asinns.

2. A series in which the same order is always observed, and things always return to the same state.
As for the sirs of peace, thou hast brought upon them the tortures of war; so for the sirs of war, thou seest fit to deny us the blessing of peace, and to keep us in a circulation of miseries. K. Charles.
CIR

God, by the ordinary role of nature, permits this continual circulation of human things.
Swift on Modern Education.

3. A reciprocal interchange of meaning.
When the apostle saith of the Jews, that they created the law for themselves; and opened the Son of man, being on earth, affirmed that the Son man was in heaven at the same instant, there is in these two speeches that mutual communication before mentioned.
Hooker.

CIRCULATORY. n. s. [from circulate.] A chemical vessel, in which that which risen from the vessel on the fire is collected and cooled in another fixed upon it, and falls down again.

CIRCULATORY. adj. [from circulate.]
Circulatory letters are the same with Circular Letters.

CIRCUMFERENCE. n. s. [from circumambient.] The act of encompassing.
Thence receiveth its figure according unto the surface it concreteth or the circumference which conformeth it.
Brown.

CIRCUMAMBIENT. adj. [circum and ambient, Lat.] Surrounding; encompassing;
closing;

The circumambient coldness towards the sides of the vessel, like the second region, cooling and condensing of it.

To CIRCUMAMBULATE. v. n. [from circum and ambulo, Lat.] To walk round about.

To CIRCUMCISE. v. a. [circumcido, Lat.]
To cut the prepuce or foreskin, according to the law given to the Jews.

They came to circumcise the child.

One is startled at the industry of the whigs, in ability to strengthen their routed party by a reinforcement from the circumcised.
Swift's Essay.

CIRCUMCISION. n. s. [from circum-
сose.] The rite or act of cutting off the foreskin.

They left a rate behind
Like to themselves, distinguishable scarce
From Gentiles, but by circumcission vain.
Milton.

To CIRCUMDUCT. v. a. [circumducro, Lat.] To contravene; to nullify: a term of civil law.

Acts of justice may be cancelled and circumduces by the will and direction of the judge;
as also by the consent of the parties litigant,
before the judge has pronounced and given sentence.
Addison's Ovid.

CIRCUMDUCTION. n. s. [from circum-duct.]
1. Nullification; cancellation.
The citation may be circumscribed; though the defendant should not appear; and the defendant must be cited, as a circumduction requires.
Addison's Ovid.

2. A leading about.
By long circumduction perhaps any truth may be derived from any other truth.
Hooker.

CIRCUMFERENCE. n. s. [circumferentia, Lat.]
1. The periphery: the line including and surrounding any thing.

Extend thus far they bounds.
This be thy just circumference, O world! Milton.

Because he is the centre of the main action, all the lines from the circumference tend to him alone.
Dryden.

Fire, moved nimbly in the circumference of a circle, makes the whole circumference appear like a circle of fire.
Addison's Ovid.

2. The space inclosed in a circle.
So was his will
Promun'te'd among the gods, and by an oath,
That shook heav'n's whole circumference, comfran'd.
Milton.

CIRCUMFUSE. v. a. [circumfusus,
Lat.] That which may be poured or spread round any thing.

Artist divine, whose skilful hands infolded
The victim's horn with circumfuse gold.
Pope's Odi.

CIRCUMFUSION. n. s. [from circum-fuse.] The act of spreading round; the state of being thus poured.

To CIRCUMGERATE. v. a. [circum and gyrus, Lat.] To roll round.

CIRCUMFUSION. n. s. [from circumfluence.] The act of running round.
The sun turns round his own axis in twenty-five days, from his first being put into such a circumfluence.
Cheyne.

CIRCUMJACENT. adj. [circumjacent,
Lat.]
Lying round any thing; bordering on every side.

CIRCUMCISION. n. s. [from circumuncircum, cumulitum, Lat.]
The act of going round.

CIRCUMLOCATION. n. s. [circumlocu-tio, Lat.]
1. The act of binding round.
2. The bond with which any thing is inclosed.

CIRCUMLOCATION. n. s. [circumligatio, Lat.]
1. A circuit or compass of words; pere-phrase.
Virgil, studying brevity, could bring these words into a narrow compass, which a translator cannot render without circumlocation.
Dryden.

I much prefer the plain Billington way of composing names, because it would save abundance of time, lost by circumlocation.
Swift.

2. The use of indirect expressions.
These people are not to be dealt withal, but by a train of mystery and circumlocation.
U. Estrange.

CIRCUMVENEED. adj. [circum and nu-rus, Lat.] Walled round; encompassed with a wall.

He hath a garden circumvened with bricks.
Shakespeare.

CIRCUMVAGIBLE. adj. [from circumnavigate.] That which may be sailed round.
The being of Antipodes, the habitableness of the toird zone, and the rendering the whole terracous globe circumvagible. Ray on the Creation.

To CIRCUMNAVIGATE. v. a. [circum and navigate, Lat.] To sail round.

CIRCUMNAVIGATION. n. s. [from cirmunavigate.] The act of sailing round.

What he says concerning the circumnavigation of Africa, from the straits of Gibraltar to the Red Seas, is remarkable.
Arab. Kalendar.

CIRCUMNAVIGATUR. n. s. One that sails round.

CIRCUMPLICATION. n. s. [circumpli-cio, Lat.]
1. The act of enwrapping on every side.
2. The state of being enwrapped.

CIRCUMPOLAR. adj. [from circum and polar.] Stars near the north pole, which move round it, and never set in the Northern latitudes, are said to be circumpolar stars.

CIRCUMPOSITION. n. s. [from cir-cum and position.] The act of placing any thing circularly.

Now is your season for circumposition, by tiles or baskets of earth.
Evelyn's Kalendar.

CIRCUMRASION. n. s. [circumrasio,
Lat.] The act of shaving or paring round.
Dic.

CIRCUMROTATION. n. s. [circumroturo, Lat.]
1. The act of whirling round with a motion like that of a wheel; circumvolution;
circumgyration.
2. The state of being whirled round.

312
To CIRCUMSCRIBE. v. a. [circum and scribo, Lat.]
1. To inclose in certain lines or boundaries.
2. To bound; to limit; to confine.

The good Auditor.
With honour and with fortune he return'd;
From whence he circumcribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.
Shakespeare.

Therefore must his choice be circumscrid.
Unto the voice and yielding of that body.
Whereof he's head.
Shakespeare.

The action great, yet circumscrid by time.
The words not forc'd but sliding into rhyme. Dryden.
The external circumstances which do accompany a man's acts, are those which do circumscribe and limit them.

You are above the little forms which circumscribe your sex.
Southern.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION. n. s. [circumscriptio, Lat.]
1. Determination of particular form or magnitude.

The circumscription of many leaves, flowers, fruits, and seeds, nature affects a regular figure.
Ray on the Creation.

2. Limitation; boundary; contravention; confinement.

I would not my unbowed free condition
Put into circumscriptio and confinio.
Shakespeare.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE. adj. [from circumscripto.
Inclosing the superficies; marking the form or limits on the outside.

Stones regular, are distinguished by their external forms: such as are circumscriptive, or depending upon the whole stone, as in the eagle-stone, is properly called the figure. Grew.

CIRCUMSCRIPT, adj. [circumscriptus, Lat.]
Cautious; attentive to every thing; watchful on all sides.

None are for me,
That look into me with consid'rate eye.
High reaching Buckingham grows circumscrit.
Shakespeare.

Men of their own nature circumscrit and slow;
But at the time discomfited and discontented.
Shakespeare.

The judicious doctor had been very watchful and circumscrit, to keep himself from being imposed upon.
Hamlet.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION. n. s. [from circumscripto.
Watchfulness on every side; caution; general attention.

Observe the sudden growth of wickedness from want of care and circumscrit in the first impressions.
Clarendon.

So saying, his proud step be scornful turn'd,
But with sly circumscrit.
Milton's Par. Lost.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE. adj. [circumscriptivo, circumscriptum, Lat.]
Looking round every way; attentive; vigilant; cautious.

No less alike the polite and wise,
All sly slow things, with circumscriptive eyes. Pope.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVELY, adv. [from circumscriptivo.
Caustiously; vigilantly; attentively; with watchfulness every way; watchfully.

CIRCUMSCRIPTLY, adv. [from circumscripto.
With watchfulness every way; cautiously; watchfully; vigilantly.

Their authority weighs more with me than the concurrent suffrages of a thousand eyes, who never examined the thing so carefully and circumscriptly.
Ray on the Creation.

CIRCUMSCRIPTNESS. n. s. [from circumscripto.

He had been provoked by men's tedious and circumscriptive renditions of their affaires, or by their multiplied questions about his own. Prior's Deed.

CIRCUMSTANTIALLY. n. s. [from circumstantial.
The appendage of circumstances; the state of any thing as modified by circumstances.

CIRCUMSTANTIALLY. adv. [from circumstantial.
1. According to circumstance; not essentially; accidentally.

Of the fancy and intellect, the powers are only circumstantially different. Glimpses of the Sacred.

2. Minutely; exactly; in every circumstance or particular.
Lucian agrees with Homer in every point circumstantially.

To CIRCUMSTATE, v. a. [from circum.
1. To place in particular circumstances; to invest with particular accidents or adjuncts.

If the act were otherwise circumstanced, it might well that freely, which now it wills freely.
Blondel.

To CIRCUMVALLATE. v. a. [circumvallo, Lat.]
To inclose round with trenches or fortifications.

1. The art or act of casting up fortifications round a place.
When the ear first acquainted himself with mathematical learning, he practiced all the rules of circumvallation and contravention of the siege of a town in Livonia.
Waits.

2. The fortification or trench thrown up round a place besieged.
This gave resist to finish those stupendous circumvallations and barricades, reared up by sea and land.
Hovel.

CIRCUMVECTION. n. s. [circumvectionis, Lat.]
1. The act of carrying round.
2. The state of being carried round.

To CIRCUMVENT. v. a. [circumvenio, Lat.]
To deceive; to cheat; to impose upon; to delude.
He, fearing to be betrayed or circumvented by his cruel brother, fled to Barbarossa.

Antoine's History of the Turks.

As his malleis is vigilant, he resists not to circumven the sons of the first deceived.
Brown's Bulger Errors. Should.

Fall circumvented thus by fraud. Mill. Par. Lost.
Obstinately bent to die unmanned, and to circumvent. Dryden.

CIRCUMVENTION. n. s. [from circumvento.
1. Fraud; imposture; cheat; delusion.

The inequality of the match between him and the subject of us, would quickly appear by a fatal circumventio: there must be wisdom from above to over-reach this hollow wisdom.
South.

If he is in the city, he must avoid haranguing against circumventio in commerce.
Collier's Popularity.

2. Prevention; pre-occupation. This sense is now out of use.
Whatever hath been thought on this state, that could be brought to body act, ere Rome had circumventio.
Shakespeare.

To CIRCUMVEST. v. a. [circumvestio, Lat.]
To cover round with a garment.
CIT

Who on this base the earth didst firmly found,
And mad'st the deep to cement it round. Witten.

CIRCUMVOLVULUS. n. s. [circumvolvulus, Lat.] The act of rolling round.

To CIRCUMVOLVE. v. a. [circumvolvolve, Lat.] To roll round; to put into a circular motion.

So cold orb s be accommodated to phenomena, yet to escribe each sphere an intelligence to circumvolvul it, were philosophically, Glanville's Scopulis.

CIRCUMVOLUTION. n. s. [circumvolutus, Lat.]
1. The act of rolling round.
2. The state of being rolled round.

The twisting of the gots is really either a circumvolvul or incorporation of one part of the gut within the other. Arbuthnot.

3. The thing rolled round another.

Consider the obliquity or closeness of these circumvolvements; the nearer they are, the higher may be the instrument. Wilkins.

CITRUS. n. s. [circus, Lat.] An open Cirque.
Space or area for sports, with seats round for the spectators.

A pleasant valley, like one of those cirques, which in great cities somewhere doth give a pleasant spectacle of running horses. Sidney.

The one was about the cirque of Flora, the other about the Tarentum mountain. Stellingfleet. See the cirque falls! 'th unupal'd temple nads; Streets pav'd with heroes, Tyber chank'd with Pope.

CIST. n. s. [cista, Latin.] A case; a tegument: commonly used in medicinal language for the coat or inclosure of a tumour.

CISTED. adj. [from cist.] Inclosed in a cit, or bag.

CISTERN. n. s. [cisterna, Latin.]
1. A receptacle of water for domestic use.
'Tis not the rain that waters the whole earth, but the stakes that fall into his own cisterns, that must refresh him.

2. A reservoir; an inclosed fountain.
Had no part as kindly staid behind. In the wide cistern of the lakes confind, Dido, the springs and rivers through the land, Our globe would become a wilderness of sand. Blackmore.

3. Any receptacle or repository of water.
Now half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made a cistern for scald snakes. Shaksp.

But there's no bottom, none. In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters, Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up The cistern of my lust. Dryden.

CISTUS. n. s. [Lat.] The name of a plant. The same with rockrose.

CIT. n. s. [contracted from citizen.] An inhabitant of the city, in an ill sense; a pert low townsman; a pragmatical trader.
We bring you now to show what different things The cities or cities are from the courts of kings. Johnson.

Study your race, or the soil of your family will dwindle into states or squires, or run up into wits or madmen. Tatler.

Barnard, thou art a cist, with all thy worth; But Bag and D——, their honours, and so forth. Pope.

CITADEL. n. s. [candidelle, French.] A fortress; a castle, or place of arms, in a city.
As he came to the crown by unjust means, as unjustly as he be kept it; by force of stranger soldiers in citadels, the nests of tyranny and murderers of liberty. Sidney.

I'll to my charge, the citadel, repair. Dryden.

CITAL. n. s. [from cite.]
1. Reproof; impeachment. He made a blushing cital of himself, and cild his words. Shaksp.

2. Summons; citation; call into a court.

3. Quotation; citation.

CITATION. n. s. [cito, Lat.]
1. The calling a person before the judge, for the sake of trying the cause of action commenced against him. Alipie's Parer.

2. Quotation; the addition of any passage from another author; or of another man's words.

3. The passage or words quoted; a quotation.

The letter-writer cannot read these citations without blushing, after the charge be laid advanced. Atterbury.

View the principles in their own authors, and not in the citations of those who would confound them. Watts.

4. Enumeration; mention.

These causes effect a consumption endemiac to this island. Citing of such as may produce it in any country. Harvey on Consumations.

CITATORY. adj. [from To cite.] Having the power or form of citation.

If a judge cite one to a place, to which he cannot come with safety, he may freely appeal, though an appeal be inhibited in the letters citatory. Alipie's Parer.

To CITE. v. a. [cito, Latin.]
1. To summon to answer in a court.
He held a late court, to which She oft was cited by them, but appear'd not. Shak.

2. Cit forth with the cited dead,
Of all past ages, to the general doom Shal hasten. Milton.

This power of citing, and dragging the defendant into court, was taken away. Alipie's Parer.

2. To join; to call upon another authoritatively; to direct; to summon.
I speak to you, Sir Thirio. For Valentine, I need not cite him to it. Shak.

This sad experience cites me to reveal, And what I dictate from what I feel. Prior.

3. To quote.
Demonstrations in scripture may not otherwise be shewn than by citing them out of the scripture. Hooker.

That passage of Plato, which I cited before. Bacon.

In banishment he wrote those verses, which I cito from his letter. Dryden.

CITÉ. n. s. [from cite.]
1. One who cites into a court.

2. One who quotes, a quotation.
I must desire the citer henceforward to inform us of his editions too. Atterbury.

CITÉS. n. s. [from cito.] A city woman.
A word peculiar to Dryden.

Cites and citoer raise a joyful strain; 'tis a good omen to the design. Dryden.

CITHERN. n. s. [cithara, Latin.] A kind of harp; a musical instrument.
At what time the heathen had profaned it, even in that was it dedicated with songs and citherns, and harps and cymbals. MacC.

CITIZEN. n. s. [civis, Lat., citoyen, Fr.]
1. A freeman of a city; not a foreigner; not a slave.
All inhabitants within these walls are not properly citizens, but such only as are called freemen. Hook's History.

2. A townsman; a man of trade; not a gentleman.
When he speaks not like a citizen, You find him like a soldier. Shaksp.

3. An inhabitant; a dweller in any place.

Far from noisy Rome secure he lives, And one more citizen to Sylph gives. Dryden.

CITIZEN. adj. [This is only in Shakespeare.] Having the qualities of a citizen; as cowardice, meanness.

So sick I am not, yet I am not well; But not so citizen a wanton, as To seem to die ere I die. Shaksp.

CITIRNE. [citirnus, Lat.] Lemon coloured, or of a dark yellow.
The butterfly, papilio major, has its wings painted with ciiirite and black, both in long streaks and spots. Grew.

By citrine urine of a thicker consistence, the whiteness of phlegm is known. Floger on the Humours.

CITRINE. n. s. [from citrinus, Latin.]
A species of crystal of an extremely pure, clear, and fine texture, generally free from flaws and blemishes. It is ever in a long and slender column, irregularly hexagonal, and terminated by an hexagonal pyramid. It is from one to four or five inches in length. This stone is very plentiful in the West Indies. Our jewellers have learned to call it citrine; and cut stones for rings out of it, which are mistaken for topazes. Hill on Fossil.

CITRON. n. s. [from citrus, Lat.] It hath broad stiff leaves, like those of the laurel. There are also found of many leaves, expanded like a rose. The pistil becomes an oboque, thick, fleshy fruit, very full of juice. Genus is the great nursery for these trees. One sort, with a pointed fruit, is in so great esteem, that the single fruits are sold at Florence for two shillings each. Miller.

With citron grows adorns a distant soil. Addison.

CITRON-WATER. n. s. Aqua vitae, distilled with the rind of citrons.
Like citron-water matrons checks infame. Pope.

CITRUL. n. s. The same with pummer, so named from its yellow colour.

CITY. n. s. [cito, French; civitas, Lat.]
1. A large collection of houses and inhabitants.

Men seek safety from number better united, and from walls and fortifications, the use whereof is to make the few a match for the many: this is the original of cities. Temple.

City, in a strict sense, means the houses inclosed within the walls: in a larger sense, it reaches to all the suburbs. Watts.

2. [In the English law.] A town corporate, that hath a bishop and a cathedral church. Cowell.

3. The inhabitants of a certain city, as distinguished from other subjects.

What is the city but the people?—True, the people that is the city. Shaksp.

I do suspect I have done some offence, That seems disgraceful in the city's eye. Shaksp.

CITY. adj.
1. Relating to the city.
His enforcement of the city wives. Shaksp.

The city ports by this hath enter'd. Shaksp.

2. Resembling the manners of the citizens.
The male of the city, not the most cool and we can agree upon the first cut. Shaksp.

CIVET. n. s. [civette, Fr. zibetta, Arabic, signifying scent.] A perfume from the civet-cat.

The civet, or ciret cat, is a little animal not unlike our cat. It is one of the Indies, Peru, Brazil, Guinea. The perfume is formed like a kind of grease, in a bag under its tail, between the anus and pudendum. It is gathered from time to time, and abounds in proportion as the animal is fed. Tourneur.

Civet is of a baser birth than tar; the very unclean flux of a cat. Shaksp.

Some purifications and excrescences do yield excellent odours; as ciret and musk, and, as some think, ambergrise. Bacon's Natural History.
CIVIC

CIVIC. adj. [civitas, Latin.] Relating to civil honours or practices; not military.

With equal rights immortal Tully shone:
Behind, Rome's genius waits with civic crowns,
And the great father of his country owns. Pope.

CIVIL. adj. [civis, Latin.]
1. Relating to the community; political; relating to the city or government.

God gave them laws of civic religion, and would not permit their commonwealth to be governed by any other laws than his own. Hooker.

2. Of civil justice; part, religious.

Of sacrifice. Milton's Paradise Lost.

But there is another unity, which would be most advantageous to our country; and that is, your civil union after a civic, a political union in the whole nation. Spratt.

3. Relating to any man as a member of a community.

Break not your promise, unless it be unlawful or impossible; either out of your nature, or out of your civil power. Tackett.

4. Not in anarchy; not wild; not without rule or government.

For rudest minds with harmony were caught,
And civic life by the muses taught. Roscommon.

5. Not ecclesiastical; as, the ecclesiastical courts are controlled by the civic.

6. Not natural; as, a person banished or outlawed is said to suffer civic, though not natural, death.

7. Not military; as, the civic magistrate's authority is obstructed by war.

8. Not criminal; as, this is a civil process, not a criminal prosecution.

9. Civicized; not barbarous.

England was very rude and barbarous; for it is but even the other day since England grew civic. Spen. on Ireland.

10. Compliant; civilized; gentle; well bred; elegant of manners; not rude; not brutal; not coarse.

I heard a maenad, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civic at her song. Shakespeare.

And all these sayings from that gentle tongue,
Where civic speech and soft persuasion hung! Prior.

11. Grave; sober; not gay or shewy.

Thus nigh oft see me in thy pale career,
Till civic suitors meet. Milton's Poems.

12. Relating to the ancient consular or imperial government as, civil law.

No woman had it, but a civic doctor. Shakespeare.

CIVILIAN. n. s. [civis, Lat.] One that professes the knowledge of the old Roman law, and of general equity.

The professors of that law, called civilians, because the civil law is their guide, should not be discouraged nor discouraged. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.

A depending kingdom is a term of art unknown to all ancient civilians, and writers upon govern- ment. Swift.

CIVILIZATION. n. s. [from civitas.] A law, act of justice, or judgment, which renders a criminal process civil; which is performed by turning an information into an inquest, or the contrary. Harris.

CIVILITY. n. s. [from civitas.]

1. Freedom from barbarity; the state of being civilized.

The English were at first as stout and warlike a people as ever the Irish; and yet are now brought into that civility, that no nation needeth them in all goodly conversation, and in all the studies of knowledge and humanity. Spen.

Divers great monarchies have risen from barbarity to civility, and fallen again to ruin. Davies on Ireland.

Whereas ere her conquering eagles fled, Arts, learning, and civility were spread.

Denham's Poems.

2. Politeness; compliance; elegance of behaviour.

Art thou then bolden'd, man, by thy distresses? Or else a rude despiser of good manners, That in civility thou seemst so empty? Shakespeare.

He, by his great civility and affability, wrought very much upon the people. Clarendon.

I should be kept from a publication, did not what your civility calls a request, your greatness command. Swift.

We in point of civility, wait to yield others in our own houses. Swift.

3. Rule of decency; practice of politeness.

Love taught him shame; and shame, with love of love, Soon taught the sweet civilities of life. Dryden.

To CIVILIZE. v. a. [from civitas.] To reclaim from savageness and brutality; to instruct in the arts of regular life.

We send the graces and the muses forth. To civitize and to refine. Walker.

Museus first, then Orpheus, civile Mankind, and give the world their deities. Denham.

Amongst those who are counted the civilized part of mankind, this original law of nature still takes place. Locke.

Onirs, or Bacchus, is reported to have civilized the Indians, and reigned amongst them fifty-two years. Arbuthnot.

4. Civicization. n. s. [from civitas.] He that reclaimeth others from a wild and savage life; he that teaches the rules and customs of civility.

The civilizers—the disturbers say:

The robbers, the corruptors of mankind! Philips's Briton.

CIVILLY. adv. [from civitas.]

1. In a manner relating to government, or to the rights or conduct of a member of a community; not naturally. Men that are civil lead their lives under one common law; for that a multitude should, without harmony, concur in the doing of one thing (for this is civility to live), or should manage community of life, it is not possible. Locke.

2. Not criminally.

That accusation, which is publick, is either civility commenced for the private satisfaction of the party injured; or else criminally, that is, for some publick punishment. Peach.

3. Politely; complaisantly; gently; without rudeness; without brutality.

I will deal with him as I please: nothing ill is to be spoken of the dead. Dryden's Pref. to his Fables.

I would have had Almeria and Osmin parted civility; as if it was not proper for lovers to do so. Collier of the Stage.

He thought them folks that lost their way. And ask'd them civility to return. Prior.

4. Without gag, or gaudy colours.

The chambers were handsome and cheerful, and furnished civily. Bacon's New Atlantis.

CIZE. n. s. [perhaps from incisa, Lat. shaped or cut to a certain magnitude.]

The quantity of anything, with regard to its external form: often written size.
CLA

A demand of any thing that is in the possession of another, or at the least of his own; as claim by will, claim by descent.

Cowper.

CLAIRE, adj. [from claimant.] That which may be demanded as due.

CLAİMANT. n. s. [from claim.] He that demands any thing, as unjustly detained by another.

CLAÎMER. n. s. [from claim.] He that makes a demand; he that requires any thing, as unjustly withheld from him.

CLAÎR-OBSCURE. n. s. See CLAÎRE-OBSCURE.

To CLÁMER, v. n. [probably corrupted from climb; as climber, clamber.] To climb with difficulty, as with both hands and feet.

The kitchen makin pins
Her richest lackom 'bout her neckly neck,
Clamber'ing the walls to eye him.

When you bear the drum,
Clamber not you up to the casemats then.

Shakespeare.

The men there do, not without some difficulty, clamber up the acclivities, dragging their kine with 'em. They were forced to clamber over so many rocks, and to tread upon the brink of so many precipices, that they were very often in danger of their lives.

Addison's Freeholder.

To CLÅM. r. a. [in some provinces, to clean; from cleanam. Sax. to glue together.] To clog with any glutinous matter.

A swarm of wasps got into a honey-pot, and there they cladayed and clammed themselves till there was no getting out again.

Estrange.

The swarms were all dabbed with lime, and the birds clammed and taken.

Estrange.

CLAÎMÎNÊSS. n. s. [from clammy.] Viscosity; viscosity; tenuosity; ropiness.

A greasy pikpin will spoil the clamminess of the glue.

Mozin.

CLAÎMMY. adj. [from clammy.] Viscous; glutinous; tenacious; adhesive; ropey.

Bodies clammy and cleaving, having an appetite, at once, to follow another body, and to hold to themselves.

Beacon.

Neither the brain nor spirits can conserve motion; the former is of such a clammy consistency, it can no more retain it than a quagmire.

Glanville's Scopin.

Aghast he wak'd, and staring from his bed,
Cold sweat, in clammy drops, his limbs o'erspread.

Joyful thou'llt see

The clammy surface all o'er-strown with tribes
Of greedy insects.

The stamnous clammy, vapour that arises from the stink of grapes, when they lie mashed altogether in the vat, which puts out a light when dipped into it.

Addison on Italy.

The continuance of the fever, clammy sweat, paleness, and at last a total cessation of pain, are signs of a quagmire and approaching death.

Arkwright on Dict.

CLAÎMÔRÔUS. adj. [from clamour.] Vociferous; noisy; turbulent; loud.

It is no sufficient argument to say, that, in urging these ceremonies, none are so clamorous as papists, and they whom papists suborn.

Hooker.
the idea of something hasty, unexpected, or sudden.

They clap mouth to mouth, wing to wing, and leg to leg; and so, after a sweet sigh, down into lakes.

This pink is one of Cupid's carriers: clap on more sails; pursue.

ShakeSh.

Smooth temptations, like the sun making a maiden lay by her veil and robe; which persecution, like the northern wind, made her hold fast, and clap her arms around her.

Taylor.

If a man be highly commended, we think him sufficiently lessened, if we clap sin, or folly, or inconstancy, as Taylor's Lying Lovers.

Rażor-nakers generally clap a small line of Venice steel between two small bars of Flemish steel.

Moore's Mechanical Exercise.

The man claps his fingers one day to his mouth, and blew upon them.

L'Estrange.

His shield thrown by, to mitigate the smart,

He clapp'd his hand upon the wounded part.

Dryden.

If you leave some space empty for the air, then clap your hand upon the mouth of the vessel, and the waters will contend to get uppermost in the water.

Ray on the Creation.

It would be as absurd as to say, he clapped his horse to St. James's, and, galloped away to the Hague.

Addison.

By having their minds yet in their performances, and indifference, they pursue the truth, having no bias yet clapped on to mislead them.

Locke.

I have observed a certain cheerfulness, and a bad system of features as ever was clapped together, which hath appeared lovely. Addison's Spect.

Let all her ways be uncond'd.

And clap your judglock on her mind.

Prior.

Socrates or Alexander might have a fool's coat claps upon them, and perhaps neither wisdom nor majesty would secure them from a sneer.

Watts on the Mind.

3. To do any thing with a sudden hasty motion, or unexpectedly.

We were dead asleep,

And, how we know not, all clapt under hatches.

ShakeSh.

He was no sooner entered into the town; but a scabbling soldier clapt hold of his bridle, which he thought was in a bagging or in a drunken fashion.

Wotton's Life of Bacon.

So much from the rest of his countrymen, and indeed from his whole species, that his friends would have clapped him into bedlam, and have begg'd his estate.

Spectator.

Have you a horse's sitting hare,

Listening, and fearful of the storm

Of hounds and hounds, clap back her ear.

Prior.

We will take our remedy at law, and clap an action upon you for old debts.

Arbuthnot's History of John Bull.

4. To celebrate or praise by clapping the hands; to applaud.

I have often heard the stationer wishing for those hands to take off his melancholy bargain, which clapped its performance on the stage.

Dedication to Dryden's Spanish Prior.

5. To infect with a venereal poison. [See the noun.]

If the patient hath been clapt, it will be the more difficult to cure him the second time, and worse the third.

Widsman.

Let every manner ev'ry dish adapt him,

Who'd force his pepper where his guests are clapt?

King.

6. To clap up. To complete suddenly, without much precaution.

So he bore me over, I shall wash our hands,

To clap this royal bargain up of peace. ShakeSh.

Was ever match clapt up so suddenly? ShakeSh.

A peace may be clapped up with that suddenness, which are now in motion, may unexpectedly fall upon his skirts.

Harell's Vocal Forest.

7. To clap up. To imprison with little formality or delay.

The claret smooth, red as the lips we press

In sparkling faire; while we drain the bowl.

Thomson.

CLA'RICORD. n. s. [from clarius and chorda, Latin.] A musical instrument in form of a spinette, but more ancient. It has forty-nine or fifty keys, and consists usually of three or four courses.

Chambers.

CLA'РИФIATION. n. s. [from clarify.]

The act of making any thing clear from impurities.

Liquors are, many of them, at the first, thick and troubled; as muste, and wort; to know the means of accelerating this clarification, we must know the causes of clarification.

To CLARIFY. v. a. [clarifier, French.]

1. To purify or clear any liquor; to separate from feculences or impurities.

The apothecaries clarify their syrups by whites of eggs, beaten with the juices which they would clarify; which whites of eggs contain not the dry and grosser parts of the juice to them; and after, the syrup being set on the fire, the whites of eggs become dry and burnt, and are taken forth.

Bacon.

2. To brighten; to illuminate. This sense is rare.

The will was then dutee and pliant to all the motions of right reason: it met the dictates of a clarifier, or understanding.

South.

The Christian religion is the only means that God hath sanctified, to set fallen man upon his legs again, to clarify his reason, and to rectify his will.

South.

CLA'REION. n. s. [clarin, Spanish; from clarius loud, Lat. A trumpet; a wind instrument of war.

And after to his palace he them brings,

With shaws, and trumpets, and with clarions.

And all the while the joyous people sings. Spencer.

Then straight commands, that at the warlike

Of trumpets loud, and clarions, be spread

The mighty standard.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Let clarions note the expounding world amaze,

And the loud clarion labour in your praise. Pope.

CLA'REITY. n. s. [clarit, French; claritas, Latin.] Brightness; splendour.

A light by abundant claristy invisible; an understanding which itself can only comprehend.

Sir Walter Raleigh.

Man was not only deceivable in his integrity, but the angels of light in all their clarit.

Errours.

CLA'RY. n. s. [herminium, Lat. An herb.

Plants that have circled leaves do all abound with moisture. The weakest kind of curling is roughness; as in clary and burr. Bowles's Nat. Hist.

To CLASH. v. n. [kletsen, Duit. to make a noise.]

1. To make a noise by mutual collision; to strike one against another.

Three times, as of the clashing sound

Of arms, we heard. Denham.

Those few that should happen to clash, might rebound after the collision. Benet.

How many canides may send out their light, without clashing upon one another! which argues the smallness of the parts of light, and the larger-ness of the interstices between particles of air and other bodies.

Cheyne.
CLA

2. To act with opposite power, or contrary direction.

Neither was there any queen-mother who might clash with his counsellors for authority.

Those that are not convinced what help this is to magistracy, would find it, if they should chance to clash. South.

3. To contradict; to oppose.

Wherever there are men, there will be clashing some time or other; and a knock, or a contest, spoils all.

The absurdity in this instance is obvious; and yet every time that clashing metaphors are put together, this fault is committed. Spectator.

To CLASH. v. a. To strike one thing against another, so as to produce a noise.

The nodding statesman clash'd his arms, and with a sullen sound, and feebile cry, Half sunk, and half pronounced the word of victory.

Dejan. CLASH. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A noisy collision of two bodies.

The clash of arms and voice of men we hear. Dejan. He nobly seiz'd thee in the dire alarm Of war and slaughter, and the clash of arms. Pope.

2. Opposition; contradiction.

Then from the clash between papers and kings, Debate, like sparks from flint's collision, spring'd. Dejan. In the very next line he reconciles the fathers and scripture, and shews there is no clash between them. A. T. T. A. T. B. Atterbury.

CLASPS. n. s. [chespe, Dutch.]

1. A hook to hold any thing close; as a book, or garment.

The scorpion's claws here grasp a wide extent, And here the crab's in lesser clamps are bent. Addison. He took me aside, opening the clasp of the parchment cover of the book, without warn and Pope.

2. An embrace, in contempt.

Your fair daughter, Transported with no worse terror guard, But with a knife of hire, a gouder, To the great clasp of a lascivious Moor. Shakspere.

To CLASP. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To catch with a clasp.

Sermons are the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and do open the scriptures; which being but read, remain, in comparison, still clasped. Hooker.

There Caxton slept, with Wyukin at his side; One clasp'd in wood, and one in strong iron, Pope.

2. To catch and hold by twining.

Direct
The clasping ivy where to clasp. Milton. Par. Lost.

3. To hold with the hands extended; to incluse between the hands.

Occasion turneth the handle of the bottle first to be received; and after the belly, which is hard to clasp. Bacon.

4. To embrace.

He stoop'd below The lying spear, and assum'd the promis'd blow; Then creeping, clasp'd the heroes' knees, and pray'd. Dryden.

Now, now he claspt her to his panting breast; Now he devours her with his eager eyes. Smith.

5. To incluse.

Boys, with women's voices, Strive to speak big, and clasp their female joints In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown. Shak.

CLASPER. n. s. [from clasp.]

The tendrils or threads of climbing plants, by which they cling to other things for support.

CLAU.

The tendrils or clasps of plants are given only to such species as have weak and imperfect stalks. Ray on the Creation. CLASP. n. s. [from clasp and knife.]

A knife which falls into the handle.

CLASS. n. s. [from classic, Latin.]

1. A rank or order of persons.

Segrais has distinguished the readers of poetry, according to their capacity of judging, into three classes. Dryden.

2. A number of boys learning the same lesson at the school.

We shall be sev'ned away from this lower class in the school of knowledge, and our conversation shall be with angels and illumined spirits. Watts on the Mind.

3. A set of beings or things; a number ranged in distribution, under some common denomination.

Among this herd of politicians, any one set make a very considerable class of men. Addison's Freethinker.

Whate'er of mongrel, no one class admits A wit with dunces, and a dunce with wits. Pope.

To CLASS. v. a. [from the noun.]

To range according to some stated method of distribution; to range according to different ranks.

I considered that, by the clasping and methodizing such passages, I might instruct the reader. Arbuthnot on Coins.

CLASSICAL. adj. [classicus, Latin.]

1. Relating to antique authors; relating to literature.

Poetic fields encompass me around, And still I seem to tread on classic ground. Addit. With them the genius of classic learning dwell'd, and from them it is derived. Felton on the Classics.

2. Of the first order or rank.

From this standard the value of the Roman weights and coins are deduced; in the settling of which I have followed Mr. Greaves, who may be justly reckoned a classical author on this subject. Arbuthnot on Coins.

CLASSICK. n. s. [classicus, Lat.] An author of the first rank: usually taken for ancient authors.

The classics of an age that heard of none. Pope.

CLASSIS. n. s. [Latin.] Order; sort; body.

He had declared his opinion of that classic of men, and did all he could to hinder their growth. Clarendon.

1. To make a noise by knocking two sonorous bodies frequently together.

Now the sprightly trumpet from afar Had rous'd the neighing steeds to sound the fields, While the fierce riders clatter'd on their shields. Dryden.

2. To utter a noise by being struck together.

All that night was heard an unwonted clattering of weapons, and of men running to and fro. Addison's Historia

3. To talk fast and idly.

Dryden.
CLE

2. An article, or particular stipulation. The clause is in turn concerning the bishop. Hooker.

When after his death, they were sent both to Jews and Gentiles, we find not this clause in their commission. South.

CLAUSTRAL, adj. [from clausum, Lat.] Relating to a cloister, or religious house. Stanford.

Claustral priors are such as preside over monasteries, next to the abbot or chief governor in such religious houses. Hooker.

CLAVIUS. n.s. [clava, Lat.] A claw, or pincer; the state of being shut. Aylyiffe.

In some monasteries the severity of the clausura is hard to be borne. Godwin.

CLAW. n.s. [clapam, Saxon.] 1. The foot of a beast or bird, armed with sharp nails; or the pincers or holders of a shell-fish. South.

I saw her range abroad to seek her food, To 'embrace her teeth and claws with lukewarm blood. Spenser.

What's justice to a man, or laws, That never comes within their claws? Hudibras.

He softens the harsh rigour of the laws, Blunts their keen edge, and grinds their happy claws. Garth.

2. Sometimes a hand, in contumelious To CLAW. v. a. [clapam, Saxon.]

To tear with nails or claws. South.

Look, if the wittier'd elder hath not his poll claw'd like a parrot. Shakeep.

To pull, as with the nails. South.

I am afraid we shall not easily claw off that name. South.

To scratch or tickle. Shakeep.

I must laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour. Shakeep.

To flatter: an obsolete sense. See CLAW-BACK.

6. To claw off, or away. To scold; to rail at. Shakeep.

You thank the place where you found money; but the true panderer is to be clawed away for it; if you should lose it. L'Estrange.

CLAW-BACK. n.s. [from claw and back.]

A flatterer; a sycophant; a wheeler. The pope's clawbacks. Jewel.

CLAWED. adj. [from claw.] Furnished or armed with claws. Gemm.

Among quadrupeds, of all the clawed, the lion is the strongest. Gros's Cosmogony.

CLAY. n.s. [clay, Welsh; kley, Dutch.] 1. Uneacious and tenacious earth, such as will mould into a certain form. Clay is earth, firmly coherent, weighty and compact, stiff, viscid, and ductile to a great degree, while moist; smooth to the touch, not easily breaking between the fingers, nor readily dissoluble in water; and, when mixed, not readily subsiding from it. Hooker.

Deep Acheron.

Whose troubled eddies, thick with ooze and clay, Are whir'd aloft. Dryn.

Expose the clay to the rain, to drain it from rains, that the bricks may be more durable. Woodward on Pottery.

The sun, which softens was, will harden clay. Reader.

Clover is the best way of improving clay, where manure is scarce. Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. [In poetry.] Earth in general; the terrestrial element. Gilpin.

Why should our clay
Over our spirits so much sway? Donne.

To CLAY. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover with clay; to mantle with clay. This morning last fifty years; then the ground must be clayed again. Mortimer's Husbandry.

CLAY-COLD. adj. [clay and cold.] Lifeless; cold as the unanimated earth. Rowe.

I wash'd his clay-cold corse with holy drops, And saw him laid in hollow ground. Pope.

CLAY-PIT. n.s. [clay and pit.] A pit where clay is dug. Taw was found in a clay-pit. Woodward on Potash.

CLAYEY. adj. [from clay.] Consisting of clay; abounding with clay. Bunyan.

Some in a lax or sandy, some a heavy or clayey soil. Derham.

CLAYISH. adj. [from clay.] Partaking of the nature of clay; containing particles of clay. Matthew.

Small beer proves an unwholesome drink; perhaps, by being brewed with a little muddy, and clayish water, which the brewers covet. Harvey on Consumptions.

CLAYMARL. n.s. [clay and marl.] A whitish, smooth, chalky clay. Claymart resembles clay, and is near as kin to it; but is more fat, and sometimes mixed with chalk-stones. Mortimer's Husbandry.

CLEAN. adj. [clean.] To clear. Cleanliness, in our fantastick climes, the fair weather which clears away the dirt and renders their hair. Prior.

CLEANLY. adv. [from clean.] Elegantly; neatly: without nastiness. L'Estrange's Fabliau.

1. Neatness; freedom from filth.

2. Easy, exactly; justness; natural, unlaboured correctness. Shakeep.

He shewed no strength in shaking of his staff, but the fine cleanliness of bearing it was delightful. Dryden.

He minded only the cleanliness of his satire, and the cleanliness of expression. Dryden's Jovius.

Purity; innocence. The cleanliness and purity of one's mind is never better proved, than in discovering its own faults at first view. Pope.

To CLEANSE. v. a. [cleansen, Sax.]

1. To free from dirt or filth, by washing or rubbing. Cleanse the pale corpus with a religious hand. From the polluting weed and common sand. Prior.

2. To purify from guilt. The blueness of a wound cleanseth away evil. Proverbs.

Not all her odious tears can cleanse her crime. The plant alone deforms the happy clime. Dryden.

3. To free from noxious humour by purgation. Cleanthine not minister to a mind diseas'd. And, with some sweet olivious antidote, Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that pernicious stuff Which weight upon the heart? Shakespeare.

This soil, combined with its own salt and sugar, makes it sapaceous and cleansing, by which quality it often helps digestion, and excite appetite. Tractatus de Alimentis.
CLE

4. To free from leprosy.
   Shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded. Mark, i. 44.

5. To scour; to rid all offensive things.
   This river the Jewes proffered the pope to cleanse, so they might have what they found. Addison on Du Bell.

CLEANSER. n. &. [clearly, sax.] That which has the quality of evacuating any foul humours, or digesting a sore; a detergent.

If there happens an imposthume, honey, and even honey of roses, taken inwardly, is a good cleanser. Ancient.

CLEAR, adj. [clar, Fr. clair, Dutch; clarus, Lat.]
1. Bright; transpiscious; pellucid; transparent; luminous; without opacity or cloudiness; not nebulous; not opacious; not dark.
   The stream is so transparent, pure, and clear, that, had the self-consumd youth gaze'd here, he but the bottom, not his face, had seen: Denham.

2. Perspicuous; sharp.
   Michael from Adam's eyes the film remov'd, Which that false fruit, that promis'd clearer sight, Had breed: Milton. Paradise Lost.
   A run about was every pillar there; A polish'd mirror show'd not half his might: Dryden's Fables.

3. Cheerful; not clouded with care or anger.
   Stently he pronounced.
   The rigid interdiction, which resounds Yet dreadful in mine ear, though in my choice Not to incur; but soon his clear aspect Return'd, and gracious purpose thus renew'd: Milton.

4. Free from clouds; serene.
   I will darken the earth in a clear day: Amos.
   And the clear sun on his wide watery glass Gaze'd hot: Milton. Paradise Lost.

5. Without mixture; pure; unmingled.

6. Perspicuous; not obscure; not hard to be understood; not ambiguous.
   We pretend to give a clear account how thunder and lightning are produced: Many reason exceeding clear and rightly, who know not how to make a syllabeg: Locke.

7. Indisputable; evident; undeniable.
   Reason enough for Clear victory; to our part loss, and rout Through all th'empyrean: Milton's Paradise Lost.

8. Apparent; manifest; not hid; not dark.
   The hemisphere of earth, in clearest ken, Stretch'd out to the thickest prospect lay: Milton.
   Unto God, who understandeth all their secret cogitations, they are clear and manifest, Homer. The pleasure of right reasoning is still the greatest, by how much the consequences are more clear, and the chains of them more long: Bunyan's Theory.

9. Quick to understand; prompt; acute.
   Mother of science, now I feel thy power Within me clear, not only to discern Things in their causes, but to trace the ways Of highest agents, decem'd however wise: Milton.

10. Unspotted; guileless; irreproachable.
   Duncan has been so clear in his great office.
   Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
   Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee: Shaksper.
   Repentance so altereth and changeth a man through the mercy of God, he be never so defiled, that it maketh him pure and clear: Whitgift.

Though the peripatetic philosophy has been most eminent in its way, yet other sects have not been wholly clear of it: Locke.
   Straining, yet friend to truth, in soul sincerity
   In action faithful, and in honour clear: Pope.

11. Unprepossessed; not prejudiced; impartial.
   Leucippe, of whom one look, in a clear judgment, would have been more wise and virtuous, and given her kindness so prodigiously bestowed: Sidney.

12. Free from distress, prosecution, or imputed guilt.
   The cruel corporal whisper'd in my ear.
   Five pounds, if thou wouldst set me clear. Gay.

13. Free from deductions or encumbrances.
   Hope, if the success happens to fail, is clear gains as long as it lasts. Cother against Dampsir. Whatever a foreigners, who purchases land here, gives for it, is so much every farthing clear gain to the nation; for that money comes clear in, without carrying out any thing for it. Locke.
   I often wish'd that I had clear
   For life, six hundred pounds a-year. Swift.

14. Unencumbered; without let or hindrance; vacant; unobstructed.
   If he be so clear of all his health,
   Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts,
   And make a clear way to the gods: Shaksper.
   A sound, whistling his hour at us, my companion gave him two or three curses, and left the way clear for him.

15. Out of debt.

16. Unentangled; at a safe distance from any danger or enemy.
   Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compell'd valour, and in the grapple I laid them on: in the instant they got clear of our ship: Shaksper.
   It requires care for a man with a double design to keep clear of clashing with his own reasonings: L'Estrange.

17. Canorous; sounding distinctly, plainly, particularly.
   I much approved of my friend's insisting upon the qualifications of a good aspect and a clear voice.

   Weak! th' numbers soft and clear
   Gently steal upon the ear;
   Now louder and yet louder rise,
   And fill with sounding sounds the sky: Pope.

19. Free; guiltless; with from.
   I am clear from the blood of this woman.
   None is so fit to correct their faults, as he who is clear from any in his own writings, Dryden.

20. Sometimes with of.
   The air is clearer of gross and damp exhalations, Temple.

21. Used of persons. Distinguishing; judicious; intelligible: this is scarcely used but in conversation.

CLEAR. n. v. a. [from the adjective.]
1. To make bright, by removing opacous bodies; to brighten.
   Your eyes, that seem so clear,
   Yet are but dim, shall perfectly be then Oper'd and clear'd. Milton's Par. I. 104.

2. To free from obscurity, perplexity, or ambiguity.
   To clear up the several parts of this theory, I was willing to lay aside a great many other speculations: Burnet's Theory.
   When, in the knot of the play, no other way is left for the discovery, then let a god descend, and clear the business to the audience: Dryden.
   By mystical terms, and ambiguous phrases, he darkens what he should clear. Dryden.
   Many knotty points there are, Which all discuss, but few can clear. Prior.

3. To purge from the imputation of guilt; to justify; to vindicate; to defend: often with from before the thing.
   Somerset was much cleared by the death of those who were executed, to make him appear falsely.
   Sir John Haywood. To clear hep, to clear the reader, and am sure he will clear me from partiality: Dryden's Fables.
   How! wouldst thou clear rebellion? Addison.
   Before you pray, clear your souls from all those sins, which you know to be displeasing to God: Watts Preparation to Death.

4. To cleanse; with of, or from.
   My hands are of your colour; but I shame To wear a heart so white: Dryden.
   I will appeal to the reader, and am sure he will clear me from partiality: Dryden's Fables.
   A little water cleans us of this deed: Shaksp.

5. To remove any encumbrance, or embarrassment.
   A man digging in the ground did meet with a door, having a wall on each hand of it; from which having cleared the earth, he forced open the door: Addison.
   This one mighty sum has cleared the debt: Dryden.
   A statute lies hid in a block of marble; and the art of the statuary only clears away the superfluous matter, and removes the rubbish: Addison's Spectator.
   Multitudes will furnish a double proportion towards the clearing of that expense: Addison's Freethinker.

6. To free from any thing offensive or noxious.
   To clear the palace from the foe, succeed.
   The weary living, and revenge the dead: Dryden.
   It should be the skill and art of the teacher to clear their heads of all other thoughts, whilst they are learning of any thing: Locke on Education.
   Augustus, to establish the dominion of the seas, rigged out a powerful navy to clear it of the pirates of the Anti-Jews: Burke.

7. To clarify; as, to clear liquors.

8. To gain without deduction.
   He clears but two hundred thousand crowns a year, after having defray'd all the charges of working the salt: Addison.

9. To confer judgment or knowledge.
   Our common prints would clear up their understandings, and animate their minds with virtue: Addison's Spectator.

10. To clear a Ship, at the custom-house, is to obtain the liberty of sailing, or of selling a cargo, by satisfying the customs.
   To Clear. v. n.
CLE

So foul a sky clears not without a storm. Shak.

2. Sometimes with up.

The mist, that hung about my mind, clears up. Addison.

Take heart, nor of the laws of fate complain; Thou'rt now 'tis cloudy, 'twill clear up again. Norris. Advise him to stay till the weather clears up, for you are afraid there will be rain. Bacon's Essays.

3. To be disengaged from encumbrances, distress, or entanglements.

He that clears at once, will reap; for, finding himself out of straits, he will revert to his customs; but he that cleareth by degrees, induceth a habit of frugality, and gaineth as well upon his mind as upon his estate. Swift's Directions to the Groom.

CLEARKES, n. s. [from clear.]

A certificate that a ship has been cleared at the custom-house.

CLEARKER, n. s. [from clear.]

Brightener; purifier; enlightener.

Gold is a wonderful clearer of the understanding: it dissipates every doubt and scruple of an instant. Addison.

CLEARLY, adv. [from clear.]

1. Brightly; luminously.

Mysteries of grace and salvation, which were but darkly disclosed unto them, have been made more clearly shined. Hooker.

2. Plainly; evidently; without obscurity or ambiguity.

Christianity first clearly proved this noble and important truth to the world. Rogers.

3. With discernment; acutely; without embarrassment or perplexity of mind.

There is almost no man but sees clearer and sharper the vices in a speaker than the virtues. Ben Jonson.

4. Without entanglement or distraction of affairs.

He that doth not divide, will never enter into business; and he that divideth too much, will never come out of it clearly. Bacon's Essays.

5. Without by-ends; without sinister views; honestly.

When you are examining these matters, do not take into consideration any sensual or worldly interest; but deal clearly and impartially with yourselves. Tillotson.

6. Without deduction or cost.

7. Without reserve; without evasion; with- out subterfuge.

By a certain day they should clearly relinquish unto the king all their lands and possessions. Davies on Ireland.

CLEARNESS, n. s. [from clear.]

1. Transparency; brightness.

It may be, peradventure, doth not only cause clearness and splendour, but sweetness of savour. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Glass in the furnace grows to a greater magnitude, and refines to a greater clearness, only as the breath within is more powerful, and the heat more intense. Bacon.

2. Splendour; lustre.

Love, more clear than yourself, with the clearness, lays a night of sorrow upon me. Sidney.

3. Distinctness; perspicuity.

If he choose to think right, he doth not know how to convey his thoughts with a greater with clearness and perspicuity. Addison's Spect.

4. Sincerity; honesty; plain dealing.

Wtien the case required dissimulation, if they used it, the former opinion spread abroad, of their good faith and clearness of dealing, made them almost invincible. Bacon.

5. Freedom from imputation.

I required a clearer. Shakspe. Macbeth.

CLEAR-SIGHTED, adj. [clear and sight.]

Perspicuous; discerning; judicious.

VOL. I.

To CLEARSTARCH, v. a. [from clear and starch.]

To stiffen with starch. Addison.

To CLEAVE, v. n. pret. I clave; [cleopan, Sax. cleven, Dutch.]

1. To adhere; to stick; to hold to.

The clarifying of liquors by adhesion, is effected when some clearing body is mixed with the liquors, whereby the greater part sticks to that clearing body. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Water, in small quantity, cleaves to any thing that is solid. When the dust growth into hardness, and the clods cleave fast together. Job.

That the sunbeam, fell with air, receives the colour of the thing to which he claves. Dryden.

2. To unite aptly; to fit.

New honours come upon him. Like our strange garments, clave not to their mind.

But with the aid of use. Shakspe.

3. To unite in concord and interest; to adhere.

The apostles did conform the christians according to the pattern of the Jews, and made them cleare the better. Hooker.

The men of Judah cleave unto their king. Sam. If you shall cleave to my consent, when is shall make honour for you. Shakspe.

The people would revolt, if they saw any of the French nation cleave unto.

4. To be concomitant to; to be united with.

We cannot imagine, that, in breeding or begetting, his grace clode cleare to the one, and forsake the other.

5. To part forcibly into pieces.

And at their passing cleave th' Assyrian flood. Milton.

The fountains of it are said to have been cleaved, or burst open. Burnett's Theory of the Earth.

The blessed minister his wings display'd, and, like a shooting-star, he cleave the night, Dryd.

Rain'd on her dusky wings, she cleaves the skies. Dryd.

Whom with such force he struck, he fell'd him down.

And he cleave the circle of his golden crown. Dryd.

Elected to the earth a never seat, his beams had cleave the hill, the valley dry'd. Blackmore.

Where whole brigades one champion's arms o'ertrow.

And cleave a giant at a random blow. Tickell.

Not half so swift with the trembling doves can fly. When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky. Pope.

2. To divide; to part naturally.

And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleve into two claws. Deuteronomy.

To CLEAN, v. n. 1. To part asunder.

Wars twixt you twain, would be,

As the world should cleave, and that slain men Should solde up the rift. Shakspe. Antony and Cleopatra.

The ground cleaves asunder that was under them. Numbers.

He eat the cleaving sky, and in a moment vanish'd from her eye. Pope's Odyssey.

2. To suffer division.

It clears with a glossy polite substance, not plane, but with some little unevenness. Newton's Optics.

CLEAVER, n. s. [from cleave.]

1. A butcher's instrument to cut animals into joints.

You gentlemen keep a parcel of roaring bullys about me day and night, with buggars and hunting horns, and ringing the changes on butchers cleavers. Arisbuth.

To arm'd with all thy cleavers, knight.

And axes made to how down lives. Hudibras.

2. A weedic. Improperly written CLIVER.

CLEES, n. s. The two parts of the foot: which are cleoos, which are talons. Skinner.

It is a country word, and probably corrupted from claws.

CLEF, n. s. [from clef key, Fr.]

In music a mark at the beginning of the lines of a song, which shews the tone or key in which the piece is to begin. Chambers.

CLEFT, part. pass. [from cleare.]

Divided; parted asunder.

Put with incense strew'd On the clef wood. Milton's Par. Lost.

I never did on clef Parnassus dream, Nor taste the salt Hellenic stream. Dryd.

CLEFT-GRAM, v. a. [from cleave and graft.]

To engrat by cleaving the stock of a tree, and inserting a branch.

Filberts may be clef'd grafted on the common nut. Martinier.

CLEMENCY, n. s. [clemence, Fr. clematic, Lat.]

1. Mercy; remission of severity; willingness to spare; tenderness in punishing.

I have stated the true notion of clemency, mercy, compassion, good-nature, humanity; or whatever else it may be called, so far as is consistent with wisdom. Addison.

2. Mildness; softness.

Then in the clemency of upward air We'll scour our spots, and the dire thunder sear. Dryd.

CLEMENT, adj. [clemens, Lat.]

Mild; gentle; merciful; kind; tender; compassionate.

You are more clement than vile men, Who of their broken debts take a third, Letting them thrive again on the abatement. Shakspe.

CLENCH. See CLINCH.

To CLEPE, v. a. [clynap, Sax.]

To call.

Obsolette.

Three crabb'd months had sorne'd themselves to death.

Ere I could make the open thy white hand, And cleft thyself my love. Shakspe.

T
Clergy, n.s. [clergy, Fr. clerus, Lat. σπιτις, Greek.] The body of men set apart by due ordinance for the service of God.

We hold that God's clergy are a state which hath been, and will be as long as there is a church upon earth, yet peculiar, by the plain word of God himself; a state wherein rests the whole power of God's people's must be subject, as touching the things that appertain to their soul's health.

The congregation gives a greater sum than ever at one time, the clergy yet. Did to his predecesary part with, Shaksp. &c.

Clerk, or [clergyman or man.] A man in holy orders; a man set apart for ministration of holy things; not a laick. How I have sped among the clergy, Selden. The sums I have collected shall express. Shaksp.

It seems to be in the power of a reasonable clergyman to make the most ignorant man comprehend his duty. Seld. Clerical, adj. [clericus, Lat.] Relating to the clergy: as a clerical man, a man in orders.

It seems the keys are lined, and in colleges they use to tile the table-men. Bacon's Nat. Hist. Unless we may more properly read clari-chords.

Clerk, n. s. [cleric. Sax. clerics.] 1. A clergyman. All persons were styled clerks, that served in the church of Christ, whether they were bishops, priests, or deacons. Aylish.

2. A scholar; a man of letters. They might talk of book-learning what they would; but, for his part, he never saw more unfeaty fellows than great clerks were. Sidney. The greatest clerks being not always the honestest, any more than the witsest, men. South.

3. A man employed under another as a writer. My lord Bassanio gave his ring away unto the judge: and then the boy, his clerk, that took some pains in writing, he begged mine. Shaksp.

My friend was in doubt whether he could or not the exert the judge upon such a vagrant; but not having his eyes upon him, who is a necessary counsellor, be let the thought drop. Add MS.

4. A petty writer in public offices; an officer of various kinds. Take a just view, how many may remark, who's now a lord, his grandson was a clerk. Gracie.

It may seem difficult to make out the bills of fare for the supper of Vitellius. I question not but an expert clerk of a kitchen can do it. Arbuthnot.

5. The lazen man who reads the responses to the congregation in the church, to direct the rest. Clerkship, n.s. [from clerk.]

1. Scholarship.

Cleve, in composition, at the beginning, cliff, nging or end of the proper clew, n. of a name, denotes it to be situated on the side of a rock or hill; as, Cleveland, Clifton, Stancliff.

Clever, adj. [of no certain etymology.]

1. Dexterous; skilful. It was the cleverest mockery of the two. L'Espr. I read Dyer's letter more for the style than the news. The man has a clever pen, it must be owned. Addim's Freeth. 2. Just; fit; proper; commodious. He can't but think 'twould sound more clever, to me, and to my peers for ever. Pope.

3. Well-shaped; handsome. She called him godly-guts, and he called her losty Peg, though the gilt was a tight clever wench as any was. Arbuthnot.

4. This is a low word, scarcely ever used but in burlesque or conversation: and applied to any thing a man likes, without a settled meaning. Cleverly, adv. [from clever.] Dexterously; fitly; handsomely. These were vile nuggets with th' scent. And sometimes catch them with a snap, as cleverly as th' ablest trap. Hudibras. A rogue upon the highway may have as strong an arm, and take of a man's head as cleverly as the executioner.

South. Cleverness, n.s. [from clever.] Dexterity; skill; accomplishment.

Clew, n.s. [clerep. Sax. klöweu, Dutch.] 1. Thread wound upon a bottom; a ball of thread. Els. untwisting his deceitful clew, If to receive a web of wicked thread. Spenser. While, guided by some clew of heavenly thread, the perfidious labyrinth we backward tread. Spenser.

They see small clews draw vastest weights along. Not in their bulk, but in their order, strong. Dryden.

2. A guide; a direction: because men direct themselves by a clew of thread in a labyrinth. This alphabet must be your own clew to guide you. Holder. Is there no way, no thought, no beam of light? No clew to guide me thro' this gloomy maze. Dryden. To clear my honour, yet preserve my faith! Smith. The reader knows not how to transport his thoughts over to the next particular, for want of some clew, or connecting idea, to lay hold of. Watt's Logick.

3. Clew of the sail of a ship, is the lower corner of it, which reaches down to that earing where the tackles and sheets are fastened. Harris. To clew, v. a. [from clew, a sea-term.] To clew the sails, is to raise them, in order to be furled; which is done by a rope fastened to the clew of a sail, called the clew-garnet. Harris. To CLICK, v. n. [cliken, Dutch; cliqueiter, French; or perhaps the diminutive of cleck.] To make a sharp, small, successive noise. The solemn death-watch click'd, the hour she died; And shilling crickets in the chimneys cried. Gay.

Cliquet, n.s. [from click.] A low word for the servant of a salesman, who stands at the door to invite customers. Cliquet, n.s. [from click.] The knocker of a door. Clientele, n.s. [clients, Latin.] 1. One who applies to an advocate for counsel and defence. There is due from the judge to the advocate some commendation, where causes are well handled; for that upholds in the client the reputation of his lawyer. Bacon's Essays. Advocates must deal plainly with their clients, and tell the true state of their case. Bacon.

2. It may be perhaps sometimes used for a dependent in a more general sense, as it was used among the Romans.

Clima, n.s. [from cli, Lat.] 1. A space upon the surface of the earth, measured from the equator to the polar circles; in each of which spaces the longest day is half an hour longer than in that nearer to the equator. From the polar circles to the poles, climates are measured by the increase of a month.

2. In the common and popular sense, a region, or tract of land, differing from another by the temperature of the air. Betwixt these extremes, two happier climates hold the temper that partakes of hot and cold. Dryden.
CLIMES, n. s. [contracted from climate, and therefore properly poetical.] Climate; region; tract of earth.

1. He can spread thy name o'er land and sea,
   Whatever clime the sun's bright circle warms.

2. They apply the celestial description of other climes unto their own.

3. Of beauty sing, her shining progress view.

We shall meet in happier climes and on a souther shore. Addison.

CLIMATES. Not in use.

Such barbarians preceding all the states, have heaven and earth together demonstrated.

Climax, n.s. [grav.,] Graduation; ascent; a figure in rhetoric, by which the sentence rises gradually; as Cicero says to Catiline, Thou dost not move, nothing most nothing, thinkest nothing; but I hear it, I see it, and perfectly understand it.

Choice between one excellency and another is difficult; and yet the conclusion, by a due climax, is ever the best. Milton.

Climax: To CLIMB, v. n. pret. climb or climbed; part. climbed. [climbe, Sax.] A steep ascent.

To CLIMB, v. n. To ascend; to mount.

1. It's not enough to break into my garden,
   Climbing my walls, in spite of me, the owner's Shaks.

3. I climb, and gain the aspiring mountain's height. Dryden.

To CLIMB, v. a. To ascend; to mount.

1. It is not enough to break into my garden,
   Climbing my walls, in spite of me, the owner's Shaks.

3. I climb, and gain the aspiring mountain's height. Dryden.

To CLIMB, v. a. To ascend; to mount.

1. It is not enough to break into my garden,
   Climbing my walls, in spite of me, the owner's Shaks.

3. I climb, and gain the aspiring mountain's height. Dryden.

CLING, a. [from cling.] Apt to cling; adhesive.

CLINGY, adj. To cling; adhesive.

CLINCH, v. a. [perhaps softened from clench, or corrupted from click.] To strike so as to make a small sharp noise.

CLINCH, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A sharp successive noise; a knocking.

2. It seems in Spenser to have some unusual sense. I believe the knocker of a door.

CLINQUANT, adj. [Fr.] Designed in embroidery, in spangles, false glitter, tinsel finery.

CLIP, v. a. [clippa, Sax.] To cut off the arms round; to hug; to envelop in the arms.

CLIP, n. s. [from cliq.] A clip; a cut.

1. To embrace, by throwing the arms round; to hug; to envelop in the arms.

2. They were two too late to clip the bird's wings, that already was flown away. Sidney.

3. Let him, that my love shall blame,
   Or clip love's wings, or quench love's flame. Sack.}

CLIPPER, n. s. [from clipper.] A clipper; a fast ship.

1. To embrace, by throwing the arms round; to hug; to envelop in the arms.

2. They were two too late to clip the bird's wings, that already was flown away. Sidney.

3. Let him, that my love shall blame,
   Or clip love's wings, or quench love's flame. Sack.

CLIPPED, a. clipped.

1. The anvil of my sword, and do contest.

2. All clippant, all in gold, like heathen gods.

CLIPPER, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. To embrace, by throwing the arms round; to hug; to envelop in the arms.

2. They were two too late to clip the bird's wings, that already was flown away. Sidney.

3. Let him, that my love shall blame,
   Or clip love's wings, or quench love's flame. Sack.
CLOAK

By this lock, this sacred lock, I swear,
Which never more shall join its parted hair.
Clipp'd from the lovely head where late it grew
Pope.

He spent every day ten hours dozing, clipping papers, or darn'd his stockings.
Swift.

3. Sometimes with off.

We should then have as much feeling upon the clipping off a hair, as the cutting off a nerve.
Bentley's Sermons.

4. It is particularly used of those who diminish coin, by paring the edges.

This design of new coinage, is just of the nature of clipping.
Locke.

5. To curtail; to cut short.

All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more, nor less, but so.
Shaksp.

Mrs. Mayevers clipped the king's English.
Addison.

Even in London they clip their words after one manner about the court, another in the city, and a third in the suburbs.
Swift.

6. To confine; to hold; to contain.

Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea,
Who calls me pupil.
Shaksp.

To CLIP, v. n. A phrase in falconry.

Some falcon sports at whom her eye design'd,
And with her eagerness the quarry miss'd,
Straight flies at clip, and clicks it down the wind.
Addison.

CLIPPER, n. s. [from clip.] One that de-bases coin by cutting.

It is no English treason to cut
French crown, and to-morrow the king
Himself will be a clipper.
Shaksp.

No coins pleased some metallists more than those which had pass'd through the hands of an old Roman clipper.
Add. Thomas.

CLIPPING, n. s. [from clip.] The part cut or clipped off.

Being pure 'natural, without sense or thought,
as the clipping of our heels, and parings of our nails.
Locke.

It grows wild, the seeds sticking to the clothes of such as pass by them. It is sometimes used in medicine.
Miller.

CLOAK. n.s. [fach, Saxon.]

1. The outer garment, with which the rest are covered.

You may be it
Under a cloak is of any length.
Shaksp.

Their cloaks were cloth of silver, mixed with gold.
Dryden.

All arguments will be as little able to prevail, as the wind did with the traveller to part with his cloak, which he held only the faster.
Locke.

Nimbly he rose, and cast his garment down;
That instant in his cloak I wrap't me round.
Pope's Odyssey.

2. A concealment; a cover.

Not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness.
Peter.

To CLOAK. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To cover with a cloak.

2. To hide; to conceal.

Most heavenly fair, in deed and view,
She by creation was, till she did fall;
Then earth she sought for help to cloak her crimes with blood.
Spenser.

CLO'AK-BAG. n. s. [from cloak and bag.]

A portmanteau; a bag in which clothes are carried.

Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that stuffed cloakbag of guts?
Shaksp.

I have already fit
(Tis in my cloakbag) douillet, hat, hose all.
That answer to them.
Shaksp.

CLOCK. n. s. [eloc, Welsh, from eloc a bell, Welsh and Armorick; cloche Fr.]

1. The instrument which, by a series of mechanical movements, tells the hour

by a stroke upon a bell.

If a man be in sickness or pain, the time will seem longer without a clock or hour-glass than with it.
Bacon.

The picture of Jerome usually described at his study, is with a clock hanging by.
Brown's Familiar Errors.

I told the clocks and watch'd the wasting light.
Dryden.

2. It is an usual expression to say, What is it of the clock, for What hour is it?
Or ten o'clock, for the tenth hour.

What is o'clock? Daily.

Upon the face of four.
Shaksp.

Macacus set forward about ten o'clock in the night.
Kotzebue.

About nine of the clock at night the king searched out of the North-port.
Clarendon.

3. The clock of a stocking; the flowers or inverted work about the ankle.

His stockings with silver clocks were ravished from him.
Swift.

4. An insect; a sort of beetle.

Dict.

CLOCKMAKER. n. s. [clock and maker.]

An artificer whose profession is to make clocks.

This inequality has been diligently observed by several of our ingenious clockmakers, and equations been made and used by them.
Doratius.

CLOCKWORK. n. s. [from clock and work.]

Movements by weights or springs like those of a clock.

So if unperfidiously you scan
The goings of this clock-work, man;
You find a hundred movements made
By fine devices in his head,
But 'tis the stomach's solid stroke,
That tells what's gone, what's o'clock;
Prior.

Within this hollow was Vulcan's shop, full of fire and clockwork.
Addison.

You look like a puppet moved by clockwork.
Arabian tales.

CLO'D. n. s. [club, Sax. a little hickory; klod, Dutch.]

1. A lump of earth or clay; such a body of earth as cleaves or hangs together.

The earth that casteth up from the plough a great clod, is not so good as that which casteth up a smaller clod.
Bacon.

I'll cut up, as plows
Do barre lands, and strike together flints
And clods, 'th ungrateful senate and the people.
Ben Jonson.

Who smooths with harrows, or who pounds with rakes,
Of the crumbling clods.
Dryden.

2. A turf; the ground.

Byzantians boast, that on the clod,
Where once their sultan's horse has trod,
Grows neither grass, nor shrub, nor tree.
Swift.

Any thing concreted together in a cluster.

Fishermen who make holes in the ice to dip up fish with their nets, light on swallows concealed in clods of a slippery substance; and carrying them home to their stoves, the warmth to restore them to life and flight.
Carew.

4. A lump; a mass of metal.

One at the forge
Labouring, two many clods of iron and brass
Had melted.
Milton.

5. Any thing vile, base, and earthy; as the body of man, compared to his soul.

And ye high heavens, the temple of the gods,
In which a thousand torches, flaming bright,
Do burn, that to us, wretched earthly clods,
In dreadful darkness lead desired light.
Spenser.

The spirit of man,
Which God inspired, came together perish
With this corporeal clod.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

CLO'DY. adj. [from clod.] 1. Consisting of earth or clods; earthy; muddy; mire; mean; gross; base.

The glorious sun,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glistening gold.
Shaksp.

2. Full of clods unbroken.

These hands they sow always under furrow about Michaelmas, and leave it a cloddy as they can.
Mortimer's Husbandry.

CLO'DPATE. n. s. [clod and patr.] A stupid fellow; a dolt; a thickskull.

CLO'DPAD, adj. [from clod and patr.] Stupid; dull; doltish; thoughtless.

My clo'dpated relations spoiled the greatest genius in the world, when they bred me a mechanic.
Drabbath.

CLO'DPOL. n. s. [from clod and poll.] A thickskull; a dolt; a blockhead.

This letter being so exceedingly ignorant, he will find that it comes from a clodpoll.
Shaksp.

To CLOGD. v. a. [It is imagined by Skinner to come from leg; by Casaubon derived from clōd a dog's collar, being thought to be first hung upon fierce dogs.]

1. To load with something that may hinder motion; to encumber with shackles; to impede, by fastening to the neck or leg a heavy piece of wood or iron.

If you find so much blood in his liver as will cover the foot of a lion, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.
Shaksp.

Let a man weave himself from these worldly impediments, that here clog his soul's flight.
Dryden.

The wings of birds were clogged with ice and snow.

Dryden.

Feasibly lusts do deceive man's minds, and clog their spirits, make them gross and fool, listless and unactive.
Tillotson.

Guns and tumbrals shall their flight restrain,
While clo'd they beat his silken wings in vain.
Pope.

2. To hinder; to obstruct.

The gutter'd rocks and congregated sands,
Traders esteem'd to clog the guiltless keel.
Shaksp.

His majesty's ships were over-pester'd and clogged with great ordnance, whereof there is superfluity.
Ralegh.

3. To load; to burden; to embarrass.

Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guiltless soul.
Shaksp.

You'll rue the time
That clog'd me with this answer.
Shaksp.

They lank'd a vein, and watch'd returning breath.
Dryden.

It came, but clo'dd'g with symptoms of his death.

Dryden.

All the commodities are clogg'd with impositions.
Addison.

324
CLO

4. In the following passage it is improper, for its meaning always includes hindrance.
Clocks and jacks, though the screws and teeth of the wheels and nuts be never so smooth, yet, if they be not oiled, will hardly move; though you clerg them with never so much weight. Hay on the Creation.

To CLOG, v. n.
1. To coalesce; to adhere. In this sense, perhaps, only corruptly used for clo'd or clot.
Move it sometimes with a broom, that the seeds clot not together. Sharpe's Surgery.

2. To be encumbered or impeded by some extrinsic matter.
In working through the bone, the teeth of the saw will begin to clog. Spence's Anatomy.

CLOG, n.s. [from the verb.]
1. A load; a weight; any encumbrance hung upon any animal or thing to hinder motion.
I'm glad at soul I have no other child; For the escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clogs on them. Shaksp.
I did but prompt the age to quit their clogs. By the known rules of ancient liberty. Milton's Paradise Regained.

As a dog, committed close. For some offence, by chance breaks loose, And quits his clog; but all in vain, He still draws after him his chain. Hudibras.

2. An encumbrance; a hindrance; an obstruction; an impediment.
Wearness of the flesh is an heavy clog to the will.
They're our clogs, not their own; if a man be Chained to a galaxy, yet the galaxy's free. Donne.
Their prince made no other step than rejecting the pope's supremacy, as a clog upon his own power and passions. Swift.
Slavery is, of all things, the greatest clog and obstacle to speculation. Swift.

3. A kind of additional shoe, worn by women to keep them from wet.

4. A wooden shoe.
In France the prosperity goes barefoot; and the middle sort, throughout all that kingdom, makes use of wooden clogs. Harvey on Christmas.

CLOGGING, v. n. [from clog.] That which is the state of being clogged.

CLOGGY, adj. [from clog.] That which has the power of clogging up.

By addictions of some such nature, some grosser and cloggy parts are retain'd; or else much subtilized, and otherwise altered. Boyle's History of Friesland.

CLOISTER, n.s. [clias, Welsh; claerpen, Sax; closter, Germ. Kloster, Dut. cloister, Ital; cloistre, Fr. cloistrum, Lat.]
1. A religious retirement; a monastery; a nunnery.
Not in a secret cloister doth he keep These virgin spirits until their marriage day. Dares.

Some solitary cloister will I close, And there with holy virgin live imm'd. Dryden.
How could he have the leisure and retir'dness of the cloister, to perform those acts of devotion. Aubury.

2. A peristyle; a piazza.

To CLOISTER, v.a. [from the noun.] To shut up in a religious house; to confine; to immure; to shut up from the world.

Cloister thee in some religious house. Shaksp.
They have by communition, though in form of courtesy, cloister'd as within walls for three days. Bacon.

CLOISTERED, adj. [from cloister.] Solitary; retired; religiously recluse.
Upon this ground many clausel men, of great learning and devotion, prefer contemplation here-fore action. Walton's Angler.

CLOISTERED, participle. [from cloister.]
1. Solitary; inhabiting cloisters.
Here the bat hath flown. Shaksp. Macbeth.

2. Built with peristyles or piazzas.
The Greeks and Romans had commonly two clusel open courts, one serving for the women's side, and the other for the men. Wattam's Architecture.

CLOISTRESS, n.s. [from cloister.]
A nun; a lady who has vowed religious retirement.

CLO'GLEY, n.s. [from cloister.]
To CLOOM, v.a. [corrupted from cleem, cleman, Sax, which is still used in some provinces.] To close or shut with glutinous or viscous matter.

To CLOSE, v. a. [close, Armoric; klugis, Dutch; clos, Fr. claustrum, Lat.]
1. To shut; to lay together.
Sleep instantly fell on me, call'd
By nature as in aid, and cloak'd mine eyes. Milton's Par. Lost.

When the sad wife has claustr'd her husband's eyes;
Lies the pale corps, not yet entirely dead! Prior.
I soon shall visit Hector, and the shades Of my great ancestors. Cophen, thou

2. To conclude; to end; to finish.
One fragal supper did our studies close. Dryden.
I close this with my earnest desires that you will seriously consider your estate. South's Preparation for Death. Edward and Henry, now the boast of fame; And virtuous Alfred, a more sacred name; After a life of generous toils endure'd, Clost'd their long glories with a sigh, to find The unwilling gratitude of base mankind. Pope's Horace.

3. To inclose; to confine; to reposite.
Every one According to the gift which becometh nature. Huth in his clo'd. Shaksp.

4. To join; to unite fractures; to consolidate fissures.
The armours accomplishing the knights, With busy hammers closing tives up. Shaksp.
There being no winter yet close up and unite its parts, and restore the earth to its former compactness. Burton.

As soon as any public rupture happens, it is immediately clos'd up by moderation and offices. Addison on Italy.
All the traces drawn there are immediately clos'd up, as though you wrote them with your finger on the surface of a river. Watts on the Mind.

To CLOSE, v.n.
1. To coalesce; to join its own parts together.
They, and all that appertaineth to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them. Numbers vi. 53.

In plants, you may try the force of imagination upon the lighter motions, as upon their closing. Bacon.

2. To close upon. To agree upon; to join in.
The jealousy of such a design as this would induce France and Holland to close upon some measures between them to our disadvantage. Temple.

3. To close with. To come to an agree-
To close in with. To meet with; to comply with; to unite with.

4. To close with. To grapple with in wrestling.

CLOSE, n.s. [from the verb.]
1. Any thing shut; without outlet.
The admirable effects of this dissillation in close, which is like the worms and matrices of living things. Bacon.

2. A small field inclosed.
I have a tree, which grows here in my close, That mine own use invites me to cut down, And shortly must I fell it. Shaksp.

Clos'd, certain hedgerows, dividing a close, chance upon a great chest. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

3. The manner of shutting; in this and the following sense it is pronounced as close.
The doors of plank were; their close exquisite, Kemp with a double key. Chapman.

4. The time of shutting up.
In the close of night, Philomel begins her heavenly lay. Dryden.

5. A grapple in wrestling.
The King went of purpose into the North, lay ing an open side unto Perkin, to make him come to the close, and so to trip up his heels, having made sure in Kent beforehand. Bacon.

Both fell'd with dust, but starting up, the third close they had made.
Had not Achilles's self stood up. Chapman.

Pause; cessation; rest.
The air, so pleasurable to lose.
With thousand echoes still prolonged each heavenly close. Milton.

6. A close; a close house, a close box.
At every close she made, th' attending throng replied, and bore the burden of the song. Dryden's Fables.

7. A conclusion or end.

Speedy death.
The close of all my miseries and the balm. Milton.

Tirso's Syria, Persia, Greece, she goes; And there the Romans in the close to her. Prior.

CLOSE, adj. [from the verb.]
1. Shut fast, so as to leave no part open; as, a close box, a close house.
We suppose this bag to be tied close about, towards the window.

2. Having no vent; without inlet; secret; private; not to be seen through.
CLO

Not or his acts too close a wizard wear.
To keep their eyes whom guilt had taught to fear.

3. Confin'd; stagnant; without ventilation.
If the rooms be low-roofed, or full of windows and doors, the one makes the air close, and not fresh; and the other maketh it exceedingly unquiet.

4. Compact; solid; dense; without interstices or vacuities.
This substance of the earth is of itself an uniform mass, close and compact.

Burnet's Theory.

The golden globe being put into a press, which was driven by the extreme force of screws, the water made itself way thro' the pores of that very close metal.

Locke.

5. Viscous; glutinous; not volatile.
This oil, which nourishes the lamp, is supposed of so close and tenacious a substance, that it may slowly evaporate.

Withins.

6. Concise; brief; compressed; without exuberance or digression.
You may your thoughts so close together, that were they closer, they would be crowded, and even a due connection would be wanting.

Dryden's Joviaal.

Where is the original close, no version can reach it in the same compass.

Dryden.

Robert his high beams in, which conspire
Fresnoy's close art, and Dryden's native fire.

Pope.

7. Joined without any intervening distance or space, whether of time or place.
Was I a man bred as Rome herself,
Equal to all her titles! that could stand
Close up with Atlas, and sustain her name
As strong as he doth heav'n!

Ben Jonson.

We must lay aside that lazy and fakistic method of contrasting by the lump, and must bring things close to the text of true or false.

Burnet's Theory.

Plant the spring crocuses close to a wall.

Martime.

Where'mer my name I find,
Some dire misfortune follows close behind.

Pope.

8. Approaching nearly; joined one to another.
Now we sit close about this tape here,
And call in question our necessities.

Shaksp.

9. Narrow; as, a close alley.
Admitting small distance.
Short crooked swords in closer fight they wear.

Dryden.

10. Undiscovered; without any token by which one may be found.
Close ober him for the sake of mockery.
Close, in the name of jesting! lie you there.

Shaksp.

11. Hidden; secret; not revealed.
A close intent at last to show me grace.
Some spugnists, that keep their best things close, will do more to vindicate their art, or oppose their antagonists, than to gratify the curious, or benefit mankind.

Boyle.

12. Having the quality of secrecy; trusty.
Constant you are,
But yet a woman; and for secrecy,
No lady closer.

Shaksp.

13. Having an appearance of concealment; cloudy; sly.
That close aspect of his
Does shew the mood of a much troubled breast.

Shaksp.

14. Without wandering; without deviation; attentive.
I discovered no way to keep our thoughts close to their business, but, by frequent attention, getting the habit of attention.

Locke.

15. Full to the point; home.
I am engaging in a large dispute, where the arguments are not like to reach close on either side.

Dryden.

16. Retired; solitary.
He kept himself close because of Saul. Chronicles.

18. Secluded from communication; as, a close prisoner.

19. Applied to the weather, dark, cloudy.

Close.

adv. It has the same meaning with closely, and is not always distinctly distinguished from the adjective.

1. Nearly; densely; secretly.
He is asleep
Distract'd not, waiting close th'o' approach of morn.

Milton.

2. It is used sometimes adverbially by itself, but more frequently in composition.
As,

CLOSE-BANDED. adj. In close order;
thick ranged; or secretly leagued, which seems rather the meaning in this passage.

Nor in the house which chamberambles
Close-banded, durst attack me.

Milton.

3. The light so nearly is suspended
In any cluster, or in any close-banded coat, they shall be suspended.

Alyff's Paragon.

CLOSE-BANDED. adj. Covetous.
Galba was very close-banded: I have not read much of his liberality.

Arbuthnot on Cato.

CLOSE-PENT. adj. Shut close; without vent.
Then in some close-pent room it crept along,
And, smell'd ing as it went, in silence fled.

Dryd.

CLOSEDLY. adv. from close.
1. Without inlet or outlet.
Putting the mixture into a crucible closely luted,

Dryden.

2. Without much space intervening; nearly,
Follow Fledylyn closely at the heels.

Shaksp.

3. Attentively.
If we look more closely, we shall find
Must have the seeds of judgment in their mind.

Pope.

4. Secretly; slyly.
A Spaniard, riding on the bay, sent some closely into the village, in the dark of the night.

Carel's Survey of Cornwall.

5. Without deviation.
I hope I have translated closely enough, and given them the same turn of verse which they had in the original.

Dryden.

CLOSENESS. n. s. from close.
1. The state of being shut; or, the quality of admitting to be shut without inlet or outlet.

In drums, the clauseness round about that preserved the sound, maketh the noise come forth of the drum-hole, more loud than if you should strike upon the like skin extended in the open air.

Boacon Nat. Hist.

2. Narrowness; straitness.
3. Want of air, or ventilation.
I took my leave, being half stifled by the closeness of the room.

Swift.

4. Compactness; solidity.
How could particles, so widely dispersed, combine into that mass of texture ?

Pepys.

The haste of the sly thief to put forth and the closeness of the bark, cause prickles in hounds.

Boacon's Natural History.

5. Recluseness; solitude; retirement.
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind.

Shaksp.

6. Secrecy; privacy.
To his com, dearest he was constant and just, but not open. Such was his enquiries, and such his clauseness, as they stood in the light towards him, and he stood in the dark towards them.

Bacon's Henry VII.

A journey of much adventure had been not communicated with any of his majesty's counsellors, being carried with great clauseness, liker a business of love than state.

Hotton.

We must rise against the piercing judgment of Augustus, or the extreme cautious or clauseness of Tiberius.

Bacon's Essay.

This prince was so very reserved, that he would improvish his secrets to the body; whereby such clauseness did a little pish his understanding.

Collar of Friendship.

7. Covetousness; avarice.
Injudiced, that while he could keep his poverty secret, he should not feel it, he improved this thought into an affectation of clauseness and covetousness.

Addison's Spectator.

8. Connection; dependance.
The actions and proceedings of wise men run in greater clauseness and coherence with one another, than th'o' doth to a casual issue, brought under no forecast or design.

South.

CLOSER. n. s. from close. A finisher; a concluror.

CLOSESTOOL n. s. [from close and stool.] A chamber implement.
A pestle for his truncheon, led the van; And his close-stool pan. Garth.

CLOSET. n. s. [from close.] A small room of privacy and retirement.
The taper burneth in your closet.
Shaksp.
He would make a step into his clcset, and after a short prayer he was gone.

Wotton.

2. A private repository of curiosities and valuable things.
He should have made himself a key, wherewith to open the closet of Minerva, where those rare treasures are to be found in abundance.

Dryden's Deryxaph.

He furnishes her closet first, and fills
The crowded shelves with rarities of shells.

Dryden's Fabics.

To CLOSET. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To shut up, or conceal, in a closet.
The heat
Of thy great love once spread, as in an urn,
Doth close up itself.

Herbert.
2. To take into a closet for a secret interview.
About this time began the project of clousing,
Where the principalities and kingdoms were privately cachetted by his Majesty.

Swift.

CLOSH. n. s. A distemper in the feet of cattle; called also the founder.

Dict.

CLOSURE. n. s. [from close.]
1. The act of shutting up.
The chink was carefully closed up; upon which closure there appeared not any change.

Boacon's Spring of the Air.

2. That by which any thing is closed or shut.
I admire your sending your last to me quite open, without a seal, wafer, or any closure whatever.

Pope to Sefifl.

3. The parts inclosing; inclosure.
O thou bloody prison!
Within the guilty cloisters, walls Richard the Second was hack'd to death.

Shaksp.

CLOT. n. s. [probably, at first, the same with clot, but now always applied to different uses; or rather klote, Dutch, a mass.] Concretion; congestion; grume.
The white of an egg, with spirit of wine, doti bake the egg into clous, as if it began to poach.

Barnes.

The opening itself was stopt with a close of gummous blood.

Hillman's Surgery.

326
CLOTH

To CLOT. v. n. [from the noun; or from kloetteren, Dutch.]

1. To form cloths, or cloads; to hang together.

Huge unwieldy bones, lasting remains, Of that gigantic race; which, as he breaks, The clotted glebe, the plowman hastily fills. Philips.

2. To concrete; to conglutinate; to gather into concretions: as, clotted milk, clotted blood.

Here mangled limbs, here brains and gore, Ere clotted. Philips.

3. To become gross.

CLOTH. n. s. plural cloths or clothes. [clould, Saxon.]

1. Any thing woven for dress or covering, whether of animal or vegetable substance.

A costly cloth of gold. Dryden.

The Spider's buy their linen cloths in that kingdom. Swift.

2. The piece of linen spread upon a table.

Nor let, as Navius, every error pass; The musty wine, foul cloth, or greasy glass. Pope.

3. The canvas on which pictures are delineated.

I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions. Shakspere.

Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw, Shall have been taught and be kept in awe. Shakspere.

This idea, which we may call the goddess of painting and of sculpture, descends upon the marble, and the cloth, and becomes the original of these arts. Dryden.

4. Any texture put to a particular use.

The king stood up under his cloth of state, took the sword from the protector, and dubbed the Lord Mayor of London knight. Sir John Hayward. I'll make the very green cloth to look blue. Ben Jonson.

5. Dress; raiment.

I'll never distrust my God for cloth and bread, While lies flourish, and the raven's fed. Quarles.

6. Cloth, taken absolutely, commonly means a texture of wool.

Cloth, and taken in this sense always clothes, pronounced cloths. Ben Jonson.

He with him brought Tryne, rich, rare cloth In Claribed's clothes. Dryden.

Take up these clothes here quickly; carry them to the landlord in Ditch and mead. Shakspere.

Strength grows more from the warmth of exercises than of cloaths. Temple.

7. In the plural. Dress; habit; garment; vesture; vestments: including whatever covering is worn on the body.

In this sense always clothes, pronounced cloths. Ben Jonson.

With superior bough may your rich soil Exuberant nature’s better blessings pour Over every land, the naked nations cloth, And be the exhaustless granary of a world. Thomson.

8. The covering of a bed.

Gazing on her midnight fires, She turn'd each way her frighted head, Then sunk it deep beneath the clothes. Prior.

To CLOTH. v. a. pret. 1 clothed, or clad; particip. clothed, or clad. [from cloth.] 1. To invest with garments; to cover with dress, from cold and injuries.

An inhabitant of Nova Zembla having lived in Denmark, wherein he was clothed, took the first opportunity of making his escape into nakedness. Addison's Freesholder.

The Britons, in Cæsar's time, painted their bodies, and clothed themselves with the skins of beasts. Seft.

With superior bough may your rich soil Exuberant nature's better blessings pour Over every land, the naked nations cloth, And be the exhaustless granary of a world. Thomson.

9. To adorn with dress.

We clothe and adorn our bodies; indeed, too much time we bestow upon that. Our souls also are to be clad with holy habits, and adorned with good works. Ray on Creation.

Embroider'd parple clothes the golden beds. Pope's Statius.

3. To invest, as with clothes.

I put on righteousness, and it clothed me. Job.

Hast thou clothed him with a cloud? Job.

Then I will clothe thee with my glory. Ps. 96:8.

If thou beest he; but O bow fall! bow'nd chang'd From him, who in the happy realms of light, Cloth'd with transcendent brightness, didst outshine.

Myr'ids, though bright! Milton.

They leave the shady realms of night, And, cloth'd in bodies, breathe thy upper light. Dryden.

Let both these classes in which they can clothe their thoughts. Dryden.

4. To furnish or provide with clothes.

Dreaws'll matter cloth a man with rage. Prov.

To CLOTHE, v. n. To wear clothes.

Care no more to clothe and eat. Shakspere.

Clothier, n. s. [from cloth.] A maker of cloth.

The clothers all, not able to maintain
The many to them long'ning, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers.

Shakspere. Mortimer.

His commissioners should cause electromers to take wool, paying only two parts of the price.

Hayward.

They shall only spoil the clother's wool, and beggar the present spinners at best. Grann's Bills of Mortality.

CLOT. n. s. [from To cloth.] Dress; vesture; garments.

By bosom's might receive my yield'd upright
And shine with it in heaven's pure clothing dress;
Through clearest skies might take united light.

Farfar.

Your bread and clothing, and every necessary of life, entirely depend upon it. Sefit.

CLOTHESMAKER. n. s. [from cloth and shearp.] One who trims the cloth, and levels the nap.

My father is a poor man, and by his occupation is a clothsheaper. Hakewill on Providence.

To CLOTPOLL. n. s. [from cloth and poll.]

1. Thickcull; blockhead.

What says the fellow, there? call the clottpoll back. Shakspere.

2. Head, in scorn.

I have sent Cloten's clitpplott down the stream, In embassy to his mother. Shakspere. Cymbeline.

To CLOTTER. v. n. [kloetteren, Dutch.]

To concrete; to coagulate; to gather into lumps.

He dragg'd the trembling sire
Slid'd ring thro' clo'st blood and body mire. Dryden's Enid.

CLOTTS. adj. [from clot.] Full of cloths; converted; full of concretions.

The matter expectorated is thin, and moist with thick clots; thus the sick are as Addis's.
CLOVEN-FOOTED. adj. [cloon and foot. Having the foot divided into two parts; not a round hoof; bisulcus.

CLOVEN-HOOFED. s. or hoofed. With the foot divided into two parts.

CLOVER-GRASS. s. clover; clasp Sax.}

1. A species of trefoil.

2. To live in Clover, is to live luxuriously; clover being extremely delicious and fattening to cattle.

CLOVERED adj. [cloon from clover. Covered with clover.

CLOVERED adj. With spots or veins.

CLOVERED adj. Unpolished bright; Theuckets cowslip, burnet, and grean clover.

CLOLY. n.s. [from cloud.]

1. Covered with clouds; obscured with clouds; consisting of clouds.

As Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door. Exodus.

2. Dark; obscure; not intelligible.

If you can cast off words instead of ideas, or with cloudy and confused notions, how incomprehensible will that darkness be? Watts on the Mind.

3. Gloomy of look; not open, nor cheerful.

So my storm-beaten heart likewise is cheerful. With that sun-shine, when cloudy looks are cleared.

Witness my son, now in the shade of death, Whose bright outshining beams thy cloudy wrath Hath in eternal darkness folded up.

CLOVE. n.s. [the preterite of clove. See to clove.

Gyron's angry blade so fierce did play. On th'other's helmet, which asTitan alone, That quite clove his plumed crest in twain.

Fairy Queen.

CLOVE. n.s. [clou, Fr. a nail, from the similitude of a clove to a nail.] A valuable spice brought from Ternate in the East Indies. It is the fruit or seed of a very large tree.

Clove seems to be the rudiment or beginning of a fruit growing upon clove-trees.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. Some of the parts into which garlic separates, when the outer skin is torn off. [In this sense it is derived from clove, the preterite of claver.]

This is a name in an onion to devours.

Each clove of garlic is a sweet power. Tatum's Jun.

CLOVE-GILLYFLOWER. n.s. [from its smelling like cloves.]

This genus may be divided into three classes.

1. The clove-gillyflower, or carnation. The pink.

2. The sweet William. The carnation, or clove-gillyflower, are distinguished into four classes.

3. The first, called flasks, having two colours only, and their stripes large, going quite through the leaves.

The second, called bizzards, have flowers striped or variegated with three or four different colours. The third are clove-petalled flowers; these have their petals of a red or purple colour on the upper side, and white underneath. Of each of these classes there are numerous varieties. The true clove-gillyflower has been long in use for making a cordial syrup. There are two or three varieties commonly brought to the markets, which differ greatly in goodness, some of them being very little scent, when compared with the true sort.

Miller.

CLOVEN. part. pret. [from clove. See to clove.

There is Ambrosia, list you what work he makes Among your everlasting house. Shaksp.

Now heaped high The eleven oaks and lofty pines do lie. Walle.

A hanging beaver, loosely hanging by The eleven helm, and arch of victory.

Dryden.

CLOVEN-FOOTED. adj. [cloon and foot. Having the foot divided into two parts; not a round hoof; bisulcus.

There are the bisulcous or cloven-hoofed; as oxen and beans. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The cloven-footed fowl is beheaded from us.

Dryden.

Great variety of water-fowl, both whole and cloven-footed, frequent the waters. Ing on the Great.

CLOVER.

CLOVER-GRASS. s. clover; clasp Sax.

1. A species of trefoil.

2. To live in Clover, is to live luxuriously; clover being extremely delicious and fattening to cattle.

Well, Laurent, was the night in clover spent.

Ogle.

CLOVERED adj. [cloon from clover. Covered with clover.

Cleave.

CLOVEN adj. [more properly cloven.] To clove.

CLOVERED adj. With spots or veins.

CLOVDEN adj. [cloon from clove.]

1. Consisting of rickets or crowns.

Young Silvia beats her breast, and cries aloud. For succour from the cloven neighbourhood.

Dryden.

2. Coarse; rough; rugged.

But with his cloven hands his tender wings He shrinks oft.

Spencer's Fairy Queen.

3. Uncivil; ill-bred; ill-mannered.

What if we essay'd to steal

The clovenfoot tial of your father's court?

Shake.

4. Clumsy; ungainly.

With a grave look, in this odd equipage, The clovenfoot minstrel tramps the stage.

Prior.

CLOWNSH. adj. [cloon from cloven.]

Coarsely; rudely; brutally.

CLOWNSHINESS. n.s. [from cloven.]

1. Rusticity; coarseness; unpolished rudeness.

Even his Doric dialect has an incomparable sweetness in its clowness.

Drayton.

If the boy should not make legs very gracefully, a dicing master will cloven them, and wipe off that plainness which the à-la-mode people call clowness.

Locke.

2. Incivility; brutality.

CLOVER'S MUSTARD. n.s. An herb. Dict. To CLOV. v. a. [enclover, Fr. to nail up; to stop up.]

1. To satiate; to sate; to fill beyond desire; to surfeit; to fill to loathing.

The length of those speeches had not cloved Pyrocles, though he were very impatient of long deliberations.

Sidney.

The very creed of Ahasuerus, and that sacred hymn of glory, are reckoned as superfluities, which we must in any case lay aside, lest we clove God with too much service.

Who can clove the hungry edge of appetite By bare imagination of a feast? Shake.

Continually varying the same sense, and taking up what he had more than enough inculeated before, he sometimes cloys his readers instead of satisfying them.

Dryden.

Whose little store her well taught mind does nourish.

Shake.

Nor pinch'd with want, nor cloy'd with wanton case.

Rocheman.

Inconveniences in eating and drinking, instead of delighting and satisfying nature, doth both hurt and cloy it.

Talbid.

Settle, cloy'd with custard and with praise, Is gather'd to the dull of ancient days.

Pope.

2. It seems to have, in the following passages, another sense; perhaps to strike thebeck together.
CU L

His royal bird
Prances the immortal wing, and clay his beak,
As when he in the salutation.
Shaksp.

3. To nail up guns, by striking a spike into the touch-hole.

CLO'YLESS. adj. [from cloy.] That of which too much cannot be had; that which cannot cause satiety.

Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite.
Shaksp.

CLO'YMENT, n. s. [from cloy.] Satiety; repulsion beyond appetite.

Abst! their love may be call'd appetite:
No motion of the liver, but the palate,
That suffers surfet, elegant, and provok'd.
Shaksp.

CLUB, n. s. [from clubba, Welsh; klappel, Dutch.]

1. A heavy stick; a staff intended for offence.

He strove his comb'd club to quit
Out of the earth.
Spencer's Fairy Queen.

2. The name of one of the suits of cards.
The club black tyrant on her victim deals.
Spott's. of his metaphors and barb'rous pride.

3. [From cleepean to divide. Skinner.] The shot or dividend of a reckoning, paid by the company in just proportions.

A false club was as safe: their humour was to drink drunk, upon their own liquor: they laid down their club, and this they called for seizing a trade.

4. An assembly of good fellows, meeting under certain conditions.

What right has any man to meet in factions clubs to vilify the government? Dryg. Methd. Del'd.

5. Concurrence; contribution; joint charge.

He's bound to vouch for his own.
The' got b'implicate generation,
And general club of all the nation.
Hudibras.

To CLU B, v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To contribute to a common expense in settled proportions.

2. To join to one effect; to contribute separate powers to one end.

3. To pour to a common reckoning.

Clumsy, madly met, and club'd into a dream.
Dryden.

Every part of the body seems to club and contribute to the seed: else why should parents, born blind or deaf, sometimes generate children with the same imperfections?

Let sugar, wine, and cream together club,
To make that gentle viand, syllabub.
King.

The owl, the raven, and the bat, club'd for a feather to his hat.
Swift.

To CLU B, v. a. To pay to a common reckoning.

Plains and directors, Shylock and his wife,
Will club their testors now to take your life. Pope.

Fibres being distinct, and impregnated by distinct spirits, how should they club their particular informations into a common idea? Coll. on Thought.

CLUB-EADED. adj. [club and head.]

Having a thick head.

Small club'ed anti
erm. Derham.

CLUB-LAW. n. s. [club and law.]

Regulation by force; the law of arms.

The establishment of a happy establishment seem to have recourse to the laudable method of clubables, when they find all other means for enforcing the absurdity of their opinions to be ineffectual.
Addison's Freethinker.

CLUB-ROOM, n. s. [club and room.] The room in which a club or company assembles.

VOL. 1

CLU

These ladies resolved to give the pictures of their deceased husbands to the clubroom.
Addison's Spectator.

To CLUck, v. n. [cloecian, Welsh; cloch't, Armorick; cloecian, Sax.; clocken, Dutc.]

To call chickens, as a hen.

She, poor hen, fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars. Shak. Coriolanus.

Ducks, though hatchet in a hen, if she brings them to a river, in they go, though the hen clucks and calls to keep them out.

CLUMP, n. s. [formed from lump.]

1. A shapeless piece of wood, or other matter, nearly equal in its dimensions.

He walks very clumsily and ridiculously.
Ray on the Creation.

2. A cluster of trees; a tuft of trees or shrubs; accordingly a plum.

Lump.

CLUM'SILY, adv. [from clumsily.] Awkwardly without readiness; without nimbleness; without grace.

He walks very clumsily and ridiculously.
Ray on the Creation.

This lofty humour is clumsily and inartificially managed, when affected.
Collier on Pride.

CLUM'INESS, n. s. [from clumsily.]

Awkwardness; ungracefulness; want of readiness, nimbleness, or dexterity.

The drudging part of life is chiefly owing to clumsiness and ignorance, which either wants proper tools, or skill to use them. Collier on Famine.

CLUMSY. adj. [This word omitted in the other etymologists, is rightly derived by Bailey from lumpsch, Dutch, stupid. In English lump, lump, lumpish, lumpish, clumsily, clumsily, clumsiness, clumsily.] Awkwardly, heavy, artless, unhandsome, without dexterity, readiness or grace. It is used either of persons, or actions, or things.

The matter ductile and sequacious, apt to be moulded into such shapes and machines, even by clumsy fingers.

But thou in clumsiness, verily, and, unpointed, hast shamefully defy'd.
Dryden.

That clumsy outside of a porter. Dryden.

How could it thus conceal a courier? Swift.

CLUNG. The preterite and participie of clung.

CLUNG. adj. [clungu, Sax.] Wasted with leanness; shrunk up with cold.

To CLUNG, v. n. [clungan, Sax.] To dry as wood does, when it is laid up after it is cut. See To CLUNG.

CLUSTER, n. s. [clyeep, Sax. kliester, Dutch.]

1. A bunch; a number of things of the same kind growing or joined together.

Grapes will continue to must until winter, if you hang them cluster by cluster in the roof of a warm room. Bacon.

A swelling knot is rais'd;
Whence, in short space, itself the cluster shows,
And from earth's moisture, mix't with sun beams, grows.

The saline corpuscles of one liquid do very regularly set up the turgid corpuscles of another, so as to make many of them associate into a cluster, whereas two instatutures do notizingly can escape a coloured one. Newton.

An em was near, to whose embraces led.
The currant vine her swelling clusters spread.
Pope.

2. A number of animals gathered together.

As bees
Pour forth their populous youth about the hive

There with their clasping feet together clung.
And a long cluster from the laurel hung. Dryden.

3. A body of people collected; used in contempt.

We lod'd him; but like beasts,
And coward nobles gave way to your clusters,
Who did lead him out o' th' city.
Shaksp.

My friend took his station among a cluster of monks, who were making themselves merry with their betters.
Addison.

To CLuster, v. n. [from the noun.] To grow in bunches; to gather into bunches; to congregate.

Forth thou dost thicken the clustering vine. Milton. Great father Bachus, to my song repair;
For clustering grapes are thy pales. Dryden.
Or from the forest falls the cluster's snow.
Myriads of gems.
Thomson's Winter.

To CLUSTER, v. a. To collect any thing into clusters.

CLUSTER GRAPE. n. s. [from cluster and grape.]

The small black grape is by some called the currant, or cluster grape; which I reckon the forwardness of the black sort. Montesquieu's History.

CLUSTERY, adj. [from cluster.] Growing in clusters.

To CLUTCHE, v. a. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. To hold in the hand; to grip; to grasp.

Is this a dagger I see before me,
The handle towards my hand? Come, let me clutch thee.
Shaksp. King John.

2. To comprise; to grasp.

A man may set the poles together in his head, and clutche the whole globe of one intellectual grasp.
Collier on Thought.

3. To contract; to double the hand, so as to seize and hold fast.

Not that I have the power to clutch my hand, When his fair angels would salute my palm.
Shaksp. King John.

CLUTE, n. s. [See CLatter.] A noise; a bustle; a busy tumult; a hurr; a clamour. A low word.

He saw what a cluster there was with hogs, over tops and pots, pans, and spits. L'Estrange.
The fav'rite child, that just begins to prattle,
Is very humorous, and makes great cluster.
Till he has windows in his bread and butter.
Kingsley. Tim, why all this cluster?
Why ever in these raging fits? Swift.

To CLUSTER, v. n. [from the noun.] To make a noise, or bustle.

CLYSTER. n. s. [xowry.] An injection into the anus.

He believes by a diaphragm, without sinking the strength of the patient, it is not to be stopped, but proceeded gently by emollient clusters. Arbuth.

To COACERATE, v. a. [coacere, Lat.]

To heep up clusters.

The collection of the spirits in bodies, whether the spirits be concurred or diffused.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
COAL

COAL-BOX. n. s. [coal and box.] A box to carry coals to the fire.

To carry coals to the fire.

Springs in this country, that flow from coal-mines.

Mortice.

COAL-FISH. n. s. [aestival nigra.] A species of bearless gadus.

Mediterranean.

COAL-MINE. n. s. [coal and mine.] A mine in which coals are dug; a coal-pit.

Springs injure land, that flow from coal-mines.

Coale.

COAL-PIT. n. s. [from coal and pit.] A pit, sunk in the earth, generally to a great depth, for digging coals.

A leaf of the poppy kind, found in the sinking of a coalpit.

Woodward.

COAL-STONE. n. s. [coal and stone.] A sort ofannel coal. See Coal.

Coal-stone flares easily, and burns freely; but holds and endures the fire much longer than coal.

Woodward.

COAL-WORK. n. s. [coal and work.] A coaly; a place where coals are found.

There is no treasure in the old English, that by whatever authors may draw constant supplies; as our officers make their search remains from the coal-works and the mines.

Fellon.

COALESCENCE. n. s. [from coal and escein.] A place, where coals are dug.

Two fine stelae were found hanging from a black stone, at a deserted vault in Benwell coaley.

Woodward.

1. To unite in masses by a spontaneous approximation to each other.

When vapours are raised, they hinder not the transparency of the air, being divided into parts too small to cause any reflection in their superi-ories; but when they begin to coalesce, and constitute globules, those globules become of a convenient size to reflect some colours.

Newton.

2. To grow together; to join.

To coalesce.

COALESCENCE. n. s. [from coalesce.] The act of coalescing; concretion; union.

Coalition. n. s. [from coalesce, coali-tum.] Union in one mass or body; conjunction of separate parts in one whole.

The world’s mass of heterogeneous consistencies, and every part thereof a coalition of distinguishable varieties.

Gravinius.

In the first coalition of a people, their prospect is not great; they provide laws for their present exigency.

It necessary that these squandered atoms should concur and unite into great masses; out-of such a coalition the mass must have reigned to all eternity.

Bealet.

COALYLY. adj. [from coal.] Containing coal.

Or coaly Tine, or ancient hollow’d Dee. Milton.

COAPTATION. n. s. [from con and apte. Lat.] The adjustment of parts to each other.

In a clock the hand is moved upon the dial, the bell is struck, and the other actions belonging to the engine are performed by virtue of the size, shape, bigness, and coaptation of the several parts.

Bacon.

The same method makes both prose and verse beautiful, which consists in the judicious coaptation and arrangement of the words.

Brown.

To COARCt. v. a. [coarcet.

To COARCCTATE. ] Lat.)

1. To straiten; to confine into a narrow compass.

The wind finding the room in the form of a truck, and corrented therein, forced the stones of the window, like pellets, clean through it.

Bacon.

2. To contract power; to restrain.

If a man coerct himself to the extremity of an act, he must blush and impute it to himself; but he has thus coercted or straitened himself so far as to make it.
Amber is a module, invested with a coat, called rock-amber.

6. That on which the ensigns armorial are portrayed.

The herald of love's mighty king,
In whose coat armour richly are display'd
All sorts of flowers the which on earth do spring.

Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

At each trumpet was a banner bound.
Which, waving in the wind, display'd at large
Their master's coat of arms and knightly charge.

To Coat. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover; to invest; to overspread: as, to cloak a retort; to cloak a coating.

To COAX. v. a. To wheedle; to flatter;
to humour. A low word.
The nurse had changed her note; she was muzzling and cornering the child: 'tis a good deed, says she.
I coax! I wheedle! I'm above it.

To COB. A word often used in the composition of low terms; corrupted from cop, Sax. kopf, Germ. the head or top.

1. A sort of sea-fowl; called also sea-cob.

To COBBLER. v. a. [kobler, Dan.]
1. To mend any thing coarsely; used generally of shoes.
If you be out, Sir, I can mend you.—Why,
Sir, cobble you.

2. To do or make any thing clumsily, or unhandsomely.
Reject the meanest praises of the times;
Give thy base poets back their cobbled rhymes.

Believe not that the whole universe is mere hanging and blundering, nothing effecting for any purpose designed by all ill-favoured cobbled and jumbled together.

1. A mender of old shoes.
Not many years ago it happened that a cobbler had the casting vote for the life of a criminal.

2. A clumsy workman in general.
What trade are you—
Truly, Sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

3. In a kind of proverbial sense, any mean person.
CO C

You'll make a mutiny among my guests! You will set cock a hopp! Sir Hudibras, who thought he'd won the field, as certain as a gun, and having routed the whole troop, With scarring-cockerel and crow. Hudibras. To Cock. r. a. [from the n.]
1. To set erect; to hold bolt upright as a cock holds his head. This is the muscle which performs the motion so often mentioned by the Latin poets, when they talk of a man's cocking his nose, or lifting the rhinoceros.

Our Lightfoot hawks, and cock his ears; One year's work, to th' i' th' spring appears. Grey P. C. Dick would cock his nose in scorn, but Tom was kind and loving.

2. To set up the hat with an air of pata culance and pertness. Dick, who thus long had passive sat, Here strok'd his chin and cock'd his hat. Prior. An alert young fellow cocked his hat upon a friend of his who entered. Addison's Spectator.

3. To mould the form of the hat.
4. To fix the cock of a gun ready for a discharge.

Some of them holding up their pistols, cocked, near the door of the house, which they kept open.

5. To raise hay in small heaps.

Sike mirth in May is meetest for to make, Or summer shade, under the cocked hay. Spenser's Pastorals.

To Cock r. n.
1. To strut; to hold up the head, and look big, or menacing, or pert.

Sir Fopling is a fool so nicely writ; The ladies would mistake him for a wit; And when he sings, his hand, and cock would cry, I vow, methinks, he's pretty company. Dryden. Every one cock and strutts upon it, and pretends to overlook us. Addison's Guardian.

2. To train or use fighting cocks.

Cries out 'gainst cocking, since he cannot bet. Ben Jonson.

Cock, in composition, signifies small or little.

Cock'de, n. s. [from cock.] A rib drawn worn in the hat.

Cockatrice. n. s. [from cock, and erpe, Sax. a serpent.] A serpent sup cposed to rise from a cock's egg. They will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices. This was the end of this little cockatrice of a king's, that was able to destroy those that did not espy him first. Bacon. This cockatrice is soonest crushed in the shell; but, if it grows, it turns to a serpent and a dragon. Taylor.

My wife! 'tis she, the very cockatrice! Congreve.

Cockboat. n. s. [cock and boat.] A small boat belonging to a ship. That invincible armada, which having not fired a cottage of ours at land, nor taken a cockboat of ours at sea, wandered through the wilderness of the northern seas.

Duc. Did they think it less disnomour to God to be like a brute, or a plant, or a cockboat, than to be like a man? Stillingfleet.

Cockbroth. n. Broth made by boi ing a cock.

Diet upon spoon-meats; as veal or cockbroth prepared with French barley. Harvey on Cookery.

Co'cKcrowing, n. [cock and crow.] The time at which cocks crow: the morning.

Ye know not when the master of the house cometh; at eventide, or at midnight, or in the cock crowing of the morning. Mark.

To Cock. r. a. [coquetterm, Fr.] To cade; to fonde; to indulge.

CO C

Most children's constitutions are spoiled by cockering and teatfeeding. Locke on Education. He will give his son sugar plums to make him learn, does but authorize his love of pleasure, and cocker up that propensity which he ought to subdue. Locke on Education.

Bred a fondling and an heiress, Dress'd like any Lady May res. Cocked by the servant round, Was too good to touch the ground. Swift.

Cocker. n. s. [from cock.] One who follows the sport of cockfighting.

Cockerel. n. s. [from cock.] A young cock.

Which of them first begins to crow? The old cock—The cockerel. Shakesp. What wilt thou be, young cockerel, when thy turn is come? Are grown to sharpness. Dryden.

Cock. n. s. [of uncertain derivation.] A seal belonging to the king's customhouse: likewise a scroll of parchment, sealed, and delivered by the officers of the customhouse to mer cants, as a warrant that their merchandise is en tered. Coccy. The greatest profit did arise by the cock of hides; for wool and woollens were ever of little value in this kingdom.

Cockfight. n. s. [cock and fight.] A battle or match of cocks. In cockfighting, to make one cock more hardy, and the other more cowardly. Bacon's Nat. Hist. At the seasons of football and cockfighting, these little republics reallocise their national hatred to each other. Addison.

Cockhorse. adj. [cock and horse.] On horseback; triumphant; exulting.

Alma, they strenuously maintain, Sits cockhorse on her throne the whole day. Prior.

Cockle. n. s. [coquille, Fr.]
1. A small testaceous fish. It is a cockle or a walnut shell. Shakesp. We may, I think, from the make of an oyster, or cockle, reasonably conclude, that it has not so many, nor so quick, senses as a man. Locke. Three common cockle shells, out of gravel pits. Woodward.

2. A little or young cock. Obsolete. They bear the crag so stiff and so state, As cock on his dunghill crowing cack. Spenser's Pastorals.

Cockle-stairs. n. s. Windin spir dal stairs.

Chambers.

Cockle. n. s. [coquel, Sax. littium, zizania, Lat.] A weed that grows in corn, the same with corrose; a species of poppy.

In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition. Shak. Good seed degenerates, and off obeys The soil's disease, and into cockle strays. Donne.

To Cock. r. a. [from cockle.] To con tact into wrinkles, like the shell of a cockle. Show'ss so drench the camblet's cockle grain. Gay.

Cockled. adj. [from cockle.] Shelled; or perhaps cockleate, turbinate.

Love's feeling is more soft and sensible Than are the tender horns of cocked snails. Shak.

Cockloft. n. s. [cock and loft.] The room over the garret, in which fows are supposed to roost; unless it be rather corrupted from cocklof, the cop or top of the house. If the lowest floors already burn, Cocklofts and garrets soon will take their turn.

My garrets, or rather my cocklofts indeed, are very indifferently furnished; but they are rooms to lay lumber in. Swift.

COCKMASTER. n. s. [cock and master.] One that breeds game cocks. A cockmaster bought a partridge, and turned it among the fighting cocks. Le Farge.

Cockmatch. n. s. [cock and match.] Cockfight for a price. At the same time that the heads of parties pre served towards one another an outward show of good breeding, their tools did not suffer much as a match at cockmatch. Addison. Though quaff-fighting is what is most taken notice of, they had doubtless cockmatches also.

Cockney. n. s. [A word of which the original is much controverted. The French use an expression, pais de co caine, for a country of dainties: Paris est pour un riche un pais de co caine.] Of this word they are not able to settle the original. It appears, whatever was its first ground, to be very ancient, being mentioned in an old Normamno

Saxon poem:

For in se by west Spaying, Is a loud shoye coaying.

On which Dr. Hicks has this remark:

Nunc coquin, coquina: que olim apud Gallos, otio, guile, et ventri dedi tos, ignaram, ignaram, desidiosum, desidiosum, segnem, significabat. Hinc urbanius, utpote a rusticis laboribus ad vivum sedentiam et desidiosam avocas, pagani nostri olim concoinae, quod nunc scribitur cockneys, vocabant. Et pocta hic noster in monachos & moniales, ut segue genus hominum qui, desidiae dediti, ventri indulgendum, & coquinae amatoris erant, malvolentissime invet ritur; monasteria & monasticam vitam inde scripsisse terrae cockinae para bole, naris, etc.

1. A native of London, by way of contempt. So the cockney did to the cels, when she put them I'll thy paste. Shakesp. King Lear.

For who is such a cockney in his heart, Proud of the plenty of the southern part, To scorn that union, by which we may Boost 'twas his countryman that writ this play? D'Arcy.

The cockney, travelling into the country, is sur prized at many common practices of rural affaires. Wata.

2. Any effeminate, ignorant, low, mean, despicable citizen.

I am afraid this great huber the world will prove a cockney. Shakesp. Twelfth Night.

Cockpit. n. s. [cock and pit.]
1. The area where cocks fight. Can this cockpit hold The vasty field of France? Shakesp. And now have I gained the cockpit of the west ern world, and academy of arms, for many years. Howel's Vocal Forest.

2. A place on the lower deck of a man of war, where are subdivisions for the purser, the surgeon, and his mates.

Harrs.

Cock-comb. n. s. [cock and comb.] A plant.

Cock-head. n. s. A plant, named also safinoun. Miller.

Cockshut. n. s. [from cock and shut.]

333
COD
The close of the evening, at which time poultry go to roost.
Surrey, and himself.
Mong about cock and snare, down from troop to troop
Went through the army.
 ночь.

Coekspur. n. s. [cock and spur.] Virginian hawk. A species of medlar.

Miller.

Coéssure. adv. [from cock and sure.]
Confidently certain; without fear or difficulty. A word of contempt.
We steal, as in a cattle, coëssure. Shaherp.
I thought myself coëssure of his horse, which he readily promised me.

Pope's Letters.

Coésswain. n. s. [coccus] (name, Sax.)
The officer who has the command of the cockboat.
Corruptly Coxon.

Coëckweed. n. s. [from cock and weed.]
The name of a plant, called also Dittander, or Pepperwort.

Cocoa. n. s. [cacao, Span. and therefore more properly written cacao.]
A species of palm-tree, cultivated in the East and West Indies. The bark of the nut is made into a strong shell, boild in drinking bowls.
The kernels afford them a wholesome food, and the milk contained in the shell a cooling liquor.
The leaves are used for dressing their horses; and are woven into baskets.
Müller.

The cocoa or chocolate nut is a fruit of an oblong figure; is composed of a thin, hard, and woody coat, a dark blackish colour; and of a dry kernel, filling up its whole cavity, flabby, dry, firm, and fleshy to the touch, of a dark brown, an agreeable smell, and a pleasant and peculiar taste. It was unknown to us till the discovery of America. The tree is of the thickness of a man's leg, and but a few feet in height; its bark rough, and full of tubercles; and its leaves six or eight inches long, half as much as large pointed at the ends. The flowers are succeeded by the fruit, which is large and oblong, resembling a cucumber, five, six, or eight inches in length, and three or four in thickness; when fully ripe, of a purple colour. Within the cavity of this fruit are lodged the cocoa nuts usually about thirty in number. Hill's Mut. Med. And those orchards of the sun, Give me to drain the cocoa's milky bowl, And from the palm to draw its freshening wine.

Toms.

Coëctile. adj. [cocticis, Lat.] Made by baking, as a brick.

Coëction. n. s. [coctic, Lat.]
The act of boiling.
The disease is sometimes attended with expectation from the lungs, and that is taken off by a tincture and resolution of the feverish matter, or terminates in suppurations or a gangrene.

Arthur's on Dict.

COD. n. s. [asculus.] A sea fish.

Coöfish. n. s. [cobbe, Sax.]
Any case or husk in which seeds are lodged.
They can then use the same wise, sow
Where in full hail last year rich pease did grow.

They let pease lie in small heaps as they are reaped, till they find the bawm and cod dry.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

To coöen. v. u. [from the noun.]
To close in court.
All coödled grain being a destroyer of weeds, an improver of land, and a preparer of it for other crops.

Mortimer.

Coöders. n. s. [from cod.] Gatherers of pease.

CODE. n. s. [coder, Lat.]

COE.
We find in the Theodosian and Justinian codes the interest of trade very well provided for.

Arthuson on Coin.

Indentures, covenants, articles they draw, Larger as the fields themselves; and larger far Civil codes with all their glosses are Pope's Set.

Codicil. n. s. [codicillus, Lat.] An appendage to a will.
The man describes his lady's erring
Was but to gain you to appoint her,
By codicil, a larger franchise.
Pref. Codille. n. s. [codille, Fr. codillo, Span.] A term at a barm, when the game is won.
She sees, and trembles at the approaching ill;
Just in the jaws of ruin, and codille.

Pope's Hope of the Lock.

To CODILE. v. a. [coquilo, coctulo, Lat. Skinner.] To parch; to soften by the heat of water.

Cohling. n. s. [from To codle.] An apple generally coddled, to be mixed with milk.
In July come Gilliflowers of all varieties, early pears and plums in fruit, gummitions and codlings.

Eason's Essays.

Their entertainment at the height,
In cream and codlings revelling with delight.
He let it lie all winter in a gravel walk, south of a codling hedge.

Mortimer's Husbandry.
A codling, ere it went his lip in,
Would surely see the gentleman's pipe.
Swift.

Coefficacy. n. s. [con and efficio, Lat.] The power of several things acting together to produce an effect.
We cannot in general infer the efficacy of these stars, or coëfficacy particular in mediations.

Brown's Life, Err.

Coefficient. n. s. [con and efficient, Lat.] The state of acting together to some single end.
The managing and carrying on of this work, by the spirits instrumentally coëfficiens, requires that they be kept together, without distinction or dissipation.

Grantham's Seap's.

Coefficient. n. s. [con and efficience, Lat.]
1. That which unites its action with the action of another.
2. [In algebra.] Such numbers, or given quantities, that are put before letters, or unknown quantities, into which letters they are supposed to be multiplied, and so make the product or product, with the letters: as, 4 a, b x, e x; where 4 is the coefficient of 4 a, b of b x, and c of e x.
3. In fluxions.
The coefficient of any generating term (in fluxions) is the quantity arising by the division of that term, by the quantity.

Coeïlack Passion. [seea the belly.] A diarrhoea, or flux, that arises from the indigestion or putrefaction of food in the stomach and bowels, whereby the aliment comes away little altered from what it was when eaten, or changed like corrupted stinking flesh.

Quincy.

COEPTION. n. s. [coemption, Lat.] The act of buying up the whole quantity of any thing.
Monopolies and coëptions of wares for resale, where they are restrained, are great engines to enrich.

Bacon's Essays.

COEQUAL. adj. [from con and equalis, Lat.] Equal; being of the same rank or dignity with another.
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy, if once he came to be a cardinal, He'll make his cap coequal with the crown.

Shakespeare, Henry VI.

COEQUALITY, n. s. [from coequal.] The state of being equal.
To COERCE. v. a. [coerce, Latin.] To restrain; to keep in order by force.
Punishments are manifold, therefore may coerce this prodigious sort.

Agilius Peregrinus.

COERCIBLE. adj. [from coerc.] 1. That may be restrained.
2. That ought to be restrained.

COERCION. n. s. [from coerc.] Penal restraint; check.
The coercion or execution of the sentence in ecclesiastical courts, is only by excommunication of the person contumacious.
Hale's Common Law.
Government has coercion and animadversion upon such as neglect their duty; without which coercive power, all government is toothless and precarious.

South.

COERCIVE. adj. [from coerc.]
1. That, which has the power of laying restraint.
All things on the surface spread, are bound
By their coercive vigour to the ground! Blackmore.
2. That which has the authority of restraining by punishment.
For ministers to seek that themselves might have coercive power over the church, would have been hardly construed.

Hooker Preface.
The virtues of a general, or a king, are prudence, courage, active foresight, coercive power, awful command, and the exercise of magnanimity, as well as justice.

Dryden.

COESENTIAL. adj. [con and essentia, Latin.] Participating of the same essence.
The Lord our God is but one God, in which indivisible unity we adore the Father, as being altogether of himself; we glorify that consubstantial Word, which is the Son; we bless and magnify that essential Spirit eternally proceeding from both, which is the Holy Ghost.

Hooker.

COESENTIALLY. n. s. [from coessentia, Lat.]
Participating of the same essence.

Brown's Exhaust.

Of the same age with another: with to.
Eve was old as Adam, and Cain their son coëmotes unto both.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
Every fruit hath puerile effects, coësentious to the act.

Grai.

COETERAL. adj. [con and eternus, Lat.] Equally eternal with another.
Or of the eternal coeteral beam!

Milton's Paradise Lost.

COETERALLY. adv. [from coeteral.]
In a state of equal eternity with another.

Arias had dishonour'd his coeterally begotten Son.

Hooker.

COETERERNITY. n. s. [from coeteral.]
Having existence from eternity equal with another eternal being.
The eternity of the Son's generation, and his coeteral and consubstantiality with the Father, when he came down from heaven, and was incarnate.

Hammond's Fundamentals.

COEVAL. adj. [coerus, Latin.]
1. Of the same age.
Even the teeth and white, like a young deck, Ceased, and new-born, from the clear brook

Recent.
2. Of the same age with another; followed by with.

This religion cannot pretend to be coeval with mankind. Locke.

The monthly revolutions of the moon, or the annual return of the earth upon its own axis, by the very hypothesis, are coeval with the former. Death.
Silence, coeval with eternity!
Thou wert, ere nature first began to be;
'Twas over time nothing all, and all slept fast in peace.

3. Sometimes by to.

Although we had no monuments of religion ancienter than that which Indostan have, yet no reason to coexist, that indolent religion was coeval to mankind. Locke.

COEXIST. n. s. [from coexist.]
A contemporary; but properly one not only living at the same time, but of the same age of life.

As it were not enough to have done all our ceremonies in wit, you will excel them in good-nature.

Pope.

COEVOUS. adj. [coevus, Lat.] One of the same age.

Then it should not have been the first, as supposing some other thing coeval to it. South.

To COEXIST. v. n. [con and coexist, Lat.]
1. To exist at the same time.

The things which in heavenly constellations, are a multitude of stars.

Locke.

Hale's Orig. of Mankind.

Of substances no one has any clear idea, far ther than of certain simple ideas coexisting together.

Locke.

2. Followed by with.

It is sufficient that we have the idea of the length of time in any regular periodic appearances, which we can in our minds apply to duration,
with which the motion or appearance never coexisted.

Locke.

COEXISTENCE. n. s. [from coexist.]
1. Having existence at the same time with another: with to.

Locke, who in the preceding lines has coexisted with, has here coexistence to:
The measuring of any duration, by some motion, depends not on the real coexistence of that to that motion, or any other periods of revolution.

Locke.

2. More commonly followed by with.

We can demonstrate the being of God's eternal ideas, and so with him. Grew's Cos.

COEXISTENT. adj. [from coexist.]
1. Having existence at the same time with another: with to.

To the measuring of any duration by time, it is not requisite that that thing should be coeval to the motion we measure by, or any other periodical revolution.

Locke.

2. Sometimes with.

This proves no antecedent necessity, but co-existent with the act. Borrowed's Damon to Hobbes.

Time is taken for so much duration as is co-existent with the motions of the great bodies of the universe.

All that one point is either future or past, and no parts are coexistent or contemporaneous with it.
Bentley.

To COEXIST, v. n. [con and extend, Lat.]
To extend to the same space or duration with another.

Every motion is, in some sort, coextensive with the body moved. Grew's Cosmogony.

COEXTENSION. n. s. [from coextend.]
The act or state of extending to the same space or duration with another.

Though the prithee, I find it is no inconvenience to have some analogy, at least of coextension, with my body.

Hale.

COFFEE. n. s. [It is originally Arabick, pronounced cahbya by the Turks, and cahlbauh by the Arabs.] The tree is a species of Arabiaeissamam.
It is found to succeed as well in the Caribbe islands as in its native place of growth; but wherere the coffee produced in the West India will give as good a return as from Mocha in Arabia. In this time will discover.

Coffee denotes a drink prepared from the berries, very familiar in Europe for these eight years, and among the Turks for one hundred and fifty.
Thence, the traveller, was the first who brought it to France; and a Greek servant, called Papania, brought it to England with him. Daniel Edwards, a Turkey merchant, in 1652, to make his coffee, first set up the profession of coffee-nan, and introduced the drink among us. Chambers.

They have in Turkey a drink called caffea, made of a berry of the same name, as black as soot, and of a strong scent, but not aromatic; which they take, beaten into powder, in water, as hot as they can drink it. This drink comforteth the brain and heart, and helps digestion. Bacon.

To part her time: twist reading and bohea,
Or ever cold coffee trifle with the spoon.

Pope.

COFFEEHOUSE. n. s. [coffee and house.]
A house of entertainment where coffee is sold, and the guests are supplied with news-papers.

To tea, from coffeehouse or play
Returning, finishes the day.

Prior.

It is a point they do not concern themselves about, farther than perhaps as a subject in Sefft.

COFFEEMEN. n. s. [coffee and man.

One that keeps a coffee-house.

Consider your enemies the Lacedaemonians;
did ever you hear that they preferred a coffee-man to Achilles? Addison.

COFFEEPOT. n. s. [coffee and pot.] The covered pot in which coffee is boiled.

COFFER. n. s. [cope, Saxon.]
1. A chest generally for keeping money.

Two iron coffers hang on either side,
With precious metal fast as they could hold.

Fair Queen.

The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck out soldiers for these Irish wars.

Shakesp. Richard II.

If you destroy your government that is wealthy,
you must choose another, who will fill his coffers out of what is left.

L'Estrange.

2. Treasure.

He would discharge it without any burthen to the queen's coffers, for honour sake,

Shakesp.

3. [In architecture.] A square depressur in each interval between the conic cornices, usually filled with some enrichment.

Chambers.

4. [In fortification.] A hollow lodgment down a drey, from six to seven foot deep, and from sixteen to eighteen broad; the upper part being made of pieces of timber, raised two foot above the level of the moat; which little elevation has hurls missiles laden with earth for its covering, and serves as a parapet with embrasures.

Chambers.

To COFFER, v. n. [from the noun.] To truss up chests.

Treasure, as a war might draw forth, so a peace succeeding might empty up.

Bacon. Henry VII.

COFFERER of the King's Household. n. s. A principal officer of his majesty's court, next under the comptroller, that in the compting-house and elsewhere, hath a special oversight of other officers of the household, for their good demeanour in their offices.

Cowell.
COG

COH

COH

The oppressed Indians protest against that heaven where the Spaniards are to be their inhabitants.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida.

1. The act or state of inhabiting the same place with another.

2. The state of living together as married persons.

Which defect, though it could not evacuate a marriage after cohabitation, and actual consummation, yet it was not enough to void a civil contract.

Bacon, Henry VII.

Monsieur Brunars, at one hundred and two years, died for love of his wife, who was ninety-two at her death, after seventy years cohabitation.

Tutler.

COIHEIR. n. s. [cohaeres, Lat.] One of several among whom an inheritance is divided.

Married persons, and widows, and virgins, are all coheirs in the inheritance of Jesus, if they live within the laws of their estate.

Tutler's Holy Law.

COHESIONS. n. s. [from coheir.] A woman who has an equal share of an inheritance with other coheirs.

TO COHERE. v. n. [cohaeren, Lat.]

1. To stick together; to hold fast one to another, as parts of the same mass.

Two pieces of marble, having their surface exactly plain, and to each other in such a manner as to intercept the air, do cohere firmly together as one.

Woodward.

We find that the force, whereby bodies cohere, is very much greater when they come to immediate contact, than when they are at ever so small a distance.

Ceylon's Philosophical Principles.

None want a place; for all their centre found, Hung to the goddess, and coher'd around.

Not closer, orb in orb congro'ld, are seen

The buzzing bees about their dusky queen.

 Pope's Dunciad.

2. To be well connected; to follow regularly in the order of discourse.

3. To suit; to fit; to be fitted to.

Had time coher'd with place, or place with wishing.

Shakespeare.

4. To agree.

COHERENT. n. s. [cohaerentia, Lat.]

1. That state of bodies in which their parts are joined together, from what cause soever it proceeds, so that they resist division and separation; nor can be separated by the same force by which they might be simply moved, or, being only laid upon one another, might be parted again.

Quincy.

The pressure of the air will not explain, nor can be a cause of, the coherence of the particles of air themselves.

Locke.

Matter is either fluid or solid; words that may comprehend the middle degrees between extreme fixity and coherency, and the most rapid intense motion.

Bentley.

2. Connection; dependency; the relation of parts or things one to another.

It shall be no error to apply each controversy's resting-place, and the coherence it hath with things, either on which it dependeth, or which depend on it.

Hogger, Preface.

Why between sermons and faith should there be ordinarily that coherence, which causes have with their usual effects?

Hogger.

3. The texture of a discourse, by which one part follows another regularly and naturally.

4. Consistency in reasoning, or relating, so that one part of the discourse does not destroy or contradict the rest.
To COIN. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To mint or stamp metals for money.
   They cannot touch me for coining: I am the king.
   Shakesp.

2. They never put in practice a thing so necessary as coined money is.
   Peacham of Antiquities.
   Those cannot coin rent just at quarter-day, but must gather it by degrees.
   Locke.

3. Can we be sure that this medal was really coined by the Britons, or is but a product of the soil from whence it was taken?
   Bentley.

2. To make or invent. My lungs
   Coin words till their decay, against those masts which We disdain should steer us.
   Shakesp. Coriolanus

3. To make or forge any thing, in an ill sense.
   Never coin a formal eye on't.
   To make the kngt o'ercome the giant.
   Hudibras.

   This is conceived to be a coining of some Jews, in derision of Christians, who first bore to that portrait.
   Brown.

5. Forgery; invention.
   Moxy was forced to leave off coining, by the great crowds of people continually offering to return his coinage upon him.
   Swift.

6. The charges of coining money.

7. New production; invention.

8. Unnecessary coining, as well as unnecessary re- writhing of words, runs into affection; a fault to be avoided on either hand.

To COINCIDE. v. n. [coinci'do, Lat.]

1. To fall upon the same point; to meet in the same point.
   If the equator and ecliptic had coincided, it would have rendered the annual revolution of the earth useless.
   Chalmers.

2. To concur; to be consistent with.
   The rules of right judgment, and of good acquaintance, often coincide with each other.
   Watt's Logick.

C0I'N1DENCE. n. s. [from coin'de.] 1. The state of several bodies, or lines, falling upon the same point.

An universal equilibrium, arising from the coincidence of infinite centres, can never be naturally acquired.

Bentley.

2. Concurrence; consistency; tendency of many things to the same end; occurrence of many things at the same time.

The very concurrence and coincidence of so many evidences that contribute to the proof, carries a great weight.

Hale.

3. It is followed by with.

The coincidence of the planes of this rotation with one another, and with the plane of the ecliptick, is very near the truth.

Chalmers's Philosophical Principles.
Miserable.

The brains from nose and mouth, and either ear, Came issuing forth, as through a colander, The curdled milk.

COLATION. n.s. [from colo, Lat.] The art of filtering or straining.

COLATURE. n.s. [from colo, Lat.] 1. The act of straining; filtration. 2. The matter strained.

Colbertine. n.s. A kind of lace worn by women.

Go, hang out an old prisoner guige, with a yard of yellow gilttogether. Congreve's Way of the World.

Diff'rent rose between Mechlin, the queen of lace, and Colbertine, Young.

Colothair. n.s. A term in chemistry. Colothair is the dry substance which remains after distillation, but commonly the caput mueritus of vitriol.

Quincey, or vitriol burnt, though unto a redness, containing the fixed salt, will make good ink.

COLD. [colo. Saxo; Ialt. German.] 1. Not hot; not warm; cold; wanting warmth; being without heat. The diet in the state of mankind ought to be solid; and their chief drink water cold, because in such a state it has its natural spirit. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

The aggregated soil, Death, with his mace, prick-stick, and cold, As with a trident smote. Milton.

COLD. [colo, Ialt.] 2. Causing sense of cold.

O gods we seek Some better shroud, some better warmth, to cherish Our limbs bemaid'd, ere this diurnal star Leave cold the night, how we our gather'd beams Reflection, may with matter soe comen. Brown.

3. Chill; shivering; having sense of cold. Noble English, that could entertain With half their forces, the full power of France; And let another half stand hasting by, All out of work, and cold for action. Shakesp. Hen. V.

4. Having cold qualities; not volatile; not acrid.

Cold plants have a quicker perception of the heat of the sun than herbs; as a cold hand will sooner find a little warmth than an hot. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

5. Indifferent; rigid; wanting passion; wanting zeal; without concern; inactive; unconcerned; wanting ardour.

There sprung up one kind of men, with whose zeal and forwardness the rest being compared, were thought to be marvellous cold and dull. Hooker's Preface.

Infinite shall be made cold in religion, by your example, that never we were hurt by reading books. Addison.

Temporarily proceed to what you would Thus vindicate redress. —Sir, these cold ways, That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous. Shakesp.

We new dater letters these Their cold intent, tender and substance thus: Here doth he wish his person, and his power, The which he could not levy. Shakesp. Henry IV.

We should act, when the blood was cold, have threatened our prisoners with the sword. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

To see a world in flames, or an host of angels in the clouds, one must be made of a stick to be a cold and unconcerned spectator. Burnet's Preface to the Theory of the Earth.

A man must tender and substance thus, That inspire the coward, or to warm the cold: His voice, his sole appearance, makes them bold. Dryden.

O, thou hast touch'd me with thy sacred thorn, And my cold heart is kindled at thy flame. Rowe.

And the cold or degenerate temper, whose heart doth not burn within him in the midst of praise and adoration. Addison's Frenehede.

6. Unaffected; unable to move the passions.

What a deal of cold business doth a man misplace the better part of life in? In scattering compliments, tendering visits, following feasts and plays. Ben Jonson.

The rabbles are pleased at the first entry of a disguise; but the pie grows cold even with them too, when it comes on in a second scene. Addison on Italy.

7. Reserved; coy; not affectionate; not cordial; not friendly.

Let his knights have colder looks. Among you. Shakesp. King Lear.

The commissioners grew more reserved, and colder towards each other. Clarendon.

8. Chaste; not heated by vitious appetite. You may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty, And yet cool cold, the time you may so hoowink. Swift.

We've willing damas enough. Shakesp. Macbeth.

9. Not welcome; not received with kindness or warmth of affection.

My master's suit will be but cold, because So since she respects my mistress' love. Shakesp. Two Gentlemen of Verona.

10. Not hasty; not violent.

We should make it. Shakesp. Timon of Athens.

11. Not affecting the scent strongly.

At the edge corner, in the coldest part. Shakesp.

12. Not having the scent strongly affected.

Smell this business with a sense as cold as is a dead man's nose. Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

COLD. n.s. [from the adjective.] 1. The cause of the sensation of cold; the privation of heat; the frigid power.

Fair lined slippers for the cold. Shakesp.

Heat and cold are nature's two hands, whereby she duly worketh and governeth all; for, in readiness, in respect of the fire; but for cold, we must stay till it cometh, or seek it in deep caves, or high mountains; and when all is done, we cannot obtain it in any great degree. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The sun had first its precept so to move, so shine, As might affect the earth with cold and heat scarce tolerable, and from the north to call Decrepit winter, from the south to bring Subtil summer's heat. Milton.

2. The sensation of cold; coldness; chillness.

When she saw her lord prepar'd to part A deadly cold all shivering to her heart. Dry.Fab.

3. A disease caused by cold; the obstruction of perspiration.

What disease hast thou? A whoreson cold, Sir; a rogue. Shakesp. Henry IV. Let no giggle cold destroy All taste we have of heavenly joy, Rascammon. Those rains, so covering the earth, might profitably contribute to the disruption of it, by stopping all the poore and all evaporation, which would make the vapours within struggle violently, as we get a fever by a cold. Burnet.

COLDLY. adv. [from cold.]

1. Without heat.

2. Without concern; indifferently; negligently; without warmth of temper or expression.

What England says, she blindly, gentle lord; We coldly pause for thee. Shakesp. King John.

Swift seem'd to wonder what he meant, Nor would believe no man had scented; So never offer'd once to stir; But coldly said, Your servant, Sir. Swift.

COLDNESS. n.s. [from cold.]

1. Lack of heat; power of causing the sensation of cold.

He relates the excessive coldness of the water they met with in summer in that icy region, where they were forced to winter. Boyle's Experiments.

338
Unconcern; frigidity of temper; want of zeal; negligence; disregard.

Divisions of religion are not only the farthest spread, because in religion all men presume themselves interested; they are also for the part, rather prosecuted; forasmuch as coldness, which, in other continences, may be thought to proceed from moderation, is not there so factually concerned.

If, upon reading admired passages in authors, he finds a coldness and indifference in his thoughts, he takes them for the real, and himself wants the faculty of discovering them. Addison.

It betrayed itself in a sort of indifference and carelessness in all her actions, and coldness to her best friends. Arbuthnot.

Coyness; want of kindness; want of passion.

Unhappy youth! how will thy coldness raise tempers and storms in his afflicted bosom. Addison's Cato.

Let every tongue its various censure chuse, And own their coldness with some acute praise. Met.Ⅱ

Chastity; exemption from vehement desire.

The silver stream her virgin coldness keeps, For ever murmurs, and for ever weeps. Pope's Hindostan Forest.

Coll. n. s. [cat]. Saxon. A general name for all sorts of cabbage.

Coleseed. n. s. [from cole and seed].

Cabbage seed.

Where land is rank, it is not good to sow wheat after a fallow; but cossed or barley, and then wheat. Mortimer.

Colewort. n. s. [cap]lyre, Sax. A species of cumberworts. The decoction of cumberworts is also recommended to bathe them. Wiseman's of an Ergylaph.

She took the coleworts, which her husband got. From his own ground (a small well-water'd spot) She stripp'd the stalks of all their leaves; the best she cal'd, and then with handy care she dress'd it. Dryden.

How turnips hide their swelling heads below, And how the closing coleworts upwards grow. Gay.

Co'llick. n. s. [colicus, Lat.]

It strictly is a disorder of the colon; but loosely, any disorder of the stomach or bowels that is attended with pain. There are four sorts: 1. Harley's colic, which proceeds from an abundance of acesine or choke irritrating the bowels, so as to occasion continual gripes, and generally with a looseness; and this is best managed with lenitives and emollients. 2. A flatulent colic, which is pain in the bowels, from flatulence and wind, which distend them into unequal and unmaterial capacitie; and this is managed with carminatives and moderate openers. 3. A hysterical colic, which arises from disorders of the womb, and is communicated by consent of parts to the bowels; and is to be treated with the ordinary hystericks. 4. A nervous colic, which is from convulsions and convulsions of the stomach, and of the contortions of the guts themselves from some disorders of the spirits, or nervous fluid, in their component fibres; whereby their capacities are in many places strikt and sometimes so as to occasion obstinate obstructions: this is best remedied by brisk catharticks, joined with opiates and emollients. There is also a species of this distemper, which is commonly called the stone colic, by consent of parts, from the irritation of the stone or gravel in the bladder or kidneys; and this is most commonly to be treated by neptilicts and oily diuretics, and is greatly assisted with the carminative turpentine clysters. Quincy.

Collicks of infants proceed from acidity, and the air in the abdomen expanding itself, while the alimentaments. Arthurb.}

Collap'sion. n. s. [from collapse.]

1. The act of closing or collapsing.
2. The state of vessels closed.

Collar. n. s. [collare, Lat.]

1. A ring of metal put round the neck.
2. The part of the harness that is fastened about the horse's neck.
3. The part of the dress that surrounds the neck.
4. To slip the Collar. To get free; to escape; to disentangle himself from any engagement or difficulty.

To C'o'llare. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To seize by the collar; to take by the throat.
2. To collar Beef, or other meat; to roll it up, and bind it hard and close with a string or collar.

To COLLATE. v. a. [confere, collatam, Lat.]

1. To compare one thing of the same kind with another.

Knowledge will be ever a wandering and indisposed thing, if it be but a continuance of a few notions that are formed to hand and occur, and not excited from a sufficient number of instances, and those well collated. Bacon's Nat. Hist. They could not relinquish their Judaism, and embrace Christianity, without considering, weighing, and collating both religions. South.

2. To collate books; to examine if nothing was left together.

3. To bestow; to confer.

The sdignificance of the sacrament disposes the spirit of the receiver to admit the grace of the spirit of God, where consigned, exhibited, and collated. Tindal. Also for the monarchy; and this is most commonly to be treated by neptilicts and oily diuretics, and is greatly assisted with the carminative turpentine clysters. Quincy.

4. With to. To place in an ecclesiastical benefice.

He thrust out the invader, and collated Amsdorff to the bishopric: Lother performed the consecration. Addis. If a patron shall neglect to present unto a benefice, void above six months, the bishop may collate thence. Adliff.
COL

2. One who presents to an ecclesiastical benefice.

A mandatory cannot interrupt an ordinary collector, till a month is expired from the day of presentation.

To COLA'UD, r. o. [collaude, Lat.] To join in praising.

Diet.

COLLEAGUE. n. s. [collega, Lat.] A partner in office or employment. Amongst, accordingly last syllable.

Easiest it might be seen that I intend

Mercy continue with justice springing thee. Mitton.

The regents, upon demise of the crown, would keep the peace without colleagues. Swift.

To COLLEAGUE, r. a. [from the noun.] To unite with.

We may collect with this dream of his advantage, he hath not fail'd to pester us with message, Importing the surrender of these lands.

Shakesp., Hamlet.

To COLLECT. r. v. [colligo, collectum, Lat.]

1. To gather together; to bring into one place.

'Tis memory alone that enriches the mind, by preserving what our labour and industry daily hath, and that our actions of the four

We may collect from our Saviour's predestination to his disciples.

Decay of Piety.

They conclude they can have no idea of infinite space, because they can have no idea of infinite matter; which consequence, I conceive, is very ill collected.

Locke.

5. To collect himself. To recover from surprise; to gain command over his thoughts; to assemble his sentiments.

Be collected; no more amazement.

Shakesp., Tempest.

Affrighted much, I did in time collect myself, and thought

This was so, and no slumber. Shad. Winter's Tale.

Prosperity unexpected often maketh men careless and remiss; whereas they, who receive a wound, become more vigilant and collected.

Hayward.

As when of old some orator renowned

In Athens or free Rome, where eloquence

Flourish'd, since mute, to some great cause address'd.

Stood in himself collected, while each part,

Motion, each act won audience, ere the tongue

Sometimes in brevity began, as no delay

Of perfuse breaking through his zeal of right.

Milton.

COLLECT. n. s. [collecta, low Lat.] A short comprehensive prayer, used at the sacrament; any short prayer.

Then let your devotion be holy to say over proper collects. Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

COLLECT'NEOUS. adj. [collectaneous, Lat.] Gathered up together; collected; notes compiled from various books.

COLLECTEDLY. adv. [from collected.] Gathered in one view at once.

The whole evolution of ages from everlasting to everlasting is so collectedly and presentingly represented to God. More.

COLLECTIBLE. adj. [from collect.] That which may be gathered from the premises by just consequence.

Whether thereby be meant Euripides, is not collectible from the following words.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

COLLECTION. n. s. [collectum, Lat.]

1. The act of gathering together.

2. An assemblage; the things gathered.

No perjur'd knight desires to quit thy arms;

Fairest collection of thy sex's charms. Prior.

The gallery is hung with a collection of pictures.

Addison.

3. The act of deducing consequences; ratiocination; discourse. This sense is now scarce in use.

When we descend unto probable collections, we are then in the territory where free and arbitrary determinations, the territory where human laws, take place.

Hooker.

They shalt not peep through lattices of eyes,

Nor hear thro' labyrinths of ears, nor learn

By circuit or collections to discern.

Dome.

4. A corollary; a consecutively deduced from premises; deduction; consequence.

It should be a weak collection, if we say, that when Christ had overcome the sharpness of death, he opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers; a thing in such sort affirmed with circumstances, were taken as insinuating an opposite denial, what circumstance be accomplished.

Hooker.

This label

Is so from sense in hardness, that I can

Make no collection of it. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

When she, from sundry arts, one skill doth draw;

Gathering, from divers flight, one act of war;

From many cases like, one rule of law;

These her collections, not the senses are. Dryden.

GATHERED COLLECT. n. s. [collectivus, Lat.] Gathered up.

COLLECTIVE. adj. [from collect; collectif, Fr.]

1. Gathered into one mass; aggregated; accumulative.

A body collective, it containeth a huge multitude.

Hooker.

The three forms of government differ only by the civil administration being in the hands of one or two, called kings, in a senate, called the nobles; or in the several collective or representative nations which may be called the commons. Swift.

The difference between a compound and a collective idea, is that a compound idea unites things of a different kind; but a collective idea, things of the same.

Watts's Logick.

2. Employed in deducing consequences; argumentative.

Antiquity left many fallacies contrivable not only by critical and collective reason, but contrary observations. Brown.

3. [In grammar.] A collective noun is a word which expresses a multitude, though they be singular; as a company, an army.

COLLECTIVELY. adv. [from collective.] In a general mass; in a body; not singly; not numbered by individuals; in the aggregate; accumulatively; taken together; in a state of combination or union.

Although we cannot be free from all sin collectively, in such sort that no part thereof shall be found in us, yet distributively all great actual offences, as they offer themselves one by one, both may and ought to be by all means avoided.

Hooker.

Singly and apart many of them are subject to exception, yet collectively they make up a good moral evidence. Hale.

The other part of the water was condensed at the surface of the earth, and sent forth collectively into standing springs and rivers.

Woodard's Nat. Hist.

COLLECTOR. n. s. [collector, Lat.]

1. A gatherer; he that collects scattered things together.

2. A compiler; one that gathers scattered pieces into one book.

The grandfather might be the first collector of them into a body. Hale's Common Law of Eng. Volumes without the collector's own reflections. Addison.

The best English historian, when his stile grows antiquated, will be only considered as a tedious relation of facts, and perhaps consigned to furnish materials for some future collector. Swift.

3. A tax-gatherer; a man employed in levying duties or tributes.

A great part of this treasure is now embezzeled, lavished, and feasted away by collectors, and other officers.

The commissions of the revenue are disposed of, and the collectors are appointed by the commission- ers. Swift.

COLLEGATARY. n. s. [from con and legatum, a legacy, Latin.] In the civil law, a person to whom is left a legacy in common with one or more other persons.

Chambers.

COLLEGE. n. s. [collegium, Lat.]

1. A community; a number of persons living by some common rules.

On barred steeds they ride in proud array,

Thick as the college of the bees in May. Dryden.

2. A society of men set apart for learning, or religion.

He is return'd with his opinions,

Gather'd from all the famous colleges

Almost in Christendom. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

I would the college of the cardinals

Would close him up, and carry him to Rome. Shakesp.

This order or society is sometimes called Solomon's house, and sometimes the college of the six days work.

3. The house in which the college resides.

Huldah the prophetess dwelt in Jerusalem in the college of the kings.

4. A college, in forming universities, is a lecture read in publick.

COLLEGIAL. adj. [from college] Relating to a college; possessed by a college.

COLLIGIAN. n. s. [from college.] An inhabitant of a college; a member of a college.

COLLEGiate. adj. [collegiatus, low Lat.]

1. Containing a college; instituted after the manner of a college.

I wish that yourselves did well consider how opposite certain of your positions are unto the state of collegiate societies, whereas the two университеты consist.

Hakius, Preface.

2. A collegiate church was such as was built at a convenient distance from a cathedral church, wherein a number of presbyters were settled, and lived together in one congregation. Ayliffe's Par.

COLLEGiate. n. s. [from college.] A member of a college; a man bred in a college; an university man.

These are a kind of empiricks in poetry, who have got a receipt to please, and no college like them, for purging the passions.

Rymer.

COLLE't. n. s. [from collum, Lat. the neck.]
COL

1. Anciently something that went about the neck; sometimes the neck.

2. That part of a ring in which the stone is set.

3. A term used by turners.

To Colli'de. v. a. [collido, Lat.] To strike against each other; to beat, to dash, to knock together.

Scintillations are not the ascension of air upon collision, but inflammable effusions from the bodies collided. Brown.

Colli'ier. n. s. [from coal.]

1. A digger of coals; one that works in the coal-pits.

2. A coal-merchant; a dealer in coals.

Coal-Feu.'s t. [colligatia, Lat.] A binding together.

These the middle strivers interwine into a knot, whereat the rustiness or dodosity in the navel, occasioned by the collisions of vessels. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Collima'tion. n. s. [from collimo, Lat.]

The act of aiming at a mark; aim; Diet.

Collina'tion. n. s. [collineo, Lat.]

The act of aiming.

Colli'quable. adj. [from colligate.

Easily dissolved; liable to be melted.

The tender consistence renders it the more colligible, by which it is carried into the coal, and makes it fit to be used. Harvey on Consumptions.

Colli'quament. n. s. [from colligate.

The substance to which any thing is reduced by being melted.

Colli'quant. adj. [from colligate.

That which has the power of melting or dissolving.

To Colli'quate. v. a. [colliqueo, Lat.]

To melt; to dissolve; to turn from solid to fluid.

The fire melted the glass, that made a great shew, after what was colliguated had been removed from the fire. Boyle.

The fat of the kidneys is apt to be colliquated through a great heat from within, and an ardent colliquative fire. Harvey on Consumptions.

To Colli'quate. v. n. To melt; to dissolve.

Ice will dissolve in fire, and colligate in water or warm oils. Brown's Vulgar Err.

Colligation. n. s. [colligatio, Lat.]

1. The act of melting.

Glass may be made by the bare colligation of the salt and earth remaining in the ashes of a burnt plant. Boyle.

From them proceed rarefaction, colligation, concretion, maturation, and most effects of nature. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Such a temperament or disposition of the animal fluids as proceeds from a lax compages, and wherein they flow off through the secretory glands faster than they ought.

Any kind of universal diminution and colligation of the body. Harvey on Consumptions.

Coll'iquative. adj. [from colligate.

Melting; dissolved.

COL

A colliquative fever is such as is attended with a diarrhoea, or sweats, from too lax a constitution of the fluids. It is a consequent of a burning colliquative fever, whereby the humours, fat, and flesh of the body are melted.

Colliqua'tion. n. s. [colliquatio, Lat.]

The act of melting together; reduction to one mass by fluxion in the fire.

After the incorporation of metals by simple colliquation, for the better discovering of the nature and temper of the metals, it would be tried by incorporating their solutions. Bacon's Physical Remains.

Collisio'n. n. s. [from collisio, Lat.]

1. The act of striking two bodies together.

Or, by collision of two bodies,ünst.

The air attritive to fire.

Hilton's Par. Lost.

2. The state of being struck together; a clash.

Then from the clashes between popes and kings, debate, like sparks from flint's collision, springs.

Denham.

The devil sometimes conversation fire from the altar to consume the votaries; and, by the mutual collision of well-mean'd zeal, set even orthodox Christians in a flame. Decoy'd Py'ty.

To Collo'cate. v. a. [coloco, Lat.]

To place; to station.

If you desire to superimpose any virtue upon a person, take the creature in which that virtue is most eminent; of that creature take the parts wherein that virtue is collocated. Bacon.

Colloc'a'tion. n. s. [collocatio, Lat.]

1. The act of placing; disposition.

2. The state of being placed.

In the confluence of the spirits in bodies, the collocation is equal or unequal; and the spirits conversed or diffused. Bacon.

Collo'cation. n. s. [collocatio, Lat.]

Conference; conversation.

To Collo'que. v. a. [probably from collo'quaer, Lat.] To wheel: to flatter; to please with kind words, a low word.

Collo'q. n. s. [It is derived by Min'shew from coal and op, a roaster broiled when the coal is carbamode.

1. A small slice of meat.

Sweetbreads and collage were with skewers prick'd about the sides. Dryden's Fables.

A cook perhaps has mighty things to profess'd: Then sent up but two dishes nicely drest: What signifies Scotch collage to a feast? King's Cockey.

2. A piece of any animal.

The lion is upon his death-bed; not an enemy that does not apply for a collog of him. Le'Strange.

3. In burlesque language, a child.

Look on me with your weikin eye, sweet villain, Most dearest, my collap. Shakesp. Winter's Tale. Body are melted Thou art a collap of my flesh, And for thy sake I have shed many a tear. Shakesp. Henry VI.

Collo'qua'le. adj. [from collo'quaer] Whatever relates to common conversation.

Collo'quy. n. s. [colloquium, Lat.] Conversation; conversation; alternate discourse; talk.

My earthly, by his heavenly over-power'd, In that celestial colloquy sublime, With an object that excels the sense. Dazzled, and spent, sunk down. Mill. Par. Lost.

COL

In retirement make frequent colloquies, or short discoursings, between God and thy own soul. Taylor.

Collo'w. n. s. [More properly colly, from coal.]

Collo is the word by which they denote black grains of burnt coal, or coal. Woodward on Flan. 8.

Co'luctancy. n. s. [colletor, Lat.] A tendency to contest; opposition of nature.

Colluc'ta'tion. n. s. [collucatio, Lat.]

Contest; struggle; contrariety; opposition; splice.

The thmepre, natural baths, or hot springs, do not owe their heat to any collucation or effervescence of the minerals in them. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

To Coll'ude. v. n. [colludo, Lat.] To conspire in a fraud; to act in concert; to play into the hand of each other.

Collus'sion. n. s. [collusio, Lat.]

Collusion is, in our common law, a deceitful agreement or compact between two or more, for the one part to bring an action against the other to some evil purpose; as to defraud a third of his right. Coke.

By the ignorance of the merchants, or dishonesty of weavers, or the collusion of both, the ware was bad, and the price excessive. Sibb.

Collusive. adj. [from collude.] Fraudulently concerted.

Colli'sively. adv. [from collusivel.] In a manner fraudulently concerted.

Colli'sory. adj. [from colludo, Lat.] Carrying on a fraud by secret concert.

Colly. n. s. [from coal.] The smut of coal.

Suppose thou saw her dressed in some old hirsute attire, out of fashion, coarse raiment, besmear'd with soot, colly, perfumed with camphor.

Burton on Melancholy.

To Colly. v. a. To grime with coal; to smut with coal.

Brief as the lightning in the collied night, That, in a speen, unfolds both heaven and earth; And, ere a man hath pow'r to say, behold, The jaws of darkness do devour it. Shaksp.

Col'lium. n. s. [Lat.] An ointment for the eyes.

Col'm. n. s. [Fr.] A sort of pear.

Col'ogn. Earth. n. s. Is a deep brown, very light bastard ochre, which is no pure native fossil; but contains more vegetable than mineral matter, and owes its origin to the remains of wood long buried in the earth. Hill on Fossils.

Col'onn. n. s. [a member.

1. A point (:) used to mark a pause greater than that of a comma, and less than that of a period. Its use is not very exactly fixed; nor is it very necessary, being confounded by most with the semicolon. It was used, before punctuation was refined, to mark almost any sense less than a period. To apply it properly, we should place it, perhaps, only where the sense is continued without dependence of grammar or construction; as I love him, I despite him: I have long ceased to trust, but shall never forbear to succour him.

2. The greatest and widest of all the intestines, about eight or nine hands breadth long. It begins where the ilium ends, in the cavity of the os ilium on the right COLOUR. n.s. [color, Lat.] 1. The appearance of bodies to the eye only: hue; dye. 2. The freshness or appearance of blood in the face.

My cheeks no longer did their colour boast.

Dryden.

Chapter 2

A sudden horror seiz'd his giddy head,
And his ears trickled, and his colour fled.

Dryden.

The tint of the painter.

When each bold figure just begins to live,
The treach'rous colours the fair art betray,
And all the bright creation fades away.

Pope.

The representation of any thing super-finely examined.

Their wisdom is only of this world, to put false colours upon things, to call good evil, and evil good, against the conviction of their own consciousness.

Swift.

Concealment: palliation: excuse; superficial cover.

It is no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable.

Swift.

Colours

The white of the star.

Colours are so false a thing.

Hogarth.

To COLOUR. v. a. [color, Lat.] 1. To mark with some hue, or dye.

I expect to spend the remainder of it:
In them there is nothing else than a certain power and disposition to stir up a sensation of this or that;
and so from time to time I draw upon it.

Nevis's Opticks.

To palliate; to excuse; to importune in specious colours, or fair appearances.

I told him, that I would not favour or colour in any sort his former folly.

Raleigh's Essay.

He colours the falsehood of an expressed by an express command from Jupiter to forsake the king.

Dryden's Delight.

To make plausible.

We have scarce heard of an innovation that was not coloured with grievances of the highest kind, or connoted by one or more branches of the legislature.

Addison's Freethinker.

To colour a Stranger's Goods, is when a freeman allows a foreigner to enter goods at the custom-house under his name;
so that the foreigner pays but single duty,
when he ought to pay double.

Phillips.

To COLOUR. v. n. To blush. A low word, only used in conversation.

COLOURABLE. adj. [from colour] Specious; plausible. It is now little used.

They have now a colourable pretence to withstand innovations, having accepted of other laws and rules already.

Spenser.
COLOUR. adv. from colour. — Spectably, or picturesquely. The process, however colourfully regarded, hath not hit the very mark where it was directed. Bacon.

COLOURED. participial adj. from colour. — Streaked; diversified with a variety of hues. The coloured are coarse, and therefore not so well and equally concordant. Bacon. Nat. Hist.

COLOURING. n. s. from colour. — The part of the painter's art that teaches to lay on his colours with propriety and beauty. But as the slightest sketch, if justly traced, Is by ill colouring but the more disgrac'd; So by false and unmeaning nature. Pope.

COLOURIST. n. s. from colour. — A painter who excels in giving the proper colours to his designs. Titian, Paul Veronese, Van Dyck, and the rest of the good colourists, have come nearest to nature. T. H. Green.

COLOURLESS. adj. from colour. — Without colour; not distinguished by any hue; transparent. Transparent substances, as glass, water, and air, when made very thin, by being blown into bubbles, or otherwise formed into plates, exhibit various colours, according to their various thinness; although at a greater thickness they appear very clear and colourless. Newcomb. Optics.

Pellucid, colourlessglass, or water, being beaten into a powder of earth, do acquire a very intense whiteness. Beattie.

COLT. n. s. from colt, Sax. — 1. A young horse: used commonly for the male offspring of a horse, as fillies for the female. The colt hath about four years of growth, and so the faw, and so the calf. Bacon. Nat. Hist.

Like colts or unmanaged horses, we start at dead bones and lifeless blocks. Taylor's Holy Liv.

No sports, but what belong to war, they know; To break the stubborn colt, to bend the bow. Dryden's Enid.

2. A young foolish fellow. Ay, that's a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

To COLT, v. n. from the noun. — To brisk; to be licentious; to run at large without rule; to riot; to frolick. As soon as they were out of sight by themselves, they shook off their bridles, and began to colt anew more licentiously than before. Spranger's State of Ireland.

To COLT, v. a. To befool. What a plague mean ye, to colt me thus? Shaksp. Henry IV.

COLTS-FOOT. n. s. [tussilago; from colt and foot.] It hath a radiated flower, whose disk consists of many florets; the crown composed of many half-florrets: the embryos are included in a multifid flower-cup, which turns to downy seeds fixed in a bed. Miller.

COLTS-TOOTH. n. s. from colt and tooth. — 1. An imperfect or superficial tooth in young horses.

2. A love of youthful pleasure; a disposition to the practices of youth.

— No, my lord; nor shall not, while I have a stump. Shaksp. 2. Cuming; crafty.

COLTISH. adj. from colt. — Having the tricks of a colt; wanton.

COLTISHNESS. n. s. [from colt.] A disposition to the practices of youth.

COLTISHNESS. n. s. [coltish, Lat.] — 1. Relating to a serpent.

2. Cunning; crafty.

COLOMBINE. n. s. [columbina, Lat.] — A plant with leaves like the meadow rue. Miller.

COLOMBINE. n. s. [columbinus, Lat.] — A kind of violet colour, or changeable dove colour. Diet.

COLUMN. n. s. [columna, Lat.] — 1. A round pillar.

— Some of the old Greek columns and altars, were brought from the ruins of Apollo's temple, at Delos. Lac. Round broken column clasping ivy twined. Pope.

2. Any body of certain dimensions pressing vertically upon its base. The whole weight of any column of the atmosphere, and likewise the specific gravity of its basis, are certainly known by many experiments. Beattie.

3. [In the military art.] The long line or row of troops, or of baggage, of an army in its march. An army marches in one, two, three, or more columns, according as the ground will allow.

4. [With printers.] A column is half a page, when divided into two equal parts by a line passing through the middle, from the top to the bottom; and, by several parallel lines, pages are often divided into three or more columns.

COLUMNAR. adj. from column. Formed in columns.

COLUMNARIAN. n. s. [columnar, n. s. from column, n. s.] — Formed in columns. White columnar spar, out of a stone-pit. Woodward on Fossils.

COLUMNAR. adj. [from column.] Formed in columns.

COLUMNAR. adj. [from column.] — Two great circles supposed to pass through the poles of the world: one through the equinocial points, Aries and Libra; the other through the solstitial points, Cancer and Capricorn. They are called the equinocial and solstitial circles, and divide the ecliptick into four equal parts. The points where they intersect the ecliptick are called the cardinal points. Harris.

Columnar. n. s. — Three or more crossed the car of night From pole to pole, traversing each column. Milton.

COMA. n. s. [κόψα.] — A morbid disposition to sleep; a lethargy.

COMAR. n. s. This word, which I have only met with in one place, seems to signify trestle; article from con, and mart, or market. By the same con. And carriage of the articles design'd, His fall to Hamlet. Shaksp. Hamlet.

COMATE. n. s. [con and mate.] Companion.

COMATOSE. adj. [from coma.] Lethargick; sleepy to a disease.

COMB in the end, and COMB in the beginning of names, seem to be derived from the British kum, which signifies a low situation. Gibson's Camden.

COMB, in Cornish, signifies a valley, and had the same meaning anciently in the French tongue.

COMB. n. s. [comb, Sax.; cum, Dut.] — 1. An instrument to separate and adjust the hair.

— Hair soft alluring locks. Milton.

I made an instrument in fashion of a comb, whose teeth, being in number six, were about an inch and a half broad, and the intervals of the teeth about two inches wide. Newton.

2. The top or crest of a cock, so called from its pectinated indentures. Cocks have great combs and spurs, bens little or none. Beaus.

— High was his comb, and coral-red withal. Dryden.

3. The cavities in which the bees lodge their honey. Perhaps from the same word which makes the termination of towns, and signifies hollow or deep. This in affairs of state, Employ'd at home, abides within the gate, To fortify the comb, to build the wall. Pope.

To COMB, v. a. [from the noun.] — 1. To divide, and clean, and adjust the hair with a comb.

— To comb your noddle with a three-leg'd stool. Shaksp.

Divers with us, that are grown grey, and yet would appear young, find means to make their hair black, by combing it, as they say, with a leaden comb, or the like. Beaus.

She has ribbons tied His tender neck, and comb'd his silken hide. Dryden's Eneid.

— There was a sort of engine, from which were extended twenty long poles, whereby the man-mountain comb'd his head. Swift.

— To lay any thing consisting of filaments smooth, by drawing through narrow interstices; as, to comb wool. Comb.

— BRUSH, n. s. [comb and brush.] A brush to clean combs.

COMB-MAKER. n. s. [comb and maker.] One whose trade is to make combs.

This wood is of use for the turner, engraver, carver, and comb-maker. Mortimer's Husbandry.

To COMBAT, v. n. [combattre, Fr.] — 1. To fight; generally in a duel, or hand to hand.

— Pardon me, I will not comb in my shirt. Shaksp.

— To act in opposition, as the acid and alkali combat.

To COMBAT, v. a. To oppose; to fight.

— Their opposers have changed the scene, and comb'd the opinions in their true shape. Drye's Dyety.
COMBAT, n.s. [from comb.]—to fight, to battle; duel; strife; opposition: generally between two, but sometimes it is used for battle. The brave Romans were all both of cruel monsters and monstrous men; all which, by private combats, they delivered the countries of Sidon. The noble combat that, 'twixt joy and sorrow, was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled. The combat now by courage must be tried. Druden.

COMBATANT, n.s. [combatant, Fr.]—1. He that fights with another; duellist; antagonist in arms. So found the mighty combatants, that bell! Grew dark at their floun.

2. A champion. When any of these combatants strips his terms of ambiguity, I shall think him a champion for knowledge. Locke.

COMBINE. n.s. [from comb.]—1. He whose trade is to disentangle wool, and lay it smooth for the spinner. Combinate. adj. [from combine.]—Be-trotted; promised; settled by compact. A word of Shakespeare. She lost a noble brother; with him the sinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry; with both, her combative husband, this well-securing Angel. Shakesp. Measure for Measure.

COMBINATION. n.s. [from combine.]—1. Union for some certain purpose; association; league. A combination is of private persons; a confederacy, of states or sovereigns. This coming cardinal The articles o'th' combination trew. As himself pleas'd. Shakespeare. Henry VIII. 2. It is now generally used in an ill sense: but was formerly indifferent. They aim to get all to their own will and power, under the disguises of holy combinations. King Charles.

3. Union of bodies, or qualities; commixture; conjunction. These natures, from the moment of their first combination, have been and are for ever inseparable. Boile. Resolution of compound bodies by fire, does not make them equal mankind as it divides the body; as upon the score of its making new compounds by new combinations. Boyle. Ingratitude is always in combination with pride, and hard-heartedness. South. 4. Copulation of ideas in the mind. They never suffer any ideas to be joined in their understandings, in any other or stronger conjunction, than what their own nature and correspondence give them. Locke.

5. Combination is used in mathematics, to denote the variation or alteration of any quantity of numbers, letters, sounds, or the like, in all the different manners possible. Thus the number of possible changes or combinations of the twenty-four letters of the alphabet, taken first two by two, then three by three, &c., amount to 1,391,724,288,875,229,990, 425,128,493,402,200, Chambers.

COMBINE. v. a. [combine, Fr. binos jungere, Lat.] 1. To join together. Let us not then suspect our happy state, As not secure to single or combine. Milton. Par. Lost. 2. To link in union. God, the best master of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one. Shakespeare. Compendium of the Tongue. 3. To agree; to accord; to settle by compact. My heart's dear love is set on his fair daughter; As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine, And all combine'd, save what thou must combine By holy marriage. Shakespeare. Romeo and Juliet. 4. To join words or ideas together: opposed to separate. To COMBINE. v. n. 1. To coalesce; to unite each with other, Used both of things and persons. Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends I' th' war, do grow together; grant that, and tell me In what peace each of them by th' other loses, That they combine not there? Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

2. To unite in friendship or design. Combine your hearts against the enemy; For these domestic sticking and particular frauds Are not the question here. Shakespeare. King Lear. You with your foes combine, And so esteem your own destruction to destruction. Dryden. Aurengzebe.

COMBLED. adj. [from comb.]—Wanting a comb or crest.

What is your crest a comb? — A comb'd cock, or Kate will be my hen. Shak. COMBUST. adj. [from comburo, combustum, Lat.] When a planet is not above eight degrees and a half distant from the sun, either before or after him, it is said to be combust, or in combustion. Harris. COMBUSTIBLE. adj. [combust, combustum, Lat.] Having the quality of catching fire; susceptible of fire. Charcoals, made out of the wood of oxycedar, are white, because their vapours are rather sulphurous than of any other combustible substance. Brown's Phil. Err. Sin is to the soul like fire to combustible matter; it assimilates before it destroys it. They are not stirred over with a little pentic- tional ashes; and will, as soon as they meet with combustible matter, flame out. Decay of Piety. The flame shall still remain; Nor, till the fuel perish, can decay, Its nature form'd on things combustible to prey. Dryden. COMBUSTIBILITY. n.s. [from combust.]—Aptness to take fire.

COMBUSTION. n.s. [French.] 1. Conflagration; burning; consumption by fire. The future combustion of the earth is to be ushered in and accompanied with violent impressions upon nature. Burnett. 2. Tumult; hurry; hubbub; bustle; hurriedly.

Mutual combustions, bloodshed, and wastes may enforce them, through very faintness, after the experience of so ends miseries. Hooker. Propelling, with angry terribleness, Of dire combustion, and confus'd events, New-hatch'd to th' woeful time. Shak. Macbeth. These cruel wars between the house of York and Lancaster, brought all England into an horrid combustion. Raleigh.

How much more of pew's, Army against army, numberless to raise Dreadful combustion warring, and disturb, Though not destroy, their happy native seat! Milton.

But say, from whence this new combustion springs? Dryden.

The wind moves in an inconceivable fury and combustion, and at the same time with an exact regularity. Addison's Guardian.

To COME. v. n. pret. came, participle coming, came, Roman, Sax. komen, Dut. komen, Germ.] 1. To remove from a distant to a nearer place; to arrive: opposed to go. And troubled blood through his pale face was seen To come and go, with tidings from the heart. Fairy Queen.

Cæsar will come forth to-day. Shak. Julius Cæsar. Coming to look on you, thinking you dead, I spake unto the crown as having sense. Shakespeare. Henry IV.

The colour of the king doth come and go, Between his purpose and his conscience. Shakespeare. King John.

The Christians having stood almost all the day in order of battle, in the sight of the enemy, evidently expecting when he should come forth to give them battle, returned at night unto their camp. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.

'Tis true, that since the senate's succour came, They grew more bold. Dryden's Taranuck Love. This Christian woman! All there the mischief comes. Pope's Royal Comed. 2. To draw near; to advance towards. By the prickling of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes. Shakespeare. Macb.

3. To move in any manner towards another; implying the idea of being received by another, or of tending towards another. The word always respects the place to the which the motion tends, not that place which it leaves; yet this meaning is sometimes almost evanescent and imperceptible.

I did hear The galloping of horse: who wasn't come by? Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner. Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice. As soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first fruits, 2 Chronicles. Knowledge is a thing of their own invention, or which they come to by reasoning. Barrow's Theory.

It is impossible to come near your lordship, at any time, without receiving some favour. Congreve.

None may come in view but such as are perished. Locke.

No perception of bodies, at a distance, may be accounted for by the motion of particles coming from them, and striking on our organs. Locke.

They take the colour of what is hid before them, and as soon lose and resign it to the next that happens to come in their way. Locke.

God has made the intellectual world harmonious and beautiful without us; but it will never come into our heads all at once. Locke.

4. To proceed; to pursue. Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life. 2 Sam. xvii, 11.

5. To advance from one stage or condition to another.
COM

Trust me, I am exceeding weary. —

Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attacked one of so high blood.

Shakespeare, Henry IV

Though he would after have turned his teeth
Upon a pear, yet he was taken order with it came to that.

Seditions tumults, and seditions fames, did more but as brother and sister; if it come to that, that the best actions of a state are taken in ill sense and traduced.

Bacon

His soldiers had skirmishes with the Numanians, so that the skirmish was like to come to a just battle.

Knolles

When it came to that once, they that had most flesh wished they had less. D'Estrange

Every new sprung passion is a part of the action, except we conceive nothing action till the players come to blows.

Dryden

The force whereby bodies cohere is very much greater when they come to immediate contact then when they are at ever so small a distance.

Cheyne's Philosophical Principles

6. To be brought to some condition either for better or worse, implying some degree of casualty: with to.

One saith to Aristippus, 'Is a strange thing why men should rather give to the poor than to philosophers. And let me speak to th' yet unknowing world, how these things can come about in eternity, when the human soul shall be as perfect as he himself now is.

Addison's Spectator.

I conclude, however it comes about, that things are not as they should be.

Swift

How comes it about, that, for above sixty years, affairs have been placed in the hands of new men.

Swinburne

13. To come about. To change; to come round.

The wind came about, and settled in the West for many days.

Bacon's New Atlantis.

On better thoughts, and my urg'd reasons,
They are come about, and won to the true side.

Bent Joneson.

19. To come again. To return.

There came water thereunto; and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived.

 Judges, xv. 19.

20. To come after. To follow.

If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

Matthew, xvi. 24.

21. To come at. To reach; to get within the reach of; to obtain; to gain.

Neither word nor scribe can come at conscience;
but it is above and beyond the reach of both.

Suckling.

Cats will eat and destroy your marrow, if they can come at it.

Evelyn's Calendar.

In order to come at a true knowledge of ourselves, we should consider how far we may deserve praise.

Addison.

Nothing makes a woman more esteemed by the opposition than chastity, and we always prize those most who are hardest to come at. Addis, Spect.

22. To come by. To obtain; to gain; to acquire. This seems an irregular and improper use, but has very powerful authorities.

Things most needful to preserve this life, are must prompt and easy for all living creatures to come by.

Love is like a child,
That longs for everything that he can come by.

Shakespeare

Thy case
Shall be my precedent; as thou go'st't Milan,
I'll come by Naples.

Shakespeare, Tempest.

Are you not ashamed to inform a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own.

Shakespeare, Henry IV

COM

The ointment wherewith this is done is made of divers ingredients, whereof the strangest and hardest to come by is the most of a dead man unburied.

Bacon's Natural History.

With that wicked eye.

A letter they come by.

From our king's majesty.

Denham.

He tells a sad story, how hard it was for him to come by the book of Ignatius.

Sellingfier.

Amidst your train this unseen judge will wait,
Examine how you come by all your state.

Dryden's Art of Raging.

23. To come in. To enter.

What, are you there? come in, and give some help.

Shakespeare

The simple ideas, united in the same subject, are as perfectly distinct as those that come in different senses.

Locke

24. To come in. To comply; to yield;
hold out no longer.

If the arch-relief Tyrole, in the time of these wars, should offer to come in and submit himself to her majesty, would you not have him received?

Spencer in Ireland.

25. To come in. To arrive at a port, or place of rendezvous.

At what time our second fleet, which kept the narrow seas, was come in and joined to our main fleet.

Bacon.

There was the Plymouth squadron now come in,
Which in the Straits last winter was abroad

Dryden.

26. To come in. To become modish; to be brought into use.

Then come rich clothes and graceful action in,
Then instruments were taught more moving notes.

Rosc逼man

Silken garments did not come in till late, and the use of them in men was often restrained by law.

Arbuthnot on Cats.

27. To come in. To be an ingredient;
to make part of a composition.

A generous contempt of that in which too many men place their happiness, must come in to lighten his character.

Atterbury.

28. To come in. To accrue from an estate, trade, or otherwise, as gain.

I had rather be mad with him than, when he had nothing but all that came into the harbour his;
than with you that, when you have so much coming in, think you have nothing.

Suckling.

29. To come in. To be gained in abundance.

Sweetheart, we shall be rich ere we depart.
If fairings come thus plentifully in.

Shakespeare

30. To come in for. To be early enough to obtain: taken from hunting, where the dogs that are slow get nothing.

Shape and beauty, worth and education, wit and understanding, gentle nature and agreeable humour, honour and virtue, were to come in for their share of such contracts.

If thinking is essential to matter, stocks and stales will come in for their share of privilege.

Collier on Thought.

One who had in their rear excluded them.
And could not for a taste o' t' flesh come in.

Licks the solid earth.

Tate's Journal.

The rest come in for subsidies, whereof they sunk considerable sums.

Swift.

31. To come in to. To join with; to bring help.

They marched to Wells, where the lord Audley, with whom their leaders had secret intelligence came to them; and was by them with great gladness and cries of joy, accepted as their general.

Bacon's Henry VII.

32. To come into. To comply with; to agree to.

The fame of their virtues will make men ready to come into every thing that is done for the public good.

Atterbury.
33. To come near. To approach; to resemble in excellence: a metaphor from races.

Temple. Locke.

34. To come of. To proceed, as a descendant from ancestors.

Of Ption's royal race my mother came.

Drayton's Aenid.

Self-love is so natural an infertility that it makes us partial even to those that come of us, as well as one's own self.

35. To come to. To proceed, as effects from their causes.

Will you please, Sir, be gone; I told you what would come of this.

Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

The issue comes of fulness of meat, especially in children, which causes an extension of the stomach.

This comes of judging by the eye, without consulting the reason. D'Euereigne.

My young master, whatever comes off, must have a life looked out for him by that the life is of age.

Locke.

36. To come off. To deviate; to depart from a rule or direction.

The figure of a part of each of the pyramids, but yet coming off and diluting more suddenly.

Bacon's Natural History.

37. To come off. To escape; to get free.

I knew the fool enchantor, through disguis'd; Enter'd the very lane-twigs of his spells; And yet came off.

Milton.

How thou wilt here come off, surmounts my reach.

If, upon such a fair and full trial, he can come off, he is the clear and innocent.

South.

Those that are in any signal danger imply his aid; and, if they come off safe call their deliverance a miracle.

Addison.

38. To come off. To end an affair; to take good or bad fortune.

Oh, bravely come we off; When there was a valley of our needless shot.

After such bloody war, we bid good-night.

Shakesp. King John.

Ever since Spain and England have had any thing to debate with one another, the English, upon all encounters, have come off with honour and advantage.

We must expect sometimes to come off by the worst, before we obtain the final conquest.

Calamity.

He oft, in such attempts as these, Come with his skill and his success.

Hudibras.

39. To come off from. To leave; to forbear.

To come off from these grave disquisitions, I would clear the point by one instance more.

Shakesp. on the Classics.

40. To come on. To advance; to make progress.

Things seem to come on apace to their former state.

Baron.

There was in the camp both strength and victory sufficient for the obtaining of the victory, if they would not protract the war until winter were come on.

Knolles's History of the Turks.

The sea come on, the south with mighty roar; Dispers'd and dash'd the rest upon the rocky shore.

Dryden.

So travellers, who waste the day, Noting at length the setting sun, They went their pack as nightcome on. Grenville.

41. To come on. To advance to combat.

The better fortune since discharged, the armies come fast on, and joined battle.

Knolles's History of the Turks.

Rhymer, come on, and do the worst you can; I fear not, nor yet a better man.

Drayton.

42. To come on. To thrive; to grow big; to grow.

Some powerful spirit instants the kites and ravens; To be thy nurses.

Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

It should seem by the experiments, both of the mall and of the roses, that they will come far faster on in water than in earth; for the nourishment is easier drawn out of water than out of soil.

Bacon's Natural History.

43. To come over. To convince an act.

They are perpetually teasing their friends to come over to them.

Addison's Spectator.

A man, in changing his side, not only makes himself hated by those he left behind, but is seldom heartily esteemed by those he comes over to.

Addison's Spectator.

44. To come over. To revolt.

Perhaps also the phlegmatic liquor, that is worst to come over in this analysis, may, at least as far as to part, be produced by the operation of the fire.

Boyle.

45. To come out. To be made publick.

Before his book came out, I had undertaken the answer of several others.

Stillingfleet.

I have been tedious; and, which is worse, it comes out from the first draft, and uncorrected.

Dryden.

46. To come out with. To give a vent to; to let fly.

Those great masters of chemical arcana must be provoked, before they will come out with them.

Boyle.

47. To come to. To appear upon trial; to be discovered.

It is indeed come out at last, that we are to look on the accidents of life.

The weight of the denarius, or the seventh of a Roman ounce, comes out sixty-two grains.

Boyle.

48. To come to with. To bring a vent to; to let fly.

Those great masters of chemical arcana must be provoked, before they will come out with them.

Boyle.

49. To come to. To consent or yield.

What is this, if my parson will not come to?

Sedg.

50. To come to. To amount to.

The emperor imposed so great a custom upon all corn to be transported out of Sicily, that the very customs came to as much as both the price of the corn and the freight together.

Knolles's History of the Turks.

You surely pretend to know More than your dividend comes to.

Hudibras.

Animals either feed upon vegetables immediately, or, which comes to the same at last, upon other animals which have fed upon them.

Woodward's Natural History.

He pays not this the least exaction, yet he must not be justified in finding you there.

Boyle.

51. To come to himself. To recover his senses.

He falls into sweet ecstasy of joy, wherein I shall leave him till he comes to himself.

Temple.

52. To come to pass. To be effected; to fall out.

It cometh, we grant many times to pass, that the works of men being the same, their drifts and posture therein are divers.

Hooker.

How cometh it to pass, that some liquors cannot pierce into man, but some bodies, which are easily pervious to other liquors? Boyle's Hist. of Ferments.

53. To come up. To grow out of the ground.

Over-wet, at sowing-time, with us breadth much dearth, insomuch as the corn now never cometh up.

Bacon.

If wars should mow them down never so fast, yet they may be suddenly supplied, and come up again.

Boyle.

54. Good intentions are the seeds of good actions; and every man ought to sow them, whether they come up or no.

Temple.

55. To come up. To come into use; as, a fashion comes up.

To amount to.

He prepares for a surrender, asserting that all this, and what will come up to him, is the quantity requisite.

Woodward's Natural History.

56. To come up to. To rise; to advance.

Whose ignorant credulity will not come up to 'th' truth.

Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

Considerations are, that may make us, if not come up to the character of those who rejoice in tribulations, yet at least satisfy the duty of being patient.

Watts's Sacrifice for Death.

57. To come up with. To overtake.

Three hundred horse, and three thousand foot English, commanded by Sir John Norris, were charged by Parma, coming upon them with seven thousand horse.

Bacon.

When old age comes upon him, it comes alone, bringing no other evil with it but itself.

South.

59. To come. In futurity; not present; to happen hereafter.

It serveth to discover that which is hid, as well as to foretell that which is to come.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

In time to come.

My waves shall wash the walls of mighty Rome.

Dryden.

Taking a lease of land for years to come, at the rent of one hundred pounds.

Locke.

60. Come is a word of which the use is various and extensive, but the radical signification of tendency hitherward is uniformly preserved. When we say he came from a place, the idea is of returning, or arriving, or becoming nearer; when we say he went from a place, we conceive simply departure, or removal to a greater distance.

The butter comes; it is passing from its former state to that which is desired; it is advancing towards us.

Come. [participle of the verb.]

The words were heard, and I am come to thy words.

Daniel.

Come. A participle of exhortation; be quick; make no delay.

Come, let us make our father drink wine.

Gen. xix. 22.

61. A participle of reconciliation, or incitement to it.

Come, come, at all I laugh he laughs no doubt; The only difference is, I dare laugh out.

Pepys.

Come. A kind of adverbial word for when it shall come; as, come Wednesday, when Wednesday shall come.

Come Will, when he died. Gay.

Come. n. s. [from the verb.] A sprout; a cut term.

That the malt is sufficiently dried, you may know both by the state, and also by the falling off of the come or sprout. Martineau's Husbrand.

62. A writer of comedies.

Seafeller with us to admire Plautus as a comedian, but Terence as a pure and elegant speaker.

Peacham on Poetry.
COMEDY. n. s. [comedia, Lat.] A dramatization representation of the lighter faults of mankind, with an intention to make vice and folly ridiculous; opposed to tragedy. Your humour's players are come to play a pleasant comedy. Shakespeare, Timon of Athens. A long, exact, and serious comedy; in every scene some moral let it teach. And, if it can, at once both please and preach. Pope.

COMELINESS. n. s. [from comely.] Grace; beauty; dignity. It signifies something less forcible than beauty, less elegant than grace, and less light than prettiness. A careless comeliness with comely care. Sidney. The service of God hath not such perfection of grace and comeliness, as when the dignity of the place doth concur. Hooker. They skilled not of the goodly ornaments of poetry, yet were sprinkled with some pretty flowers, which gave good grace and comeliness. Spenser on Ireland. Hardly shall you meet with man or woman so aged as to be disdained, but, if you will commend them for comeliness, nay and for youth too, shall take it well. South. There is great pulchritude and comeliness of proportion in the leaves, flowers, and fruits of plants. Ray on the Creation. A horseman's coat shall hide Thy taper shape, and comeliness of size. Prior.

COMELY. adj. [from become; or from coman, Sax. to please.] 1. Graceful; decent; having dignity or grace comely them sprinkled or look. Comeliness seems to be that species of beauty which excites respect rather than pleasure. If the principal part of beauty is in decent motion, no marvel though persons in years seem many times more amiable; for no youth can be comely but by pardon, and considering the youth as to make up the comeliness. Bacon. He that is comely, when old and decrepit, surely was very beautiful when he was young. South. Thou art a comely, young, and valiant knight. Dryden. 2. Used of things, decent; according to propriety. Oh, what a world is this, when what is comely Entombs him that bears it. Shak. As you like it. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these fellows ran over the streets, Crying confession. Shaksp. Cymbeline.

COMELY, adv. [from the adjective.] Handsomely; graciously. To ride comely, to play at all weapons, to dance comely, be very necessary for a courteously gentleman. Ascham's Schoolemaster.

COMER. n. s. [from come.] One that comes. Time is like a fashionable host, That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand; But with his arms outstretched, as he would fly, Graps in the comer: welcome ever smiles; And farewell goes out sighing. Shaksp. Troil. and Cress. Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair, As any comer. I have look'd it on yet, For my affection. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice. Plants move upwards; but, if the sap puts up too fast, it maketh a slender stalk, which will not support the weight; but, and therefore these are all swift and hasty comers. Bacon. It is natural to be kind to the last comer. L'Estrange. Now leave those joys, unmingling to thy age, To a fresh comer, and resign the stage. Dryden.

COMET. n. s. [cometa, Lat.] A bodily protonus of the planetary systems in the sun; appearing suddenly, and again disappearing; and, during the time of its appearance, moving through the supposedly orbit. The orbits of comets are ellipses, having one of their foci in the centre of the sun; and being very long and eccentric, they become invisible when in that part most remote from the sun. Comets, usually called blazing stars, are distinguished from other stars by a long train or tail of light, always opposite to the sun; hence arises a popular division of comets into three kinds, bearded, tailed, and bared comets; though the division rather relates to the different circumstances of the comet. Thus, the comet is said to be bearded, barbured, because of the lighted marches before it. When the light is westward of the sun, the comet is said to be tailed, because the train follows it; and when the sun and the comet are on the same side of the earth, the earth being between them, the train is hid behind the body of the comet, excepting a little that appears around it, in form of a border of hair, hence called corona. According to Sir Isaac Newton, the tail of a comet is a very thin vapour, emitted by the head or nucleus of the comet, ignited by the neighborhood of the sun and the comet; and this vapour is furnished by the atmosphere of the comet. The vapours of comets being thus dilated, spread, and diffused, may probably, by means of their gravity, be attracted down to the planets, and become intermingled with their atmosphere. The conservation of the water and moisture of the planets, comets seem absolutely requisite; from whose condensed vapours and exhalations all that moisture which is spent in vegetation and putrefactions, and turned into dry earth, may be resupplied and recruited; for all vegetables increase wholly from fluids, and turn, by putrefaction, into earth. Hence the quantity of dry earth must continually increase, and the moisture of the globe decrease, and at last he quite exhausted; evaporated, if the world were not continual supplied. And, I suspect, adds Sir Isaac, that the spirit which makes the finest, subtlest, and best part of our air, and which is absolutely requisite for the life and being of all things, comets principally from the comets. The same great author has computed that the sun's heat, in thirty years, would, to his heat with us at middsummer, as twenty-eight thousand to one; and that the heat of the body of the comet was near two thousand times as great as that of red-hot iron. He also calculates, that a globe of red-hot iron, of the dimensions of our earth, would scarce be cool in fifteen thousand years. If then the comet be supposed to cool a hundred times as fast as red-hot iron, yet, since its heat was two thousand times greater, supposing it of the biggerness of the earth, it would not be cool in a million of years. Trewav. Chambers. And wherefore praise this goodly company, As if they saw some wondrous monument, Some comet, or unusual prodigy? Shaksp. Timon of the Shrew. So such his follies glance as the fatal light. Of staring comets. Crashaw. I considered a comet, or in the language of the vulgar, a blazing star, as a sky rocket discharged by an hand that is similar: Addiwn's Guardian. Fierce meteors shoot their arbitrary light, And comets march with harmless honors bright. Prior. COMETIC. adj. [from comet.] Relating to a comet. Refractions of light are in the planetary and cometary systems, as in our globe. Cheyne's Phil. Prin.
COM

My lord leans wond'rously to discontent;
His comfortable temper has forsaken him;
He is much out of himself.
Shakesp. Timon.

What can promise him a comfortable appearance before his dreadful judge?
South.

3. Dispensing comfort; having the power of giving comfort.
He had no brother, which, though it be comfortable to kings to have, yet draweth the subjects eyes aside.
Bacon's Elocution.
The lives of many miserable men were saved, and a comfortable provision made for their subsistence.
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.

COMFORTABLY, adv. [from comfortable.] In a comfortable manner; with cheerfulness; without despair.
Upon view of the sincerity of that performance, hope comfortably and cheerfully for God's performance.
Hammend.

COMFORTER, n. s. [from comfort.] One that administers consolation in misfortunes; one that strengthens and supports the mind in misery or danger.
There was a prayer of Christ, which contained angels to be sent, as comforters in his agony.
Hooker.
The heavens have blest him with a goodly son,
To be a comforter when he is gone.
Shakesp. Richard III.

Nineveh is laid waste, who will bemoan her?
whence shall I seek comforters for thee?
Nehemiah, iii. 7.

2. The title of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity; the Paraclete.

COMFORTLESS, adj. [from comfort.] Wanting comfort; being without any thing to allay misfortune: used of persons as well as things.
Yet shall not my death be comfortless, receiving it by your sentence.
Sidney.
Where was case, y'were out with this act,
Deep, dark, uneasy, doleful, comfortles.
Fair Q. News fitting to the night.
Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.
Shakesp. King John.

On thy feet thou stood'st at last,
Though comfortless, as when a father mourns
His children, all in view destrey'd at once.
Milton.
That uncomfo'table comfortless dearth had not quite quenched the fire.
Spenser.

COME, n. s. [consolida, Lat. comfric, Fr.] A plant.
Mallet.

COMICAL, adj. [comicus, Lat.] 1. Rising mirth; merry; diverting.
The greatest resemblance of our author is in the familiar stile and pleasing way of relating comic adventures of that nature.
Dryden's Fables, Preface.
Something so comical in the voice and gestures;
that a man can hardly forbear being pleased.
Addison on Italy.

2. Relating to comedy; bettifying comedy; not tragical.
That all might appear to be knit up in a comical comedy; the Duke's daughter was afterwards joined in marriage to the Lord Lisle.
Hobart.
They deny it to be tragical, because its catastrophe is a wedding, which hath ever been accounted comical.
Gay.

COMICALLY, adv. [from comical.] 1. In such a manner as raises mirth.
2. In a manner bettifying comedy.

COMICALNESS, n. s. [from comical.] The quality of being comical; the power of raising mirth.

COMICK, adj. [comicus, Lat. comique, Fr.] 1. Relating to comedy; not tragick.
COM

That which is daily offered in the church, is a daily commemoration of that one sacrifice offered on the cross.

St. Austin believed that the martyrs, when the commemorations were made at their own sepulchres, did join their prayers with the churches, in behalf of those who put up their suplications to God.

Stillingfleet.

Commemoration was formerly made, with thank-giving, in honour of good men departed this world.

AYHAPPY, soft Fairfax.

A nobly; Taylor.

Taylor, singing, is worthy counterpoise
to the people.

A spring, Lord, or musical note, and of commending the others in voice.

Dryden's Dryden.

To send.

These the draw the chariot which Latious sends,
And the rich present to the prince commends.

Dryden's Amor.

To COMMEND. n. s. [from commende].

A body of the knights of Malta, belonging to the same nation.

Dusmend. n. s. [commandment, Fr.]

1. Mandate; command; order; precept.

They plainly require some special command for that which is exacted at their hands. Hooker.

Say, you chose him more after our commandment,

Than guided by your own affections.

Shakesp. Coriolanus.

By the easy commandment by God given to Adam, to forbear to feed therein, it pleased God to make trial of his obedience.

Raleigh's Hist. of the World.

2. Authority; coercive power.

I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. Shakesp. As you like it.

3. By way of enunciation, the precepts of the decalogue given by God to Moses.

And wrote upon the tables the words of the coventent, and the ten commandments.

Exod. xxvii. 9.

COMMANDER. n. s. [from command., Fr.]

A woman vested with supreme authority.

To prescribe the order of doing in all things, is a peculiar prerogative, which wisdom hath, as queen or sovereign commandress, over all other vices.

Be you commandress therefore, princess, queen
Of all our forces, be thy word a law.

Fairfax.

COMMUNAL. adj. [from com and mat-teria.]

Consisting of the same matter with another thing.

The bees in birds are commensatical with teeth.

Bacon.

The body adjacent and ambient is not commen-tational, but merely heterogenous towards the body to be preserved.

Bacon.

COMMENIALITY. n. s. [from commential].

Resemblance to something in its matter.

COMELINE. n. s. [comelina, Lat.]

A plant.

Miller.

COMMENORABLE. adj. [from commen-orate.] Deserving to be mentioned with honour; worthy to be kept in remembrance.

To COMMEMORATE. r. a. [con and me-more, Lat.] To preserve the memory by some public act; to celebrate something.

Such is the divine mercy which we now commemorate; and, if we commemorate it, we shall rejoice in the Lord.

Fiddes.

COMMEMORATION. n. s. [from commen-orate.] An act of public celebration; solemnization of the memory of any thing.

COM

Signior Antonio

Commends him to you.

Fare I open his letter.

I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Shakesp. Merchant of Venice.

5. To produce to favourable notice.

The chorus was only to give the young lad, an occasion of entertaining the French king with a vocal musicant, and of commending his own voice

Dryden's Dryden.

To send.

These the draw the chariot which Latious sends,
And the rich present to the prince commends.

Dryden's Amor.

COMMEND. n. s. [from commende.]

A nobly; Taylor.

Taylor, singing, is worthy counterpoise
to the people.

A spring, Lord, or musical note, and of commending the others in voice.

Dryden's Dryden.

To send.

These the draw the chariot which Latious sends,
And the rich present to the prince commends.

Dryden's Amor.

To COMMEND. r. a. [commende, Lat.]

1. To represent as worthy of notice, regard, or kindness; to recommend.

After Barbarous was arrived, it was known how effectually the chief lassus had commended his to Solymon.

Knolles Hist.

Among the objects of knowledge, two especially commendeth themselves, to our contemplation;
the knowledge of God, and the knowledge of our selves.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

Vain-glory is a principle I commend to no man.

Bacon.

2. To deliver up with confidence.

To thee I do commend my watchful soul,
Lest I fall into the winds of mine eyes;

Sleeping and waking; O defend me still.

Shakesp. Richard III.

Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit.

3. To praise; to mention with approbation.

Who is Silvia? What is she,

That all our swains commend her?

Shakesp.

Hole, fair, and wise she is.

Old men do most exceed in this point of folly, commending the days of their youth they scarce remembered, at least well understood not.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

He lov'd my worthless rhymes; and, like a friend,

Would find out something to commend. Cowley.

Historians commend Alexander for weeping
when he read the actions of Achilles.

Dryden's Virgilius. Enid, Dedication.

Each finding, like a friend,

Something to blame, and something to commend.

Shakesp.

4. To mention by way of keeping in memory; to recommend to remembrance.
COMMENDEMYARY, adj. [from commend.]
Favourably representative; containing praise.

It doth much add to a man's reputation, and is like perpetual letters commendatory, to have good forms for an adorn him, it almost sufficiently to despise them. Bacon's Essays.

We bestow the flourish of poetry on those commendatory conceits, which popularly set forth the eminency of this creature. Bacon's Fam'd. Err.

If I can think that neither he nor you despise me, it is a greater honour to me, by far, than all the house of lords writ commendatory verses upon me.

Pope

COMMENDEYER, n. s. [from commend.]
Praise.

Such a concurrence of two extremes, by most of the same commenders and disprovers. Wotton.

COMMENSALITY. n. s. [from commensalar-is, Lat.] Fellowship of table; the custom of eating together.

They being enjoined and prohibited certain foods, thereby to avoid communions with the Gentiles, upon pronunciouss commensality. Brown's Fam'd. Err.

COMMENSURABILITY. n. s. [from commensur-able.] Capacity of being compared with another, as to the measure; or of being measured by another. Thus an inch and a yard are commensurable, a yard containing a certain number of inches; the diameter and circumference of a circle are incommensurable, not being reducible to any common measure. Proportion.

Some place the essence thereof in the proportion of parts, conceiving it to consist in a comedy commensurability of the whole unto the parts, and the parts between themselves. Brown.

COMMENSURABLE. adj. [con and men-sur, Lat.] Reducible to some common measure; as a yard and a foot are measured by an inch.

COMMENSURABleness. n. s. [from commensurable.] Commensurability; proportion.

There is no commensurableness between this object and a created understanding, yet there is a congruity and commensurability.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

To COMMENSURATE. v. a. [con and men-sur, Lat.] To reduce to some common measure.

That division is not natural, but artificial, and by agreement, as the aptest terms to commensurate the longitude of places. Brown's Fam'd. Err.

COMMENSURATE. adj. [from the verb.]
1. Reducible to some common measure.

They permitted no intelligence between them, other than by the edification of some organ equally commensurate to soul and body. Government of the Tongue.

2. Equal; questionable to each other.

Is our knowledge adequately commensurate with the nature of things? Glasstown's Spectus.

Those who are persuaded that they shall continue for ever, cannot choose but after a happiness commensurate to their duration. Tilton.

Nothing commensurate to the desires of human nature, on which it could fix as its ultimate end, without being carried on with any further desire. Roger's Sermons.

Matter and gravity are always commensurate.

COMMENSURATELY. adv. [from commensurate.] With the capacity of measuring, or being measured by some other thing.

We are constrained to make the day serve to measure the year as well as we can, though not commensurately to each year; but by collecting the portion of days in several years, till the amount come to an even day.

COMMENSURATION. n. s. [from commen-surate.] Proportion; reduction of some things to some common measure.

A body over great, or over small, will not be thrown so far as a body of a middle size as that, if it move over the proportion between the bodies moved and the force, to make it move well. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

All things are commensurated, or proportioned, of one thing to another. South.

To COMMENT, v. n. [commentor, Lat.]
1. To annotate; to write notes upon an author; to expound; to explain; with upon before the thing explained.

Such are thy secrets, which my life makes good, and comments on thee; for in every thing, Thy words do find me out, and parallels bring; And in another make me understand. Heretet.

Critics having first taken a liking to one of these poets, proceeded to comment on him, and illustrate him. Dryden's Juvenal, Dedication.

They have contended themselves only to comment upon those texts, and make the best copies they could of them. Tindal.

Indeed I hate that any man should be idle; while I must translate and comment. Pope.

2. To make remarks; to make observations.

Enter his chamber, view his lifeless corps, And comment then upon his sudden death.

Shakespeare, Henry VI.

COMMENT, n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Annotations on an author; notes; explanation; exposition; remarks.

Adam came into the world a philosopher, which appeared by his writing the nature of things upon their names; he could view essences in themselves, and read forth with the comment of their respective properties. South's Sermons.

All the volumes of philosophy, With all their comments, never could invent So politic an instrument. Prior.

Properly exercised, the voice is a kind of comment to what it utters. Addison's Spectator.

Still, with itself compar'd, his text persue; And let your comment be the Mantine muse. Pope.

2. Remarks; observation.

In such a case as this, it is not meet That every nice offence should bear its comment. Addison.

Shakespeare.

Forgive the comment that my passion made,
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind.

Shakespeare, King John.

All that is behind will be by way of comment on that part of the church of England's charity, Hammond's Fundamentals.

COMMEMENTARY. n. s. [commentarius, Lat.]
1. An exposition; book of annotations or remarks.

In religion, scripture is the rule; and the church's universal practice, the best commentary. King Charles.

2. Memoir; narrative in familiar manner.

Veree, in a private commentary which he wrote of that service, testified that eight hundred were slain. Bacon.

They shew still the ruins of Caesar's wall, that reached eighteen miles in length, as he has declared it in the first book of Commentaries. Addison in Italy.

COMMENTSATOR, n. s. [from comment.]
Expositor, annotator.

I have made such expositions of my authors, as no commentator will for give me. Dryden.

Some of the commentators tell us, that Marya was a lawyer who had lost his cause. Addison on Italy.

Galen's commentator tells us, that bitter substances engender choler, and burn the blood, Arbozaut on Aliments.

No commentator can more sillily pass O'er a learn'd unintelligible place. Pope.

COMMENTER, n. s. [from comment.] One that writes comments; an explainer; an annotator.

Silly as any commentator goes by Hard words or sense. Donne.

COMMENTSOUS. adj. [commentitus, Lat.] Invented; fictitious; imaginary.

It is easy to draw a parallelism between that ancient and this modern nothing, and make good its resemblance to that commentsious vanity. Glasstown's Spectus.

COMMERCER. n. s. [commercium, Lat.] It was ancienly accented on the last syllable.

1. Intercourse; exchange of one thing for another; interchange of anything; trade; traffic.

Places of publick resort being thus provided, our repair is especially for mutual conference, and, as it were, commerce to be held between God and us. Hooker.

How could communities, Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities, Peaceful commerce from divisible shores.

By what degrees stand in authentic place? Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida.

Intricled ships shall sail to quick commerce, By which remotest regions are allied.

Which make one city of the universe, Where some may gain, and all may be supplied. Dryden.

These people had not any commerce with the other known parts of the world. Tilton.

In any country, that hath commerce with the rest of the world, it is almost impossible now to be without the use of silver coins. Locke.

2. Common or familiar intercourse.

Good-nature, which consists in overlooking of faults, is to be exercised only in doing ourselves kindness in the ordinary commerce and occasions of life. Addison.

To COMMERCE, v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To traffic.

Eckel in the description of Tyre, and of the exceeding trade that it had with the East, as the only mart town, recites how people with whom they commerced, and also what commodities every country yielded. Raleigh.

When they might not converse or commerce with any civil men; whether they should but fly into the woods and mountains, and there live in a wild manner. Sir J. Davies.

2. To hold intercourse with.

Come, but keep thy window state, With even step and running sail, And looks commercing with the skies, Thy strap soul sitting in thine eyes. Milton.

COMMERCIAL. adj. [from commerce.]
Relating to commerce or traffick.

To COMMIGRATE, v. n. [con and migro, Lat.] To remove in a body, or by consent, from one country to another.

COMMIGRATION. n. s. [from commigrate.] A removal of a large body of people from one country to another.

Both the inhabitants of that, and of our world, lost all memory of their migration hence. Woodward's Nat. Hist.
COMMINATION. n. s. [commination, Lat.] 1. A threat; a denunciation of punishment, or of vengeance. Some parts of knowledge God has thought fit to seclude from us; to fence them not only by precept and commination, but with difficulty and impossibilities. Deac of Pity. 2. The recital of God's threatenings on stated days. COMMINATORY. adj. [from commination.] Denunciatory; threatening. To COMMINGE. v. a. [commisco, Lat.] To mix into one mass; to unite intimately; to mix; to blend. 3. Best are those, whose blood and judgment are so well comminoned, that they are not a pipe for fortune's fipple. To sound what stop she please. Shaksp. Hamlet. To COMMINGE. v. n. To unite one with another. Dissolutions of gum tragacanth and oil of sweet almonds do not comminge, the oil remaining on the top till they be stirred. Bacon's Physical Her. COMMUNIBLE. adj. [from commincte.] Frangible; reducible to powder; susceptible of pulverization. The best diamonds are comminable; and are so far from breaking hammers, that they submit unto pestilition, and resist not any ordinary pestle. Brown. To COMMINUTE, v. a. [comminuon, Lat.] To grind; to pulverize; to break into small parts. Parchment, skins, and cloth drink in liquors, though themselves be entire bodies, and not comminuted, as sand and ashes. Bacon's Nat. Hist. COMMUNICATION. n. s. [from commincte.] 1. The act of grinding into small parts; pulverization. The jaw in men, and animals furnished with grinders, hath an oblique or transverse motion, necessary for comminution of the meat. 2. Extreme; extreme action. When the steel of the steel doth only make a comminution, and a very rapid whirling and melting of some particles; but that idea of flame is wholly in us. Bentley. 2. Attenuation. Causes of fixation are the even spreading of the spirits and tangible parts, the closeness of the tangible parts, and the jeminess or extreme comminution of spirits; of which the first may be joined with a nature liquefiable. Bacon. COMMISERABLE. adj. [from commiscerate.] Worthy of compassion; pitiable; such as must excite sympathy or sorrow. It is the sinfulness of the world in the world to destitute a plantation once in forwardness; and for these, the dishearten, it is the guiltiness of blood of many commiserable persons. Bacon's Essays. This was the end of this noble and commiserable person, Edward eldest son to the duke of Clarence. Bacon's Henry VII. To COMMISSARIE. v. a. [from com and misereor, Lat.] To pity; to look on with compassion; to compassion. Then we must those, who groan beneath the weight of age, disease, or want, commiserate. Denham. We should commiserate our mutual ignorance, and endeavour to remove it. Locke. COMMISERATION. n. s. [from commiscerate.] Pity; compassion; tenderness; or concern for another's pains.

These poor seduced creatures, whom I can neither speak nor think of but with much commiseration and pity. Hacket. Live, and hereafter say A mad man's mercy bade thee run away.—— I do defy thy commiseration, and apprehend thee for a rascal. Shaksp. Romeo and Juliet. God knows with how much commiseration, and solicitous anxiety, I carried on that business, that I might neither encourage the rebels, nor discourage the protestants. King Charles. She ended weeping; and her lovely plight immovable, till peace, obtained from full guard and deplor'd, in Adam brought Commisarion. Milton's Par. Lost. From you their estate may expect effectual comfort; there are none from whom it may not deserve commiseration. Sprat. No where a lover beggars appear to charm up commissariation, yet no where is there greater charity. Grant's Bills of Mortality. I prevailed with myself to go and see him, partly out of commiseration and partly out of curiosity. Swift. COMMISARIARY. n. s. [commisserarius, low Lat.] 1. An officer made occasionally for a certain purpose; a delegate; a deputy. 2. Is a title of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, appertaining to such as exercises spiritual jurisdiction (at least so far as his commission permits) in places of the diocese so far distant from the chief city, as the chancellor cannot call the subjects. Covel. The commissaries of bishops have authority only in some certain places of the diocese, and in some certain cases of the jurisdiction limited to the bishop's commission. Aspith. 3. An officer who draws up lists of the numbers of an army, and regulates the procurement and conveyance of provision or ammunition. But is it thus you English bards compose? With Ratsick lays the Inscipt Spirit? And when you should your heroes deeds rehearse Give us a commissary's list in verse? Prior. COMMISARIISHIP. n. s. [from commissary.] The office of a commissary. A commissary is not grantable for life, so as to bind the titles of the jurisdiction though it should be confirmed by the dean and chapter. Aspith's Parergon. COMMISSION. n. s. [commisso, low Lat.] 1. The act of entrusting any thing. 2. A trust; a warrant by which any trust is held, or authority exercised. Commission is the warrant, or letters patent, that all men exercising jurisdiction, either ordinary or extraordinary, have for their power. Covel. Omission to do what is necessary Seals a commission to a blank of danger. Shaksp. Troilus and Cressida. The subjects grief Comes through commissions, which compel from us. The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay. Shaksp. Henry VII. He led our powers: Bore the commission of my son, and good person; Which the immediate well stood up. And call itself your brother. Shaksp. King Lear. He would have been fully acquainted with the nature and extent of their offices, and so he joins commission with instruction by one he conveys power, by the other knowledge. South. 3. A warrant by which a military officer is constituted.

Solyman, filled with the vain hope of the conquering Persia, gave out his commission into all parts of his empire, for the raising of a mighty army. Knolles's History of the Turks. I was made a colonel; though I gained my commission by the horse's virtues, having bought my six-star gate. Dreher. He for his son a gay commission buys, Who drinks, whores, debts, and in a duel dies. Pope. 4. Chief; a mandate; office; employment. It was both a strange commission, and a strange obedience to a commission, for men, in the midst of their own blood, and being so furiously assailed, to hold their hands contrary to the laws of nature and necessity. Bacon's War with Spain. Such commission from above I have receiv'd, to answer thy desire Of knowledge within bounds. Milton's Par. Lost. At his command the storms invade The winds by his commission blow Till a nod he bids them cease. Dryden. He bore his great commission in his look But sweetly temper'd awe, and softness all be spoke. Dryden. 5. Act of commission a crime; perpetration. Sins of commission are distinguished in theology from sins of omission. Every commission of sin introduces into the soul a certain degree of hardness. Swift's Sermons. He indulges himself in the habit of known sin, whether commission of something which God hath forbidden, or the omission of commission, or from the want of due performance. Roger's Sermons. 6. A number of people joined in a trust or office. 7. The state of which is entrusted to a number of joint officers; as, The broad seal was put into commission. 8. In commerce. The order by which a factor trades for another person. To COMMISSION. r. a. [from commission.] To empower; to appoint. To send with mandate or authority. The peace polluted thus, a chosen band He first commissons to the Latin land. In threat'ning embassy. Dryden's Enid. To COMMISSIONATE. r. a. [from commission.] To commission; to empower; not in use. As he was thus sent by his father, so also were the apostles solemnly commissioned by him to preach to the Gentile world, who with all slippery industry and resolute suffering pursued the charge; and sure this is competent evidence, that the design was of the most weighty importance. COMMISSIONER. n. s. [from commission.] One who is included in a warrant of authority. A commissioneer is one who hath commissions, as letters patents, or other lawful warrant, to execute any publick office. Covel. One article they stood upon, which I with my commissioneers have agreed upon. Sir丘. These commissioneers came into England, with whom covenants were concluded. Heyward. The archbishop was made one of the commissioneers of the treasury. Clarke. Suppose itinerant commissioneers to inspect, throughout the kingdom, into the conduct of men in office, with respect to morals and religion, as well as abilities. Swift. Like are their merits, like rewards they share That shines a counsel, this commissioneer. Pope's Dunciad. COMMISSURE. n. s. [commisso, Lat.] Joint; a place where one part is joined to another.
COM

All these inducements cannot counteract the inconvenience of distracting the commissaries with so many strokes of the chisel.

Wotton's Architecture.

This animal is covered with a strong shell, jointed like armour by four transverse commissures in the middle of the body, connected by tough membranes.

Ray on the Creation.

To COMMIT. v. a. [committo, Lat.]

1. To intrust; to give in trust; to put into the hands of another.

It is for your health, thus to commit your weak condition to the raw, cold morning.

Shakesp. Henry IV.

2. To put in any place to be kept safe.

They who are desirous to commit to memory, might have ease.

Shakesp. 2 Mac. ii. 25.

My muse controls' t
By servile awe! Born free, and not to be bold! At least I'll dig a hole within the ground,
And to the trusty earth commit the sound.

Dryden's Persius.

3. To send to prison; to imprison.

Here comes the noblemah that committed the prince, for striving him against Baldolph.

Shakesp. King Lear.

As keeping young fellow committed tyranny
With a brisk gamesome lass.

L'Engrange.

For son and father to take different sides;
Then lands and tenements commit no treason.

Dryden's Heroines.

5. To put together for a contest; a Latinism.

How becomingly does Philostrus exercise his office, and seasonably commit the opponent with the reponderent, as a long practised moderator.

Milton's Divine Dial.

6. To place in a state of hostility or ungruity; a Latinism.

Harry, whose tuneful and well-measured song First taught our English music how to span Words with just note and accent, not to sound With Milas's ears, committing short and long.

Milton.

COMMITMENT, n. s. [from commit.]

1. Act of sending to prison; imprisonment.

It did not appear by any new examinations or commitments, that any other person was discovered or impeached.

Bacon.

They were glad to compound for his bare commitment to the Tower, whence he was within five days enlarged.

Clarendon.

I have been considering, ever since my commitment, whether it might be proper to deliver upon this occasion.

Suffr.

2. An order for sending to prison.

COMMITTEE. n. s. [from commit.]

Those to whom the consideration or ordering of any matter is referred, either by some court to whom bills or complaints are brought by consent of parties. As in parliament, after a bill is read, it is either agreed to and passed, or not agreed to; or neither of these, but referred to the consideration of some appointed by the house to examine it farther, who thereupon are called a committee.

Cowell.

Manchester had orders to march thither, having a committee of the parliament with him, as there was another committee of the Scottish parliament always in that army; there being also now a committee of both kingdoms residing at London, for carrying on the war.

Clarendon.

All corners were filled with, canvassers, confusion, families, and watchmen, serving every other to their ends of revenge, or power, or profit; and these committees men and soldiers were pessed with this covenant.

Walton.

COMMITTEE, n. s. [commit.]

Perpetrator; he commits.

Such an one makes a man not only a partaker of other men's sins, but a receiver of the whole guilt to himself, yet so as to leave the committer as full of guilt as before.

South.

COMMITTEE, adj. [from commit.]

 LIABLE to be committed.

Besides the mistakes committed in the solary compute, the difference of chronology disturbs his computes.

Brown.

To COMMIT. v. a. [committeo, Lat.]

To mingle; to blend; to mix; to unite with things in one mass.

A grain of gold dissolved in aqua regia, with a dram of copper in aqua fortis committed have a great colour.

Bacon.

I have written against the spontaneous generation of frogs and the clouds; or, on the earth, out of dust and rain water committed.

Ray on the Creation.

It's manifest, by this experiment, that the committer's impressions of all the colours do stir up and beget a sensation of white; that is, that whiteness is compounded of all the colours.

Newton's Opticks.

COMMISSION, n. s. [from commis.]

Mixture; incorporation of different ingredients.

Were thy communion Greek and Trojan, so That thou couldst say, this hand is Grecian all, And this is Trojan.

Shakesp. Troilus and Cressida.

COMMISSION, n. s. [from commis.]

Mixture; incorporation; union of various substances in one mass.

Some species there be of middle and participatory natures, that is, of birds and beasts, as bats, and some few others, so confounded and set together, that we cannot define the beginning or end of either; there being a commissione of both in the whole, rather than adaption or cement of the one unto the other.

COMMISSure, n. s. [from commiss.]

The act of mingling; the state of being mingled; incorporation; union in one mass.

In the commissure of that which is more oily or sweet, such bodies are least apt to provoke, the air working little upon them.

Bacon's New Inst. 2.

The mass formed by mingling different things; composition; compound.

Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in the bud, Or angels veild in clouds; are roses blazoned, Dismask'd, their damask sweet commissure shown.

Shakesp.

My love and fear glew'd many friends to thee; And now I fall, thy tough commissure melts, Impairing Henry, strong enharg misprision York.

Shakesp.

There is scarcely any rising but by a commissure of good and evil arts.

Bacon.

In the circumscriptions and respect of religion and state intermixed together in their commissure, will better become a royal history, or a cancellable, than a single life.

Wotton.

COMMÂDE, n. s. [Fr.]

The head-dress of women.

Let them reflect how they would be affected, should they meet with a man on horseback, in his breeches and jack-boots, dressed up in a commode and a nightcap!

Spectator.

She has contrived to show her principles by the setting of her commode; so that it will be impossible for any woman that is dissaffected to be in the fashion.

Addison's Freethinker.

She, like some pensive statesman, walks deare,
And sighs, and sighs, to make destruction sure;
Or under high commodes, with books erect,
Barecoat'd devours, in gaudy colours deck'd.

Gainsville.

COMMODOUS. adj. [commode, Lat.]

1. Convenient; suitable; accommodate to any purpose; fit; proper; free from hardship or unpleasantness.

Such a place cannot be commodious to live in; for being so near the moon, it had been too near the sun.

Raleigh's History.

To that recess, commodous for surprise,
When purple light shall next susfuse the skies,
With me repair.

Pope's Odyssey.

2. Useful; suited to wants or necessities.

If they think we ought to prove the ceremonies commodious, they do greatly deceive themselves.

Hooke.

Baccus had found out the making of wine, and many things else commodious for mankind.

Religious History of the World.

The gods have done their part,
By sending this commodious plague.

Dryden's Oedipus.

Maro's muse,
Thrice sacred muse, commodious precepts gives,
Instructive to the swains.

Philips.

COMMODOUSLY. adv. [from commodious.]

1. Conveniently.

At the large foot of an old hollow tree,
In a deep cave seated commodiously,
His ancient and hereditary house,
There dwelt a good substantial country mouse.

Cowley.

2. Without distress.

We need not fear To pass commodiously this life, sustaine'd By him with many comforts, till at last
In dust, our final rest and native house.

Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Suitably to a certain purpose.

Wisdom may have framed end, and the same thing to serve commodiously for divers ends.

Hooker.

Galen, upon the consideration of the body, challenges any one to find how the least fibre might be more commodiously placed for use or conveniency.

South's Sermons.

COMMODOUSNESS, n. s. [from commodius.] Convenience; advantage.

The place required many circumstances; as the situation near the sea, for the commodiousness of an intercourse with England.

Bacon.

Of cities, the greatness and riches increase according to the commodiousness of their situation in fertile countries, or upon rivers and havens.

Temple.

COMMODITY. n. s. [commoditas, Lat.]

1. Interest; advantage; profit.

They know, that however many men may seek their own commodiety, yet, if this were done with injury unto others, it was not to be suffered.

Hooker.

Commodity, the bliss of the world,
The world, which of itself is poised well,
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
That deters so many from the path of virtue, Makes it take head from all indigence,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent.

Shakesp. King John.
COMMODITY. n. s. [probably corrupted from the Spanish commandador.] The captain who commands a squadron of ships; a temporary admiral.

COMMON. n. s. [communis, Lat.]

1. Belonging equally to more than one.

2. Having no possessor or owner.

3. Vulgar; mean; not distinguished by any excellence; often seen; easy to be had; of little value; not rare; not scarce.

4. Public; general; serving the use of all.

5. Of no rank; mean; without birth or descent.

6. Frequent; usual; ordinary.

7. Prostitute.

COMMODITY. n. s. [from commune, Fr.]

1. The common people; the people of the lower rank.

2. Convenience; particular advantage.

3. Wares; merchandise; goods for traffic.

4. Commodities are valuable, valuable by the common measure.

5. Of money, in the commerce and traffic of mankind; the principal use is that of saving the commutation of more bulky commodities.

6. To have a present sum. Shakespeare, Merch. of Venice.

7. Commodities are susceptible of a particular kind of sacrifice. Locke.

8. In a common way.

9. To have a right to others in some common ground.

10. Common Law, contains those customs and usages which have, by long prescription, obtained in this nation the force of laws. It is distinguished from the statute law, which owes its authority to acts of parliament.

11. Common Pleas. The king's court now held in Westminster Hall, but anciently movable. Bacon observes, that till Henry III. granted the magna carta, there were but two courts, the exchequer, and the king's bench, so called because it followed the king; but, upon the grant of that charter, the court of common pleas was erected, and settled at Westminster. All civil causes, both real and personal, are, or were, formerly tried in this court, according to the strict laws of the realm and Fortescue represents it as the only court for real causes. The chief judge is called the lord chief justice of the common pleas, and he is assisted by three or four associates, created by letters patent from the king.

12. Commonable. adj. [from common.] What is held in common.

13. Much good land might be gained from forests and chases, and from other commannable places, so as there be always held that the commoners may have no injury.

14. Commonage. n. s. [from common.] The right of feeding on a common; the joint right of using any thing in common with others.

COMMUNALITY. n. s. [from commune, Fr.]

1. The common people; the people of the lower rank.

2. Convenience; particular advantage.

3. There comes into her head certain verses, which, if she had pleased to employ them, she would have requisited for a reaction to the other. Sidney.

4. She demanded leave, not to lose this long-sought-for commodity of time, to ease her heart. Sidney.

5. Travellers turn out of the highway, drawn either by the commodity of a foot-path, or the delicacy or the freshness of the fields.

6. Ben Jonson's Discoveries. It had been difficult to make such a node where there had not been a nature, and as such a commodity as the case of Puzzuola, which immediately hurries in the water.

7. Addison on Italy.

8. [In grammar.] Such verbs as signify both action and passion are called common: as, asperrimo desipe, or am desipit, and also such nouns as are both masculine and feminine, as parvis.

9. Common. n. s. [from the adjective.]

10. An open ground equally used by many persons.

11. Then take we down his load, and turn him off. Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, and grace in commons. Shaksp. Julius Cæsar.

12. Is not the separate property of a thing the great cause of its endurance? Does any one respect a common as much as he does his garden? South.

13. Common. adv. [from the adjective.]

14. I am more than common tall. Shaks. As you like it.

15. In common.

16. Equally to be participated by a certain number.

17. By making an explicit consent of every commoner necessary to anyone's appropriating to himself any part of what is given in common, children, or servants could not eat the meat which their father or master had provided for them in common, without assigning to every one his peculiar part.

18. Locke.

19. Equally with another; indiscriminately.

20. In a work of this nature it is impossible to avoidparallels; it having in common with dictionaries, and books of antiquities.

22. To Commons, v. n. [from the noun.]

23. To have a joint right with others in some common ground.

24. Common Law, contains those customs and usages which have, by long prescription, obtained in this nation the force of laws. It is distinguished from the statute law, which owes its authority to acts of parliament.

25. Common Pleas. The king's court now held in Westminster Hall, but anciently movable. Bacon observes, that till Henry III. granted the magna carta, there were but two courts, the exchequer, and the king's bench, so called because it followed the king; but, upon the grant of that charter, the court of common pleas was erected, and settled at Westminster. All civil causes, both real and personal, are, or were, formerly tried in this court, according to the strict laws of the realm and Fortescue represents it as the only court for real causes. The chief judge is called the lord chief justice of the common pleas, and he is assisted by three or four associates, created by letters patent from the king.

26. Commonable. adj. [from common.] What is held in common.

27. Much good land might be gained from commonsable places, so as there be always held that the commoners may have no injury.

28. Bacon on Villages.

29. To Commons. v. a. To reduce to general heads.

30. I do not apprehend any difficulty in collecting and commonplaceing an universal history from the historians.

31. Commodities are valuable, valuable by the common measure.

32. Of money, in the commerce and traffic of mankind; the principal use is that of saving the commutation of more bulky commodities.

33. To have a present sum. Shakespeare, Merch. of Venice.

34. Commodities are susceptible of a particular kind of sacrifice. Locke.

35. In a common way.

36. To have a right to others in some common ground.

37. Common Law, contains those customs and usages which have, by long prescription, obtained in this nation the force of laws. It is distinguished from the statute law, which owes its authority to acts of parliament.

38. Common Pleas. The king's court now held in Westminster Hall, but anciently movable. Bacon observes, that till Henry III. granted the magna carta, there were but two courts, the exchequer, and the king's bench, so called because it followed the king; but, upon the grant of that charter, the court of common pleas was erected, and settled at Westminster. All civil causes, both real and personal, are, or were, formerly tried in this court, according to the strict laws of the realm and Fortescue represents it as the only court for real causes. The chief judge is called the lord chief justice of the common pleas, and he is assisted by three or four associates, created by letters patent from the king.

39. Commonable. adj. [from common.] What is held in common.

40. Much good land might be gained from forests and chases, and from other commannable places, so as there be always held that the commoners may have no injury.

41. Commonage. n. s. [from common.] The right of feeding on a common; the joint right of using any thing in common with others.
COMMONPLACE-BOOK. n. s. A book in which things to be remembered are ranged under general heads.

I turned to my commonplace-book, and found his case under the word corruptions. Trubner.

COMMONS. n. s. 1. The vulgar; the lower people; those who inherit no honours. Little office.

The hateful commons will perform for us; except, like ears, to tear us all in pieces. Shakesp. Rich. II.

These three to kings and chiefs their scenes display.

The rest before the ignoble commons play.

Dryden’s Fables.

The gods of greater nations dwell around,

And, on the right and left, the palace bound;

The commons where they cast: the nobler sort,

With winding doors wide open, front the court.

2. The lower house of parliament, by which the people are represented, and of which the members are chosen by the people.

My good lord,

How now for mitigation of this ill

Unrest by the these majesty?

Incline to, or no? Shakesp. Henry VI.

In the house of commons many gentlewomen, unsatisfied of his guilt, durst not condemn him.

King Charles.

3. Food; fare: diet: so called from colleges, where it is eaten in common.

He painted himself of a dove colour and took his garments with the pigeons. Dryden’s Fables.

Weil while she quenched her fury at the flood,

And with a lenent sallet cool’d her blood:

Their common, though but coarse, were nothing scant.

Nor did their minds an equal banquet want.

Dryden.

The doctor now obsequy the summons,

Likes both his company and commons. Swift.

COMMONWEAL. n. s. [from communica-

COMMONWEALTH. n. s. [from communica-

1. A polity; an established form of civil life.

Two foundations bear publick societies; the one inclination, whereby all men desire sociable life; the other, that agree upon the manner of their union in living together: the latter is that which we call the law of a commonwealth. Bacon.

It was impossible to make a commonwealth in Ireland, without settling of all the estates and possessions throughout the kingdom. Davenant.

A continual parliament would hurt keep the commonwealth in tune, by preserving laws in their vigour.

There is no body in the commonwealth of learning who does not profess himself a lover of truth. Locke.

2. The publick; the general body of the people.

Such a prince, so kind a father of the commonwealth. Shak. II. IV.

Their sons are well tutored by you: you are a good member of the commonwealth. Shakesp. Love’s Labour Lost.

3. A government in which the supreme power is lodged in the people; a republic.

Did you, or do you yet any of them, imagine

The gods would sleep to such a stigmatic practice,

Against that commonwealth which they have founded? Dryden.

Commonwealths were nothing more, in their original, but free cities; though sometimes, by force of order and discipline, they have extended themselves into mighty dominions. Temple.

COMMORANCE. n. s. [from common-

COMMORANCY. n. s. [from commo-

1. Tumult; disturbance; combustion; sedition; publick disorder; insurrection.

By flatt’ry he hath won the common hearts;

And, when he will to please commotion

’Tis to be feared they all will follow him. Shakesp. Henry VI.

Ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not tossed.

The lid consists of battles, and a continual commotion; the Odyssey in patience and wisdom. Dryden’s Notes on the Odyssey.

2. Perturbation; disorder of mind; heat; violence; agitation.

Some strange commotion

Is in his brain; he bites his lips, and starts. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

He could not debate anything without some commotion, when the argument was not of moment. Clarendon.

3. Disturbance; restlessness.

Sacrifices were offered when an earthquake happened, that he would allay the commotions of the water, and put an end to the earthquake. Woodcock’s Natural History.

COMMOTER. n. s. [from commotion.

One that causes commotions; a disturber of the peace. A word not in use.

The people, more regarding commotermsters than commissioners, flocked together, as clouds cluster against a storm. Hogarth.

TO COMMUNE. v. a. [communicate, Lat.] To converse; to talk together; to impart sentiments mutually.

So long as Guion with her communed,

Unto the ground she cast her modest eye; And ever an am, with rosy red,

The bashful blood her snowy cheeks did dye. Fairy Queen.

I will communicate with you of such things

That want no ears but yours. Shakesp. Measure for Measure.

They would forbear open hospitality, and resort unto him peculiarly, that they might communicate together as friends. Hogarth.

Then commune, how that day they best may ply Their growing work. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

Ideas, as ranked under names, are those that, for the most part, new reason of within them- selves, and always those which they commune about with others. Locke.

COMMUNICABILITY. n. s. [from communica-

COMMUNICABLE. adj. [from communica-

1. That which may become the common possession of more than one; with fo.

Sith eternal life is communicable unto all, it be- хотeth the word of God be so likewise. Hooker.

2. That which may be recounted; that of which another may share the knowledge; with to.

Nor let thine own inventions hope

Things not revealed, which th’ invisible skill.

Only omniscient, hath suppress’d in night,

To none communicable in earth or heav’n. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

3. That which may be imparted.

The happy place

Rather infames thy torment, representing

Lost bliss, to thee no more communicable. Milton’s Parl. Reg.

COMMUNICANT. n. s. [from communic-

1. One who is present, as a wor-shipper, at the celebration of the Lord’s Supper; one who participates of the blessed sacrament.

Communiaconts have ever used it; and we, by the form of the very utterance, do shew we use it as communicants. Hooker.

A constant frequenter of worship, and a never-failing monthly communicant. Atterbury’s Sermons.

To COMMUNICATE. v. a. [communicate, Lat.]

1. To impart to others what is in our own power; to give to others as partakers; to confer a joint possession; to bestow.

Common benefits are to be communicated with all, but peculiar benefits with choice. Bacon.

Where God is worshipped, there he communicateth his blessings and holy influences.

Dryden’s Works; Commonweal.

2. To reveal; to impart knowledge.

Learned diligently, and do communicate wisdom liberally: I do not hide her riches. Isai. vi. 13.

It had antiently the preposition with before the person to whom communication, either of benefit or knowledge, was made.

Charles the Hardy would communicate his secrets with none; and, lest of all, those secrets which he did conceale to his hearers. Bacon.

He communicated those thoughts only with the lord Dighby, the lord Colepeper, and the chancellor, Clarendon.

A journey of much adventure, which, to shew the strength of his privy, had been before not communicated with any other. Wotton.

4. Now it has only to: Clarendon uses both with and to.

Let him, that is taught in the word, communica- cante unto him that teacheth. Galatians, vi. 6.

His majesty frankly promised, that he could not, in any degree, communicate to any person the matter, before he had taken and communed to them his own resolutions. Clarendon.

Those who speak in publick are better heard when they discourse by a lively genius and ready memory, than when they read all they would communicate through their pens. Watts.

To COMMUNICATE. v. n.

1. To partake of the blessed sacrament.

The primitive Christians communed every day. Taylor.

2. To have something in common with another; as, the houses communicate; there is a passage between them, common to both, by which either may be entered from the other.

The whole body is nothing but a system of COMMUNICATION. n. s. [from communicare.]

1. The act of imparting benefits or knowledge.
   Both together serve completely for the reception and communication of learned knowledge.
   Holders's Elements of Speech.

2. Common boundary or inlet; pass or means, by which from one place there is a way without interruption to another.
   The map shows the natural communication provided of between the rivers and lakes of a country so great a distance from the sea.
   Addison on Italy.

3. Interchange of knowledge; good intelligence between several persons.
   Secrets may be carried so far, as to stop the communication of things among all who have the management of affairs.
   Swift.

   Abner had communication with the elders of Israel; said he, ye have sought for David in times past to be king over you; now then do it.
   2 Sam. 11. 17.

5. The chief end of language, in communication, being to be understood, words said not for that end, when any word does not excite in the hearers the same idea which it stands for in the mind of the speaker.
   Locke.

COMMUNICATIVE. adj. [from communicare.]
Inclined to make advantages common; liberal of benefits or knowledge; not close; not selfish.

He cannot be more than some curious and mercenary gardeners will think for us; but they deserve not the name of that communicative and noble profession.

We have paid for our want of prudence, and determine for the future to be less communicative.

Swift and Pope.

COMMUNICATIVENESS. n. s. [from communicare.]
The quality of being communicative, of bestowing or imparting knowledge.

It is not the most communicative of all beings, but he will also communicate himself in such measure as entirely to satisfy; otherwise degrees of communicativeness would be wanting.

Norris.

COMMUNION. n. s. [communio, Lat.]

1. Intercourse; fellowship; common possession; participation of something in common; interchange of transactions.
   Consider, finally, the angels, as having with us that communion which the apostle to the Hebrews notes; and in regard whereof angels have not disdained to profess themselves our fellow servants.
   Holder.

2. We are not, by ourselves, sufficient to furnish ourselves with competent stores for such a life as our nature both desire; therefore we are naturally induced to seek communion and fellowship with others.
   Holder.

3. The Israelites had never any communion or affairs with the Egyptians.
   Raleigh.

Thou, so pleased,
Canst raise thy creature to what height thou wilt
Of union, or of communion, desired.

Milton's Par. Lost.

We maintain communion with God himself, and are made in the same degree parrakers of the divine nature.

2. The common or publick celebration of the Lord's Supper; the participation of the blessed sacrament.
   They resolved that the standing of the communion table in all churches should be altered.
   Clarendon.

Tertullian reported, that the picture of Christ was engraven upon the communion cup.

3. A common or publick act.
   Men began publicly to call on the name of the Lord; that is, they served and praised God by communion, and in publick manner.
   Bate's History of the World.

4. Union in the common worship of any church.
   Bare communion with a good church can never alone make a good man; if it could, we should have not bad ones.
   South.

Injurious men have lived and died in the communion of that church.

Stillingfleet.

COMMUNITY. n. s. [communitates, Lat.]

1. The commonwealth; the body politic.
   How could a man, degrees in schools, and brotherhood in cities, but by degree stand in authentic place?
   Shakesp. Treliss and Cressida.

Not in a single person only, but in a community, or multitude of men.
   Hammond's Fundamenta.

This parable may aptly enough expounded of the laws that secure a civil community.

L'Estrange.

It is not designed for her own use, but for the whole community.

Addison's Guardian.

2. Common possession; the state contrary to property or appropriation.
   Call all the great, the fair, and spirited dames of Rome about thee, and begin a fashion of freedom and community.
   Ben Jonson.

The undistinction in many of the community of name, or misapplication of the act of one unto the other, hath made some doubt thereof.
   Brown's Fulger Errors.

This text is far from proving Adam sole proprietor; it is a confirmation of the original community of all things.
   Locke.

   He was but, as the cuckow is in June,
   Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes.
   At, sick and shunned with community.
   Afford no extraordinary gaze.
   Shakesp.

COMMUTABILITY. n. s. [from communicare.]
The quality of being capable of exchange.

COMMUTABLE. adj. [from commune.]
That may be exchanged for something else; that may be bought off, or ransomed.

COMMUTATION. n. s. [from commute.]

1. Change; alteration.
   An innocent nature could hate nothing that was innocent; in a word, so great is the communion, that the soul then hated only that which now only it loves, e. g. sin.
   South's Sermons.

South's Sermons.

2. Exchange; the act of giving one thing for another.
   The whole universe is supported by giving and returning, by commerce and communication.
   South's Sermons.

According to the present temper of mankind, it is absolutely necessary that there be some method and means of communication, as that of money.

On the Creation.

The use of money, in the commerce and traffic of mankind, is that of saving the commutuation of more bulky commodities.

Arabian en Coins.

3. Ransom; the act of exchanging a corporal for a pecuniary punishment.
   The law of God had allowed an evasion, that is, by way of commutation or redemption.
   Brown.

COMMUTATIVE. adj. [from commute.]
Relative to exchange; as, commutative justice, that honesty which is exercised in traffic, and which is contrary to fraud in bargains.

To COMMUTE. v. a. [commuto, Lat.]

1. To exchange; to put one thing in the place of another; to give or receive one thing for another.
   This will commute our tasks; exchange these pleasant and painful ones, which God assigns, for those uneasy and fruitless ones we impose on ourselves.
   Decay of Pity.

2. To buy off, or ransom one obligation by another.
   Some commute swearing for worshipping; as if forbearance of the one were a dispensation for the other.

To COMMUTE. v. a. To stone; to bargain for exemption.

Those institutions which God designed for means to further men in holiness, they look upon as a privilege to serve instead of it, and to communize for.

South's Sermons.

COMMUTUAL adj. [con and mutual.] Mutual; reciprocal. Used only in poetry.

Love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands, Uniie commutual in most sacred bands.

Shakesp. Hamlet.

There, with commutual zeal, we both labred In acts of dear benevolence and love.

Brothers in peace, not rivals in command.

Pope's Odyssey.

COMPACT. n. s. [pactum, Lat.] A contract; an accord; an agreement; a mutual and settled appointment between two or more, to do or to forbear something. It had anciently the accent on the last syllable.

I hope the king made peace with all of us; And the compact is firm and true in mee.

Shakesp. Richard III.

In the beginnings of speech, there was an implicit compact, founded upon common consent, that such words, voices, or gestures, should be signs whereby they would express their thoughts.

South.

To COMPACT. v. a. [compagno, compactus, Lat.]

1. To join together with firmness; to unite closely; to consolidate.

Inform her full of my particular fears; And thereto add such reasons of your own, As may compact it more.

Shakesp. King Lear.

Not are the nerves of his compacted strength, Stretch'd and dissolv'd into unsniff'd length.

Denham.

By what degrees this earth's compacted sphere Was harden'd, woods, and rocks, and towns, to bear.

Racecommon.

This disease is more dangerous, as the solids are more strict and compacted, and consequently more as people are advanced in age.

Arbuth. on Diet.

Now the bright sun compact the precious stone, Imparting radiant lustre like his own.

Blackmore's Crees.

2. To make out of something.
   Let, compact of jars, grow musical.
   We shall see them shortly shiver in the discusphere. Shaks.

3. To league with.

Thou pernicious woman, Compact with her that's gone, think'st thou thy threats,
Though they would swear down each particular fact;
Were testy voices? Shakesp. Measure for Measure.
4. To join together; to bring into a system.

We see the world so compacted, that each thing preserves other things, and also itself. Hooker.

COMPACT. adj. [compactus, Lat.]

1. Firm; solid; close; dense; of firm texture. Is not the density greater in free and open spaces, void of air and other grosser bodies, than within the pores of water, glass, crystal, gems, and other compact bodies. Newton's Opticks. Without attention, the disordered particles of the chaos could never come into such great compact masses as the planets. Bentley.

2. Composed; consisting.

The balance, the lover, and the poet, Are of image found in all compact.

A wondrous fire,

Compact of luminous vapour, which the night And the cold environ around concedes.

Kindled through agitation to a flame. Milton.

3. Joined; held together.

In one hand Pan has a pipe of seven reeds, compact with corn. Peacham.

4. Brief, and well connected; as, a compact discourse.

Where a foreign tongue is elegant, expressive, close, and compact, we must study the utmost force of our language. Felton.

COMPACTEDNESS. n. s. [from compact-ed.]

Firmness; density. Sticking or compactedness, being natural to density, requires some excess of gravity in proportion to the density, or some other outward violence, to break it. Digby on Bodies.

The ashes are so infusible, firm, compacted and hard; which compactedness and hardness is a demonstration that nothing could be produced by them. Chaucer.

COMPACTLY. adv. [from compact.]

1. Closely; densely.

2. With neat joining; with good compacture.

COMPACTNESS. n. s. [from compact.]

Firmness; closeness; density. Irradiancy or sparkling, found in many gems, is not discoverable in this, for it cometh short of their compactness and purity. Brown.

The best time mortals will not have attained its utmost compactness, till fourscore years after it has been united. This is one reason, why, in demolishing ancient fabrics, it is easier to break the stone than the mortar. Boyle.

The rest, by reason of the compactness of territorial matter, cannot make it way to wells. Woodward.

COMPACTURE. n. s. [from compact.]

Structure; manner in which any thing is joined together; compagination. A good word, but not in use.

And over it a fair porticoe hung, Which to the gate directly did incline, With calmly compass, and compacture strong, Neither unsurely short, nor yet exceeding long. Feayd Queen.

COMPAGES. n. s. [Lat.] A system of many parts united.

The organs in animal bodies are only a regular compound of pipes and vessels, for the fluids to pass through. Ray.

COMPAGINATION. n. s. [compagnio, Lat.]

Union; structure; junction; con- nexion; contexture. The long, and firm compagination of the mecha- nical fabric under it. Brown's Vulg. Err.

COMPANABLENESS. n. s. [from company.]

The quality of being a good companion; sociableness. A word not now in use.

His eyes full of merry simplicity, his words of hearty companionsence. Sidney.

COMPANIAL. adj. [from company.]

Social; having the qualities of a companion; sociable; maintaining friendly intercourse.

Towards her, he was no more unkind, but companionable and respective. Bacon's Henry VII.

COMPANION. n. s. [compagnon, Fr.]

1. One with whom a man frequently converses, or with whom he shares his hours of relaxation. It differs from friend, as acquaintance from confidence.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone?

Of sorriest fancies your companions make? Shakspe. Macbeth

Some friend is a companion at the table, and will not come in the day of thy affliction. Eccles. vi. 10.

With anxious doubts, with raging passions torn,

No sweet companion near with whom to mourn. Prior.

2. A partner; an associate.

Epaphroditus, my brother, companion in labour, and fellow soldier. Phil. ii. 25.

Here's a thought of happiness, thou mayst partake

His punishment, eternal misery;

Which would be all his solace and revenge. Tho. Milton.

It gives me no delight to see petty companies, to hear spread rumours to my defamation, where I cannot be present. Raleigh.

COMPANIONABLY. adv. [from companion.]

Fit for good fellowship; social; agreeable.

He had a more companionable wit, and swayed more among the good fellows. Clarendon.

COMPANIONSHIP. n. s. [from companion.]

1. Company; train.

Achilles, and some twenty horse,

All of companionship. Shakspe. Timon.

2. Fellowship; association.

If he honour in your wars to seem

The same you are not, which, for your best ends,

You call your policy; how is 'tis less, or worse,

But it shall hold companionship in peace.

With honour as in war? Shakspe. Coriolanus.

COMPANY. n. s. [ compagnic, Fr.; either from con and paginaeus one of the same town; or con and panis one that eats of the same mess.]

1. Persons assembled together; a body of men.

Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;

Take all his company along with him. Shakspe. Henry IV.

Honest company, I thank you all,

That have helpe de me away myself,

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife

Shakspe.

2. Persons assembled for the entertainment of each other; an assembly of pleasure.

A crowd is not company; and faces are but a gallery of pictures, where there is no love. Barrow's Essays.

3. Persons considered as assembled for conversation; or as capable of conversation and mutual entertainment.

Monsieur Zulichem came to me among the rest of the good company of the town. Temple.

Knowledge of men and manners, the freedom of habitudes, with the best company of both sexes, is necessary. Dryden.

COMPANIONSHIPS. n. s. [from companious.]

1. The state of a companion; the act of accompanying; conversation; fellowship.

It is more pleasant to the companion of him that can speak such words, then by such words to be persuaded to follow solitariness. Sidney.

Nor will I wretched thee

In death forsake, but keep thee company. Dryden's Fables.

Abdalaha grew by degrees so enamoured of her conversation, that he did not think he lived when he was not in company with his beloved Balsona. Guardian.

2. A number of persons united for the execution or performance of any thing; a band.

Shakespeare was an actor, when there were seven companies of players in the town together. Daven.

3. Persons united in a joint trade or partnership.

A subdivision of a regiment of foot; so many as are under one captain.

Every captain brought with him thrice so many in his company as we possessed. Knolles's History of the Turks.

4. To keep Company. To associate with; to be companion to.

I do desire thee

To hear me company, and go with me. Shakspe. Those Indian wives are loving fools, and may do well to keep company with the Arrias and Porcius of old Rome. Dryden.

Admitted to that equal sky,

His faithful dog shall share his company. Pope's Essay on Man.

Why should she call her whore? Who keeps her company? Shakspe. Othello.

5. To keep Company. To frequent houses of entertainment.

Sometimes in an ill sense.

To Company, v. a. [from the noun.] To accompany; to attend; to be companion to; to be associated with.

The soldier that did company these three. Shakspe. Cymbeline.

Thus, through what path of sorrow, that we wove,

Rage companies our hate, and grieve our love. Prior.

6. To Company. v. n.

To associate one's self with.

I wrote to you not to company with fornicators. 1 Cor. v. 9.

7. To be a gay companion. Obsolete.

For thine heart must needs learn to laugh, to lye,

To face, to forge, to scoff, to company.

Seduce's Hubber's Tale.

8. Comparative. adj. [from Company.]

Worthy to be compared; of equal regard; worthy to contend for preference.

This present world afford not any thing com- parable unto the publick duties of religion. Hooker.

A man comparable with any of the captains of that age, an excellent soldier both by sea and land, in conversation, that was able to converse with the best company of both sexes, is necessary. Addison's Spectator.

9. Comparably. adv. [from Company.]

In a manner or degree worthy to be compared.

There could no form for such a royal use be Comparatively imagined, like that of the foresaid nation.\footnote{Wotton's Architecture.}

Comparative. \textit{n. s.} \cite{comparative, Lat.}
\begin{enumerate}
\item Estimated by comparison; not positive; not absolute.
\item The most dignified enough.
Ev'n to the point of envy, if there were
Comparative for your virtues, to be stiled
The under basing of his realm. \footnote{Shakespeare's Cymbeline.}
\end{enumerate}

There resteth the comparative, that is, granted that this word, lawful or binding, yet other things be not to be preferred before the Expropriation of heroises.
Bacon.

The blossom is a positive good: although the remove of it, to give place to the fruit, be a comparative good.

This bubble, by reason of its comparative levity to the fluid that filleth it, would necessarily ascend up to the top. \footnote{Beaumé.}

2. Having the power of comparing different things.

Beauty is not known by an eye or nose; it consists in a symmetry, and it is the comparative faculty which notes it. \footnote{Glaudin's \textit{Scopsi Scientifica.}}

3. In grammar. The comparative degree expresses more of any quantity in one thing than in another; as, the right hand is the stronger. \footnote{Comparatively. \textit{adj.} \cite{comparatively, Lat.}}

To COMPARE. \textit{v. a.} \cite{compare, Lat.}
\begin{enumerate}
\item To make one thing the measure of another; to estimate the relative goodness or badness, or other qualities of any one thing, by observing how it differs from something else.
I will hear Brutus speak. \footnote{I will hear Casus, and compare their reasons. They measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise.}
9 Cor. x. 12.
\end{enumerate}

No man can think it grievous, who considers the pleasure and sweetness of love, and the glorious victory of overcoming evil with good; and then compares these with the restless torment and perpetual tumults, of a malicious and revengeful spirit. \footnote{Locke.}

He that has got the ideas of numbers, and has taken the pains to compare one, two, and three, to six, cannot change but know they are equal. Thus much of the wrong judgment men make of present and future pleasure and pain, when they are compared together, and so the absent considered as future. \footnote{Locke.}

2. It may be observed, that when the comparison intends only similitude or illustration by likeness, we use to before the thing brought for illustration; as, he compared anger to a fire.

Solon compared the people unto the sea, and orns and councillors to the winds; for that the sea would be calm and quiet, if the winds did not trouble it. \footnote{Bacon's Apothegms.}

3. When two persons or things are compared, to discover their relative proportion of any quality, with is used before the thing used as the measure. \footnote{To compare. Small things with that which.}

Black Macebeth will seem as pure as snow, being compar'd
With my confus'd harms. \footnote{Shakespeare.}

To compare

Waller.

4. To compare is in Speuser used after the Latin comparo for to get; to procure; to obtain;

To fill his bags, and riches to compare. \footnote{Fairly Q. COMPARE. \textit{n. s.} \cite{compare, Lat.}}

\begin{enumerate}
\item The state of being compared; comparative estimate; comparison; possibility of entering into comparison.

There I the rarest things have seen,
Oh, things which is compared to a
Suckling.

As their small gallants may not hold compare
With our tall ships. \footnote{Waller.}

Beyond compare the Son of God was seen.

Most glorious. \footnote{Milton's Par. Lost.}

2. Simile: similitude; illustration by comparison.

True swains in love shall, in the world to come,
Approach their true love with their rhymes.

Full of protest, and oath, and big compare
Watt similitude. \footnote{Sh. Tristia and Crenula.}

\begin{enumerate}
\item The act of comparing.

Natalis Comes, comparing his parts with those of a man, reckons his claws among them, which are more much like these of a lion; so easy it is to confide on the comparison too far to make it good. \footnote{Dryden's Furgil.}

Our author saves me the comparison with tragedy; for he says, that herein he isimitating the tragic poet. \footnote{Dryden.}

2. The state of being compared.

If we willingly estimate what we call good and evil, we shall find it lies much in comparison. \footnote{Locke.}

Objects near our view are apt to be thought greater than those of a larger size that are more remote; and so it is with pleasure and pain: the present is apt to carry it, and those at a distance have the disadvantage in the comparison. \footnote{Locke.}

3. A comparative estimate; proportion.

If men would live as religion requires, the world would be a most lovely and desirable place, in comparison of what now lives. \footnote{Tillotson.}

One can scarce imagine how so plentiful a soil should be so miserably unpeopled, in comparison of what it once was. \footnote{Wilson's \textit{Remarks on Italy.}}

4. A simile in writing or speaking; an illustration by similitude.

As fair as and good a kind of hand in hand comparison, had been something too fair and too good for any body. \footnote{Tillotson.}

5. In grammar. The formation of an adjective through its various degrees of signification; as, strong, stronger, strongest. \footnote{To compare. From \textit{compartir.} Lat.}

To divide; to mark out a general design into its various parts and subdivisions.

1. I make haste to the casting and comparing of the whole work. \footnote{Wotton's Architecture.}
6. [In law.] To take measures preparatory to any thing; as, to compass the death of the king.

COMPASS. n. s. [from the vrb.]

1. Circle; round.
   This day I breathed first; time is round; and where I did begin, there I end. Shakesp. Julius Caesar.

2. Extent; reach; grasp.
   O! Juliet, I already know thy grief;
   It stains me past the compass of my wit. Shakesp.
   That which is out of the compass of any man's power, is to that man impossible. South's Sermons.
   How few there are may be justly bewailed, the compass of our years extending but from the time of Hippocrates to that of Marcus Antonius. Temple.
   Animals in their generation are wise the sons of men; but their wisdom is confined to a few particulars, and lies in a very narrow compass. Addison's Spectator.

This author hath tried the force and compass of our language with much success. Swift.

3. Space; room; limits, either of time or space.
   No less than the compass of twelve books is taken up in these. Pope's Essay on Homer's Battles.
   The English are good confederates in an enterprise which may be dispatched in a short compass of time. Franklin's Journals.
   You have heard what hath been here done for the poor by the five hospitals and the workhouse, within the compass of one year, and towards the end of a long, expensive war. Atterbury.

4. Enclosure; circumference.
   And their mount Palatine,
   'Tis imperial space, circumference, and height.
   The stately.
   Milton's Paradise Regained.
   Old Rome from such a race deriv'd her birth,
   Which now on several heights is triumphant reigns.
   In that compass all the worlds contain. Dryden's Virgil.

5. A part of the right line; an indirect advance; as, to fetch a compass round the camp.

6. Moderate space; moderation; due limits.
   Certain it is, that in two hundred years before (I speak within compass) so much commission had been executed in either of these provinces. D'Anville's Map of Ireland.
   Nothing is likelier to keep a man within compass, than the having constantly before his eyes the state of his affairs, in a regular course of account. Locke.

7. The power of the voice to express the notes of music.
   You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass.
   Shakesp. Hamlet.
   From harmony to harmony
   Through all the compass of the notes it ran,
   The diapason closing full in man. Dryden.

8. [This is rarely used in the singular.] The instrument with which circles are drawn.
   If they without delay, and as still in twain compass are two:
   Thy soul, the first foot, makes no show
   To move; but doth, if th' other doth. Donne.

   He took the golden compass, prepar'd
   In God's eternal store, to circumscribe
   This universe, and all created things.
   Milton's Paradise Lost.
   To fix one foot of their compass wherever they think fit, and extend the other to such terrible lengths, without describing any circumference at all, is to leave us and ourselves in a very uncertain state.

9. The instrument composed of a needle and card, whereby mariners steer.
   The breath of religion fills the sails; profit it is to the compass by which faithful men steer their course. King Charles.

Rude as their ships was navigation then,
No useful compass or meridian known:
Guiding they kept the land within their ken,
And knew no north but where the pole-star shone.

Dryden.

With equal force the tempest blows by turns
From every corner of the seaman's compass.

Rime's June Shore.

He that first discovered the use of the compass,
did more for the supplying nations with useful commodities, than those who built workhouses.

Addison.

10. In old language there was a phrase, to come in compass to be brought round.

COMPASS-SAW. n. s.

The compass-rose should not have its teeth set, as other saws have; but the edge of it should be made so broad, and the back so thin, that it may easily follow the broad edge. Its office is to cut a round; and therefore the edge must be made broad, and the back thin, that the back may have a wide keel to turn in.

Milton.

COMPASSION. n. s. [compassion. Fr. from con and patior, Lat.] Pity; compassion; sorrow for the sufferings of others; painful sympathy.
Ye had compassion of me in my bonds.

Hebrews, x. 34.

Their angry hands,
My brothers hold, and vengeance these exact;
This pleads compassion, and repents the fact.

Addison's Spectator.

To COMPASSION. v. a. [from the noun.]
To pity; to compassion; to commiserate. A word scarcely used.
O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent, or, inwardly, weep him?

Shakesp. Titus Andronicus.

COMPASSIONATE. adj. [from compassion.
Inclined to compassion; inclined to pity; merciful; tender; melanct; soft; easily affected with sorrow by the misery of others.

There never was any heart truly great and generous, that was not also tender and compassionate. South's Sermons.

To COMPASSIONATE. v. a. [from the noun.]
To pity; to commiserate.

If experience makes the man, it does not always so hold the states before their eyes, and withal persuades them to compassionate themselves. Raleigh.

Compassionate my pains, and pity me!
What is compassion, when 'tis void of love? Addison's Cato.

COMPASSIONATELY. adv. [from compassion.
Mercifully; tenderly.
The fines were assigned to the rebuilding St. Paul's, and thought therefore to be the more reasonably imposed, and the less compassionately reduced and excused. Garenden.

COMPATERNITY. n. s. [con and paternites, Lat.]
Gossip, or compationy, by the canon law, is a spiritual affinity; and a jorum that was gossip to either of the parties might, in former times, have been challenged as not indifferent by our law.

Davies's State of Ireland.

COMPATIBILITY. n. s. [from co-exist.
Consistency; the power of co-existing with something else; agreement with any thing.

COMPATIBLE adj. [corrupted by co-exist.
The word now means only that which is suited to, or agreeable with any thing.

COMPATIBILITY. n. s. [from co-exist.
From compativa, from competo, Lat. to suit, to agree. Compatible is found in good writers, and ought always to be used.]
COMPUERLING. n. s. [from compel.]. He that forces another.

COMPEND. n. s. [compendium, Lat.]. Abridgment; summary; epitome; contraction; breviate.

COMPENDIOUS. adj. [compendious, Lat.]. Short; contracted; summary; abridged.

COMPENDIOUSLY. n. s. [from compendious.]. Shortness; contracted brevity.

COMPENDIOUSLY. adj. [from compendious.]. Short; summary; abridged; comprehensive; holding much in a narrow space; direct; near; by which time is saved, and circulation cut off.

Their learned more convenient expeditions ways, whereby they shortened their labours, and gained time. Woodward.

COMPENDIOUSNESS. n. s. [from compendious.]. Shortness; brevity; comprehensiveness in a narrow compass.

The inviting easiness and comprehensiveness of this assertion, should dazzle the eyes. Bentley's Sermons.

COMPENDIUM. n. s. [Lat.]. Abridgment; summary; breviate; abbreviation; that which holds much in a narrow room; the near way.

After we are grown well acquainted with a short essay of a science, which is written in the plainest and most simple manner, it is then proper to read a larger regular treatise on the subject. Watts on the Mind.

COMPELLABLE. adj. [compellable.]. That which may be compelled.

To COMPENSE in English, v. a. [compensate, Lat.]. To compensate; to be equivalent to; to counterbalance; to counteract; to make amends for.

The length of the night, and the dews thereof, do not compensate the heat of the day. Bacon's Nat. Hist. The pleasures of life do not compensate the miseries. Prior.

Nature is wise, without profusion kind. The proper organs, proper powers, assigned; each seeming want compensated of course. Here with degrees of swiftness, there of force. Pope.

COMPENSATION. n. s. [from compensate.]. Recompense; something equivalent; amend.

Pardons, the better to make compensation of his service in the wars, called a parliament. Bacon. All other debts may compensation find; but love is strict; and will be paid to kind. Drake's Aerogrebe.

COMPENSATIVE. adj. [from compensate.]. That which compensates; that which counteracts.

To COMPENSE. v. a. [compense, Lat.]. To compensate; to counteract; to be equivalent to; to counterbalance; to recompense.

It seemseth, the weight of the quicksilver doth not compensate the weight of a stone, more than the weight of the aqua-fortis. Bacon's Natural History. The joys of the two marriages were compensated with the merriments and funerals of prince Arthur. Bacon's Henry VII.

1. Such a quantity of any thing as is sufficient, without superfluity.

Something of speaking is to be indulged to common civility, more tantamounts, and a competency to those recreative discourses which maintain the cheerfulness of society. Watts.

2. Such a fortune as, without exuberance, is equal to the necessities of life.

For competency of life I will allow you. That lack of means enforce you not herein. Pope.

3. [In law.] The power or capacity of a judge or court, for taking cognisance of an affair.

COMPETENT adj. [competens, Lat.].

1. Suitable; fit; adequate; proportionate.

If there be any power in imagination, the distance must be competent, the medium not adverse, and the body apt and proportionate. Bac. Nat. Hist. Compe'tency. j. tent.

2. Adapted to any purpose without defect or superfluity.

The greatest captain of the English brought rather a guard, than a competent army, to recover Ireland. Doug. of Ireland. To draw men from great excess, it is not amiss, though we use them unto somewhat lesser end. competat. Hooker.

3. Reasonable; moderate.

A competent number of the old being first read, the new shall succeed. Bacon.

The clergy have gained some insight into men and things, and a competent knowledge of the world. ATTORNEY'S SERMONS.

4. Qualified; fit; a competent judge, is one who has a right of jurisdiction in the case. Let us first consider how competent we are for the office. Government of the Tongue.

5. Consistent with; incident to.

That is the privilege of the Infinite Author of things, who never slumber nor sleep, but is not competent to any finite being. Locke.

COMPETENTLY. adv. [from competent.].

1. Adequately; properly.

I think it hath been competently proved. Bentley.

2. Reasonably; moderately; without excess; perjury or want.

Some places require men competently endowed; but none think the appointment to be a duty of justice, bound to respect decent army, Bacon.

COMPETIBILITY. adj. [from compete, Lat.]. For this word a corrupt orthography has introduced compitible. Suitable to; consistent with.

It is not compatible with the grace of God so much as to incline any man to do evil. Hammond on Fundamentals.

Those are properties not at all compatible to body or matter, though of never so pure a mixture. Glanville.

The duration of eternity a parte ante is such as is only compatible to the eternal God, and not communicable to any created being. Sir Matthew Hale.

COMPETIBILITY. n. s. [from competible.]. Suitableness; compatibility.

COMPETITION. n. s. [from con and petire].

1. The act of endeavouring to gain what another endeavoureth to gain at the same time; rivalry: contest.

The ancient flames of discord and intestine wars, upon the competition of both houses, would again return to us. Bacon.

A portrait, with which one of Titian's could not come in competition. Dryden's Fairest. Though what produces any degree of pleasure be in itself good, and what is apt to produce any degree of pain be evil, yet often we do not call it so; when it comes in competition: the degrees also of pleasure and pain have a preference. Locke.

We should be ashamed to rival inferiors, and dishonour our nature by so degrading a competition. Rogers.

2. Double claim; more of one thing than one; anciently with to.

Competition to the crown there is none, nor can be. Bacon.

3. Now with for.

The prize of beauty was disputed till you were seen; but now all pretenders have withdrawn their claims; there is no competition but for the second place. Dryden.

COMPETITOR. n. s. [con and petire, Lat.].

1. One that has a claim opposite to another's; a rival; with for the thing claimed.

How furious and impatient they be, and cannot brook competitors in love. Shakespeare, Titus Andronicus.

Some undertake suits with purpose to let them fall, to gratify the competitor. Bacon.

Ciceroes and Scipios were competitors for the office of praetor. Tailor.

He who trusts in God has the advantage in present felicity; and, when we take fortune into the account,まだまだ alone, is acknowledged to have no competitor. Rogers.

2. It had formerly of the thing claimed.

Aeneas, king of Algiers, was in arms against his brother Mehemet, competitor of the kingdom. Knolles's History.

3. In Shakespeare it seems to signify only an opponent. The Guildfords are in arms, and every hour more competitors flock to the rebels. Shakespeare, Richard III.

COMPILATION. n. s. [from compile.].

1. A collection from various authors.

2. An assemblage; a collection. There is in it a small vein filled with spar, probably since the time of the compilation of the mass. Woodward on Fossils.

To COMPILE. v. o. [compile, Lat.].

1. To draw up from various authors; to collect into one body.

2. To write; to compose.

In poetry they compile the praises of virtuous men and actions, and satire against vice. Temple.

By the accounts which authors have left, they might learn that the face of sea and land is the same that it was when those accounts were compiled. Howard's Civil and Natural History.

The regard he had for his shield, had caused him formerly to compile a dissertation concerning it. Arbitreat and Pope.

3. To contain; to comprise: not used.
To Complain, v. a. [This sense is rare, and perhaps not very proper.] To lament; to bewail.

Pale death our valiant leader hath oppress'd,
Come weark his less whom boastless ye complain.

Fairfar.

Guadride, who couldst so well in rhyme complain
The death of Richard, with such a new spin.

Dryden's Fables.

They might the grievance inwardly complain,
But outwardly they needs must temporize.

Din. Civil War.

COMPLAINANT. n. s. [from complain.] One who urges a suit, or commences a prosecution, against another.

Complagre and this author are the same who speak swallowings words.

Collas's Defense.

COMPLAINER. n. s. [from complain.] One who complains; a murmurer; a lamenter.

St. Jude observs, that the murmurers and complainers are the same who speak swallowings words.

Philips is a complainer; and on this occasion I told lord Carteret, that complainers never succeed at court, though raiiers do.

Swift.

COMPLAINT. n. s. [complainte, compla.'nt, compIaant, compla.'nt.] 1. Representation of pains or injuries; lamentation.

I cannot find any cause of complaint, that good laws have so much been wanting unto us, as we to them.

Hooker's Dedication.

As for me, is my complaint of man, job. xxx. 4. Adam saw

Already in part, though hid in gloomiset shade,
To sorrow abandoned, but. wretch felt within,
And in a troubled sea of passion toss'd,
Thus to distressen sought with sad complaint.

Milton.

2. The cause or subject of complaint; grief.

The poverty of the clergy in England hath been the complaint of all who wish well to the church.

Swift.

3. A malady; a disease.

One, in a complaint of his bowels, was let blood till he had scarce any left, and was perfectly cured.

Arbuthton.

Remonstrance against; information against.

Full of vexation, come I with complaint

In evil strait this day I stand
Before my judge, elate or deject,
Myself the total crime, or to accuse
My other self, the partner of my life;
Whose falling, which so fair failure to me remains,
I should conceal, and not expose to blame
By my complaint; but strict necessity
Siberns me, and calamitous constraint. Milton.

Against the goddess these complaints he made.

Dryden's Aenid.

COMPLAISANCE. n. s. [complaisance, Fr.] Civility; desire of pleasing; act of adulation.

Her death is but in complaisance to her. Dryden.

You must also be industrious to discovery the opinion of your enemies; for you may be assured, that they will give you no quarter, and allow not Dryden's Defenstray.

Fair Venus wept the sad disaster
Of having lost her favor'd dove.

In complaisance poor Cupid mournd; his grief reliev'd his mother's pain.

Prier.

COMPLAISANT. adj. [complaisant, Fr.] Civil; desirous to please.

But there is no man seems so bold;
Scarcely to wise Peter complaisant enough,
And something said of Chartres too much too.

Pope.

COMPLAISantly. adv. [from complaisant.] Civily; with desire to please; ceremoniously.

In plenteously, tantale'd in state,
And complaisantly help'd to all I hate.

Treated, caress'd, and tir'd, I take my leave. Pope.

COMPLAISANTNESS. n. s. [from complaisant.] Civility; complaisance. Dict.

To Complaine. v. a. [from planus, To Complaine. ] Lat. To level; to reduce to a flat and even surface.

The vebrebra of the neck and back-bone are made smooth and complasant, and finely braced with muscles.

Derham.

COMPLÉAT. See COMPLETE.

COMPLETE. n. s. [comple'tum, Lat.] 1. Perfection; fulness; completion; completer.

Our contest is both to place it in the front of our prayers as a guide, and to add to it in the end of some principal limbs or parts, as a complement which fully compe'teth whatsoever may be defective in the rest.

Hooker.

They as they feared but their fail,
For a full completernent of a fall. Rubberly's Tale.

For a completer of these blessings, they were enjoyed by the protection of a king of the most harmless disposition, the most exemplary piety, the greatest humanity, chastity, and moderation.

Cotton. Epor.

The sensible nature, in its completer and integrity, hath five exterior powers or faculties.

Hooker.

2. Complete set; complete provision; the full quantity or number.

The god of love himself inhabits there,
With all his rage, and dread, and grief, and care;
His complement of stores, and total war.

Peter.

3. Adscititious circumstances; appendages; parts not necessary, but ornamental: whence ceremony was called complement, now corrupted to complement.

If the case permitted not baptism to have the decent complements of baptism, better it were to enjoy the body without his furniture, than to wait for this, till the opportunity of that, for which we desire it, be lost.

These, which have largely sprung up, for complements, rites, and ceremonies of church actions, are, in truth, for the greatest part, such silly things, that very cautious do make them so, that the people may be easily led into a dispossess of in serious manner.

Hooker.

A doleful case desires a doleful song.

Without a main art or public complements. Spencer.

Garnish'd and deck'd in modest completer.

Not working with the ear, but with the eye. Shaks.

4. [In geometry.] What remains of a quadrant of a circle, or of ninety degrees, after any certain arch hath been retrenched from it.

5. [In astronomy.] The distance of a star from the zenith.

6. Complement of the Curtain, in fortification, that part in the interior side of it which makes the demigore.

7. Arithmetical Complement of a Logarithm, is what the logarithm wants of 10,000,000.

Chambers.

COMPLETE. adj. [comple'tus, Lat.] 1. Perfect; full; having no deficiencies.

With as the reading of scripture is a part of our church liturgy, a special portion of the service which we do to God; and according to the time, when one doth wait for another coming, till the assembly of them that shall afterwards worship him be complete. Calsam. ii. 10. Then marvel not, thou great and completer.

That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax. Shak.

2. Complete, having no degrees, cannot properly admit more and most.
COM

If any disposition should appear to us as good a work, the assistance of the legislative power would be necessary to make it more complete. Swift

3. Finished; ended; concluded.

This course of vanity almost complete, I'd in the end of life, I hope retreat. Prior

To COMPLETE. v. a. [from the noun.]

To perfect; to finish.

Mr. Sanderson was completed master of arts. Wallon.

Bred only and completed to the taste.

Of justifiable appetence.

To town he comes, completes the nation's hope, And has the bold train'd-bands, and burns a pope.

COMPLETELY. adv. [from complete.]

Fully; perfectly.

Then tell us, how you can your bodies roll
Through space, of matter so completely fall?

What ever person would aspire to be completely witty, smart, humorous, and polite, must be able to retain in his memory every single sentence contained in this work. Swift.

COMPLETEMENT. n. s. [from complete- ment. Fr.]

The act of completing.

Allow me to give you, from the best authors, the origin, the anchor, the change, and the comple tement of satire among the Romans. Drayden's Dedication to Journal.

COMPLETENESS. n. s. [from complete.]

Perfection; the state of being complete.

I cannot allow their wisdom such a completeness and ineradicability as to exclude myself. R. Charle.

These parts go to make up the completeness of any subject.

Watts's Logick.

COMPLETION. n. s. [from complete.]

1. Accomplishment; act of fulfilling; state of being fulfilled.

There was a full harmony and consent of all the divine predictions, receiving their completion in Christ. South.

2. Utmost height; perfect state.

He makes it the utmost completion of an ill character to bear a malicefulness to the best men. Pope.

COMPLEX. adj. [complexus, Lat.]

COMPLEXED. v. s. [Complex; of many parts; not simple; including many particulars.

To express complexed significations, they took a liberty to piece together creatures of allowable forms into mixtures inextricable.

Brown. Their ideas made up of several simple ones, I call complex; such as beauty, gratitude, a man, the universe; which, though complexed of various simple ideas, or complex ideas made up of simple ones, yet are considered each by itself as one.

Leake.

A secondary essential mode, called a property, sometimes goes toward making up the essence of a complex being.

Watts.

With such perfection fram'd
Is this complex stupendous scheme of things.

Thomson's Spring.

COMPLEX. n. s. [from the adjective.]

Complication; collection.

This parable of the wedding supper comprehends in it the whole complex of all the blessings and privileges exhibited by the gospel. South's Sermons.

COMPLEXEDNESS. n. s. [complex.

Complication; invasion of many particular parts in one integral; contrariety to simplicity; compound state or nature.

From the complexedness of these moral ideas, there follows another inconvenience, that the mind cannot easily retain those precise combinations.

Leake.

COMPLEXION. n. s. [complexio, Lat.]

1. The inclosure or involution of one thing in another.

VOL. I.
To arms, victorious noble father,
To quell the rebels and their complex.
Shakespeare, Henry VI.

Justice was afterwards done upon the offenders, the principal being hanged and quartered in Smithfield; and divers of his chief complex executed in divers parts of the realm. Hayward.

The king, the prince, and the queen, and all their household; and he might only turn his brother out of the garrison, after justice was done upon his complex.
Clarendon.

Compliment. n. s. [from comply.] A man of an easy temper; a man of ready compliance.

Suppose a hundred new employment were erected on purpose to gratify compliers, an insupportable difficulty would remain. Swift.

COMPLIMENT. n. s. [compliment, Fr.] An act or expression of civility, usually understood to include some hypocrisy, and to mean less to it than it declares: this is properly compliment, something superfluous, or more than enough.

He observed few compliments in matter of arts, but such as pleased not to him. Shylock.

My servant, Sir? 'Tis never mercy world
Since lowly footing was call'd compliment:
Ye servants, me, you youth. Shak.

One whom the music of his own vain tongue
Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony:
A man of compliments, whom right and wrong
Have chosen, for their meeting. Shakespeare.

What honour that,
But tedious waste of time, to sit and hear
So many hollow compliments and lies.
Oliphant.

Men and women discourses,
Dissemble and command, be false and wise;
By ignominious arts, for servile ends,
Should compliments their foes, and shun their friends.
Boyle.

The watchman gave so very great a thump at my door, that I awoke, and heard myself complimented with the usual salutation. Tatler.

To Compliment. v. a. [from the noun.] To soothe with acts or expressions of respect; to flatter; to praise.

It was not to compliment a society, so much above flattery, and the regardless absurdities of common applause.

Monarchs should their inward soul disguise,
Dissemble and command, be false and wise;
By ignominious arts, for servile ends,
Should compliments their foes, and shun their friends.
Boyle.

She complimented Mercia very handsomely,
And says he wanted no accomplishment either of mind or body.
Page.

COMPLIMENTAL. adj. [from compliment.] Expressive of respect or civility; implying compliments.

I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a compliment assault upon him.

Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida.

Languages, for part they have most part, in terms of act and condition, retain their original poverty, and rather grow rich and abundant in complimental phrases, and such are now to the duke Orsino.

This falsehood of Ulysses is entirely complimental and officious.
Broome.

COMPLIMENTALLY. adv. [from compliment.] In the nature of a compliment; civilly; with artful or false civility.

This speech has been condemned as avocational; Eastatius judges it spoken artfully and complimentally.
Broome.

COMPLIMENTER. n. s. [from compliment.] One given to compliments; a flatterer.

Compliment. n. s. [compliment, Fr. compliment, low Lat.] The last act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

At noon and eve, besides their anthems sweet,
Their psalms, and their compliments meet.

If a man were but of a day's life, it well is if he lasts till even song, and then his compliment an hour before the time.
Taylor's Holy Living.

To Complire. v. n. [comploro, Lat.] To make lamentation together.

COMPLOT. n. s. [Fr. from compléter, for compléter, low Lat. Menage.] A confederacy in some secret crime; a plot; a conspiracy.

I cannot, my life, my brother, like but well
The purpose of the complot which ye tell.
Taylor's Tale.

I know their complot is to have my life.
Shakespeare, Henry VI.

To Complot. v. a. [from the noun.] To form a plot; to conspire; to join in any secret design, generally criminal.

Nor even by advised purpose meet
To plot, contrive, or complot small.
Shakespeare, Richard II.

A few lines after, we find them complenting together, and contriving a new scene of miseries to the Trojans.

Complotter. n. s. [from complot.] A conspirator; one joined in a plot.

Jocasta too, no longer now my sister,
Is found comploter in the horrid deed.
Taylor's Tale.

To Comply. v. n. [Skinner derives it from the French complaire; but probably it comes from complier to bend to. Pler is still in use.] To yield to; to be obsequious to; to accord with; to suit with.

It has with before as well persons as things.
The rising sun complies with our weak sight,
First gilds the clouds, then shines his globe of light.
Waller.

They did servilely comply with the people in worshipping God by sensible images and representations.

The truth of things will not comply with our conceptions, and bind itself to our interest. Tickton.

Remember I do why sawd your life. Your loving, lawful, and complying wife.
Dryden.

He made his wish with his estate comply.
Joyful to live, yet not afraid to die.
Prior.

COMPOUND. adj. [componens, Lat.] That which constitutes a compound body.

The bigness of the component parts of natural bodies may be conjectured by their colours.
Norton's Opticks.

To Comport. v. n. [comporter, Fr. from porto, Lat.] To agree; to suit; followed by with.

Some petty's not so good there, some vain dispose
On this side sin, with that place may comport.
Donne.

Such does not comport with the nature of time.
Holden.

It is not every man's talent to distinguish which
How far our prudence may warrant our charity,
And how far our charity may comport with our prudence.
L'Estrange.

Children, in the things they do, if they comport
With their age, find little difference, so they may be doing.
Locke.

To Compost. v. a.

1. To bear; to endure. This is a Gallic signification, not adopted among us.

2. To behave; to carry: with the reciprocal pronoun.

At years of discretion, and comport yourself at this raptipole stage! Congreve's Way of the World.

COMPORT. n. s. [from the verb.] Behaviour; conduct; manner of acting and looking.

I shall account concerning the rules and manners of deportment in the receiving, our comport and conversation in and after it.
Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

I know them well, and mark'd their rude comport;
In times of tempest they command alone.
And he but sits precarious on the throne.
Dryden's Fables.

COMPORTABLE. adj. [from comport.] Consistent; not contradictory.

We cast the rules and customs of this art into some comportable methods. Wotton's Architecture.

COMPORTANCE. n. s. [from comport.] Behaviour; gesture of ceremony.

Godly comportance each to other bear,
And entertain themselves with courteous meet.
Fairy Queen.

COMPORTMENT. n. s. [from comport.] Behaviour; practice.

The will of God is like a straight unalterable rule or line; but the various comportments of the creature, either thwarting this rule, or holding conformity to it, occasion several habitations of this rule.

By her serious and devout comportment on these solemn occasions, she gives an example that is very often too much wanted. Addison's Freeholder.

To Compose. v. a. [composer, Fr. composer, Lat.]

1. To form a mass by joining different things together.

Zeal ought to be composed of the highest degrees of all plausible affections. Spratt.

2. To place any thing in its proper form and method. In a peaceful grave may corps compose. Dryden, An. How doth the sea exactly compose itself to a level superficies, and with the earth make up one superficies? Dryden, An.

3. To dispose; to put in the proper state for any purpose.

The whole army seemed well composed to obtain that by their swords, which they could not by their pen.

4. To put together a discourse or sentence; to write as an author.

Words so pleasing to God, as those which the Son of God himself hath composed, were not possible for men to frame. Hoger.

The greatest conqueror in this nation, after the manner of the old Grecian Lyricists, did not only compose the words of his divine odes, but generally set them to music himself. Addison.

5. To constitute by being parts of a whole.

Nor did Israel escape.
'Tis infection, when their barren gold compound
The calf in Oreb. Milton's Par. Los. A few useful things, confounded with many trifles, fill their memories, and compose their intellects. Watts.

6. To calm; to quiet.

He would undertake the journey with him, by which all his fears would be composed. Clarendon.

Eton, that had taught them to substitute their feet, could order teach, and their high spirits compose.
Waller.

Compose thy mind; nor frauds are here contriv'd, nor force design'd.
Dryden.
COMPOSER. n. s. [from compose.] 1. An author; a writer. Now will be the right season of forming them to be able writers and composers in every excellent matter. Milton. If the thoughts of such authors have nothing in them, they at least do no harm, and show an honest industry, and a good intention in the composition. Pope.

2. He that adapts the musick to words; he that forms a tune.

COMPOSÉ, participial adj. [from compose.] Calm; serious; even; sedate. In Spain there is something still more sensate and composed in the manner of the inhabitants. Addison on Italy.

The Mantuan there in sober thought is composed of his posture, and his look sedate. Pope.

COMPOSÈDLY, adv. [from composed.] Calmly; seriously; sedately. A man was walking before the door very composed and without a hat. One crying, Here's my fellow that killed the duke; every body asked, which is he? Th'o' man without the hat very composedly answered, I am he. Chardin.

Some are of opinion that the composer pillars of this arch were in imitation of the pillars of Solomon's temple. Daddly's Albinum and Albinian, Preface.

COMPOSITE, adj. [compositus, Lat.] The composite order in architecture is the last of the five orders of columns; so named, because its capital is composed out of those of the other orders; and it is also called the Roman and Italick order. Harris.

Some are of opinion that the composite pillars of this arch were in imitation of the pillars of Solomon's temple. Daddly's Albinum and Albinian, Preface.

COMPOSITION, n. s. [compositio, Lat.] 1. The act of forming an integral of various dissimilar parts. We have exact forms of composition, whereby they incorporate almost as they were natural simples. Bacon's New Atlantis.

In the time of the Incas reign of Peru, no composition was allowed by the laws to be used in point of medicine, but only simples proper to each disease. Temple.

2. The act of bringing simple ideas into complication; opposed to analysis, or the separation of complex notions. The investigation of difficult things, by the method of analysis, ought ever to precede the method of composition. Newton's Opticks.

COMPOSITOR. n. s. [from compose.] He that ranges and adjusts the types in printing; distinguished from the pressman, who makes the impression upon paper.

COMPOST. n. s. [Tr. composition, Lat.] A mixture of various substances for enriching the ground; manure. Avoid what is to come, and do not spread the compost on the woods; to make them naked. Shaksp. Hamlet.

We also have great variety of composts and soils, for the making of the earth fruitful.

Water young planted shrubs, amonunou especially, which you can hardly refresh too often, and it requires abundant compost. Evelyn's Kalendar.

There, as its dream foretold, a cart he found, That carried compost forth to dung the ground. Dryden.

In vain the rustling grove Seems fair awhile, cherish'd with fester earth; But when the alien compost is exhaust, The native purity again in it prevails. Philips.

To COMPOST, p. a. [from the noun.] To manure; to enrich with soil. By removing into worse earth, or forbearing to compost the earth, water-nutrient turneth into field-mint, and the crottle into rape.

As for earth, it composteth itself; for I knew a garden that bad a field pored upon it, and it did bear fruit excellently. Bacon's Natural History.

COMPOSTURE, n. s. [from compost.] Soil; manure. Not used.

The earth's a thief, That feeds and breeds by a composture stol'n From general excrements. Shaksp. Timon.

COMPOSTURE, n. s. [from compose.] 1. The act of composing or uniting. Their own forms are not like to be so sound, or comprehensive of the nature of the three first forms of publick compars. King Charles.

2. Arrangement; composition; mixture; order.

Hence languages arise, when by institution and agreement, such a composer of letters, such a word, is intended to signify such a certain thing. Holder on Elements of Speech.

From the various compars and compositions of these corporises together, happen all the varieties of the bodies formed out of them. Woodward's Natural History.

3. The form arising from the disposition of the various parts. In compars of his face, Liv'd a fair but manly grace. Crus. Love.

4. Frame; make; temperament.

To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet With slaves that smell of sweat; say this becomes him as his composer must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish. Shaks. Antony and Cleopatra.

The duke of Buckingham sprang, without any help, by a kind of congenial compars, to the like ness of your late sovereign and master. Hotten.

5. Adjustment.

God will rather look to the inward raptures of the mind, than to the outward form and compars of the body. Doppa.

6. Composition; framed discourse.

Discourses on such occasions are seldom the productions of leisure, and should be read with those favourable allowances that are made to busy compars.

In the comparses of men, remember you are a man as well as they; and it is not their reason, but your own, that is given to publick notice. Watts on the Mind.

7. Sedateness; calmness; tranquillity.
To whom the virgin majesty of Eve, as one who loves, and some unkindness meets, with sweet assurance comprise thus Mr. Milton.

1. Agreement; composition; settlement of differences. The treaty at Uxbridge gave the fairest hopes of an happy comparsoure. King Charles.

2. To bargain in the lump. Here's a fellow will help you to-morrow; compound with him by the year. Shakspur. Measure for Measure.

3. To come to terms, by granting something on each side. Cornwall compounded to furnish ten oxen after Missoubras for thirty pounds.

4. To determine. This is not in use. We here deliver, subscribed by the consuls and patricians, together with the seal of the Senate, what we have compounded on. Shakspur. Coriolanus.

To COMPOUND. n. a. [compare, Lat.] 1. To mingle many ingredients together in one mass.

2. To form by uniting various parts. Whoever compondeth any like it, shall be cut off. Exodus, xxx.

3. To mingle in different positions; to combine. We cannot have a single image that did not enter through the sight; but we have the power of altering and compounding those images into all the varieties of picture. Addison's Spectator.

4. In grammar. To form one word from two or more words. Where it and Tigris embrace each other under the city of Isin, there do they agree of a point, and compounded name, and are called Pla-Tigris. Raleigh's History of the World.

5. To compose by being united. Who'd have a mock'd with glory, to aslive But in a dream of friendship. To have his pomp, and all what state compounds, but only painted, like his varnish'd friends. Shakspur. Timon.

6. To adjust a difference by some recension of the rigour of claims. I would to God all strifes were well compounded. Shakspur.

7. To discharge a debt by paying only part. Shall I, ye gods! be crys, my debts compound? Gay.

To COMPOUND, v. n. 1. To come to terms of agreement, by abating something of the first demand. It has for before the thing accepted or remitted. They were, at last, glad to compound for his barecompound for the Tower.

2. A mingler; one who mixes bodies. To COMPREHEND, r. a. [comparendo, Lat.] 1. To comprise; to include; to contain; to imply.

It would be ridiculous to grow old in the study of every necessary thing, in an art which compræs as many several parts. Dryden.

2. To contain in the mind; to understand; to conceive. Rome was not better by her Horace taught, than we are here to comprehend his thought. Waller.

'Tis unjust, that they who have not the least notion of heroic writing, should therefore condemn the pleasure which others receive from it, because they cannot comprehend it. Dryden.

COMPREHENSIBLE. adj. [comprehensibilis, Fr. comprehensibilis, Lat.] 1. Intelligible; attainable by the mind; conceivable by the understanding. The horizon sets the bounds between the enlightened and dark parts of things, between what is and what is not comprehensible by us. Locke.

2. Possible to be comprised. Let this part of knowledge should seem to any not comprehensible by axiom, we shall set down some heads of it. Bacon.

COMPREHENSIBLY. adv. [from comprehensible.] With great power of signification or understanding; significantly; with great extent of sense. Tillotson seems to have used comprehensibly for comprehensively.

The words wisdom and righteousness are commonly used very comprehensibly, so as to signify all religion and virtue. Tulli.

COMPREHENSION. n. s. [comprehensive, Lat.] 1. The act or quality of comprising or containing; inclusion. In the Old Testament there is a close comprehension of the New, in the New an open discovery of the Old.

The comprehension of an idea, regards all essential modes and properties of it; so body, in its comprehension, takes in solidity, figure, quantity, mobility. Watts's Leg.

2. Summary; epitome; compendium; abstract; abridgment in which much is comprised. If we would draw a short abstract of human happiness, bring together all the various ingredients of it, and digest them into one prescription, we must at last fix on this wise and religious aphorism in my text, as the sum and comprehension of Ringer.

3. Knowledge; capacity; power of the mind to admit and contain many ideas at once. You give no proof of decay of your judgment, and comprehension of all things, within the compass of an human understanding. Dryden.

4. In rhetoric. A trope or figure, by which the name of a whole is put for a part, or that of a part for the whole, or a definite number for an indefinite number.

Harris.

COMPREHENSIVE. adj. [from comprehend.] 1. Having the power to comprehend or understand many things at once. He must have been a man of a most wonderful comprehensura nature, because he has taken into the compass of his Cantoerbury Tales the various masquers and humours of the whole English nation in his age; not a single character has escaped him.

Dryden's Fables, Preface. His understanding, his incorrupt heart, his comprehensive head; all interests weighed, All Europe sav'd, yet Britain not betray'd.

Pope's Epistles.

2. Having the quality of comprising or including; compendious; extensive.
We tried whether heat would, notwithstanding so forcible a compression, dilate it.

To COMPRESS. v. a. [compress, Lat.] To print together; it is commonly done, in law, for the deftful printing of another's records or book, to the prejudice of the rightful proprietor.

To COMPRISE. v. a. [compris't, compris', Fr.] To contain; to comprehend; to include.

Necessity of shortness causeth men to cut off imperfect discourses, and to comprise much matter in fewer words.

Hooker.

To COMPROMISE. n.s. [compromien, Lat.] To print together; it is commonly done, in law, for the deftful printing of another's records or book, to the prejudice of the rightful proprietor.

To COMPROMISE. n.s. [compromission, Lat.]

1. Compromise is a mutual promise of two or more parties at difference, to refer the ending of their controversies to the arbitrement or equity of one or more arbitrators.

Cowell.

2. A compact or bargain, in which some concessions are made on each side.

Wars have not wasted it, for war's sake he hath not.

But basely yielded, upon compromise, that which his ancestors achieved with blows.

Shaksp. Rich. II.

To COMPROMISE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To compound; to adjust a compact by mutual concessions: as, they compromised the affair at a middle rate.

2. In Shakespeare it means, unusually, to accord; to agree.

Laban and himself were compromis'd, that all the yearlings, which were streak'd and pied, should fall as Jacob's hire.

Shaksp.

COMPROMISsio'nal adj. [from compromis'.] Relating to a compromise.

COMPROVINCIAL. n. s. [from con and provincial.] Belonging to the same province.

At the consecration of an archbishop, all his compromisios ought to give their attendance.

Account; compt; reckoning.

Shaksp. King John.

To Compt. n.s. [compte, Fr. comptus, Lat.] Account; compt; reckoning.

Your servants ever have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt.

To make their audit at your highness' pleasure, still to return your own.

Shaksp.

To Compt. v. a. [compt, Fr.] To compute; to number. We now use to count, which see.

COMPTABLE adj. [from compt.] Accountable; responsible; ready to give account; subject; submissive.

Good beatties, let me sustain my scorn; I am very comptable even to the least sinister usage.

Shaksp.

To COMP'T. v. a. [This word is written by some authors, who did not attend to the etymology, for control; and some of its derivatives are written in the same manner.] To control; to over-rule; to oppose.

COMPROLLER. n.s. [from comptroll.]

Director; supervisor; superior intendent; governor.

This might he a supepr and a great one.

To many lords and ladies; I was spoken to, with Sir Henry Guilford, this night to be comptroller.

Shaksp. Henry VIII.

The comptrollers of vulgar opinions pretend to find out such a simultanee in some kind of banish. To Temple.

My mates permit me not from hence to fly.

Nor he, the great comptroller of the sky.

Doyl. Ened.

COMP'TERSHIP. n.s. [from comptroller.] Superintendence.

The gospel for stannery-causes is anointed to the comptrollership.

Carrie's Survey of Cornwall.

COMPAULSIVELY. adv. [from compulsory.]

With force; by constraint.

Clarissa.

COMPAULSATORY. adj. [from compulsatory.]

Having the force of compelling; coercive.

Which is no other, but to recover from us by strong hand.

And terms compulsory, those foresaid hands by his father lost.

Compulsion thus transported! Milton's Par. Lost. Such sweet compulsion doth in us make lie.

To kill the daughters of necessity.

Milton.

The state of being compelled; violence suffered.

Compulsion is in an agent capable of volition, when the beginning or continuation of any action is contrary to the preference of his mind.

Locke.

When the force be hung on our broken ear.

If with what compulsion and laborious flight we sunk thus low! Milton's Par. Lost.

This faculty is free from compulsion, and so spontaneous, and free from determination by the particular object.

Hale.

Possibly there were others who assisted Harold, partly out of fear and compulsion.

Hale on Common Law.

COMPAULSIVE. adj. [from compulsor, Fr. compulsus, Lat.] Having the power to compel; forcible.

The Danube, vast and deep, supreme of rivers! to the frightful brink, urg'd by compulsorius arms, soon as they reach'd, new terror claw'd their veins.

Philips.

The clergy would be glad to recover their deeds by a more short and compulsorius method.

Swift.

COMPAULSIVELY. adv. [from compulsive.]

By force; by violence.

COMPAULSIVENESS. n.s. [from compulsive.]

Force; compulsion.

COMPAULSIVELY. adv. [from compulsory.]

In a compulsory or forcible manner; by force; by violence.

To say that the better deseruer hath such right to govern, as he may compulsorily bring under the less worthy, is idle.

Bacon.

COMPAULSORY. adj. [compo'soire, Fr.]

Having the power of necessitating or compelling.

If errch in this, to think that actions, proceeding from fear, are properly compulsory actions; which, in truth, are not only voluntary, but free actions; neither compelled, nor so much as physically necessitated.

Bramhall against Hobbes.
COM

COMPUNCTION. n. s. [computation, Fr. from puncto, punctum to prick, Lat.] 1. The power of pricking; stimulation; irritation.

This is that acid and piercing spirit, which, with such activity and compunction, invades the brains and nostrils of those who receive it.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. The state of being pricked by the conscience; repentance; contrition.

He asked for the church of God, to the king, with expressions of great compunction. Clarendon.

COMPUNCTIOUS. adj. [from compunction.] Repentant; sorrowful; tender.

Step up th' access and passage to remorse, That no compunctions visitings of nature

COMPUNCTIVE. adj. [from compunction.]

Causing remorse.

COMPUTATION. n. s. [computatio, Lat.] The practice of justifying any man's veracity by the testimony of another.

COMPUTATOR. n. s. [Lat.] One who bears his testimony to the credibility of another.

The next quarry, or chaff-pit, will give abundant attestation; these are so obvious, that I need not be far to seek for a computator.

Woodward's Nat. Hist.

COMPUTABLE. adj. [from comput.] Capable of being numbered or computed.

If, instead of twenty-four letters, there were twenty-four millions and a finite number, so would all combinations thereof be finite, though not easily computable by arithmetic.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

COMPUTATION. n. s. [from comput.]

1. The act of reckoning; calculation.

My princely father

Then, by just computation of the time,

Found that the issue was not his. Shaks. Rich. III.

2. The sum collected or settled by calculation.

We pass for women of fifty: many additional years are thrown into female computations of this nature.

Addison's Guardian.

To COMPUTE.

t. a. [computo, Lat.] To reckon; to calculate; to number; to count.

Compute how much water would be requisite to lay the earth under water.

Burnet's Theory of the Earth.

Where they did compute by weeks, yet still the year was measured by months. Holder on Time.

Alas! not dazzled with their noon-tide ray.

Compute the warm and varying to the day;

The whole amount of that enormous fame,

A tale that bends their glory with their shame.

Brown's Vulgar Errs.

COMPUTE. n. s. [computus, Lat.] Computation; calculation.

Though there were a fatality in this year, yet divers were out in their account, abetting several ways from the true and just compute; and calling that one year which perhaps might be another.

Brown's Vulgar Errs.

COMPUTER. n. s. [from comput.] Reckoner; accountant; calculator.

The calendars of these computors, and the accounts of their days, are different. Mr. Vulg. Errs.

I have known some such ill computors, as to imagine the many millions in stocks so much real wealth.

Shakesp.

COMPUTIST. n. s. [computiste, Fr.] Calculator; one skilled in the art of numbers or computation.

The treasurer was a wise man, and a strict comptist.

Watson.

We conceive we have a year in three hundred and sixty-five days exact; computors tell us that we escape six hours.

Brown.

COMRADE. n. s. [comradae, Fr. from camera a chamber; one that lodges in the same chamber, contumelio fruiter.]

1. One who dwells in the same house of chamber.

Rather I abjure all roofs, and chuse To be a confrater with the wolf and owl.

Shakesp. King Lear.

2. A companion; a partner in any labour or danger.

He permitted them To put out both thine eyes, and fetter'd thee send Into the common prison, there to grind Among the slaves and asses, thy companions.

As good for nothing else.

Milton's Agamemnon.

A footman, being newly married, desired his confrater to tell him freely what the town said of it.

Shakesp.

CON.

CONCATE. n. s. [from concate rate.] A series of links; an uninterrupted unvariable succession.

The stocks affirmed a fatal, unchangeable concatenation of causes, reaching to the elicit acts of nature, in this book.

Shaks.

CONCAYATION. n. s. [from concave.

The act of making concave.

CONCAVE, adj. [concaves, Lat.]

1. Hollow without angles; as, the inner surface of an eggshell, the inner curve of an arch; opposed to convex.

These great fragments falling hollow, inclosed under their concave surface a great deal of water.

Burnet's Theory.

2. Hollow.

Have you not made an universal machine,

That Tyber troubled underneath his banks,

To hear the replication of your sounds

Made in his concave shores? Shaks. Julius Caesar.

For his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered gully, or a worm-enam'd nut.

Shakesp. As you like it.

CONCAVENES. n. s. [from concave.]

Hollowness.

Dict.

CONCAYITY. n. s. [from concave.]

Internal surface of a hollow spherical or spheroidal body.

Bunche that contains figures of white marble should not be coloured in their concavity too black.

Watten.

They have taken the impressions of these shells with that exquisite nieiness, that no metal, when melted and cast in a mould, can ever possibly represent the concavity of that mould with greater exactness than these fins do the concavities of the shells, wherein they were moulded.

Woodward's Nat. Hist.

CONCAV-CONCAVE. adj. Concave or hollow on both sides.

CONCAV-CONVEX. adj. [from concave and convex.] Concave one way, and convex the other.

I procured another concavo-convex plate of glass, ground on both sides to the same sphere with the former plate.

A concavo-convex pentangular plate, part of a shell that belongs to the echinothec.

CONCAV-CONVEXITY. n. s. [from concavo-convex.] With hollowness; in such a manner as discovers the internal surface of a hollow sphere.

The dolphin that carrieth Areson is concavo-convex and habis its spine depressed.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To CONCEAL v. a. [concele, Lat.] To hide; to keep secret; not to divulge; to cover; not to detect.

He oft finds med'cine, who his grief importa;

But double griefs afflict concealing hearts. Far. Q. Come, Catesby, thou art sworn

As deeply to effect what we intend,

As closely to conceal what we impart.

Shakesp. Richard III.

ULYSSES himself adds, he was the most eloquent and the most silent of men: he knew that a word was never wrought so much good as a word concealed.

Brown.

There is but one way I know of conveying safely with all men, that is, not by enquiring what we say or do, but by saying or doing nothing that deserves to be concealed.

R. N. Page.

CONCEALABLE. adj. [from conceal.] Capable of being concealed; possible to keep secret, or hid.

Returning a levy unto his Maker, and presuming to put off the searcher of hearts, he denied the
I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft.
Shaksp. King Lear.

Strong conceits, like a new principle, carry all easily with it, when yet above common sense.
Loche.

Malbranche has an odd conceit,
As ever enter'd Fichardt's pate.
Prior.

1. Opinion, in a neutral sense.
Secrecy a man wise in his own conceit?
There is more hope of a fool than of him.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

5. Opinion, in a neutral sense.
Secrecy a man wise in his own conceit?
There is more hope of a fool than of him.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

While he was on his way to the gibbet, a freak
Took him in the head to go off with a conceit.
L'Estrange.

6. Conception, as distinguished from image.
Some to conceit alone their works confine.
And wishing thoughts struck out at every line.
Pope.

7. Fondness; favourable opinion;
Opinion-pride.
Since he has studied in learning, and great Conceit of himself; he has lost his religion; may
He find it again by harder study, under humbler truth.
Bentley.

8. Out of Conceit with.
No longer fond of.
Not that I dare assume to myself to have put him out of conceit with it, by having convinced him of
The fantasticalness of it.
Tilotsen; Preface.

What hath chiefly put me out of Conceit with
This moving matter, is the frequent disapprobation.
Swift.

To Conceive.
To conceive; so far as to believe.
One of the bad ways you must conceive me.
Either a coward, or a flatterer.

They looked for great matters at their hands,
In a cause which they conceived to be for the liberty
Of the subject.
Bacon.

He conceives himself to be struck at, when he is
Not so much as thought of.
L'Estrange.

The strong, by conceiving themselves weak, are Thereby rendered as unconceivable, and consequently
As useless, if they really were so.
South's Sermons.

To Conceive.
To conceive; so far as to believe.
One of the bad ways you must conceive me.
Either a coward, or a flatterer.

They looked for great matters at their hands,
In a cause which they conceived to be for the liberty
Of the subject.
Bacon.

He conceives himself to be struck at, when he is
Not so much as thought of.
L'Estrange.

The strong, by conceiving themselves weak, are Thereby rendered as unconceivable, and consequently
As useless, if they really were so.
South's Sermons.

To Conceive.
To conceive; so far as to believe.
One of the bad ways you must conceive me.
Either a coward, or a flatterer.

They looked for great matters at their hands,
In a cause which they conceived to be for the liberty
Of the subject.
Bacon.

He conceives himself to be struck at, when he is
Not so much as thought of.
L'Estrange.

The strong, by conceiving themselves weak, are Thereby rendered as unconceivable, and consequently
As useless, if they really were so.
South's Sermons.

To Conceive.
To conceive; so far as to believe.
One of the bad ways you must conceive me.
Either a coward, or a flatterer.

They looked for great matters at their hands,
In a cause which they conceived to be for the liberty
Of the subject.
Bacon.

He conceives himself to be struck at, when he is
Not so much as thought of.
L'Estrange.

The strong, by conceiving themselves weak, are Thereby rendered as unconceivable, and consequently
As useless, if they really were so.
South's Sermons.

To Conceive.
To conceive; so far as to believe.
One of the bad ways you must conceive me.
Either a coward, or a flatterer.

They looked for great matters at their hands,
In a cause which they conceived to be for the liberty
Of the subject.
Bacon.

He conceives himself to be struck at, when he is
Not so much as thought of.
L'Estrange.

The strong, by conceiving themselves weak, are Thereby rendered as unconceivable, and consequently
As useless, if they really were so.
South's Sermons.
rather to be ascribed to the ante-number than to the entire number. Bacon.

2. Consistency.
Reasons borrowed from nature and the schoolmen, as from the mean, carry a mucisk and concept to that which God hath said in his word.
Dr. Malm.

This is in concept or to own principles, which allow no merit, so intrinsick worth, to accomplish a state more than another.
Asterbyer.

To CONCENTRATE. v. a. [concentrer, Fr. from con and centrum, Lat.] To drive into a narrow compass; to drive towards the centre: contrary to expand or dilate.

To CONCENTRE. v. a. [concentrer, Fr. from con and centrum, Lat.] To tend to one common centre: to have the same centre with something else.

All circular bodies, that receive a concentration of the light, must be shadowed in a circular manner.

To CONCENTRE. v. a. To direct or contract towards one centre.
The having a part less to animate, will serve to concentrate the spirits, and make them more active in the rest.

In the concentrating all their precious beans Of sacred influence.
Milton.

CONCENTRICAL. adj. [concentricus, Concentric.] Having one common centre.

If, as in water stirred, more circles be produced by the way, and these additions take these, like so many spheres, but one beam's made; For they are all concentric unto thee.

Spenser.

The manner of its conception is by concentric rings, like those of an onion about the first kernel.

He also, using in the circular movements of the sun, or other central body, could in no wise be attained without the power of the Divine arm.

CONCEPTACLE. n. s. [concepiaculum, Lat.] That in any thing which is contained.

There is at this day resident, in that huge conceptacle, water enough to effect such a deluge.
Wordsworth's Natural History, Preface.

CONCEPTIBLE. adj. [from concepi, conceptum, Lat.] That may be conceived; intelligible; capable to be understood.

Some of his attributes, a. u. the manifestations thereof, are not only highly detectable to the immediate faculties, but are so cleared and easily perceptible by us, because apparent in his works.

Hale's Origins of Mankind.

CONCEPION. n. s. [conceptio, Lat.]

1. The act of conceiving, or growing quick with pregnancy.
I will greatly multiply thy sorrow by thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children.

Genesis, iii. 16.

2. The state of being conceived.
Joy had the like conception in our eyes, And, at that instant, like a babe speechless.

Shakesp.

Our own productions flatter us: it is impossible not to be fond of them at the moment of their conception.

Dryden's Dunciad.

3. Notion; idea; image in the mind.
As conceptions are the images or resemblances of things to the mind within itself, in the like manner are words or any other such tokens, or resemblances of those conceptions to the minds of them whom we converse with.

South's Sermons.

Conscia is the acutest poet amongst us, and they will confess that their quickest, most admired conceptions, were such as started into their minds, like sudden flashes of lightning among the clouds, not known how, nor whence; and not by any certain consequence, or dependence of one thought upon another, as it is in matters of abstractive reasoning.

South's Sermons.

As to have right conceptions about us, we must bring our understandings to the infallible nature and unalterable relations of things, and not endanger your bringing things to any preconceived notions of our own.

Locke.

4. Sentiments; purpose.
I thou but rememberest of me at my own conception, I have perceived a most fatigued neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as any unjust curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness.

Shakesp. King Lear.

Please your highness, none
His dangerous conception in this point:
Not friends'd by his wish to your high person.
This will is most malignantly, and it strays Beyond your father the friends. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

5. Apprehension; knowledge.
And as if beasts conceiv'd what reason were, And that conception should distinctly show
They should the name of reasonable bear;
For, without reason, none could reason know.

Dryden.

6. Concept; sentiment; pointed thought.
He is too fluctuant sometimes, and sometimes too dry; many times unequal, and almost always forced; and, besides, is full of conceptions, points of epigram, and witlascem, all which are not only below the dignity of heroic verse, but contrary to its nature.

Dryden's Jovius, Dedication.

CONCEPTIOUS. adj. [conceptum, Lat.]
Apt to conceive; fruitful; pregnant.

Common mother,
Enear thy fertile and conception womb;
Let it no more bring out to ingratitude man.

Shakesp. Timon.

CONCEPTIVE. adj. [conceptum, Lat.]
Capable to conceive:
In hot climates, and where the aterine parts exceed in heat, the sinew of a simple they may be reduced into a conception constitution.

Brown's Fulgar Errors.

To CONCERN. v. a. [concerner, Fr. concerner, low Lat.]

1. To relate to; to belong to.
Exclude the use of natural reasoning about the sense of holy scripture, concerning the articles of our faith; and then, that the scripture doth concern the articles of our faith, who can ascribe us?

Hooker.

Count Claudia may hear; for what I would speak of concern him.

Shakesp.

3. To interest; to engage by interest.
I knew a young negro who was sick of the smallpox. I found his name was Concerned, that the little tumours left whisth specks behind them.

Boyle on Colours.

Above the rest two goddesses are Conceiv'd for each; here Venus, Juno there.

Dryden's Aeneid.

Providence, where it loves a nation, conceives itself to own and assert the interest of religion, by blasting the splinters of religious persons and places.

South's Sermons.

Whatever past actions it cannot reconcile, or appropriated to that present evil by contrary possessing, it can be no more concerned in than if they had never been done.

Locke.

They think themselves out of the reach of provocation, and no longer concerned to solicit his favour.

Rogers.

5. To concern himself. To intermeddle; to be busy.
Being a layman, I ought not to have concerned myself with speculations which belong to the profession.

Dryden.

CONCERN. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Business; affair: considered as relating to some one.
Let early care thy main concern secure, Things of less moment may delays endure.

Derham.

This manner of exposing the private concerns of families, and sacrificing the secrets of the dead to the curiosity of the living, is one of those licentious practices which might well deserve the univimadloture of our government. Addis. Freeholder.

A Heathen emperor said, if the gods were offended, it was their own concern, and they were able to vindicate themselves.

Swift.

Religion is no trivial concern, to be performed in any careless and superficial manner.

Rogers.

2. Interest; engagement.
No plot the alarm to his retirements give; 'Tis all mankind's concern that he should live.

Drayton.

We speak when the confederation of the world, these have no concern in the question.
Burke's Theory of the Earth.

3. Importance; moment.
Mysterious secrets of a high concern, of weighty truths, so savvying sense, Explain'd by unaffected eloquence.

Re-assemble.

The mind is stunned and dazzled amidst that variety of objects; she cannot apply herself to

388
CONCERNEDLY. adv. [from concern.]
With affection; with interest.
They had more positively and concernedly wedded his cause, than they were before understood to have done.
Clarendon.

CONCERNING. prep. [from concern; this word, originally a participle, has before a noun the force of a preposition.]
Relating to; with relation to.
There is not any thing more subject to error, than the true judgment concerning the power and forces of an estate.
Bowen.
The ancients had no higher recourse than to nature, as may appear by a discourse concerning this subject.
Gibbon.
None can demonstrate that there is such an island as Jamaica; yet, upon testimony, I am free from all doubt concerning it.
Tillotson, Preface.

CONCERNMENT. n. s. [from concern.]
1. The thing in which we are concerned or interested; affair; business; interest.
To mix with any concerns I desist.
Henceforth, no more discontinue my own.
Milton's Agamemnon.

This shews how useful you have been.
To bring the king's concerns in.
Hudibras.
Yet when we're sick, the doctor's flesh in호계.
Leaving our great concernment to the last.
Davenham.
When my concernment takes up no more room or compass than myself, then, so long as I know where to breathe and to eat, I know also where to be happy.
South.
He that is wise in the affairs and concernsments of other men, but careless and negligent of his own, that man may be said to be busy, but he is not wise.
Tillotson.

Our spiritual interests, and the great concernsments of a future state, would double-occasion often.
Atterbury.

Propositions which extend only to the present life, are small, compared with those that have influence upon our everlasting concernsments.
Watts.

Watts on the Mind.

2. Relation; influence.
Sir, 'tis of near concernment, and import
No less than the king's life and honour.
Dryden's Sophy.

He justly fears a peace with me would prove
Of ill concernment to his haughty love.
Dryden's Indian Emperor.

3. Intercourse; business.
The great concernment of men is with men, one amongst another.
Locke.

4. Importance; moment.
I look upon experimental truths as matters of great concernment to mankind.
Boyle.

5. Interposition; regard; meddling.
He married a daughter to the earl, without any other approbation of her father, or concernment in it, than to prevent the coming in his presence.
Clarendon.

6. Passion; emotion of mind.
While they are so eager to destroy the fame of others, their ambition is manifest in their concernments.
Dryden.
CON

1. Determination; final decision. Ways of possible conclusion there are but these two certain; the one a sentence of judicial decision, given by authority thereeto appointed within ourselves; the other, the last kind of sentence, given by a more universal authority. Hooker.

2. The collection from propositions premised; the consequence. The conclusion of experience, from the time past to the time present, will not be sound and perfect. And marrying divers principles and grounds, Out of their match a true conclusion brings. Davies.

He refused not to be concluded by the authority of one legally solemnly. Atterbury.

To CONCLUDE. v. n.

1. To perform the last act of ratiocination; to collect the consequence; to determine.

For why should we m. Name price isotonic, but in a single position, no way fundamental, an enemy writes that he had some doubts. Atterbury. I question not but your translation will do honour to our country; for I conclude of it already from those performances. Addison to Pepys.

3. Finally to determine. They humble suc unto your excellence, To have a godly peace concluded of Between the realms of England and of France. Shakes.

To CONCOAGULATE. v. a. [from con and coagulate.] To curdle or congeal one thing with another.

The case of those, upon their solution by the rain, may work upon those other substances, formerly congealed with them. Boyle's Experiments. They do but coagulate themselves, with congealing with them any water. Boyle's History of Firmness. CONCOAGULATION.n.s. [from congeulate.] A congealing by which different bodies are joined in one mass.

To CONCOCT. v. a. [concoque, Lat.] To digest by the stomach, so as to turn food to nutrient.

The working of purging medicines cometh two or three hours after the medicines taken; for that the stomach first maketh a proof, whether it can contents it. Bacon. Assuredly he was a man of a free stomach, unable to concoct any great fortune, prosperous or adversative; for if a crow or blackbird grow while we account it more pretty. He, though he knew not which soul spake, Because both meant, both spake the same, Might then a new concoctation take, And part far purer than he came. Donne.

CONCOLOUR. adj. [concolor. Lat.] Of one colour; without variety.

In conco colour animals, and such as are combined unto the same colour, we measure not their beauty thereby; for if a crow or blackbird grow while we account it more pretty. Brown. To argue from a concoimate to a causality, is not inadmissible conclusive. Galen's Epistola.

CONCOMITANT. adj. [concomitans, Lat.] Conjoined with; concurrent with; coming and going with, as collateral, not causative or consequential.
The spirit that furthereth the extension or dilata- tion of bodies, and is ever concomitant with po- rosity and dryness.

It has pleased our wise Creator to annex to sev- eral objects, as also to several of our thoughts, a concomitant pleasure; and that in several objects, to several degrees.

CONCOMITANT. n. s. Companion; person or thing collaterally connected. These effects are, from the local motion of the air, a concomitant of the sound, and not from the sound itself.

He made him the chief concomitant of his life apparent and only son, in a journey of much ad- venture.

In consumptions, the protoreman concomitants, an universal heat of the body, a torious diur- rhoea, and hot distillation, have all a corrosive quality. The other concomitants of ingratitude is hard- heartedness, or want of compassion.

South's Sermon.

CONCOMITANTLY. adv. [from concomitant.] In company with others.

To CONCOITATE. v. a. [concomitatus, Lat.] To be collaterally connected with any thing; to come and go with another. This simple bloody specatation of the lungs, is differed from that which concomitates a phlegra.

Harvey on Consumption.

CONCORD. n. s. [concordia, Lat.] 1. Agreement between persons or things; suitableness of one to another; peace; union; mutual kindness.

Had I power, I should have the sweet nectar of concord into hell, and pour the universal peace. Stubs, Macbeth.

What concord hath Christ with Belial? 2. Cor. vi. 15.

One shall rise of proud ambitious heart, who can not content himself with fair eminence, and mellow state. Will arrogate dominion undeservedly.

Over his brethren, and quite possesses concord within the seas of earth, and universal paradise. Milton.

Unesse within the wind of such communion; such as, to set forth.

Great things by small, if, nature's concord broke, and man's contentations were sprung, Milton.

Kind concord, heavenly born! who blissful reign

Holds this vast globe in one surrounding chain;

Soul of the world!

Ticket.

2. A compact.

It appeared by the concord made between Hen- ry and Doderick, Irish King, and Drury in Ireland.

3. Harmony; consent of sounds.

The man who hath not music in himself, Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treason, for the melodic art. Shakespeare, Mercur.

4. Principal grammatical relation of one word to another, distinct from regimen.

Have those who have writ about declensions, conjugations, and syntaxes, lost their labour? Lolle.

CONCORDANCE. n. s. [concordantia, Lat.] 1. Agreement.

2. A book which shews in how many texts of scripture any word occurs.

I shall take it for an opportunity to tell you, how you are to rule the city out of a concordance, South's Sermons, Dedication.

CONCERN. n. s. [concernus, Lat.] 1. The act of conceruing; coalition.

There is the cohesion of the matter into a more loose consistence, like clay, and thereby it is pre- pared to the concurrence of a probable fire.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

CONCRESCENCE. n. s. [from concresco, Lat.] The act or quality of growing by the union of separate particles.

Seeing it is neither a substance perfect, nor in- clusive, how any other substance should thence take concrescence, hath not been sufficiently proved.

Ralegh's History of the World.

To CONCRETE. [concrescor, Lat.] To coalesce into one mass; to grow by the union and cohesion of parts.

The mineral or metallic matter, thus concreting with the city's wall, is equally dissolved throughout the body of it.

Woodward.

When any saline liquor is evaporated to a cuttle- bone, and let cool, the salt concretes in regular figures; which argues that the particles of the salt, before they concreted, floated in the liquor at equal distances; in rank and file.

Newton.

To CONCRETE. v. a. To form by concrescence; to form by the coalition of scattered particles.

There are in the inferior world divers bodies, that are concreted out of others, is beyond all dispute; we see it in the natures.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

CONCRETE. adj. [from the verb.]

1. Formed by concrescence; formed by coalition of separate particles into one mass.

The first concrete state, or consistent surface, of the chaos, must be of the same figure as the last liquid state.

Burnet.

2. In logic. Not abstract: applied to a subject.

A kind of mutual commutation there is, whereby those concrete names, God and man, when we speak of Christ, do interchanges one another's room; so that, for truth of speech, it skilleth not whether we say that the son of God hath created the world, and the son of man by his death hath saved it; or else that the son of man did create, and the son of God did save, the world.

Hooker.

Concrete terms, while they express the quality do either express, or imply, or refer to some subject to which it belongs; as white, round, long, broad, wise, mortal, living, dead: but these are not always nom adjectives in a grammatical sense; for a knave, a king, a philosopher, and many other concrets are substantives, as well as knavery, folly, and philosophy, which are the abstract terms that belong to them.

Watts's Ethics.

CONCRETE. n. s. A mass formed by concrescence; or, union of various parts adhering to each other.

If gold itself be admitted, as it must be, for a porous concrete, the proportion of void to body, in the texture of common air, will be so much the greater.

Bentley's Sonnets.

CONCRETELY. adv. [from concrete.] In a manner including the subject with the predicate; not abstractly.

Sin, considered not abstractly for the mere act of obliquity, but concretely, with such a special dependence upon the act of sin as renders the guilt itself

CONCRETENESS. n. s. [from concrete.] Coagulation; collection of fluids into a solid mass.

CONCRETION. n. s. [from concrete.] The act of concreting; coalition.
2. The mass formed by a coalition of separate particles. Some planets, upon the top of the sea, are supposed to grow of some concretion of slime from the water, where the sea-stretch little.

Bacon’s Natural History.

heat, in general, doth not resolve and attenuate the juices of a human body; for so great heat will produce concretions. Aristotle on Animals.

concrete. adj. [from concrete.] Having the power to produce concretions; concreting. When wood and other bodies petrify, we do not ascribe their induration to cold, but into solidous spirit, or concrete juices. Bacon’s Folio, etc.

concreture. n. s. [from concrete.] A mass formed by conglutination.

conclusion. n. s. [from conci-bine, fr. conclusivus, Lat.] The act of living with a woman not married.

adultery was punished with death by the ancient heathens: conclusion was permitted. Bacon.

concubine. n. s. [concubina, Lat.] A woman kept in fornication; a whore; a strumpet.

I know 1 am too mean to be your queen, and yet too good to be your concubine. Shakespeare, Henry VI.

When his great friend was suitor to him to pardon an offender, he denied him: afterwards, when a concubine of his made the same suit, he granted it, and said, such suits were to be granted to whom. Bacon.

he caused him to paint one of his concubines, Campaspe, who had the greatest share in his affection. Dryden.

The wife, though a bright goddess, thus gives place to mortal concords of fresh embrace. Granville. To conculate, v. n. [concute, Lat.] To tread, or trample, under foot. Diction.

conculation. n. s. [from concutatio, Lat.] Trampling with the feet. Diction.

concupiscence. n. s. [from concupiscencia, Lat.] Irregular desire; libidinous wish; lust; lechery. We know not the secret concupiscence to be sin; and are made fearful to offend, though it be but in a wandering cogitation. Hooker.

In our faces the evident signs of foul concupiscence, whence evil store, Ev’n shame, the last of evils. Milton’s Par. Let.

Nor can they say, that the difference of climate inclines one nation to concupiscence and sensual pleasures, another to blood-thirstiness: it would discover great ignorance not to know, that a people has been overrun with recently invented vice. Drayton’s Sermon.

concupiscent. adj. [concupiscens, Lat.] Libidinous; lecherous. He would not, but by gift of my chaste body: To his concupiscent intemperate lust, Release my brother. Shakespeare. Measure for Measure.

concupiscential. adj. [from concupiscus.] Relating to concupiscence. Dict.

concupiscible. adj. [concupiscibilis, Lat.] Impressing desire; eager; desirous; inclining to the pursuit or attainment of anything.

The schools reduce all the passions to these two heads, the concupiscible and insatiable appetite. South’s Sermon.

To concur. v. n. [concurro, Lat.]

1. To meet in one point.

2. To agree; to join in one action, or opinion.

Acts which shall be done by the greater part of my executors, shall be as valid and effectual as if all my executors had concurred in the same.

Swift’s Last Will.

3. It has with before the person with whom one agrees.

It is not evil simply to concur with the heathens, either in opinion or action; and that conformity with them is only then a disgrace, when we follow them in their faults, or, generally in that they do without reason. Hooker.

4. It has to before the effect to which one contributes.

Their affections were known to concur to the most desperate counsels. Chersones. Extremes in nature equal good produce, Extremes in man concur to general use. Pope.

5. To be united with; to be conjoined.

To have an orthodox belief, and a true profession, concurring with a good life, is only to draw Christ with a greater solemnity. South.

Testimony is the argument; and, if fair possibilities, of reason Suitable with it, this argument 1 Tillotson.

6. To contribute to one common event with joint power. When outward causes concur, the idle are soonest seized by this Infection. Collier on the Spinet.

concurrence. n. s. [from concur.]

1. Union; association; conjunction.

We have no other measure but our own ideas, and the concurrence of other probable reasons, to persuade us. Locke.

2. Agreement; act of joining in any design, or measures.

Their concurrence in persuasion, about some material points belonging to the same policy, is not surprising. Hooker, Preface.

The concurrence of the peers in that fury, can be imputed to the irreverence the judges were in. Carleton.

Tariquin the proud was expelled by an universal concurrence of nobles and people. Swift on the Dis in Aeneas and Rome.

3. Combination of many agents or circumstances. Surprised with these great concurrences of things. Crashaw.

He views our behaviour in every concurrence of affords, and sees us engage in all the possible concurrence to it. Addison’s Spectator.

4. Assistance; help.

From these sublime images we collect the greatness of the work, and the necessity of the divine concurrence to it. Rogers.

5. Joint right; equal claim. A bishop might have officers, if there was a concurrence of juridis—c— between him and the archdeacon. Agil.]

6. Joint right; equal claim. A bishop might have officers, if there was a concurrence of juridisc—c— between him and the archdeacon. Agil.

Concurrent. adj. [from concur.]

1. Acting in conjunction; agreeing in the same act; contributing to the same event; concomitant in agency.

I conjoin with these laws the personal presence of the king’s son, as a concurrent cause of this reformation. Dokiers on Ireland.

For, without the concurrent consent of all these three objects of the legislature, no such law can be made. Hale.

This sole vital faculty is not sufficient to external occasions, nor numbers to the purposes under: the animal faculty be concurrent with it, to supply the fibres with animal spirits. Hervey.

Concurrent n. s. [from concur.] That which concurs; a contributory cause.

To all affairs of importance there are three necessary concurrents, without which they can never be dispatched; time, industry, and faculties. Dearcy of Patty.

Concussion. n. s. [concussio, Lat.]

1. The act of shaking; agitation; tremefaction.

It is believed that great ringing of bells, in populous cities, hath dissipated solicitude; which may be from the concussion of the air. Bacon’s Fidevit’s Sermon.

The strong concussion on the heaving tide Roll’d back the vessel to the island’s side. Pope’s Odyssey.

2. The state of being shaken.

There were not instances of such an universal concussion of the whole globe, as must needs imply an agitation of the whole abyss. Woodward’s Natural History.

Concussive. adj. [concussus, Lat.] Having the power or quality of shaking.

To condemn. v. a. [condenmno, Lat.]

1. To find guilty; to doom to punishment; contrary to absolve.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, And every tongue brings in a sorrow tale, And every tale condemns me for a villain. Shakespeare, Richard III.

Is he found guilty —

—Yes, truly, he is, and condemn’d upon’t. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

Considered as a judge, it condemns where it ought to absolve, and pronounces abolution where it ought to condemn. Noteville, xx. 18.

2. It has to before the punishment.

The son of man shall be betrayed unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death. Mark, xvi. 12.

3. To censure; to blame; to declare criminal; contrary to approve.

Who then shall blame His pester’d senses to requite and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there? Shakespeare, Macbeth.

The poet, who flourished in the scene, is condemned in the melle. Dryden’s Envid, Preface.

He who was so unjust as to do his brother an injury, will scarce be so just as to condemn himself for it. Locke.

They who approve my conduct in this particular, are much more numerous than those who condemn it. Spectator.

4. To fine.

And the king of Egypt put him down at Jerusalem, and condemned the land in an hundred talents of silver. 2 Chronicles.

5. To shew guilt by contrast.

The righteous that is dead shall condemn the ungodly which are living. Hebrews, iv. 16.

Condemnable. adj. [from condemn.] Blameable; culpable.

He commands to deface the print of a childless in ashes; which strictly to observe, were condemnable superstition. Brown.
any one is doomed to punishment; the act of condemning; the state of being condemned.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them. Romans vii.

CONDEMNATORY. adj. [from condemn.]
Passing a sentence of condemnation, or of censure.
He that passes the first condemnation sentence, is like a doctor in a popular tumult, who is chargeable with all those disorders to which he gave rise. Government of Tongue.

CONDEMN. n. s. [from condemn.]
A blamer; a censurer; a censor.
Some of the only refusers and censurers of this catholic practice. Taylor's Worthy Common.

CONDEMNABLE. adj. [from condemn.]
That which is capable of condemnation; that which can be drawn or compressed into a narrower compass.
This agent meets with resistance in the movable; and not being in the utmost extremity of density, but condensable yet further, every resistance works something upon the more to condense Digby on the Connexion.

To CONDEMN. v. n. [condensâ, Lat.]
To condense; to make thicker.

To CONDEMN. v. a. To grow thicker.

CONDEMNABLE. adj. [condensatâ, Lat.]
Made thick; condensed; compressed into less space.
Water by nature is white; yea, thickened or condensed, most white, as it appears by the heat, and snows. Porcham.

CONDENSATION. n. s. [from condensâ.]
The act of thickening any body, or making it more gross and weighty: opposite to rarefaction.

If by natural arguments it may be proved, that water, by condensation, may become earth: the same reason teacheth, that earth, raffin'd, may become water. Raleigh's History.

By water-chases the account was not regular; for, from attenuation and condensation, the hours were shorter in hot weather than in cold.

The supply of its moisture is by rains and snows, and dews and condensation of vapours, and perhaps by subterraneous passages. Bentley.

To CONDENSE. v. n. [condensâ, Lat.]
To make any body more thick, close, and weighty; to drive or attract the parts of any body nearer to each other; to insinuate; opposed to rarefy.

Moving in so high a sphere, he must needs, as the sun, raise many curious exhibitions; which, condensed by a popular edium, were capable to cloud the highest merit. King Charles.

Some lead their youth abroad, while some condense.

Their liquid store, and some in cells dispense. Dryden's Virgil.

Such dense and solid strata arrest the volume at the surface of the earth, and collect and condense it there. Woodward.

To CONDENSE. v. n. To grow close and weighty; to withdraw its parts into a narrow compass.
The water falling from the upper parts of the earth, lies presently there condense into little stones. Boyle's Scept. Chym.

All vapours, when they begin to condense and condensable, become first of that bigness whereby azure must be reflected, before they can constitute other colours. Newton's Opticks.

CONDENSE. adj. [from the verb.] Thick; dense; condensed; close; mussy; weighty.

They colour, shape, and size
Assume, as likes them best, condens or rare. Mit.
Did we perfectly know the state of our own condition, and what was most proper for us, we might have reason to blam our prayers not heard, if not answered. Wade’s Preparation. This is a principle adapted to every passion and faculty of our nature, to every state and condition of our life. Rogers. Some depending people take the kingdom to be in no condition of encouraging so unnatural a breast of beggars. Hooker. Condition, circumstance, is not the thing; Bliss is the same in subject as in king. Pope’s Essay on Man.

6. Rank.
I am, in my condition, A prince, Miranda. Shakespeare, Tempest. The king himself, met with many entertainments, at the charge of particular men, which had been rarely practised till then by the persons of the best condition. Clarendon.

7. Stipulation; terms of compact. Condition.
What condition can a treaty find P’t part that is at mercy? Shakespeare, Coriolanus. It was condition that We should have none. To traitors: strike him down. B. Jonson, Catiline. He could not defend it above ten days, and must then submit to the worst condition: the rebels were like to grant to his person, and to his religion. Taylor. Those barroux pirates willingly receive Conditions, such as we are pleased to give. Waller. Make our conditions with your captive king. — Secure me but my solitary cell; ’Tis all I ask him. Dryden’s Don Sebastian.

8. The writing in which the terms of agreement are comprised; compact; bond. Go with me to a notary, seal me there. Your single bond; and in a merry sport, If you repay me not on such a day, In such a place, such sum or sums as are Express’d in the condition, let the forfeit Be nominated. Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.

To condition. v. n. [from the noun.]
To make terms; to stipulate. It was condition that Saturn and Titan, that Saturn should put to death all his male children. Small towns which stand still till great men. Enforce them, by war’s whole condition, Duke. ’Tis one thing, I must confess, to condition for a good office, and another thing to do it gratis. Dryden, End of the Engage.

Conditional. adj. [from condition.]
1. By way of stipulation; not absolute; made with limitations; granted on particular terms. For the use we have his express commandment, for the effect his conditional promise; so that, without obedience to the one, there is of the other no assurance. Hooker. Many scriptures, though as to their formal terms they are absolute, yet as to their sense they are conditional. South. This strict necessity they simple call; Another sort ther is conditional. Dryd. Faber.

2. [In grammar and logic.] Expressing some condition or supposition. Conditional. n. s. [from the adjective.]
A condition. A word not now in use. He said, if he were sure that young man were King of Burgundy, so, he would never bear arms against him. This case seems hard, both in respect of the conditional, and in respect of the other words. Bacon’s Essay of War.

Conditional’ity. n. s. [from conditional.] The quality of being conditional, limitation by certain terms.

And as this clear proposal of the promises may irritate our expectations, so is the conditionality most efficacious to necessitate and encourage them. Decree of Piety.

CONDITIONALLY. adv. [from condition.]
With certain limitations; on particular terms; on certain stipulations.
I here enter, conditionally, the crown to thee, and all the heirs for ever; Conditionally, that here thou take an oath To cease this civil war. Shakespeare, Henry VI. A false apprehension understands that positively, which was but conditionally expressed. Bacon’s Essay of Errors.

We see large preferments accorded to him, but conditionally, upon his doing wicked offices: science shall here, according to its office, interpose and protest. South.

CONDITIONARY. adj. [from condition.]
Stipulated.
Would God in mercy dispense with it as a condition, yet we could not be happy without it, as a natural qualification for heaven. Norden. To condition. v. a. [from condition.] To qualify; to regulate. That I’v’riareth but where it may be supported, we cannot aver the same unto any science therein, which suspends and conditionally enjoins. Bacon’s Essay of Errors.

CONDITIONARY. adj. [from the verb.]
Established on certain terms or conditions.
That which is mistaken to be particular and absolute, and daily understood, is general, but conditionate; and belongs to none who shall not perform the condition. Hammond.

CONDITIONED. adj. [from condition.]
Having qualities or properties good or bad.
The dearest friend to me, the kindest man. The best condition’d. Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.

To CONDOLE. v. n. [condole, Lat.] To lament with those that are in misfortune; to express concern for the miseries of others. It hath with the person for whose misfortune we profess grief. It is opposed to congratulate. Your friends would have come to rejoice, rather than to find you in grief. Temple. I congratulate with the beasts upon this honour done to their king; and must condenk us with our poor countrymen, who are rendered incapable of any benefits for our respects. Addison.

To CONDOLE. v. a. To bewail with another.
The poor man, Sampson, to condenk my chance, As these perhaps; yet wish it had not been. Though for so friendly intent. Blunt, Agonies. Why should our poet petition Isis for her safe delivery, and afterwards condenk her miscarriage? Dryden CONDOLEMENT. n. s. [condole.] Grief; sorrow; mourning.

To preserve In obliterate condenkment, is a course Of insipid stumbling, unmanly grief. Shakespeare, Hamlet.

CONDOLEENCE. n. s. [condole.] The expression of grief for the sorrows of another: the civillties and messages of friends upon any loss or misfortune. The reader will excuse this digression, due by way of condenk to my worthy brethren. Arbuthnot.

CONDOLEER. n. s. [condole.] One that joins in lamentation for the misfortunes of another.

CONDONATION. n. s. [condonation, Lat.] A pardoning; a forgiving. Dict.

To CONDUCE. v. n. [conduc, Lat.] To promote an end; to contribute; to serve to some purpose; followed by to.
The boring of holes in this kind of wood, and then laying it abroad, seemeth to conduce to make it shine. Bacon.
The means and preparations that may conduce unto the enterprise. Bacon, Holy War. Every man does love or hate things, according as he apprehends them to conduce to this end, or to contradict it. Titian. They may conduce to further discoveries for completing the theory of light. Newton.

To CONDUCE. v. a. To conduct; to accompany; in order to shew the way. In this sense I have only found it in the following passage. He was sent to conduce before the princess Henrietta Maria.

CONducible. adj. [conducibility, Lat.] Having the power of conduceing; having a tendency to promote or forward; with to.
To both, the medium which is most propitious and conducible, is air. Bacon’s Nat. History. The generation of criminals, and the conduce of them, and of the conducibles thereto, are wisely and adumbrably ordered and contemporated by the rest of all things.
None of these magmatic experiments are sufficient for a perpetual motion, though those kind of qualities seem most conducible unto the temporal interest of them that observe them. Bentley.

CONDUCIBILITY. n. s. [from conducible.] The quality of contributing to any end.
Dict.

CONduCIVE. adj. [conducive.] That which may contribute; having the power of forwarding or promoting: with to.
An action, however conducive to the good or our country, will be represented as prejudicial to it. Addison’s Freewalker. Those proportions of the good things of this life, which are most consistent with the interest of the soul, we also most conducive to our present felicity. Rogers.

CONDUCIVENESS. n. s. [from conducive.] The quality of conduceing. I mention some examples of the conduciveness of the smallness of a body’s parts to its fluidity. Boyle.

CONDUCT. n. s. [conduit, Fr. con- and ductus, Lat.] 1. Management; economy.
Young men, in the conduct and manage of actions, embrace more than they can hold, stir more than they can quiet, fly to the end without consideration of the means. Bacon.
How void of reason are our hopes and fears! What in our conduct of our life appears So well design’d, so luckily begun, But when we have our wish, we wish undone? Dryden’s Juvenile.

2. The act of leading troops; the duty of a general. The conduct of armies is a prince’s art. Waller.

3. Convoy; escort; guard. His majesty, Tending my person’s safety was appointed. The conduct or convoy me to the Tower. Shakespeare, Richard III.

I was ashamed to ask the king footmen and horsemen, and conduct for safeguard against our adversaries. I Esten.

4. The act of conveying or guarding.
CON

Some three or four of you, Go, give him conduct to this place. — Shakesp.

5. A warrant by which a convoy is appointed, or safety is assured.

6. Exact behaviour; regular life. Though all regard for reputation is not quite had aside, it is so low, that very few think and conduct of absolute necessary for preserving it. — Swift.

To Conduct. v. a. [conduire, Fr.] 1. To lead; to direct; to accompany, in order to shew the way. I shall lead out the convoy to a hill side, where I will point you out the right path. — Milton

2. To usher, and to attend in civility. Pray receive them nably, and conduct them into our presence. — Dryden's Ende.

3. To manage; as, to conduct an army; to lead and order troops.

Conductitious. adj. [conductitious, Lat.] Hired; employed for wages; hired in the army; not a native. — Shakesp. King Lear.

3. A manager; a director. If he did not entirely project the union and regency, none will deny him to have been the chief conductor in both. — Shakesp. Henry VIII.

4. An instrument to put up into the bladder; to direct the knife in cutting for the stone. — Quincy.

Conductress. n. s. [from conduct.] A woman that directs; directress.

Conduit. n. s. [conduit.] 1. A channel of pipes for the conveyance of waters; an aqueduct. Water in conduit pipes can rise no higher Than the well head from whence it first springs. — Dryden.

This face of mine is hid In sap consuming winter's drifted snow, And all the conduits of my blood froze up. Shakesp. God is the fountain of honour; and the conduit, by which he conveys it to the sons of men, are various and generous practices. — South.

These organs are the nerves which are the conduits to convey them from without to their muscles in the brain. — Locke.

Wise nature likewise, they suppose Has drawn two conduits down our nose. — Prior.

2. The pipe or cock at which water is drawn. I charge and command, that the conduit run nothing but clear water. — Shakesp. Henry VI.

Conduplication. n. s. [conduplication, Lat.] A doubling; a duplicate.

Con. n. s. [κόνιον κονεκτον η κονιόν ἐπικοίς Aristot.] A solid body, of which the base is a circle, and which ends in a point. — Con'ey. See Con'y.

To CONFABULATE. v. n. [confabulo, Lat.] To talk easily or carelessly together; to chat; to prattle.

CONFABULATION. n. s. [confabulatio, Lat.] Easy conversation; cheerful and careless talk.

CONFABULATORY. adj. [from confabulate.] Belonging to talk or prattle.

CONFARRETIO. n. s. [confarretio, Lat. from far corn.] The solemnization of marriage by eating bread together. By the ancient laws of Rome, the wife was by confarretio joined to the husband. — Addison.

To CONFECTION. v. a. [confectus, Lat.] To make up into sweetmeats; to preserve with sugar. It seems now corrupted into confit.

CONFECTION. n. s. [from the verb.] A sweetmeat.

At supper eat a peach roasted, and sweetened with sugar of roses and caraway seed. — Harvey on Consumptions.

Confederation. n. s. [confederation, Fr.] League; compact of mutual support; alliance.

To CONFEDE. v. n. [confederer, Fr.] To join in a league; to unite; to ally.

They were confederated with Charles's enemy, de la Motte. — Bacon.

With these the Piercys them confederate, And as three heads join in one intent. — Daniel.

To CONFEDERATE. v. n. To league; to unite in a league.

By words men come to know another's minds; by these they covenant and confederate. — South.

It is a confederating with him to whom the sacrifice is offered. — Atterbury.

CONFEDERATE. adj. [from the verb.] United in league.

For they have consulted together with one consent: they are confederate against thee. — Psalm LXXIII. 3.

All the swords In Italy, and her confederate arms.

Could not have made this peace, said Carlistans.

While the mind of man looketh upon second causes scattered, it may sometimes rest in them, and go no further; but when it beholdeth the chain of them confederate and linked together, it must needs fly to providence and deity. — Bacon.

On race confederate into crimes, that prove Triumphant over the'd clad rage of Jove. — Pope's States.

In a confederate war, it ought to be considered which party has the deepest share in the quarrel. — Swift.

CONFEDERATE. n. s. [from the verb.] One who engages to support another; an ally.

Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate, With many more confederates, are in arms. — Shakesp. Richard III.

We still have fresh recruits in store. If our confederates can afford us more. — Dryden's Ende.

CONFEDERATION. n. s. [confederation, Fr.] League; compact of mutual support; alliance.

The three princes enter into some strict league and confederation amongst themselves. — Bacon's Henry VII.

Nor can those confederations or designs be durable, when subjects make bankrupt of their allegiance. — King Charles.

To CONFER. v. n. [confere, Lat. confer, Fr.] To discourse with another upon a stated subject; to ventilate any question by oral discussion; to converse solemnly; to talk gravely together; to compare sentiments.

You will hear us confer of this, and by an agricultural assurance have your satisfaction. — Shakesp. King Lear.

Reading makes a full man, conference a ready man, question and writing on exactness and therefore, if a man write little, he bad need have a great memory; if he confer little, he had need have a present wit and, if he read little, he had need have much cunning, to seem to know that he doth not. — Bacon.

When they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they confered among themselves. — Acts, iv. 15.

He was thought to confer with the Lord Colepeper upon the subject; but had some particular thoughts, upon which he then conferred with nobody. — Clarendon.

The Christian prince in her tent confers With fifty of your learned philosophers; With whom she converses her discourse, and persuade, That they are captives to her reasons made. — Dryden's Tyrannic Love.
To confer, v. a. 1. To compare; to examine by comparison with other things of the same kind. The words in the eighth verse, phrase together, as with the same words in the twentieth, make it manifest. If you confer these observations with others of the like nature, we may find cause to rectify the general opinion. Plays confering his authors, and comparing their works, together, found those that went before to be the better that followed. Bacon. 2. To give; to bestow: with on or before him who receives the gift. Rest to the limbs, and quiet I confer. To confer this hour upon him would increase the credit he had. Clarendon. Coronation to a king, con/fers no royal authority upon him. South. There is not the least intimacy in scripture of this privilege conferred upon the Roman church. Tilton. Thou conferst the benefits, and he tendereth them; the first produces love, and the last ingratitude. Arbuthnot Hat of John Ball. 3. To contribute; to converse: with to. The closeness andConnectedness of the parts resting together, doth much confer to the strength of the union. Claseni. Conference. s. [conference, Fr.] 1. The act of conversing on serious subjects: formal discourse: oral discussion of any question. I shall grow skillful in country matters, if I have an opportunity of conversing with your servant. Sidney. Sometimes they deliver it, whom privately zeal and piety moveth to be instruc tors of others by conference: sometimes of them it is taught, whom the church hath called to the publick, either reading thereof, or interpreting. Hooker. What passion hangs these weights upon my breast? I cannot speak to her: yet she urg'd conference. Shakesp. 2. An appointed meeting for discussing some point by personal debate. 3. Comparison; examination of different things by comparison of each with other. Our intelligence must search out all helps and for- theryea, which scripture, councils, laws, and the mutual conference of all men's collections and observations, may afford. Thus the conference of these two places, containing so excellent a piece of learning as this, expressed by so worthy a wit as Talley's was, must needs bring pleasing pleasure to him that makes true account of learning. Ashburn. Schoold. Confer/er, n.s. [from confer.] 1. He that converses. 2. He that bestows. To confer. v. a. [confessor, Fr.] confer, confess, Lat.] 1. To acknowledge a crime: to own a failure. If death in some sort confit this. If it be confessed, it is not redressed. Milton. Merry Wives of Windsor. Human faults, with human grief confess. 'Tis thus art chang'd. Prior. 2. It has of before the thing confessed, when it is used reciprocally. Confess freely: or thy sin. For to deny each article with oath, Cannot remove not choke the strong conception. Shakesp. Othello. 3. To disclose the state of the conscience to the priest, in order to repentance and pardon. Com. Of sin be only against God, yet to confess it to his minister may be of use. Wake's Preparation for Death. 4. It is used with the reciprocal pronoun. Our beautiful victory to the opportunity of confessing himself to this celebrated father. Addison's Spectator. 5. To hear the confession of a penitent, as a priest. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven; but whosoever shall deny me before men, I also will deny him before my Father which is in heaven. Matt. xxi. 32-33. 7. To confess, n. v. To make confession; to disclose: to reveal; as, he is gone to the priest to confess. Confessionally. adv. [from confess.] Avow'dly; indisputably; undeniable. Labour is confessedly a great part of the care, and therefore not wonder if men fly from it. South. Great geniuses, like great masters, though they are confessedly the first in the commonwealth of letters, must be envied and studied. Pope's Essay on Homer. Conference. n.s. [from confess.] 1. The acknowledgement of a crime; the discovery of one's own guilt. Your engaging me first in this adventure of the Mora, and desiring the story of it from me is like giving one the tort, and then asking his confession, which is hard usage. Temple. 2. The act of disburdening the conscience to a priest. You will have little opportunity to practise such a confession, and should therefore supply it of the due performance of it to God. Wake's Preparation for Death. 3. Profession: avowal. Who, before Pontius Pilate, witnessed a good confession? 1 Tim. vii. 13. If there be one amongst the fairest of Greece, That loves his mistress more than in confession, And dare show her beauty and her worth In other arms than hers; to him this challenge. Shakesp. 4. A formulary in which the articles of faith are comprised. Confessional. n.s. [Fr.] The seat or box in which the confessor sits to hear the declarations of his penitents. In one of the churches I saw a pulpit and confessional, very studiously inlaid with fine lacquer. Addison in Italy. Confessor, n.s. [conhcSSIONaire, Fr.] The confession-chair or seat, where the priest sits to hear confessions. Dict.
4. Consciousness of innocence; honest boldness; firmness of integrity.

Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God. 1 John, iii. 21.

Be constant in them which have not the confidence of good works.

5. That which gives or causes confidence, boldness, or security.

CONFIDENT. adj. [from confide.] 1. Assured beyond doubt.

He is so sure and confident of his particular election, as to resolve he cannot fail.

I am confident, that very much may be done toward the improvement of philosophy.

2. Positive; affirmative; dogmatical: as, a confident talker.

Both valiant, as men despising death; both confident, as unwearied to overcome. Sidney.

That virtue is confiding in himself at their full growth; which coming together, cementing, and so confining themselves into human shape, made little men. Drayton.

CONFINE, n. s. [confinis, Lat.] It had formerly the accent on the last syllable.

Common boundary; border; edge.

In these confinements silly have I lur'd,
To watch the wasting of some enemies.

Shakesp. Rich. III.

You are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge.

Of her confine.

Shakesp. King Lear.
The confines of the river Niger, where the unfortunates are, are well watered.

Bacon.

'Twas ebbing darkness, past the noon of night,
And the thorn on the confines of that light.

Dryden's Fable.

The idea of duration, equal to a revolution of the sun, is applicable to duration, where no motion was, as the idea of a foot, taken from bodies here, to distances beyond the confines of the world, where are no bodies.

Lecky.

CONFINE. adj. [confinis, Lat.] Bordering upon; beginning where the other ends; having one common boundary.

To CONFINE, p. a. To border upon: to touch on different territories, or regions; it has with or on.

Half-bald, I seek
What readiest path leads where thy glossy bounds
Confine with heaven's Monton's Par. Lost.

Dwelt in pleasure of this created space,
Betwixt heaven's, earth, and skies, there stands a place
Confine'd on all three.

Dryden.

To CONFINE, p. a. [confiner, Fr. confiné, Lat.]

1. To bound; to limit: as, he confines his subject by a rigorous definition.

2. To shut up; to imprison; to immure; to restrain within certain limits.

I'll not over the threshold —
—Fy, you confine yourself most unreasonable: come, you must go visit the good lady.

Shakesp. Coriolanus.

I had been
As broad and general as the casing sir.

Now I can belie'd, cri'd, confin'd, bound in.

Shakesp.

3. To restrain; to tie up.

Children, permitted the freedom of both hands, do often confine one into the left, and yet by not great difficulties restricted from it.

Brown's PSALM. Err.

Make one man's function, or failings, confine to others, and confine them as such to their successors.

Boyle.

Where honour or conscience does not confine
No other tie shall saddlen me;
Shall to my self I will not be;
Nor shall I desire actions confin'd.

By my own present mind.

Cowley.

CONFINELESS, adj. [from confine.]

Boundless; unlimited; unconfined; without end.

Let him be a bush, being confin'd.

With my confin'd hands.

Suck. Magdalen.

CONFINEMENT. n. s. [from confine.]

Imprisonment; incarceration; restraint of liberty.

Our hidden foes
Now joyful from their long confinement rise.

Addison's Fugel.

The mind hates restraint, and is apt to fancy itself under confinement when the sight is removed.

As to the numbers who are under restraint, people do not seem so much as lived at the confinement of some, as the hundred of others. Johnson.

CONFERRER. n. s. [from confer.]

1. A borderer; one that lives upon confinements; one that inhabits the extreme parts of a country.

The senate hath staid up the conferrers.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

Happy conferrers you of other lands,

That shift your soil.

Daniel's Civil War.

2. A near neighbour.

Though gladness and grief he opposite in nature, yet they are such neighbours; and confinours in art, that the least touch of a pencil will translate a crying into a laughing face.

3. One which touches upon two different nations.

The participles of confinours between plants and living creatures are such as have no local motion; such as oysters.

Bacon.

CONFINITY. n. s. [confinitis, Lat.]

Neareness; neighbourhooild; contiguity.

Diet.

To CONFIRM. p. a. [confirma, Lat.]

1. To put past doubt by new evidence.

The testimony of Christ was confirmed in you.

1 Cor. i. 6.

So was his will
Promulgate among the gods, and by an oath,
Which shook Heav'n's whole circumference, confirmed.

Milton.

Wit beast the stars that round her burn,
And all the planets in their turn.

Confirm the tidings as they red
And spread the truth from pole to pole,

The Spectator.

2. To settle; to establish either persons or things.

I confirm thee in the high priesthood, and appoint thee ruler.

1 Mar. xlii. 37.

Confirm the crown to me and to my heirs.

Shakesp. Hen. VI.

3. To fix; to ratificate.

Fernelius never cured a confirmed paunch without it.

Bacon.

4. To complete; to perfect.

He only liv'd but till he was a man.

He that no sooner had his prowess confirmed,
But like a man he died.

Shakesp. Muchel.

5. To strengthen by new solemnities or ties.

That treaty, so prejudicial, ought to have been remitted rather than confirmed.

Syst.

6. To settle or strengthen in resolution, or purpose; or opinion.

Confirm'd then I resolve.

Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe.

Milton.

They in their state though firm, stood more confirmed.

3rd. Milen.

Believe and be confirmed.

7. To admit to the full privileges of a Christian, by imposition of hands.

3 Cor. 1. 2.
CON

Those which are thus confirmed, are thereby supposed to be fit for admission to the sacrament.

Hammond's Fundamentals.

CONFIRMABLE adj. [from confirm.]
That which is capable of incontestable evidence.

It may receive a spurious issue, as is confirmable by many examples.

Brown's Vulg. Err.

CONFIRMATION n. s. [from confirm.]
1. The act of establishing any thing or person; settlement; establishment.
2. Evidence by which any thing is uncertain; additional proof.

A Hobbes report hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment.

Shakespeare.

3. Proving by convincing testimony.
Wanting frequent confirmation in a matter so confirmable, their affirmation currieth but slow persuasion.

Brown.

The argument brought by Christ for the confirmation of his doctrine, were in themselves sufficient.

South.

4. An ecclesiastical rite.
What is prepared for in catechising, is, in the next place, performed by confirmation; a most probable usage of the church, transcribed from the practice of the apostles, which consists in two parts: the child's undertaking, in his own name, every part of the baptismal vow (having first approved himself to understand it) and to that purpose, that he may more solemnly enter this obligation, bringing some godfather with him, not now (as in baptism) as his procurator to undertake for him, but as a witness to testify his entering this obligation.

Hammond on Fundamentals.

CONFIRMAT'OR n. s. [from confirma, Lat.] An attester; he that puts a matter past doubt.

There wants herein the definitive confirmer, and test of things uncertain, the sense of which consists in:

Brown's Vulg. Err.

CONFIRMATORY adj. [from confirm.] giving additional testimony; establishing with new force.

CONFIRMED adj. [from confirm.]
Confirmed state; radicalization.

If the difficulty arise from the confirmedness of habit, every restlessness wakens the habit, abates the difficulty.

Dee of Piety.

CONFI'RMER n. s. [from confirm.]
One that confirms; one that produces evidence or strength; an attester; an establisher.

Be these and such confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again.

Shakespeare, King John.

The oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmers of false recompence.

Shakespeare.

CONFISCABLE adj. [from confiscate.]
Liable to forfeiture.

To CONFISCATE, v. a. [confiscare, confiscare, i.e. in publicam addicere; from fiscus, which originally signified a hamper, pannier, basket, or belfry; but metonymically the emperor's treasure, because it was anciently kept in such hampers. Corell.] To transfer private property to the prince or publick, by way of penalty for an offence.

CONFI'SCATE, adj. [from the verb.]
Transferred to the public as forfeit.

The accent in Shakespeare is on the first syllable.

Thy lands and goods
Are, by the hands of Venice, confiscate.

Unto the state of Venice. Shak. Merch. of Venice.

CONFISCATION n. s. [from confiscate.]
The act of transferring the forfeited goods of criminals to public use.

It was in every man's eye, what great forfeitures and confiscations he had at that present to help himself.

Bacon's Hen. VII.

CONFIDENT n. s. [confic'sent, Lat.] One confessing; one who confesses his faults.

A wide difference there is between a meek confessor, and a true penitent.

Bacon.

CONFID'TE n. s. [Fr. from confid'te, Lat.] A sweetmeat; a confection; a confit.

It is certain, that there be some houses wherein confitures and pies will gather more meat than elsewhere.

Bacon.

We contain a confiture house, where we make all sweetmeats, dry and moist, and divers pleasant articles.

To CONFIT. v. a. [configo, confi'cium, Lat.] To fix down; to fasten.

As this is true, let me in safety raise me from my knees; Or else for ever be confit here.

CONFtGRANT adj. [confi'grantis, Lat.] Burning together; involved in a general fire.

Then raise
From the confi'grant mass, purged and refus'd,
New hea'v'n, new earth.

Milton's Par. Lost.

CONFJUGATION n. s. [confugatio, Lat.]
1. A general fire spreading over a large space.

The opinion deriveth the complexion from the deviation of the sun, and the confugation of all things (for the Sun's uniformity is not the same).

Next o'er the plains, where ripen'd harvests grow,

The running confugation spreads below, Addition's Orid.

Mankind hath had a gradual increase, notwithstanding what floods and confugations, and religious profession of celibacy, may have interrupted.

Beauty's Sermons.

2. It is generally taken for the fire which shall consume this world at the consummation of things.

CONFLJCTION n. s. [confil'tum, Lat.]
1. The act of blowing many instruments together.

The sweetest harmony is, when every part or instrument is not heard by itself, but a confil'tum of them all.

Bacon.

2. A casting or melting of metal.

CONJ'LXEREXE n. s. [confex'erexa, Lat.] A bending or turning.

To CONFLICT. v. n. [confilgo, Lat.]
To strive; to contest; to fight; to struggle; to contend; to encounter; to engage: properly by striking against one another.

CONFLICT

Bare unhoused trunks.
To the conflicting elements expos'd.

Shaksp. Timon.

You shall hear under the earth a horrible thundering of fire and water conflicting together.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

A man would be content to strive with himself, and conflict with great difficulties, in hopes of a mighty reward.

Temple.

Look'd into flame, the fierce conflicting fires
Scour'd o'er a thousand raging waves to burn.

Thomson.

CONFLICT n. s. [confil'tus, Lat.]
1. A violent collision, or opposition of two substances.

Puurr deplegiment spirit of vinegar upon salt of taras, and there will be such a conflict of ebullition, as if there were scarce two more contrary bodies in nature.

Boyle.

2. A combat; a fight between two. It is seldom used of a general battle.

The luckless conflict with the giant stout,
Wherein captiv'd, of life or death he stood in doubt.

It is my father's face.

Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.

Shakespeare.

3. Contest; strife; contention.

There is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Auret and her; they never meet but there's a skirmish betwixt them.——All he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off.

Shakespeare.

4. Struggle; agony; pang.

No assurance touching victories can make present conflicts so sweet and easy, but nature will shrink from them.

He percept'd
Th' unequal conflict, as angels look.

On dying saints.

Thomson's Summer.

CONFLUENCE n. s. [confi'luens, Lat.]
1. The junction or union of several streams.

Nimrod, who usurped dominion over the rest, sat down in the very confluence of all those rivers which water'd Paradise.

Raleigh's History of the World.

Bagdat is beneath the confluence of Tigris and Euphrates.

Eerowood on Languages.

In the veins, innumerable little rivulets have their confluence into the great vein, the common channel of the blood.

Bentley.

2. The act of crowding to a place.

You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

Some come to make merry, because of the confusion of all sorts.

Bacon.

You had found by experience the trouble of all men's confluence, and for all matters to yourself.

Bacon to Ftilchers.

3. A conourse; a multitude crowded into one place.

This will draw a confluence of people from all parts of the country.

Temple.

4. Collection; concurrence.

We may there be instructed how to rate all goods by those that will confluence into the felicity we shall possess, which shall be made up of the confluence, perfection, and perpetuity of all true goods.

Boyle.

CONFLUENT [confi'luens, Lat.] Running one into another; meeting.

At length, to make their various currents one,

The congregated floods together ran:

These confluent streams make some great river's head.

By stores still melting and descending fed.

Blackmore.
CONFLUX. n. s. [conflueo, Lat.] 1. The union of several currents; concourse.

Knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, infect the sound pine and divert its grain. - F. B. Smith. 2. Crowd; multitude collected. He quickly, by the general conflux and conourse of the whole people, straightened his quarters. - C. Herder. To the gates cast round thine eye, and see What conflux issuing forth, or entering in. - Milton. CONFORM, adj. [conformia, Lat.] Assuming the same form; wearing the same form; resembling. Variety of tunes both dispose the spirits to variety of passions conform unto them.

To CONFORM, v. n. To conform with; to yield: with to.

Then followed that most natural effect of conforming one's self to that which she did like. - Sidney. The apostles did conform the Christians, as much as might be, according to the pattern of the Jews. - Hooker.

Demand of them wherefore they conform themselves unto the order of the church? - Hooker.

To CONFORM, v. n. To comply with; to yield: with to.

Who will conform to a passion, which fire. - Dryd. Jar.

CONFORMABLE. adj. [from conform.] 1. Having the same form; using the same manners; agreeing either in exterior or moral characters; similar; resembling. The Gentiles were not made conformable unto the Jews, in that which was to be at peace at the coming of Christ. - Hooker.

2. It has commonly to before that with which there is agreement. He gives a reason conformable to the principles.

3. Sometimes with, not improperly; but to is used with the verb.

The fragments of Sappho give us a taste of her way of writing, perfectly conformable with that which we find in her. - Addison. A Spectator.

4. Agreeable; suitable; not opposite; consistent. Nature is very consonant and conformable to herself. - Newton.

The productions of a great genius, with many fables, are preferable to the works of an inferior author, scrupulously exact, and conformable to all the rules of correct writing.

5. Compliant; ready to follow directions; submissive; peaceable; obsequious. I have been to you a true and humble wife. At all time to your will conformable. - H. VIII.

For all the kingdoms of the earth to yield themselves willingly conformable, in whatever should be required, it was not in the power of the Messiah. Such deductions are formed by a conformable derivation, and the well-tempered zeal of the true Christian spirit. - Spurti.

To CONFORMABLE, adj. [from conformable.] With conformity; agreeably; suitably; it has to.

So a man observe the agreement of his own imaginings, and talk conformably, it is all certainty. - Locke. I have treated of the sex conformably to the subject definition. - Addison.

CONFORMATION. n. s. [Fr. conformatiot., Lat.] 1. The form of things, as relating to each other; the particular texture and consistence of the parts of a body, and their disposition to make a whole: as light of different colours is reflected from bodies, according to their different conformation.

Varies are found in the different natural shapes of the mouth, and several conformations of the organs. - Holder. Where there happens to be such a harmony and conformation of the earth, as that the fire may pass freely into these spiracles, it then readily gets out. - Woodward's Nat. Hist.

2. The act of producing suitabilities, or conformity, to any thing: with to.

Virtue and vice, sin and holiness, and the conformation of our hearts and lives to the duties of true religion and morality, are things of more consequence than the furniture of understanding. - Watts.

CONFORMIST. n. s. [from conform.] One that complies with the worship of the church of England: not a disserter.

They were not both nonconformists, neither both conformists. - Dunton.

CONFORMITY. n. s. [from conform.] 1. Similitude; resemblance; the state of having the same character of manners or form.

By the knowledge of truth, and exercise of virtue, man, amongst the creatures of this world, is conformed to the greatest conformity with God. - Hooker. Judge not what is best.

By pleasure, though to nature seeming meet; Created as thou art to noble end, Holy and pure, conformity divine! - Milton, Par. Lost.

Space and duration have a great conformity in this, that they are justly reckoned amongst our simple ideas. - Locke.

This metaphor would not have been so general, had there been no conformity between the mental taste and the sensitive taste. - Addition's Spectator.

2. It has in some authors with before the model to which the conformation is made. The end of all religion is but to draw us to a conformity with God. - Decay of Pity.

3. In some to.

We cannot be otherwise happy but by our conformity to the laws of God. - Addison. A Spectator.

Conformity, in building to other civil nations, hath disposed us to let our old wooden dark houses fall to decay. - Grinnell.

4. Consistency. Many instances prove the conformity of the essay with the notions of Hippocrates, on Amenities. - Addison's Spectator.

CONFRATERNITY. n. s. [from con and fratirenes, Lat.] A brotherhood; a body of men united for some religious purpose.

We find days appointed to be kept, and a confraternity established for this purpose, by the laws of it. - Stillingfleet.

CONFRICATION. n. s. [from con and fricco, Lat.] The act of rubbing against any thing: it hath been reported, that ivy hath grown out of a slug's horn; which they suppose did rather come from a confrication of the horn upon the ivy, than from the horn itself. - Bacon.

To CONFRONT. v. a. [confronter, Fr.] 1. To stand against another in full view; to face.

He spake, and then confronted the bull: And on his simple forked staff, upon the skull, The deadly stake descended. - Dryden's Virg.

2. To stand face to face, in opposition to another.

The East and West churches did both confront the Jews, and contend with them. - Bp. Chalmers. Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answered blows.

Strength match'd with strength, and power confronter power. - Dryden's Hist. Bellona's bridgework, last in proof, Confronted him with self comparisons, Point against point rebellions, arm against arm. - Shak. Macbeth.

3. To oppose one evidence to another in open court.
We began to lay his unkindness unto him: he seeing himself contradicted by so many, went not to revival, but rather publ'd falsehood—Sir丘.

4. To compare one thing with another. When I confound a noun with a verb, I only show you the same design executed by different hands. Addition to Malton.

CONFRONTATION. n. s. [Fr.] The act of bringing two evidences face to face.

To CONFUSE v. a. [confusus, Lat.]

1. To disorder; to disperse irregularly. Thus roving on In confus'd march forlorn, the adventur'd bands
When they had lost their lustre, and forgot No rest. Milton.

2. To mix, not separate. At length an universal hubbub wild,
Of storming sounds and voices all confus'd,
Born through the hollow dark, assaults his ear. Milton.

3. To perplex, not distinguish; to obs.

We may have a clear and distinct idea of the existence of many things, though our ideas of their intimate essences and causes are very confused and obscure. Watts's Logic.

4. To hurry the mind. Confus'd and sadly she at length replies.

POPE, Sonnets.

CONFUSEDLY. adv. [from confused.]

1. In a mixed mass; without separation.

Then every where unto the unlearned Scriptures, because they dwell confusedly together. Raleigh's History.

2. Indistinctly; one mingled with another.

The inner court with horror, noise, and tears Confus'dly fill'd; the woman's shrieks and cries The arch'd vaults re-echo. Dunciad.

On mount Venuses next he fix'd his eyes,
And saw the twinkling stars confus'dly rise; A hideous ruin! Addition to Italy.

3. Not clearly; not plainly.

He confusedly and obscurely delivered his opinion. Clarck, Sermons.

4. Tumultuously; hastily; not deliberately; not exactly.

The propriety of thoughts and words, which are the hidden boundaries of a play, are but confusedly and obscurely judged in the vision of action. Confuseness. n. s. [from confused.]

Want of distinctness; want of clearness.

Hither unto these titles of honour carry a kind of confuseness, and rather betokened a successive office than an established dignity. Coren's Survey of Cornwall.

The cause of the confusion of our notions, next to the natural inability, is want of attention. Norris.

CONFUSION. n. s. [from confuse.]

1. Irregular mixture; tumultuous medley.

God, only wise, to punish pride of wit,
Among men's wits hath this confusion wrought;
As the proud town whose points the clouds did hit,
By tongue confusion was to ruin brought. Devies.

2. Tumult; disorder.

God is not a God of confusion and faith, but of order and of peace. Homer, Odyssey.

This is a heighter and more comely time,
Than when these follies ran about the streets Crying confusion. Shaks, Coriolanus.

3. Indistinct combination.

The combin'd confusion of two different ideas, which a customary connection of them in their minds hath made to them almost one, fills their heads with false notions, and their reasonings with false consequences. Locke.

3. Overthrow; destruction.

The strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him in to his confusion. Shaks, Mac.

4. Astonishment, distraction of mind; hurry of ideas.

Confusion dwelt in every face,
And fear in every heart,
When waves on waves, and gulps in gulps
Overcame the grotto Spectator.

CONFUTABLE. adj. [from confude.] Possible to be disproved; possible to be shown false.

At the last day, that inquisitor shall not present To God a bundle of columns, or confudable accufations; but will offer unto his omniscience a true list of our transgressions. Brown.

CONFESSION. n. s. [confideato, Lat.] The act of confessing; disproof.

A confession of atheism from the frame of the world. Beaumont.

To CONFEUTE. v. a. [confute, Lat.] To convict of error or falsehood; to disprove.

He could on either side dispute.
Confute the rash hands, and still confude, Hudders.

To a man for doubt to whether he be any hell, and thereupon to live as if there were none, but when he dies, to find himself confudately, must be the height of folly. South.

CONGEAL. n. s. [conge, Fr.]

1. Act of reverence; bow; courtesy.

The captain salutes you with conge profound. And your ladyship's curtsy half way to the ground. Swift.

2. Leave; farewell.

So courteous conge both did give and take.
With right hands plighted, pledges of good-will. Fairy Queen.

To CONGE. v. n. [from the noun.] To take leave.

I have cong'd with the duke, and done a piece with my nearest. Shaks. All's well that ends well.

CONGEDELIRE is French; and signifies, in common law, the king's permission royal to a dean and chapter, in time of vacation, to chuse a bishop. The king, as sovereign patron of all archbishops, bishops, and other ecclesiastical benefices, had in ancient times the free appointment of all ecclesiastical dignities; investing them first per baculum & annuum, and afterwards by his letters patent. In process of time he made the election over to others, under certain forms and conditions; as, that they should, at every vacation, before they chuse, demand of the king a conge d'ècrire, that is, licence to proceed to election. Cowell.

A woman, when she has made her own choice, for form's sake, sends a conge d'écric to her friends. Spectator.

CONGE. n. s. [in architecture.] A moulding in the form of a quarter round, or a cavetto, which serves to separate two members from one another; such is that which joins the shaft of the column to the cincture. Chambers.

To CONGEAL. v. a. [congeló, Lat.]

1. To turn, by frost, from a fluid to a solid state.

What more miraculous thing may be told,
Than ice which is congeald without Fields cold,
Should kindle fire, the wonderful device of Spenser. In whose capacious womb

A rapuory deluge lies, to snow congeald. Thomson, Winter.

2. To bind or fix, as by cold.

Oh, gentlemen, see! see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeald mouths, and bleed afresh. Shaks. Rich. III.

Too much sadness hath congeald your blood. Shaks.

To CONGEAL. t. n. To concrete; to gather into a mass by cold.

In the midst of molten lead, when it beginneth to congeal, make a little dent, into which put quicksilver wrapt in linen, and it will fix and run no more, and endure the hammer. Bacon.

When water congeals, the surface of the ice is smooth and level, as the surface of the water was before. Burnett's Theory.

CONGEALMENT. n. s. [from congeal.]

The clot formed by congealation; concretion.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends; Tell them your feats, whilst they with joyful tears Wash the congealment from your wounds. Shaks, Antony and Cleopatra.

CONGEALABLE. adj. [from congeal.] Susceptible of congelation; capable of losing its fluidity.

The consistencies of bodies are very divers; dense, rare, tangible, pneumatic, fixed, hard, soft, combustible, not combustible, inflammable, not inflammable. Bacon.

The chemists define salt, from some of its properties, to be a body fixed, and congealable again by cold into brittle globes or crystals. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

CONGELATION. n. s. [from congeal.] The act of turning fluids to solids by cold.

The capillary tubes are obstructed either by outward compression or congelation of the fluid. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

There are congelations of the cold water, precipitation, and many other operations. Arbuthnot on Air.

2. State of being congeal'd, or made solid by cold.

Many waters and springs will never freeze; and many parts in rivers and lakes, where there are mineral eruptions, will still persist without congealation. Brown's Log. Errors.

CONCENER. n. s. [Lat.] Of the same kind or nature.

The cherry-tree has been often grafted on the laurel, to which it is a congeren. Miller.

CONGNEROUS. adj. [congeren, Lat.] Of the same kind; arising from the same original.

Those bodies, being of a congenerous nature, do readily receive the impressions of their nature. Brown's Log. Errors.

From extreme and lasting colds proceed a great run of apoplexy, and other congenerous diseases. Arbuthnot on Air.

CONGNEROUSNESS. n. s. [from congener.] The quality of being from the same original; belonging to the same class.

Diet.

CONGENIAL. adj. [conen and genuz, Lat.] Partaking of the same genus; kindred; congenial; in Swift it is followed by with.

He sprang, without any help, by a kind of congenial companion, as we may term it, to the likeness of our late sovereigns and masters. Weiten.

You look with pleasure on those things which are somewhat congenial, and of a remote kindred to your own conceptions. Dryden's Dedication, of Sat. With the love of sister arts and with them.

And met congenial, mingling those with flames. Pope.

He acquires a courage, and stiffness of opinion, not at all congenial with him. Swift.
To CONGLOMerate. v. n. [conglomerate, Lat.] To gather into a round mass; to consolidate in a ball.

Then he founded, then conglomer'd
Like things to the heart, Milton's Paradise Lost.

Hang to the goddess, and coher'd around:
Not closer, orb in orb conglomer'd, are seen
The buzzing bees about their disk green.
— Pope's Dunciad.

To CONGLOMerate. v. n. To conglome
To CONGLOMerate. v. a. [conglomerate, Lat.] To gather into a ball, like a ball of thread; to inwec into a round mass.
The liver is one great conglomerated gland, composed of innumerable small glands, each of which consists of soft fibres, in a distinct or separate convolution.

CONGLOMeration. adj. [from the verb.]
1. Gathered into a round ball, so that the constituent parts and fibres are distinct.
Fluids are separated in the liver, and the other conglomerate and conglomerate glands.

2. Collected; twisted together.
The beams of light, when they are multiplied and conglomerate, generate heat. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

CONGLOMeration. n. s. [from conglomerate.]

1. Collection of matter into a loose ball.
2. Intertexture; mixture.
The multiplication and conglomerate of sounds doth generate rarification of the air. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To CONGLUTINATE. v. a. [conglutina-tio, Lat.] To cement; to reunite; to heal wounds.

To CONGLUTINATE. v. n. To coalesce; to unite by the intervention of a callus.

CONGLUTINATION. n. s. [from con-
glutinate.]
The act of uniting wounded bodies; re-union; healing.
The cause is a tempest conglutination; for both bodies are clammy and viscous, and do bridle the deflux of humour to the hurts. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The elongated, concentric elongated fibres is owing to the union or conglutination of parts separated by a wound. Arbuthnot's Entomol.

CONGLUTINATIVE. adj. [from con-
glutinate.]
Having the power of uniting wounds.

CONGLUTINATOR. n. s. [from con-
glutinate.]
That which has the power of uniting wounds.
The osteoclia is recommended as a conglutinator of broken bones. Woodward on Possil.

CONGLUTINATE. adj. [from conglutinate.]
Relaxing in participation; expressing participation of another's joy.
Both red in haste the great consulting peers.
Raid'd from the dark divan, and with like joy Conglutation approach'd him.
— Milton.

To CONGRATULATE. v. a. [gratulat
To CONGRATULATE. v. n. To rejoin in participation.
I cannot but conglomerate with my country, which hath outdone all Europe in advancing conversation.

CONGRATULATION. n. s. [from congratulate.]
1. The act of professing joy for the happiness or success of another.
2. The form in which joy for the happiness or success of another is professed.

CONGRATULATORY. adj. [from congrutulate.]
Expressing joy for the good fortune of another.

To CONGRE'e. v. n. [from grew, Tr.] To agree; to accord; to join; to unite.
Not in use.

To CONGRE'e. v. n. [from con and greet.] To salute reciprocally. Not in use.

To CONGRATULATE. v. a. [congrego,
Lat.] To collect together; to assemble; to bring into one place.
Any multitude of Christian men congregated, may be termed by the name of a church. Hooker.

These waters were afterwards congregated, and called the sea. Raleigh's History of the World.
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds.
The gutter'd rocks and congregated sands, As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures.

Shakespeare. Othello.
The dry land, earth; and the great receptacle Of congregated waters, he call'd seas; And saw that it was good. Milton's Par. Lost.

Heat congregates homogenous bodies, and separates heterogeneal ones. Newton's Optics.
This sight, congregated by a burning glass, acts meet upon sulphurous bodies, to turn them into fire.

To CONGREGATE. v. n. To assemble; to meet; to gather together.

To CONGREGATE. v. n. To assembl;
To meet; to gather together.

To CONGREGATE. v. n. To assemble; to meet; to gather together.

Shakesp. Merchant of Venice.
'Tis true (as the old proverb doth relate) Equals with equals often congregate. Denison.

CONGREGATE. adj. [from the verb.]
Collected; compact.

CONGREGATION. n. s. [from con-
grerate.]
Where the matter is most congreg, or, the cold is the greater. Bacon's Natural History.

CONGREGATION. n. s. [from con-
grerate.]
1. The act of collecting.

The means of reduction by the fire, is but by congregating of homogenous parts.

2. A collection; a mass of various parts brought together.

This brave o'erflaring flame appears to other things to me, than a food and prudent congregation of vapours. Shakesp.

3. An assembly met to worship God in public; and hear doctrine.

The words which the minister first pronounces, when the congregation have been attired.

The practice of those that prefer houses before churches, and a conventicle before the congregation. South.
CON

If those preachers who abound in epiphronisms would look about them, they would find part of their congregation out of countenance, and the other asleep.

Congregational adj. [from congregation] Public; pertaining to a congregation or assembly. It is a word used of such Christians as hold every congregation to be a separate and independent church.

Congress. n.s. [congressus, Lat.] 1. A meeting; a shock; a conflict. Here Pallas urges on, and Lausus there; Their courses in the field great Jove withstands, Both dote to fall, but fall by greater hands.

Drury's Enrld.

From these laws may be deduced the rules of the congruence and dissymmetry of two bodies.

Cognizable Prinaiiples.

A 2. An appointed meeting for settlement of affairs between different nations: as the congress of Cambrai.

Congressive adj. [from congress.] Meeting; encountering; coming together. It's to be understood when conjuncts are united, all plants are female; and if of disjunctive and congressive generation, there is no male or female in them.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To CONGRUE. v. n. [from congruo, Lat.] To agree; to be consistent with; to suit; to be agreeable. Not in use.

Our sovereign process import at full, By letters congruous to that effect.

The present death of Hamlet.

Shakes. Hamlet.

Congruence. n.s. [congruentia, Lat.] Agreement; suitableness of one thing to another; consistency.

Congruent adj. [congruent, Lat.] Agreeing; correspondent.

These plans were so separated as to move upon a common side of the congruent squares, as an axis.

Cognizable Principles.

Congruity. n.s. [from congrue.] 1. Suitableness; agreeableness. Congruity of opinions to our natural constitution, is one great incentive to their reception. Glanvill.

2. Fitness; pertinence. A whole sentence may fail of its congruity by wanting one particle.

Sidney.

3. Consequence of argument; reason; consistency. With what congruity doth the church of Rome deny, that her enemies do at all oppress the church of Christ?

Hooker.

4. In geometry. Figures or lines which exactly correspond, when laid one over another, are in congruity.

Congruity. n.s. [from congrue.] Fitness; adaption. Not in use. The great incentive and dominant motive of periods in a sentence, hath almost the fastening and force of knitting and consoñíon. Ben Jon. Discovery.

Congrous adj. [congrus, Lat.] 1. Agreeable to; consistent with. The existence of God is so many ways manifest, and the obedience we owe him so congruous to reason, that the light of a great part of mankind give testimony to the law of nature.

Locke.

2. Sufficient to; accommodated to; proportionate or commensurate. The faculty is infinite, the object infinite, and they infinitely congruous to one another.

Cognizable Principles.

3. Rational; fit. Motives that address themselves to our reason, are fittest to be employed upon reasonable creatures; it is no ways congruous, that God should be always frightening men into an acknowledgment of the truth.

Attritious.

Congrously. adv. [from congruous.] Suitably; pertinently; consistently; This conjecture is to be regarded, because, congruently unto it, having verified the hypothesis, found it then lighter than the opposite weight.

Poole's Spring of the Air.

Conical adj. [conicus, Lat.] Having a cone, of a form, or round decreasing.

Towling foes in conick forms arise.

And with a pointed spear divide the skies. Prior.

A brown faint of a conick figure: the basis is oblong.

Fowles.

They are conick vessels, with their bases towards the heart; and, as they pass on, their diameters grow still less.

Ashburnen.

Conically. adv. [from conical.] In form of a cone.

In a watery pot, shaped conically, or like a sugar-loaf, filled with water, no liquor fails through the holes at the bottom, whilst the guineer keeps his thumb upon the orifice at the top.

Poole's Spring of the Air.

Conicalness. n.s. [from conical.] The state or quality of being conical.

Conick Section. n.s. A curve arising from the section of a cone, by a plane.

Conick Sections. n.s. That part of a conick, whose geometry which considers the cone, and the curves arising from its sections.

To CONJECT. v. n. [conjectum, Lat.] To guess; to conjecture. Not in use. I interest you then, From one that is imperfectly conjectured.

Your wisdom would not build yourself a trouble.

Shakes. To CONJECTOR. n.s. [from conject.] A guesser; a conjecturer.

For s conjectors would confute, And from thy painted skin conclude.

Swift.

Conjectural adj. [from conjectum.] Being the object of conjecture; possible to be guessed.

Conjectural. adj. [from conjecture.] Depending on conjecture; said or done by guess.

They'll sit by thy fire, and presume to know Who has solicit'd who declines, side factions, and give out

Conjectural warriages.

Shakes. Coriolanus.

Think'st it falsely, as I love honour: And mark at conjectural fears to come into me. Shaks.

It was a matter of great profit, save that I doubt it is too conjectured to venture upon, if one could discern what corn, herbs, or trees, are likely to be in plenty or scarcity.

Bacon.

The two last words are not in Caienuches, and conjecturally unto it, one having verified the hypothesis, found it then lighter than the opposite weight.

Locke.

To Conjoin. v. n. [from conjungere; junctum, Lat.] To connect; to set to; to discuss. A low cant word.

What would a body think of a minister that should conjectural matters of state with mumblers, and confer politics with tinkers? L'Estrange.

To CONJOIN. v. a. [conjungere, Fr. conjoncu.] 1. To unite; to consolidate into one. Thou wast't Prithees, and not him alone; But, while I live, two friends conjoint in one.

Dryden.

2. To unite in marriage.

If either of you knew any inward impediment, Why should you not be conjoint, I charge You on your souls to utter it. Shakes. Much Ado.

3. To associate; to connect. Common and universal spirits carry the action of the remedy into the part, and conjoint the virtues of bodies for dispersed. Brown's Vulgar. Err.

Errors of differing interests can be reconciled in one communion; at least, the designs of all can be conjoint in situations of the same reverence, and civility, and devotion.

Taylor.

That which he learns next is near conjoint with what he knows already.

Locke.

To CONJOIN. v. n. To league; to unite. This part of his Conjoints with my disease, and helps to end me.

Shakes. Henry IV.

Conjoint. adj. [conjunct, Fr.] United; connected; associat.

Conjoint Degrees. [In music.] Two notes which immediately follow each other in the order of the scale; as ut and re. Dict.

Conjointly. adv. [from conjunct.] In union; together; in association; jointly; not apart. A gross and frequent error, commonly committed in the use of doubtful remedies, conjointly with those that are of approved virtue.

Brown's Vulgar. Err.

The parts of the body, separately, make known the presence of the soul, or else conjointly with one another.

Dryden.

Conisour. See Cognisour.

Conjugal adj. [conjugalis, Lat.] Matrimonial; belonging to marriage; connubial.
Their conjugal affection still is tied,
And still the mournful race is multiplied. Dryd.
I could not for bear commending the young woman for her disaffection, when I found that she had left the good man at home. Spectat.
He mark’d the conjugal dispute;
Nell roar’d incessant, Dick sat mute. Swift.
Conjugally, adv. [from conjugal.] Matrimonially; connubially.

To Conjugate. v. a. [conjuge, Lat.]
1. To join; to join in marriage; to unite.
Those drawing as well marriage as wardship, gave him both power and occasion to conjugal pleasure the Normans and the Saxon houses. Watton.
2. To inflect verbs; to decline verbs through their various terminations.

Conjugate. n. s. [conjugatus, Lat.]
Agreeing in derivation with another word, and therefore generally resembling in signification.

His grammatical argument, grounded upon the derivation of the substantives from source, weighs nothing: we have learned in logick, that conjugates are sometimes in name only, and not in deed.

Conjugate Diameter, or Axis. [In geometry.] A right line bisecting the transverse diameter. Chambers.

Conjugation. n. s. [conjagatio, Lat.]
1. A couple; a pair.
The heart is so far from all-riding nerves unto other parts, that it receiveth very few itself from the sixth conjugation or pair of nerves. Brown.
2. The act of uniting or compounding things together.
The general and indefinite contemplations and notions of the elements, and their conjugations, are to be set aside, being but notional; and illimitable and indefinite axioms are to be drawn out of measured instances. Bacon.
All the various mixtures and conjugations of atoms do beget nothing. Bentley.
3. The form of inflecting verbs through their series of terminations.
Hath those who have with so much about declensions and conjugations, about concords and syntaxes, lost their labour, and been learning to no purpose.

Union; assemblage.
The suzerain of the Lord is the most sacred, mysterious, and useful conjugation of secret and holy things and duties. Taylor.

Conjonct. adj. [conjunctus, Lat.] Conjoined; concurrent; united. Not in use.
It pleas’d the king his master to strike at me; when he, conjure, and flatter ring his displeasure, Tript me behind. Shakesp. King Lear.

Conjunction. n. s. [conjunctio, Lat.]
1. Union; association; league.
With your small conjuncion: we should once more have an answer to see how fortune is disposed to us. Shakesp.
He will unite the white rose and the red; Smile heaven upon his fair conjuction, That long hath triumph’d upon their enmity! Shad. Threnodics.
The treaty gave abroad a reputation of a strict conjuncion and unity between them. Bacon.

Man can effect no great matter by his personal strength, but as he acts in society and conjunction with others.
An invisible hand from heaven mingles hearts and souls by strange, secret, and unaccountable conjuctions. Clarendon.

2. The congress of two planets in the same degree of the zodiac, where they are supposed to have great power and influence.
God, neither by drawing waters from the deep, nor by any conjunction of the stars, should hurry them under a settlement. Bacon.
Has not a poet more virtues and vices within his circle? Cannot he observe their influences in their oppositions, and their conjunctions, in their altitudes and depressions? He shall sooner find fault than nature exhaled. Rymer.
Pompey and Caesar were two stars of such a magnitude, that their conjunction was as fatal as their opposition. Swift.

3. A word made use of to connect the clauses of a period together, and to signify their relation to one another. Clarke.

Conjunctive. adj. [conjunctivus, Lat.]
1. Closely united. A sense not in use. She’s so conjunctive to my life and soul, That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but hurt my. Shakesp.
2. [In grammar.] The mood of a verb used subsequently to a conjunction.

Conjunctively. adv. [from conjunctive.] In union; not apart. These are good mediums conjunctively taken, that is, not one without the other. Brown.

Conjunctiveness. n. s. [from conjunctive.] The quality of joining or uniting.

Conjunctly. adv. [from conjunct.] Jointly; together; not apart.

Conjuration. n. s. [conjuration, Fr.]
1. Combination of many circumstances, or causes. I never met with a more unhappy conjuration of affairs than in the business of that care. King. Gh. Every virtue requires time and place, a proper object, and a fit conjuration of circumstances. Addison’s Spectator.
2. Occasion; critical time. Such censure always attend such conjurations; and find fault for what is not done, as with that which is done. Clarendon.
3. Mode of union; connexion.
He is quick to perceive the motions of articulation, and conjunctures of letters in words. Holder’s Elements of Speech.

4. Consistency. I was willing to grant to presbytery what reason it can pretend to, in a conjuration with episcopacy. King Charles.

Conjuration. n. s. [from conjure.] 1. The form or act of summoned another in some sacred name.
We charge you, in the name of God, take heed! Under this conjunction speake, say lord. Shakesp.
2. A magical form of words; an incantation; an enchantment.
Your conjuration, fair knight, is too strong for my poor spirit to dissovery. Sidney.

3. A plot; a conspiracy.

To Conjure. v. a. [conjuro, Lat.]
1. To summon; in a sacred name; to conjine with the highest solemnity. He concluded with sighs and tears to conjure them, that they would no more press him to consent to a thing so contrary to his reason. Clarendon.
The church may address her sons in the form of St. Paul does the Philippians, when he conjures them to unity. Decay of Party.

I conjure you! Let him know, Whate’er was done against him, Cato did it. Addison. Cato.
2. To bind many by an oath to some common design. This sense is rare. He in proud rebellious arms Drew after him the third part of heaven’s sons, Conjured against the Highest. Milton. Paradise Lost.
3. To influence by magic; to affect by enchantment; to charm. What black magician conjures up this fiend, To stop devoted charitable deeds? Shakesp.

What is he, whose grieve
Bear such an emphasis! whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? Shakesp.
I thought their own fears, whose black arts first raised up those turbulent spirits, would force them to conjure them down again. King Charles.
You have conjured up persons that exist to where else but in old coins, and have made our passion bound virtuous visible. Addison.

4. It is to be observed, that when this word is used for summon, or conjure, its accent is on the last syllable, conjure; when for charm, on the first, conjure.

To Conjurer. n. s. [from conjure.] 1. An enchanter; one that uses charms.
Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Establish him in his true sense again. Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Conjurer. n. s. [from conjure.]
2. An impostor who pretends to secret arts; a cunning man.
From the account the lurer brings, The conjurer knows who stole the things. Prior.

3. By way of irony, a man of shrivelled conjuncture; a man of sagacity.
Though uts are very knowing, I don’t take them to be conjurers; and therefore they could not guess that I had put some corn in that room. Addison.

Conjuration. n. s. [from conjure.] Serious injunction; solemn demand. I should not be induced but by your earnest importunities and serious conjurations. Milton.

Conascence. n. s. [con and nascor, Lat.] 1. Common birth; production at the same time; community of birth.
2. Being produced together with another being.
Christians have baptized these gimmices births and double conascence, as containing in them a distinction of soul. Browne. Fulg. Err.

3. The act of uniting or growing together: improperly.
CONSYLPHIA denotes a connascence, or growing together.
CONNATE. adj. [from con and natus, Lat.] Born with another; being of the same birth.

Many, who deny all connate notions in the speculative intellect, do yet admit them in this. South.

Their dispositions to be reflected, some at a greater, and others at a less thickness, of thin plates or bubbles, are connate with the rays, and immutable.

Connate. adj. [from con natural.] 1. United with the being; connected by nature.
2. Participation of the same nature.

There is no way, besides
These painful passages, how we may come to death, and mix with our connatural dust! Mill.

Whatever deals with us,
On sympathy, or some connatural force,
Powerful at greatest distance to unite
With some secret affinity.

Milton's Par. Lost.

Connatural. n. s. [from connatural.] Participation of the same nature; natural inseparability.

There is a connaturality and congruity between that knowledge and those habits, and that future estate of the soul.

Connatural. adv. [from connatural.] In coexistence with nature; originally.

Some common notions seem connaturally engraven in the soul, antecedently to discursive reason.

Connatural. n. s. [from connatural.] Participation of the same nature; natural union.

Such is the connaturalness of our corruption, except we looked for an account hereafter.

To CONNECT. v. a. [connexa, Lat.] 1. To join; to link; to unite; to conjoin; to fasten together.
The corpuscles that constitute the quick silver will be detached into another, that, instead of a fluid body, they will appear in the form of a red powder.

Bogge.

2. To unite by intervention, as a cement.
The natural order of the connexive ideas must direct the synagogues; and a man must see the connexion of each intermediate idea with those that it connects, before he can use it in a synthesis.

Leake.

3. To join in a just series of thought, or regular construction of language: as the author connects his reasons well.

To CONNECT. v. n. To cohere; to have just relation to things precedent and subsequent. This is seldom used but in conversation.

Connectively. adv. [from connect.] In conjunction; in union; jointly; conjointly; conjunctly.
The people's power is great and indispensible, whenever they unite connectively, or by deposition, to exert it.

To CONNECT. v. a. [connexion, Lat.] To join or link together; to fasten to each other.

Those birds which are taught some words or sentences, cannot utter their words or sentences in coherence with the matter which they signify.

Hale's Origin of Machin.

They fly,
By chains connect'd, and with destructive sweep
Behind while itops at once.

Philip.

CONNEXION. n. s. [from connex, or connexio, Lat.] 1. Union; junction; the act of fastening together; the state of being fastened together.
2. Just relation to something precedent or subsequent; consequence of argumentation; coherence.

Contemplation of human nature doth, by a necessary connexion and chain of causes, carry us up to the Deity.

Ryle.

Each intermediate idea must be such as, in the whole chain, hath a visible connexion with those two it is placed between.

Leake.

A connexion, wise, reflecting cause, that can deliberate, means elect, and find those due connexion with the end design'd.

Blackm. Creation.

Connexive. adj. [from connect.] Holding the force of connexion; conjunctive.
The predicate and subject are joined in a form of words by connexive particles.

Watts's Logick.

Conncntion. n. s. [from conniia, Lat.] A winking.

Diet.

2. Voluntary blindness; pretended ignorance; forbearance.

It is better to mitigate usury by declaration, than to suffer it to rage by connivance.

Bacon.

Disbelief, having gained one degree of its beauty, will destroy another: every vice interdicts a connexion, an approbation.

Smith.

A connexion to admit half, will produce ruin.

Swift.

To CONNIVE. v. n. [connivea, Lat.] 1. To wink.
This artist is to teach them how to nod judicially, to connive with either eye.

Spectator.

2. To pretend blindness or ignorance; to forbear; to pass unobserved.
The licentiousness of inferiorities, and the connexions of superiors, the one violates, and the other connives.

Dryden.

Pope.

Dryden's Piety.

With whatever colours he persuades authority to connive at his own vices, he will desire its protection from the effects of other men's.

Pope.

He thinks it a scandal to government to connive at such transgressions as reject all revelation.

Swift.

No INNOSEUR. n. s. [Fr.] A judge; a critic.
It is often used of a pretended critic.

Your lesson learnt, you'll be secure
To give the name of connisseur.

Swift.

To CONNOTATE. v. a. [con and nota, Lat.] To designate something besides itself; to imply; to infer.

God's foreknowledge doth not incline or connect pre-determining any more than I desire with my intellect.

Hammond.

Connotation. n. s. [from connotation.] Implication of something besides itself; inference; illation.

By reason of the co-existence of one thing with another, there arises a various relation or connection between them.

Hale's Origin of Machin.

Plate by his ideas means only the divine essence with this generation it is variously interwoven or participable by created beings.

Nerval.

To CONNOITATE. v. a. [con and nota, Lat.] To imply; to betoken; to include.

God's, in the general notion of it, connote also a certain suitableness of it to some other thing.

South.

Connubial. adj. [connubialis, Lat.] Matrimonial; nuptial; pertaining to marriage; conjugal.

Should succeed have a pleasing flame inspire.

And the chaste queen connubial modestly require.

Pope's Odyssey.

CONNOIS. n. s. [connosse.]
A figure partaking of a cone; approaching to the form of a cone.

The tympanum is not capable of tension as a drum: there remains another way, by drawing it to the centre into a conic form.

Holden's Elements of Speech.

Conoidal. adj. [from conus.] Approaching to a conic form, to the form of a round decreasing.

To CONQUASSATE. v. a. [conassa, Lat.] To shake; to agitate. Not in use.

Vomits do violently connassate the lungs.

Harvey.

Conquassation. n. s. [from conquassate.] Agitation; connexion.

To CONQUER. v. a. [conquerir, Fr. conqueror, Lat.] 1. To gain by conquest; to over-run; to win.

They had conquered them and brought them under tribute.

1 Mar. viii. 2.

Welcome, great Sturigle, and teach me now
All I was born to know.

Thy scholar's victories thou dost outdo:

He conquer'd th' earth, the whole world yonder.

Curtis.

Twixt fit
Who conquer'd nature, should preside o'er war.

Pope.

We conquer'd France, but felt our captive's chains;
Their arts victorious triumph'd o'er our arms.

Pope.

2. To overcome; to subdue; to vanquish.
Both regic to be victors, breast to breast; Yet neither conqueror nor conquered.

Shaksp. Henry VI.

The conquer'd also, and insin'd by war,
Shall, with their freedom lost, all virtue lose.

And fear God's vengeance.

Milton.

Anna conquer'd but to save,
And governs but to bless.

Smith.

3. To surmount; to overcome: as, he conquered his reluctance.

To CONQUER. v. n. To get the victory; to overcome.

Put him to cholre strong: he hath been use'd\nEver to conquer and to have his word
Of contradiction.

Shaksp. Coriolanus.

Equal success he sent these claimants high,
And both resign'd to conquer or to die.

Waller.

The logic of a conquering sword has no propriety.

Dryden's Piety.

Conquerable. adj. [from conquer.] Possible to be overcome.

While the heap is small, and the particulars few, he will find it easy and conquerable.

South.

Conqueror. n. s. [from conquer.] 1. A man that has obtained a victory; a victor.

Bum with triumphant garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed.

Shaksp. Richard III.

The gain of civil wars will not allow
Bugs for the conqueror's crew.

Cowley.

A critick that attack's authors in reputation,
Is of the slave who called out to the conqueror, Re- turner, Sir, that you are a man.

Addis. Guard.

364
One that subsides and ruins countries.

Deserving freedom more than those their conquerors, who leave behind nothing but ruin wherever they rove. Milton's Parad. Regained.

That tenant god, that restless conqueror,
May rest in his own peace, in his own pain.
Prior's Par.

Conquest. n. s. [conquest, Fr.]

1. The act of conquering; subjection.

A perfect conquest of a country removes all the people to the condition of subjects.

Milton's Par. Regained.

2. Acquisition by victory; thing gained.

More willingly I mention air, this our old conquest; than remember hell, Our hated habitation.

3. Victory, in arms.

I must yield my body to the earth, and, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.

Shaksp. Henry VI.

I'll lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;
To whom I will retire my conquest won.
And she shall be sole victress.
Shak. Richard III.

May not this fortune be more than
Than all the conquests former kings did gain.

Ld. Dymas.

In joys of conquest he resigns his breath.
And, fill'd with England's glory, smiles in death.

Addison.

Conscionable, adj. [conscionable, Lat.]

Near of kin; of the same blood; related by birth, not affined.

Am I not a conscioussone? Am I not of their blood?
Shaksp.

Conscription. n. s. [conscription, Lat.]

Relation by blood; relation by descent from one common progenitor; nearness of kin; distinguished from affinity, or relation by marriage.

I have not a touch of conscription.

Shaksp. Troilus and Cressida.

The king has conspired against his own people.
Bacon's Holy War.

The first original would subsist, though he outlived all terms of conscription, and became by his nature his own progeny.
Brown's Vulg. Err.

Christ has concealed itself to a cognition and consciousning with us.
South.

Conscination. n. s. [from conscription, Lat. to piece.] The act of patching together.

Diet.

Conscience, n. s. [conscientia, Lat.]

1. The knowledge or faculty by which we judge of the goodness or wickedness of ourselves.

When a people have not a touch of conscience, no sense of their evil doings, it is but too much to reason on them.

Spen.

Who against faith and conscience can he heard?

Infallible?

Milton's Par. Lost.

Conscience has not been wanting to itself in endeavouring to get the clearest information about the will of God.

South.

But why must those be thought to escape, that feel those rods of scorpions, and those whips of steel, Which conscience shakes?

Creek's Journal.

Nothing was the effect of the cause, nor cause was the effect.

But all was safe, for conscience was their guard.

Dryden's Odd.

Conscience signifies that knowledge which a man hath of his own thoughts and actions; and because, if a man judgeth falsely of his actions by comparing them with the law of God, his mind will not approve or condemn him, this knowledge or conscience may be both an accuser and a judge.

Shaksp.

2. Justice; the estimate of conscience; the determination of conscience; honesty. This is sometimes a serious, and sometimes a ludicrous sense.

This is thanks to God, if a man, for conscience toward God, endure grief.

Pictes, ii. 19.

Now is Cupidi a child of conscience; he makes his harpy a daughter.
Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

He had against right and conscience, by shameless treachery, intruded himself into another man's kingdom.
Knolles.

What you require cannot, in conscience, be deferred beyond this time.
Milton.

Her majesty is obliged to endeavor this by her authority, as much as by her practice.

Swift.

3. Consciousness; knowledge of our own thoughts or actions.

Merit, and good works, is the end of man's motion; and conscience of the same is the accomplishment of man's rest.

Bacon.

The reason why the simpler sort are moved with authority, is the conscience of their own ignorance.

Hooker.

The sweetest cordial we receive at last.

In conscience of our virtuous actions past.

Denham.

Hector was in an absolute certainty of death, and, depressed with the conscience of being an ill cause.

Clarendon.

4. Real sentiments; veracity; private thoughts.

Dost thou in conscience think, tell me, Amilia, That there be women do abuse their husbands.

Innocent Kings.

Shaksp.

They did in their conscience know, that he was not able to send them any part of it.

Clarendon.

5. Scruple; principle of action.

We must make a conscience in keeping the just laws of superiors.

Taylor's Holy Living.

Why should not the one make as much conscience of betraying for gain, as the other do for a crust?

L'Estrange.

Children are travellers newly arrived in a strange country; we should therefore make conscience not to mislead them.

Locke.

6. In ludicrous language, reason; reasonableness.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou not the conscience back?
To think I shall lack friends!
Shaksp. Timon.

Half a dozen fools are, in all conscience, as many as you should require.

Swift.

Conscientious. adj. [from conscience.]

Scrupulous; exactly just; regulated by conscience.

Lead a life in so conscientious a prudence, as in thought, word, and deed, to make good the character of an honest man.
L'Estrange.

Conscientiously, adv. [from conscience.]

According to the direction of conscience.

More stress has been laid upon the strictness of law, than conscientiously did belong to it.

L'Estrange.

There is the erroneous as well as the rightly informed conscience; and, if the conscience happens to be deluded, sin does not therefore cease to be sin, because a man committed it conscientiously.
South.

Conscientiousness. n. s. [from conscientious.] Exactness of justice; tenderness of conscience.

It will be a wonderful conscientiousness in them, if they will content themselves with less profit than they can make.

Locke.

Conscientiously, adj. [from conscience.]

Reasonable; just; according to conscience.

A knave very valuable; no further conscientious than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming.

Shaksp.

Let my debts have conscientious satisfaction.

Fronii.
A bishop ought not to consecrate a church which the patron has built for filthy gain, and not for true devotion. Hooker. Sometimes A's sacred rites are consecrated. Appears all black. Waller.

Shall consecrate unto the Lord the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for a trespass offering. Num. vi. 12.

3. To canonize. Consecrate. adj. [from the verb.] Consecrated, sacred, devoted, consecrated. The water consecrate for sacrifice appears all black. Waller. Shouldst thou but hear 1 licentious; And that this body, consecrate to thee, Byhuman lust should be contaminate. Shaksp. Comedy of Errors. The cardinal, standing before the choir, let them know that they were assembled in that consecrate place to sing unto God. Bacon's Henry VII. Into these secret shades, cried she, How dar'st thou be so bold To enter, consecrate to me? Or touch this hallowed'quill? Dryden's Cynthia.

Consecration. n. s. [from consecrate.] One that performs the rites by which any thing is devoted to sacred purposes. Whether he be not against the notion of a sacrament, that the consecrator alone should partake of it. Atterbury.

Consecration. n. s. [from consecrate.] 1. A rite or ceremony of dedicating and devoting things or persons to the service of God, with an application of certain proper solemnities. Aijlige's Par. At and consecration as well as of the tabernacle as of the temple, it pleased the Almighty to give a sign. Hooker.

The consecration of his God is upon his head. Num. vi. 7. We must know that consecration makes not a place sacred, but only solemnly declares it so, the gift of the power of God makes it God's, and consequently sacred. Smith.

2. The act of declaring one holy by canonization. The calendar swells with new consecrations of saints. Hallse.

Consecutively. adj. [from consecut-us, Lat.] Consequent; consequent; consequentially; following by consequence.

From the inconsistent and contrary determinations thereto, consistory inquiries and continuance may arise. Brown.

Consecutive. n. s. [from the adjective.] Deduction from premises; consequence; corollary. These propositions are consequences drawn from the observations.

Woodward's Nat. Hist.

Consequence. n. s. [from consecut-us, Lat.] 1. Train of consequences; chain of deduction; concatenation of propositions.

Some consequences are so intimately and evidently connected to or found in the premises, that the conclusion is attained, and without any thing of reasoning progress.

2. Succession. In a quick succession of the colours, the impression of every colour remains in the sensum. Newton's Opticks.

3. In astronomy. The month of consecution, or, as some term it, of progression, is the space between one conjunction of the moon with the sun unto another. Broun's Vulgar Errors. The moon makes four quarterly seasons within her little year, or month of consecution. Holder.

Consequent. v. a. [consequent.] To conspire. To sow different seeds together. Dict.

Consequence. n. s. [consequent., Lat.] Agreement; accord. Agreement by consentaneous or accord; unity of opinion. The fighting winds would stop there and admire, Learning consent and consecration of God. Col. Davis.

To 7. 1. The act of yielding or consenting. I am far from considering that compliance for plenary consent it was not. K. Charles. When thou canst truly call these virtues thine, De wise and free by heaven's consent and mine. Dryden's Pers.

2. Consent; agreement; accord; unity of opinion. Milton.

4. Tendency to one point; joint operation. Such is the world's great harmony, that springs from union, order, full consent of things. Pope.

5. In physical. The perception one part has of another, by means of some fibres and nerves common to them both, and the union of the two substances, by exciting the fibres the eye, will affect and draw them there into aspasia, as to affect the bowels in the same manner, by the intercommunication of nervous threads, and cause a sudor; and extend their twitches sometimes to the stomach, and occasion vomiting. Quincy.

To Consent. v. n. [consentatus, Lat.] 1. To be of the same mind; to agree. Though what thou tell'st some doubt within me move, But more desire to hear, if thou consent. The full relation. Milton.

2. To co-operate to the same end. Milton.

3. To yield; to give consent; to allow; to admit: with to. Ye comest scarce, the bad revolting stars That have consecrate unto Henry's death. Shaksp. Henry VI.

In this we consent unto you, if ye will be so wise. Genesis. What is last thou dost abhor to dream. Milton. Waking thou never wilt consent too. Waller.

Their monstrous thunder would awake Dull earth, which does with heav'n consent. To all they were. Waller.

Consentaneous. adj. [consentatus, Lat.] Agreeable to; consistent with. In the picture of Abrahaim sacrificing his son. Locke.

Issue is described a little boy, which is not consequent unto the circumstantial of the text. Brown's Vulgar Errors. It will cost no palus to bring you to the knowing, nor to the practice; it being very agreeable and consequent to every one's nature. Hammond's Pract. Cat.

Consentaneously. adv. [from consequentus.] Agreeably; consistently; suitably.

Paracelsus did not always write so consequentially to himself, that his opinions were constantly to be collected from every place of his writings, which seems to express. Bagge.

Consentaneousness. n. s. [from consequentus.] Agreement; consistence.

Dict.

Consentient. adj. [consentientes, Lat.] Agreeing; united in opinion; not differing in sentiment.

The authority due to the consequent judgment and practice of men. Oxf. Reas. against the Covenant.

Consequence. n. s. [consequentia, Lat.] 1. That which follows from any cause or principle.

2. Event; effect of a cause.

3. Here, and in consequence, to the contrary spirits that know.

All mortal consequencies have pronounced it. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Shun the litter consequent, nor cut the wood. Milton.

3. Proposition collected from the agreement of other previous propositions; deduction; conclusion.

It is no good consequence, that reason aims at our being happy, therefore it forbid all voluntary sufferings. Decay of Piety.

4. The last proposition of a syllogism: as, what is commanded by our Saviour is our duty; prayer is commanded, conse.; therefore prayer is our duty.

Can syllogism set things right? No, major of our universal church.

Or, both in friendly consist joint'd, The consequence happens false behind. Prior.

5. Consequentation of causes and effects; consequence.

Sorrow bring the natural and direct offer of sin, that which first brought sin into the world, must, by necessary consequence, bring in sorrow too. Smith.

I felt.

That I must after thee, with this thy son: Such fatal consequency unites us three. Milton's Paras. Lost.

6. That which produces consequencies; influence; tendency.

Asserted without any colour of scripture-proof, it is of very ill consequence to the superstructure of good life. Hammond.

7. Importance; moment.

The instruments of darkness Win us with honest titles, to betray us. In deepest consequence. Shaksp. Macbeth.

The anger of Achilles was of such consequence, that it subdued the kings of Greece. Addison's Spectator.

Their people are sunk in poverty, ignorance, and consequent; and of as little consequence as women and children. Swift.

Consequent. adj. [consequentia, Lat.] 1. Following by rational deduction.

2. Following as the effect of a cause; with to.

It was not a power possible to be inherited, because the right was consequent to, and built up an act perfectly personal. Locke.

3. Sometimes with upon.

396
CON

This satisfaction or dissatisfaction, consequent upon a man's acting suitably or unsuitably to conscience, is a principle not easily to be worn out.

CONSEQUENT. n. s.

1. Consequence; that which follows from previous propositions by rational deduction.

2. Effect; that which follows an acting cause. They were ill paid; and they were ill governed, which is always a consequent of ill payment. South.

CONSEQUENTIAL. adj. [from consequent.]

1. Produced by the necessary concatenation of effects to causes.

2. By consequence; not immediately; eventually.

3. In a regular series.

CONSEQUENTIALITY. n. s. [from consequentual.]

Regular consecution of discourse. Dict.

CONSEQUENTLY. adv. [from consequent.]

1. By consequence; necessarily; inevitably; by the connexion of effects to their causes.

In the most perfect poem a perfect idea was required, and consequently all poets ought rather to imitate it. Dryden.

2. In consequence; pursuant.

There is consequently, upon this distinguishing principle, an inward satisfaction or dissatisfaction in this respect of every good or evil. South.

CONSEQUENCE. n. s. [from consequent.]

Regular connexion of propositions; consecution of discourse.

Let them examine the consequence of the whole body of the doctrine 1 deliver.

CONSERVABLE. adj. [from conserva, Lat. to keep.]

Capable of being kept, or maintained.

CONSERVANTRY. n. s. [from conservan.]

1. Courts held by the Lord Mayor of London, for the preservation of the fishery on the river Thames, are called Courts of Conservantry.

CONSERVATION. n. s. [conservatio, Lat.]

1. The act of preserving; care to keep from perishing; continuance; protection.

There do indeed happen some alterations in the globe, yet they are such as tend rather to the height and conservation of the earth, and its productions, than to their diminution and destruction of both. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

2. Preservation from corruption.

It is an enquiry of excellent use, to enquire into the means of preventing or staying of putrefaction; for therein consisteth the means of conservation of bodies. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

CONSERVATIVE. adv. [from conserva;]

Having the power of opposing diminution or injury.

The spherical figure, as to all heavenly bodies, so it agree to light, as the most perfect and conservative of all others. Parkinson.

CONSERVATOR. n. s. [from conserva, Lat.]

Conservator; one that has the care or office of keeping any thing from detriment, diminution, or extinction.

For that you declare that you have many sick amongst you, he was warned by the conservator of the city, that he should keep at a distance. Bacon's New Atlantis.

The lords of the secret council were likewise made conservators of the peace of the two kingdoms, during the intervals of parliament. Clarence.

Such individuals are the single conservators of their own species. Hale's Orig. of Mankind.

CONSERVATORY. n. s. [from conserva, Lat.]

A place where any thing is kept in a manner proper to its peculiar nature, as, fish in a pond, corn in a granary.

A conservatory of snow and ice, such as they use for delicacy to cool wine in summer. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

You may set your tender trees and plants, with the windows and doors of the greenhouses and conservatories open, for eight or ten days before April. Evelyn's Calendar.

The water dispensed to the earth and atmosphere by the great abyss, that subterraneous conservatory, is by that means replenished. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

CONSERVATORY. n. s. [from conserva, Lat.]

Having a preserving quality.

They will be able to conserve their properties unchanged in passing through several mediums; which is another condition of the rays of light. Newton's Opticks.

2. To candy or pickle fruit.

CONSERVE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A sweetmeat made of the insipid juices of fruit, boiled with sugar till they will harden and candy.

Will you please your honour taste of these conserves? Shaksper.

They have in Turkey and the East certain conserves, which they call secretes, which are like to candied conserves, and are made of sugar and herbs. Han.

The more cost they were at, and the more sweet they bestowed upon them, the more their conserves were prized. De Quincey.

2. A conservatory or place in which any thing is kept. This sense is unusual.

CONSERVE. n. s. [from conserve.]

To preserve without loss or detriment.

Nothing was lost out of these stores, since the art of conserving things other hath gained in knowledge is easy. Temple.

They will be able to conserve their properties unchanged in passing through several mediums; which is another condition of the rays of light. Newton's Opticks.

2. To candy or pickle fruit.

CONSERVE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A sweetmeat made of the insipid juices of fruit, boiled with sugar till they will harden and candy.

Will you please your honour taste of these conserves? Shaksper.

They have in Turkey and the East certain conserves, which they call secretes, which are like to candied conserves, and are made of sugar and herbs. Han.

The more cost they were at, and the more sweet they bestowed upon them, the more their conserves were prized. De Quincey.

2. A conservatory or place in which any thing is kept. This sense is unusual.
Christ, instead of applauding St. Peter's zeal, upbraided his absurdity, that could think his mean selfs considerable to Judas, who could command legions of angels to his service. In painting, not every action, nor every person, is considerable enough to enter into the cloth. Drayton's Defence

Many can make themselves masters of as considerable estates as those who have the greatest portions of land. Addison.

4. More than a little. It has a middle significance between little and great. Many brought in very considerable sums of money. Clarendon. Very probably a considerable part of the earth is yet unknown. Wilkinson. Those earthly particles, when they come to be collected, would constitute a body of a very considerable thickness and solidity. Barret's Theory of the Earth.

Every cough, though severe, and of some considerable continuance, is not of a consumptive nature, nor presages dissolution and the grave. Blackmore.

CONSIDERABLENESS. n. s. [from considerable.] Importance; dignity; moment; value; desert; a claim to notice. We must not always measure the considerableness of things by their most obvious and immediate usefulness, but by their fitness to make or contribute to the discovery of things highly useful. Doyle.

Their most slight and trivial occurrences, by being less apparent, they seem more considerable, and are forcibly imposed upon the company. Government of the Tongue.

CONSIDERABLY. adv. [from considerable.]
1. In a degree deserving notice, though not the highest. And Europe still considerably gains Both by their good example and their pain. Ruscoe.
2. With importance; importantly. I desire no sort of favour so much, as that of serving you more considerably than I have been yet able to do. Pope.

CONSIDERATION. n. s. [from consider.] Consideration; reflection; sober thought. After this cold consideration, sentence me; And as you are a king, speak in your state; What I have done that mischief be my palse. Shaksp., Henry IV.

CONSIDERATE. adj. [consideratus, Lat.]
1. Serious; given to consideration; prudent; not rash; not negligent. I will converse with iron-witted fools, And unregarded: boys: none more for me, That look into me with considerate eyes. Shaksp., Richard III.

Amor is patient, considerate, and careful of his people. Drayton's Table of Preface. I grant it to be in many cases certain, that it is as a considerable man may prudently rely and proceed upon, and both on just cause to doubt of. Titus.

The expediency, in the present juncture, may appear, as the most considerate. Hooke.

2. Having respect to; regarded. Little used. Though they will do nothing for virtue, yet they may be presumed more considerate of praise. Bacon.

3. Moderate; not rigorous. This sense is much used in conversation. CONSIDERATELY. adv. [from considerate.] Calmly; coolly; prudently. Circumstances are of so much force, as they sway an ordinary judgment of a wise man, not fully and considerately pondering the matter. Bacon's Colours of Good and Evil.

CONSIDERATENESS. n. s. [from considerate.]
The quality of being considerable; prudence. Dict.

CONSIDERATION. n. s. [from consider.] 1. The act of considering; mental view; regard; notice. As to present happiness and misery, when that alone comes in consideration, and the consequences are never changes amis. Locke.

2. Mature thought; prudence; serious deliberation. Let us think with consideration, and consider with acknowledging, and acknowledge with admiration. Sidney.

The breath no sooner left his father's body, But that his wildness mortified in him; Consideration, then, was his angel, care, And whipp'd it offinding Adam out of him. Shaksp., Henry V.

3. Contemplation; meditation upon any thing. The love you bear to Mopsa hath brought you to the consideration of her virtues, and that consideration may have made you the more virtuous, and to the more worthy. Sidney.

4. Importance. A claim to notice; worthy regard of ness. considered. Lucan is the only author of consideration among the Latin poets, who was not explained for the use of the daubing: because the whole Phalaris would have been a satire upon the French form of government. Addison's Freewalker.

5. Equivalent; compensation. We are providers enough not to part with anything serviceable to our bodies under a good consideration, but make little account of our souls. Ray on the Creation.

Foreigners can never take our bills for payment, though they might pass as valuable considerations among our own people. Locke.

6. Motive of action; influence; ground of conduct. The consideration, in regard whereof the law forbidth these things, was not because those nations did use them. Hooke.

He had been made generally upon very partial, and not enough deliberated, considerations. Clarendon.

The world cannot pardon your concealing it, I promise you, to the same consideration. Dryden.

7. Reason; ground of concluding. Not led by any commandment, yet moved with such considerations as have been before set down. Hooke.

Uses, not thought upon, before reasonable causes of retaining that which other considerations did procure to be instituted. Hooker.

8. In law. Consideration is the material cause of a contract, without which no contract bindeth. It is either expressed, as if a man bargain to give twenty shillings for a horse; or else implied, as when a man comes into an inn, and taking both meat and lodging for himself and his horse, without bargaining with the host, if he discharge not the house, the host may stay his horse. Coke.

CONSIDERER. n. s. [from consider.] A man of reflection; a thinker. A vain applause of wit for an impudent jest, or of reason for a deep consideration. Government of the Tongue.

CONSIDERATION. v. n. [from consider.] To give to another anything, with the right to it, in a formal manner; to give into other hands; to transfer; sometimes with to, sometimes over to. To give this free gift, consign over to the Divine worship. South.

Must I pass
Again to nothing, while this vital breath;
Casting, consign me over to rest and death?
Prior.

At the day of general account, good men are then to be consigned over to another state, a state of everlasting love and charity. Atterbury.

2. To appropriate; to quit for a certain purpose. The French commander consigned it to the use for which it was intended by the donor. Dryden's Fables, Dedications.

3. To commit; to entrust. The four evangelists consigned it to the writing of history. Addison.

Ariadne, parting for the Trojan war, Consign'd the youthful consorts to his care. Pope's Odyssey.

To CONSIGN. v. n.
1. To submit to the same terms with another. This is not now in use. Thou hast finish'd joy and mien;
All lovers young, all lovers dear,

2. To sign; to consent to. Obsolete.

A maid yet rose over with the virgin crimson of modesty: it was a hard condition for a maid to consign to. Shaksp.

CONSIGNMENT. n. s. [from consign.] 1. The act of consigning; the act by which any thing is delivered up to another. As the hope of salvation is a good disposition towards it, so is it a firm consideration to eternal ruin. Taylor.

2. The act of signing. If we find that we increase in duty, then we may look upon the tradition of the holy sacrament symbols as a direct consignation of pardon. Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

CONSIGN. n. s. [from consign.] 1. The act of consigning.

2. The writing by which any thing is consigned.

CONSISTENT. adj. [from consistus, Lat.] Having one common resemblance. Dict.

To CONSIST. v. n. [consistus, Lat.]
1. To subsist; not to perish. He is before all things, and by him all things consist.

2. To continue fixed, without dissatisfaction. Plane doth not mingle with flame, as air doth with fire, or water with water, but only remaineth contiguous; as it cometh to pass betwixt consisting bodies, so doth water, which is the vehicle of parts. Bacon's Nat. Hist. It is against the nature of water, being a flexible, and ponderous body, to consist and stay itself, and not fall to the lower parts about it. Shakespeare's

3. To be comprised; to be contained. I pretend not to tie the hands of artists whose skill consists only in a certain manner which they have adopted. Dryden.

A great beauty of letters does often consist in little passages of private conversation, and references to particular manners. Walsh.

4. To be composed. The land would consist of plains, and valleys, and mountains, according as the pieces of this present globe were composed. Barret.
Necessity and election cannot consist together in the same act.

Bramhall against Hobbes.

6. To agree; not to oppose; not to contradict; not to counteract: it has seith before the thing compared, or coexistent. Its majesty would be willing to agree to any thing that could consist with its conscience and honour.

Nothing but what may easily consist with your plenty, your prosperity, is requested of you.

You could not help bestowing more than your present scanty sort to the benevolence of a private man, or with the will of any but an Alexander.

Dryden's Fables.

It cannot consist with the Divine Attributes, that the impious man's joys should, upon the whole, exceed those of the upright.

Health consists with temperance alone.

Attarby.

The way of securing the constitution will be by lessening the power of domestic adversities, as much as can consist with lenity.

Scritturz.

CONSISTENCY. n. s. [consistentia, n. s. [consisténtia, Lat.]

1. State with respect to material existence.

Water, being divided, maketh many circles, till it restore itself to the natural consistency.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The consistencies of bodies are very divers: dense, rare, tangible, pneumatical, volatile, fixed, determinate, indeterminate, hard, and soft.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

There is the same necessity for the Divine influence and regimen, to order and govern the world, the universe, in that consistency it hath received, as it was at first to give it, before it could receive it.

Helios's Origin of Mankind.

I carried on my enquiries farther, to try whether this rising world, when formed and finished, would continue always in the same, in the same structure, and consistency.

Barrow.

2. Degree of denseness or rarity.

Let the expressed juices be boiled into the consistents of all natures.

Arithmet. on Allnmetria.

3. Substance; form; make.

His friendship is of a noble make, and a lasting consistency.

South's Sports.

4. Durable or lasting state.

Meditation will confirm resolutions of good, and give them a durable consistency in the soul.

Hermione.

These are fundamental truths that lie at the bottom, the basis upon which many others rest, and in which they have their consistencies therein and rich in store, with which they furnish the mind.

Locke.

5. Agreement with itself, or with any other thing; congruity; uniformity.

That consistency of behaviour, whereby it is impossible to find any one act of life that is not consistent with the mind of it.

Arist. Frechkleer.

6. A state of rest, in which things capable of growth or decrease continue for some time at a stand, without either; as the growth, consistence, and return.

Chambers.

CONSISTENT. adj. [consistente, Lat.]

1. Not contradictory; not opposed.

With reference to such a lord, to serve, and to battle, are terms not consistent only, but conversant.

South.

A great part of their politics others do not think consistent with honour to practice.

Addison on Italy.

On their own axis as the planets run,
And by their force these circles revolve in sun.
So two consistent motions the soul,
And one regards itself, and one the whole.

Popes Essays.

Show me one that has it in his power.

Popes.

To act consistent with himself an hour.

Popes.

The fool consistent, and the false sincere.

Popes.

2. Firm; not fluid.

Pestilential maladies insinuate into the humoral and consistence parts of the body.

Harrv on Consommation.

The sand, contained within the shell, becoming solid and consistible, at the same time that the action upon it.

Wood's Nat. Hist.

CONSISTENTLY. adv. [from consistent.]

Without contradiction; agreeably.

The Phænics are of this character, and the poet desirous to make them consistent with it; they are firm, solid, and immovable.

Bromoc.

CONSIST'ORIAL. adj. [from consistory.]

Relating to the ecclesiastical court.

An officer, or chancellor, has the same consistorial audience with the bishop himself.

Ajuige's Parergon.

CONSISTORY. n. s. [consistorium, Lat.]

1. The place of justice in the court Christian.

Covell.

An offer was made, that, for every one minister, there should be two of the people to sit and give voice in the ecclesiastical consistory.

Hooker, Pref.

This was the bearing of causes in consistory.

Bacou.

Christ himself, in that great consistory, shall design to stand down from his throne.

South.

2. The assembly of cardinals.

How far I proceeded.

Or by far further shall, is warranted by a commission from the consistory.

Ye a whole consistory of 100 cardinals, under the reign of H. VIII.

A late proceeding, of remarkable zeal for the church, were religious to be tried by lives, would have lived down the pope and the whole consistory.

Atterbury.

3. Any solemn assembly.

In mid air

To council sinners all his mighty peers

With thin thick clouds, and dark, profound and gloomy consistory.

At Jove's assent, the deities around

In solemn state the consistory crowned.

Pope's Statius.

1. as a child, will go by the direction.

Shadop. Richard III.

2. To consist; to hold together.

The ancient philosophers always brought in a supernatural principle to unite and constitute the parts of the chaos.

Bartin.

To CONSOCIATE. v. a. (from consociaco, Lat.)

An accomplish; a confederate; a partner.

Partridge and Stanhope were condemned as co-conspirator to Somerset. Inns. Court.

To CONSOCIATE. v. n. To coalesce; to unite.

If they cohere, yet by the next conflict with other animals they might be separated again, without ever concerning into the huge consociate bodies of planets.

Beatty's Sermon.

CONSO'CIATION. n. s. [from consociaco, Lat.]

1. Alliance.

There is such a consociation of offices between the prince and whom his heart breards, that they may help to support his power, as he to their knowledge.

Bam Johnson's Discourses.

2. Union; intimacy; companionship.

By so long and so various consociation with a prince, he had now gotten, as it were, two lives in his own fortune and greatness.

Watten.

CONSO'CIABLE. adj. (from consociaco, Lat.) That which admits combined.

To CON'SOLATE. v. a. (from consoler, Lat.)

To comfort; to console; to soothe in misery. Not much used.

I will done.

That pitiful rumour may report my flight,

To console thee ever.

Shakespeare. All's well that ends well.

What may somewhat disturb all men that honour virtue, we do not discover the latter scene of his misery in authors of antiquity.

Shakespeare's Late, Fr.

CONSOLATOR. n. s. [Lat.] A comforter.

CONSOLATORY. n. s. [from consolate.]

A speech or writing containing topics of comfort.

Consolatories writ.

With studied argument, and much persuasion sought.

Lessent of grief and anxious thought.

Milton's Agamemnon.

CONSOLATION. n. s. [from consolate.] Comfort, alleviation of misery, such alleviation as is produced by partial remedies.

We, that were in the jaws of death, were now brought into a place where we found nothing but consolation.

Against such cruelties,

With inward consolations reconciled;

And did supported so, as shall amaze

Their proudest persecutors.

Milton's Parad. Lost.

Let the righteous persevere with patience, supported with this consolation, that their labour shall not be in vain.

Reges.

CONSOLATORY. adj. (from consolate.) Tending to give comfort.

To CONSOLE. v. a. (from consoler, Lat.) To comfort, to cheer, to free from the sense of misery.

Others the syren sisters compass round,

And empty heads console with empty songs.

Pope's Dunciad.

CONSOL. n. s. [Fr.] In architecture, is a part or member projecting in manner of a bracket, or shoulder-piece, serving to support a cornice, butt, vase, beam, and frequently used as keys of arches.

Chambers.

CONSO'NER. n. s. [from console.] One that gives comfort.

Pride once more appears upon the stage, as the great comforter of the miseries of man.

Comment. on Pope's Essay on Man.

CONSOLIDANT. adj. (from consolate.) That which has the quality of uniting wounds.

To CONSOLIDATE. v. a. (from consoler, Fr. solidus, Lat.)

To form into a compact and solid body, to harden; to unite into a solid mass.

The word may be rendered, either he stretched, or he fixed and consolated, the earth above the waters.

Burton's Theory.

The effect of spirits in stopping hemorrhage, and consolidating the fibres, is well known to chirurgons.

Arithmet.

To combine or unite two parliamentary bills into one.

To CONSOLIDATE. v. n. To grow firm, hard, or solid.

In hurts and ulcers in the head, dryness makes them more apt to consolidate.

Burton's War. Hist.

The sandy, sparry, and stony matter was then soft, and susceptible of any form in these shelly moulds; and it concreted and became hard after Woodard's Nat. Hist.

CONSOLIDATION. n. s. [from consolate.]
1. The act of uniting into a solid mass. The consolidation of the marble, and of the stone, did not fall us at random. Hardcover Nat. Hist.

2. The annexing of one bill in parliament to another.

3. In law, it is used for the combining and uniting of two benefits in one.

Consolidate. adj. [from consolidate.] That which has the quality of healing wounds. Diet.

Cons'onance. n. s. [consonance, Fr. Consonance.] 1. Accord of sound. The two principal consonants that most ravish the ear, are by the consent of all nature, the tetrad and the octave. Hobbes.

And winds and waters flow'd
In consonance. Thomas's Spring.

2. Consistency; congruence; agreement.

from intermixture is no more philosophy, than a total composition of the senses is possible.

Cons'ORT. n. s. [consors, Lat. It had anciently the accent on the latter syllable, but has it now on the former. Milton has used them both.

1. Companion; partner; generally a partner of the bed; a wife or husband.

Fellowship. Such as I seek, fit to participate All rational delight; wherein the brute Cannot be human consort. Milton.

Male be clad, but thy consort
Female for race; then bless'd mankind, and said,
Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the earth. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Thy Bellona, who thy consort came
Not only to thy bed, but thy fame. Dryden.

He single chose to live, and shun'd it to wed,
Well pleas'd to a want a consort of his bed. Dryden's Fables.

His warlike amazone host invades
Th' imperial conquest of Spain's spoiles. Pope.

2. An assembly; a divan; a consultation.

In one consort there sat
Cruel revenge, and rancorous despite. Pope

Dispel your sanguine phantoms, Fairy Q.

3. A number of instruments playing together; a symphony. This is probably a mistake for concert.

A consort of music in a banquet of wine, is as a signet of carbuncle set in gold. Ecles. xxxii. 5.

4. Concordance; union.

Take it singly, and it carrieth an air of levity; but, in concert with the rest, has a meaning quite different. Attrib.

To Cons'ort. n. u. [from the noun.]

To associate with; to unite with; to keep company with.

What will you do? Let's not consort with them. Shakespeare.

Which of the Grecian chiefs consorts with them? Dryden.

To Cons'ort. v. a.

1. To join; to mix; to marry.

He, with his consort Eve,
The fair image of his God, Milton's Par. Lost.

He begins to consort himself with men, and thinks himself one. Locke on Education.

2. To accompany. Not used.

I'll close with you upon the start,
And afterward consort you till bed time. Shakespeare.

Con'sortable. adj. [from consort.] To be compared with; to be ranked with; suitable. Not used

He was consortable to Charles Brandon, under Henry VIII. who was equal to the Emperor. Wotton.

Cons'or'tion. n. s. [consortio, Lat.] Partnership; fellowship; society.

Diet.

Con'spectable. adj. [from spectus, Lat.] Easy to be seen.

Diet.

Con'spec'tuity. n. s. [from spectus, Lat.] Sight; view; sense of seeing.

This word is, I believe, peculiar to Shakespeare, and perhaps corrupt.

What harm can your bliss conspectuities glean out of this character? Shakespeare, Coriolanus

Con'spersion. n. s. [conspicuo, Lat.] A sprinkling about.

Diet.

Con'spiracy. n. s. [conspicuo, Lat.] Brightness; favourableness to the sight.

If this definition be clearer than the thing defined, mankind may vie for conspersion with moon. Glanville's Syllog.

Conspicuous. adj. [conspicuo, Lat.]

1. Obvious to the sight; seen at a distance.

Or come I less conspicuous? Or what change

2. Eminent; famous; distinguished. He attributed to each of them the virtue which he thought most conspicuous in them. Dryden's Journal. Dedication.

Thy father's most points thee out to view, And sets thee in the fairest point of light, To make thy virtues or thy faults conspicuous. Addison's Cato.

The house of lords.

Conspicuousness. n. s. [from conspicuous.]

1. Obviously to the view. These methods may be preserved conspiciously and brefly distinct. Watts's Logick.

2. Eminently; famously; remarkably. Conspicuousness. n. s. [from conspicuous.]

1. Exposure to the view; state of being visible at a distance.

Looked on with such a weak light they appear well proportioned fabrics; yet they appear so but in that twilight, which is requisite to their conspicuousness. Pope's Proem. Essay.

2. In the same manner; fame; of the same name.

Their writings attract more readers by the authors conspicuousness. Dryden on Colours.

Conspiracy. n. s. [conspiratio, Lat.]

1. A private agreement among several persons to commit some crime; a plot; a concerted treason.

O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to shew thy dang'rous brow by night,
When evils are most free? Shack. Julius Caesar.

I had forgot the false conspicy.
Of the heart Caliban, and his credul'rate,
Against my life. Shakespeare, Tempest.

When scarce he had escap'd the blow
Of faction and conspiracy.

Death did his promised hopes destroy. Dryden.

2. In law, an agreement of men to do any thing; always taken in the evil part. It is taken for a confederacy of two, at least, falsely to indict one, or to procure him to be indicted, of felony. Cowell.

Conspiration. n. s. [conspiratio, Lat.]

Conspiring; engaging in a conspiracy or plot; plotting.

Thus art a traitor,
Conspiring 'gainst this high illustrious prince. Shakespeare, King Lear.

Conspiration. n. s. [conspiratio, Lat.] An agreement of men to one end.

One would wonder how, from so differing premises, they should infer the same conclusion, were it not that the conspirations of interest were too potent for the diversity of judgment. Decay of Piety.

Conspirator. n. s. A man engaged in a plot; one who has secretly concert ed with others committed of a crime; a plotter.

Aclatophel is amongst the conspirators with Absalom, and Holofernes, &c. Samuel. Stand back thou manifest conspirator; Thou that contrivest to murder our dearly lord. Shakespeare, Henry VI.

But let the bold conspirator beware;
For he's a man whose princes p越是 or care. Dryden's Spanish F

500
To CONSPIRE. v. n. [conspiro, Lat.] 1. To concert a crime; to plot; to hatch secret treason.

2. To over-run the Constable. [perhaps from constable, Fr. the settled, firm, and stated account.] 'To spend more than what a man knows himself to be worth; a low phrase.

CONSTANCE. n. s. [from constable.] The office of a constable. This keepership is annexed to the constableship of the castle, and that granted out in lease. Courcy's Survey of Cornwall.

CONSTABLESHIP. n. s. [from constable.] The office of a constable.

CONSPIRATORY. n. s. [from conspira.] A conspirator; a plotter.

CONSPIRACY. n. s. [from conspira.] The act of defiling; defilement; pollution.

CONSTATE. n. s. [comes stabuli, as it is supposed.] 1. Lord high constable is an ancient officer of the crown. The function of the constable of England consisted in the care of the common peace of the land in deeds of arms, and in matters of war. To the court of the constable and marshal belonged the cognizance of contracts, deeds of arms without the realm, and combat and blazonry of arms within it. The first constable of England was created by the Conqueror, and the office continued hereditary till the thirteenth of Henry VIII. when it was laid aside, as being so powerful as to become troublesome to the king. From these mighty magistrates are derived the inferior constables of hundreds and franchises; two of whom were ordained, in the thirteenth of Edward I., to be chosen in every hundred, for the conservation of the peace, and view of armour. These are now called high constables; because constance of time, and increase both of people and offices, have occasioned others in every town of inferior authority, called petty constables. Besides these, we have constables nominated from particular places; as, constable of the Tower, of Dorker Castle, of the Castle of Carnarvon; but these are properly constellents, or governors of constables. (Chambers.)

One put into his hand a note of the whole conspiracy against him, together with all the names of the conspirators. South.

To CONSTELLATE. n. n. [constellatus, Lat.] To join lustre; to shine with one general light.

The several things which engage our affections do, in a consequent manner, shine forth and constellate in God. Boyle.

To CONSTELLATE. v. a. To unite several shining bodies in one splendid. Great constellations, and such as are constellated into knowledge, do nothing till they unite all. Brown's Talg. Err.

These scattered perfections, which were divided among the several ranks of inferior natures, were summed up and constellated in ours. Glanville's Sequa.}

CONSTITUTION. n. s. [from consti-]

1. A cluster of fixed stars.

2. An assemblage of splendours, or excellencies.

The condition is a constellation or constellation of all those glorious graces, faith, hope, charity, self-denial, repentance, and the rest. Hammond's Pract. Catechism.

CONSTRUCTION. n. s. [from constriuere, Lat.] Astonishment; amazement; alienation of mind by a surprise; surprise; wonder.

They find the same holy constitution upon themselves that Jacob did at Bethel, which he called the gate of heaven. South.

The natives, dubions whom they must obey, in construction wait till rigid conquest will pronounce their liege. Philips.

CONSTIPATE. v. a. [from constipare, Lat.] 1. To crowd together into a narrow room; to thicken; to condense.

It is cold, the property is to condense and constipate. Bacon.

It may, by amassing, cooling, and constipating of waters, turn them into rain. Play on the Cries.

There might rise some vertiginous motions or whirlpools in the matter of the chaos, whereby the atoms might be thrust and crowded to the middle of those whirlpools and there constipate another one into great solid globes. Bentley.

2. To stuff up, or stop by filling up the passages.

It is not probable that any ailment should have the quality of strictly constipating or shutting up the capillary vessels. Arbuth. on Alim.

3. To bind the belly, or make costive.

Omitting honey, which is laxative, and the powder of some headstones in this, both rather constipate and bind, than purge and loosen the belly. Brown's Talg. Err.

CONSTIPATION. n. s. [from constipare.] 1. The act of crowding any thing into less room; condensation.

This worketh by the detention of the spirits, and constipation of the tangible. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

It requires either absolute fulness of matter, or a pretty close constipate and mutual contact of particles. Bentley.

2. Stoppage; obstruction by pléuride.

The inconstancy of the gale occasions a compounding of the hollows. Arbuth. on Alim.

3. The state of having the body bound. Constituent. adj. [constituere, Lat.] That which makes any thing what it is; necessary to existence; essential; such as which anything consists.

Body, soul, and reason, are the three parts necessary to a perfect man. Dign. De Natura Rerum.

1. All animals derived all the constituent matter of their bodies, successively, in all ages, out of this food.

2. It is impossible that the figures and sizes of its constituent particles, should be so justly adapted as to touch one another in every point.

Bentley's Sermons.

CONSTITUENT. n. s.
1. The person or thing which constitutes or settles anything in its peculiar state.

The first composition and origination requires a higher and more constant than chance. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

2. That which is necessary to the subsistence of anything.

The obstruction of the mesentery is a great impediiment to nutrition; for the lymph in those glands is a necessary constituent of the aliment.

Arbuth. on Anis.

3. He that deputes another; as, the representatives in parliament disregard their constituents.

To CONSTITUTE. v. a. [constituo, Latin.]
1. To give formal existence; to make anything what it is; to produce.

Prudence is not only a moral but christian virtue, such as is necessary to the constituting of all others. Decoy of Pleats.

2. To create; to establish.

We must obey laws appointed and constituted by lawful authority, not against the law of God. Taylor's Holy Living.

It will be necessary to consider, how at first those several churches were constituted, that we may understand how in this one church they were all united.

3. To depute; to appoint another to an office.

CONSTITUTER. n. s. [from constitute.]
He that constitutes or appoints.

CONSTITUTION. n. s. [from constitute.]
1. The act of constituting, enacting, deputing, establishing, producing.

The first act of government is to establish the constitution of the state.

2. State of being; particular texture of parts; natural qualities.

This is more beneficial than any other constitution; Newton's Opticks.

3. Corporeal frame.

Amongst many bad effects of this oily constitution, there is one advantage; such who arrive to age, are not subject to scurvy of fibres.

Arbuth. on Anis.

4. Temper of body, with respect to health or disease.

If such men happen, by their native constitution, to fall into the gout, either they mind it not at all, having no leisure to be sick, or they use it like a dog.

Temple.

Beauty is nothing else but a just Accommodation of the several Members, animated by a healthfull constitution.

Dryden.

5. Temper of mind.

Dame's, according to the constitution of a dull head, think no better way to shew himself wise than by suspecting everything in his way. Sidney.

Some, as a friend dead; else nothing in the world.

Could turn so much the constitution

Of any constant man. Shakesp. Mer. of Tence.
CON

Try a deep well, or a conservatory of snow,
where the cold may be more constraining.
Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

Winter binds
Our strength’nd bodies in a cold embrace.

Constrin^t. Thomson’s Winter.

To CONSTRUCT. v. a. [constructus, Lat.]
1. To build; to form; to compile; to constitute.

Lest there be an admiration of those divine attributes and prerogatives, for whose manifesting he was pleased to construct this vast fabric.

Boyle’s Censituation of Natural Philosophy.

2. To form by the mind; as, he construct-ed a new system.

CONSTRUCTION. n. s. [constructio, Lat.]
1. The act of building, or piling up in a regular method.
2. The form of building; structure; construction.

There’s no art
To show the minds construction in the face.
Shak.

The ways were made of several layers of flat stones and dint: the construction was a little various, according to the nature of the soil, or the materials which they composed.

Arnold.

3. [In grammar] The putting of words, duly chosen, together in such a manner as is proper to convey a complete sense.

Clarke’s Latin Grammar.

Some particles constantly, and others in certain constructions, have the sense of a whole sentence contained in them.

Locke.

4. The act of arranging terms in the proper order, by disentangling transpositions; the act of interpreting; explanation.

This label, whose containing
It so from us, and in hard usage, that I can Make no collection of it: let him shew
His skill in the construction.
Shak. Cymbeline.

5. The sense; the meaning; interpretation.

In which sense although we judge the apostle’s words to have been uttered, yet hereunto we do not require them to yield, that think any other construction more sound.

He that would live at ease, should always put the best construction on business and conversation.

Colletor on the Senses.

Religion, in its own nature, produces good will towards men, and puts the mildest construction upon every accident that befals them.

Spectator.

It cannot, therefore, unto reasonable constructions seem strange, or savour of singularity, that we have examined this point.

Brown’s Veho. Err.

7. The manner of describing a figure or problem in geometry.

Construction of Equations, in algebra, is the method of reducing a known equation into lines and figures, in order to a geometrical demonstration.

CONSTRUCT. n. s. [from construct.]
Pile; edifice; fabric.

They shall the earth’s constructio closely bind,
And to the centre keep the parts confin’d. Blackm.

To CONSTRUCT, v. a. [construa, Lat.]
1. To range words in their natural order; to disentangle transposition.

I’ll teach mine eyes, with meek humility,
Love-learned letters to her eyes to read:
Which her deep wit, that true heart’s thought can spell,
Will soon conceive, and learn to construe well.
Shak. Henry IV.

2. To interpret; to explain; to shew the meaning.

I must crave that I be not so understood or construed, as if any such thing, by virtue thereof, could be done without the aid and assistance of God’s受降子.

Virgil is so very figurative, that he requires (I may almost say) a grammar apart to construe him.

Dryden.

Thus we are put to construe and paraphrase our own words, to free ourselves either from the ignorance or malice of our adversaries.

Sillingar.

When the word is construed into its idea, the double meaning vanishes.

Addis. on Ancient Medals.

To CONSTITUTE, v. a. [constipuro, Lat.] To violate; to debauch; to defile.

CONSTITUTION. n. s. [from consti-prare; Violation; defilement.

CONSTITUENTIAL. adj. [constitutial, Lat.]
1. Having the same essence or subsistence.

The Lord our God is but one God; in which indivisible unity, notwithstanding we adore the Father, as being altogether of himself, we glorify that consubstantial Word, which is the Son, blessed and magnify that co-essential Spirit, eternally proceeding from both, which is the Holy Ghost.

Hooker.

2. Being of the same kind or nature.

It constitutes a body consubstantial with our bodies; a body of the same, both nature and measure, which it had on earth.

Hooker.

In their conceits the human nature of Christ was not consubstantial to ours, but of another kind.

Brewer.

CONSTITUENCY. n. s. [from consubstan-

tial, Lat.]
1. Existence of more than one, in the same substance.

The eternity of the Son’s generation, and his co-eternity and consubstantiality with the Father, when he came down from heaven.

Hooker.

2. Participation of the same nature.

To CONSTITUTEANT. n. a. [con and substantia, Lat.] To unite in one common substance or nature.

CONSUBSTANTIALITY. n. s. [from consubstan-
tial, Lat.]
The union of the body of our blessed Saviour with the sacramental element, according to the Luthers.

In the point of consubstantiality, towards the latter part, he changed his mind.

CONSUL, n. s. [consul, consulando, Lat.]
1. The chief magistrate in the Roman republic,
Or never be so noble as a consul.
Not yoke with him for tribune.
Shak. Coriolanus.

Consul of moderate power in calms were made; when the Gauls came, one sole dictator sway’d.

Dryden.

2. An officer commissioned in foreign parts to judge between the merchants of his nation, and protect their commerce.

CONSULAR. adj. [consularis, Lat.]
1. Relating to the consul.

The consul’s power had only the organs, without the force, of the royal authority.

Spectator.

2. Consular Men.

One who had been consul.
Rosc not the consul men, and left their places, so soon as they sat down!

Shak. Jonson’s Catiline.

CONSULATE, n. s. [consulatus, Lat.] The office of consul.

His name and consulate were effaced out of all publick registers and inscriptions, helicon in Italy.

CONSULSHIP, n. s. [from consul.] The office of consul.

The patricians should do very ill,
To let the consulship be so defac’d.

Ben Jonson’s Catiline.

The lovely boy, with his auspicious face,
Shall Polio’s consulship and triumphs, Dryd.

To CONSUL, r. n. [consulto, Lat.] To take counsel together; to deliberate in common; it has with before the person admitted to consultation.

Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow’d, was
A thing inspir’d; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy, that this tempest,
Bushing the garment of this peace, abhors;

The sudden breach on’t.

Shak. Henry VIII.

A senator’s house, wherein he hundred and twenty men sat consulting always for the people.

1 Mac. viii. 15.

Consult not with the slothful for any work.

Sec. xxi.

He sent for his bosom friends, with whom he most confidently consulted, and shewed the paper to them, the contents whereof he could not conceal.

Clarendon.

To CONSULT, v. a.
1. To ask advice of; as, he consulted his friends; to consult an author.

To regard; to act with view or respect to.
We are, in the first place, to consult the necessities of life, rather than matters of ornament and delight.

Dryden’s Don Sebastian.

The senate owes its gratitude to Cato,
Who with so great a soul consults its safety,
And guards our lives, while he neglects his own.

Addison.

3. To plan; to contrive.

Thus hast consulted shame to thy house, by cutting off many people.

Web. i. 10.

Many things were there consulted for the future, yet nothing was positively resolved.

Clarendon.

CONSULT, n. s. [from the verb. It is variously accented.]
1. The act of consulting.

Yourself in person heard one chosen half,
And March’ o’ supersede the fact in consultation.

Dryden’s Don Sebastian.

2. The effect of consulting; determination.

He said, and rose the first; the council broke; and all their grave counsels dissolved in smoke.

Dryden’s Fables.

3. A council: a number of persons assembled in deliberation.

Divers meetings and consults of our whole number, to consider of the former labours.

Bacon.

A counsel of coquet’s below
Was called, to rig him out a beau.

Swift.

CONSULTATION. n. s. [from consult.]
1. The act of consulting; secret deliberation.

The chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes.

Mark xvi. 1.

2. A number of persons consulted together; a council.

A consultation was called, wherein he advised a salutation.

Warren of Arcadia.

3. [In law.] Consultatio is a writ, whereby a cause, being formerly removed by prohibition from the ecclesiastical court, or court civil, to the king’s court, is returned thither again; for the judges of the king’s court, it, upon comparing the libel with the suggestion of the party, that he do find the suggestion false, or not proved, and therefore the cause to be worthily called from the court christian; then, upon this consultation or deliberation, decree it to be returned again.

Cowell.

CONSULTER, n. s. [from consult.] One 3 E

393
CON

that consults, or asks counsel or intelligence.

There shall not be found among you a charmer, or a considerer with familiar spirits, or a wizard.

Deut. xviii. 11.

CONSUMABLE, adj. [from consume.] Susceptible of destruction; possible to be wasted, spent, or destroyed.

Asbestos does truly agree in this common quality ascribed unto both, of being incomestuable, and not consumable by fire; but it doth contract so much foulness from the earthy parts of the oil, though it was tried with some of the purest oil, that in a very few days it did choke and extinguish the flame. Halliday's Mathematica Magicæ.

Our growing rich or poor depends only on, which is greater or less, our importation or exportation of consumable commodities.

Locke.

To CONSUME, v. a. [consumo, Lat.] To waste; to spend; to destroy.

Where two raging fires meet together, They consume the thing that feeds their fury.

Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for the locusts shall consume it.

Thou shalt not stand still while an acceptable fire burneth, but shalt feed the flames, and not let them devour the tree.

Thus in soft anguish she consumes the day.

Nur quits her deep retirement. Thomson's Spring.

To CONSUMMATE, v. a. [consummauer, Fr. consummare, Lat.] To complete; to perfect; to finish; to end. Anciently accented on the first syllable.

Youself, myself, and other sorts, will pass To consummate this business happily.

Shakesp. King John.

There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

Shak.

The person was cunning enough to begin the deceit in the weaker, and the weaker sufficient to consummate the fraud in the stronger.

He had a mind to consume the happiness of the day.

Tailor.

CONSUMMATE, adj. [from the verb.] Complete; perfect; finished; omnibus numerus absoluteus.

I do but stay till your marriage be consummated.

Shakesp.

Earth, in her rich attire Consummate, lovely mild. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Gratian, among his maxims for raising a man to the most consummate greatness, advises to perform extraordinary actions, and to secure a good historian.

Addison's Freeholder.

If a man of perfect and consummate virtue falls into a misfortune, it raises our pity, but not our terror.

Addison's Spectator.

CONSUMMATION. n. s. [from consummate.]

1. Completion; perfection; end.

That just and regular process, which it must be supposed to take from its original to its consummation.

Addison's Spectator.

2. The end of the present system of things; the end of the world.

From that beginning of the world unto the last consummation thereof, it neither hath been, nor can be, otherwise.

Haller.

3. Death; end of life.

Ghost, unlawful, forbear thee! Nothing ill come near thee!

CON

Quiet consumption have, Unawares be thy garment. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

CONSUMPTION. n. s. [consumpfo, Lat.]

1. The act of consuming; waste; destruction.

In commodities, the value rises as its quantity is lessened; the wealth depends upon it being preferred in its consumption.

Locke.

2. The state of wasting or perishing.

Ena and Vesuvius have sent forth flames for this two or three thousand years, yet the mountains themselves have not suffered any considerable diminution or consumption; but are, at this day, the highest mountains in those countries.

Waste.

3. [In physic.] A waste of muscular flesh. It is frequently attended with a hectic fever, and is divided by physicians into several kinds, according to the variety of its causes.

Quincy.

Consumption now In hollow bones of man Shakesp. Timon.

The steppe of women's courses, if not looked to, sets them into a consumption, dropsey, or other distemper.

Harrery.

The essential and distinguishing character of a confirmed consumption, is a wasting of the body by reason of an ulcerated state of the lungs, attended with a cough, a discharge of purulent matter, and a hectic fever.

Blackmore.

CONSUMPTIVE. adj. [from consume.]

1. Destructive; wasting; exhausting; havving the quality of consuming.

A long consumptive war is more likely to break this grand alliance than了些 France. Addison on the War.

2. Diseased with a consumption.

Nothing taunts sound lungs sooner than inspiriting the breath of consumptive lungs.

Wheat.

The lean, consumptive wench, with coughs decay'd, Is call'd a pretty, tight, and slender maid. Dryden.

By an exact regimen a consumptive person may hold out for years.

Arbuthnot on Diet.

CONSUMPTIVENESS. n. s. [from consump-

1. A tendency to a consumption.

2. A consumption by which a body is wasted.

3. A joining of boards together; a boarding a floor.

A joining of boards together; a boarding a floor.

CONTEST. n. s. [contestus, Lat.] Touch; combat.

A joining of boards together; a boarding a floor.

CONTESTATION. n. s. [contestationis, Lat.]

1. The act of touching; a joining one body to another.

The Platonicists hold, that the spirit of the lover doth pass into the spirit of the person loved, which causes the desire of return into the body; whereupon followeth that appetite of contact and conjunction.

Bacon's Nat. Hut.

When the light fell so obliquely on the air, which in other places was between, as to be all reflected, it seemed in that place of contact to be wholly transmitted.

Newton's Opticks.

The air, by its immediate contact, may congeulate the blood which flows along the air-bladders.

CONTOUR. n. s. [contourus, Lat.]

The act of touching; a joining one body to another.

That dejecter it may be at some distance, and destructive without corporal contaction, there is no high improbability.

Brown's Tug. Errors.

TO CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminare, Lat.] To defile; to pollute; to corrupt by base mixture.

Shaksp. Henry V.

I do digest the poison of thy flesh, Being struck up by the contagion.

Shaksp. Comedy of Errors.

In infection and contagion from body to body, as the plague and the like, the infection is received many times by the body passive; but yet is, by the strength and good disposition thereof, resisted.

To CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contagio, Lat.] Infectious; caught by approach; poisonous; pestilential.

The Jades, That drag the tragic melancholy night, From their misty jaws

Breathe foul, contagious darkness in the air.

Shaksp. Henry VI.

We sicken soon from her contagious care, Grieve for her sorrows, groan for her despair.

Prior.

CONTAGIOUSNESS. n. s. [from contagious.]

The quality of being contagious.

To CONTAIN. v. a. [contineo, Lat.]

1. To hold as a vessel.

There are many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written.

John xxi. 25.

Greatly instructed I shall hence depart.

Greatly in peace of thought, and have my fill Of knowledge what this vessel can contain.

Milton.

What thy stores contain bring forth, and your abundance.

Milton.

2. To comprehend; to comprise.

What seem'd fair in all the world, seem'd now Mean, or in her summit'd up, in her contain'd.

Milton.

Throughout in comparison of heaven so small, Nor glist'ring, may of solid good contain.

More plenty than the sun, that barren shines.

Milton.

3. To comprise, as a writing.

Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture.

1 Pet. ii. 6.

4. To restrain; to withhold; to keep within bounds.

All men should be contained in duty ever after, without the terror of warlike forces.

Spenser on Ireland.

Their king's person contains the unruly people from evil occasions.

Spencer.

If you should smile, he grows impatient. —Fear not, my lord, we can contain ourselves.

Shaksp. King John.

To CONTAIN. p. r. To live in continuance.

I felt the ardor of my passion increase, till I could no longer contain.

Arbuthnot and Pepys.

CONTAINABLE. adj. [from contain.] Possible to be contained.

The air, containing within the cavity of the globe, amounted to eleven grains.

Bogge.

TO CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminare, Lat.] To defile; to pollute; to corrupt by base mixture.

Shaksp. Julius Caesar.

A base pandar holds the chamber door, Whilst by a slave, no gentle than a dog, His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Shaksp. Henry V.
To Contemn. r. a. [contemnor, Lat.] To despise; to scorn; to slight; to disgrace; to regard; to neglect; to defy.

Yet better thus, and known to be contemned,
Than still contemned and flatterd.

Shak. King Lear.

Eve, thy contemnt of life and pleasure seems
To argue in thee something more sublime
And excellent than what the mind contemns.

Milton. Pygmalion then the Tyrian spectre sway’d,
One who contemnd divine and human laws:
Then strike ensued.

To Contemner. n. s. [contemner.] One that contemns; a despiser; a scorner.

He counsels him to persecute innovators of worship,
Not only as contemners of the gods, but disturbers of the state.

South.

To Contemper. r. a. [contemper, Lat.] To moderate; to reduce to a lower degree by mixing something of opposite qualities.

The leaves qualify and contemper the heat, and hinder the evaporation of moisture.

Ray on the Greet.

Contemperament. n. s. [contempero, Lat.] The degree of any quality.

There is nearly an equal contemperament of the warmth of our bodies to that of the hottest part of the sun.

Dryden, Virgins. Eneid.

To Contemperate. r. a. [contemperate.] To diminish any quality by something contrary; to moderate; to temper.

The mighty Nile and Niger do not only moisten and contemperate the air, but refresh and humectate the earth.

Brown.

If blood abound, let it out, regulating the patient’s diet, and contemperating the humours.

Wigan’s Surgery.

Contemperating. n. s. [contemperate.] The act of diminishing any quality by admixture of the contrary; the act of moderating or tempering.

The use of air, without which there is no contemperation in life, is not nutrition, but the contemperation of fervour in the heart.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

2. Proportionate mixture; proportion.

There is not greater variety in men’s faces, and in the contemperations of their natural humours, than there is in their plantations.

Hale’s Origin of Mankind.

To Contemplate. r. a. [contemplator, Lat.] This seems to have been once accented on the first syllable. To consider with continued attention; to study; to meditate.

There is not much difficulty in confining the mind to contemplate what we have a great desire to know.

Watts.

To Contemplate. r. a. To muse; to think studiously with long attention.

So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate.

Shak. Hen. VI.

Sapori had an heaven of glass, which he trod upon, contemplating over the same as it he had been Jupiter.

Peccham.

How can I consider what belongs to myself,
When I have been so long contemplating on you?

Dryden’s Jer. Priac.

Contemplation. n. s. [from contemplet.]

1. Meditation; studious thought on any subject; continued attention.

How now, what serious contemplation are you in?

Shakep.

Contemplation is keeping the idea, which is brought into the mind, for some time actually in view.

Locke.

2. Holy meditation; a holy exercise of the soul, employed in attention to sacred things.

I have breath’d a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,

Only attended by Neros here.

Shakep. Merch. of Venice.

3. The faculty of study; opposed to the power of action.

There are two functions, contemplation and practice, according to that general division of objects; some of which demand our speculation, and others our actions.

South.

Contemplative. adj. [from contemplet.

1. Given to thought or study; studious; thoughtful.

Fixt and contemplative their looks,

Still turning over nature’s books.

Davenham.

2. Employed in study; dedicated to study.

I am no courtier, nor versed in state affairs: my life hath rather been contemplative than active.

Bacon.

Contemplative men may be without the pleasure of discovering the secrets of state, and men of action are commonly without the pleasure of tracing the secrets of divine art.

Greg’s Cosmologia.

3. Having the power of thought or meditation.

So many kinds of creatures might be to exercise the contemplative faculty of man.

Ray on the Creation.

Contemplatively. adv. [from contemplet.

1. Thoughtfully; attentively; or, attentively with deep attention.

One employed in study; an enquirer after knowledge; a student.

In the Persian tongue the word magnus imports such as a contemplator of divine and heavenly science.

Religh’s History.

The Platonick contemplators reject both these descriptions, founded upon parts and colours.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

Contemporary. adj. [contemporain, French.]

1. Living in the same age; coetaneous.

Alber Durer was contemporanea to Luco.

Dryden’s Defence.

2. Born at the same time.

A grove born with himself he sees,

And loves his old contempered trees.

Carlyle.

3. Existing at the same point of time.

It is impossible to make the ideas of yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow, to be the same; or bring ages past and future together, and make them contemporaneous.

Locke.

Contemporary. n. s. One who lives at the same time with another.
CONT

contentious laughing to scorn and deriding of God, his laws, and precepts.

Some much averse I found, and would not burn.

Contemnous, proue, set on revenge and spite.

Milton's "Agonies."

Rome, the prouest part of the heathen world, entertained the most contentious opinions of the Jews.

Contemnuously, adv. [from contentious] With scorn; with despite; scornfully; despitefully.

I throw any name against the bruising stone.

Trembling contentiousness, in thy disconfort. Shaksp.

The wicked and most contentious Christians were poor, and used contentious, Taylor's "Life Living."

If he governs tyrannically in youth, he will be treated contentiously in age; and the tamer his enemies, the more intolerable the affront.

L'Estrange.

A wise man would not speak contentiously of a prince, though out of his dominions.

Titus.

Contemnuousness. n. s. [from contentious] Disposition to contend; insolence.

Dict. To CONTEND, v. n. [contende, Lat.]

1. To strive; to struggle in opposition.

Hector's forehead spist forth blood

At Grecian swords contend. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

The sacred and his praises do contain.

Which should be thine or his. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Death and nature do contend about them.

Whether they live or die. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle; for I will not give thee of their land.

Deut. xiii. 9.

2. To vie; to act in emulation.

You sit above, and see vain men below

Contend for what you only can bestow.

Dryd.

3. It has for the ground or cause of contention.

The question which our author would contend for, if he did not forget it, is, what persons have a right to be obeyed.

Locke.

4. Sometimes about.

He shall find that many things he fiercely contented about were trivial.

Decay of Piety.

5. It has with before the opponent.

This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light.

Shaksp. Henry VI.

If we consider him as our Maker, we cannot contend with him.

Temple.

6* Sometimes against.

Sometimes against the strength I did

Contend against thy valor.

Shaksp. Coriolanus.

To CONTEND, v. a. To dispute any thing, to contest.

Their sky like sports they exercise,

And on the green contend the wrestler's prize.

Dryd. "Eccl."

If we consider them as our Maker, we cannot contend with him.

Dryd.

This low we lie,

Shot from this ditch and that contented sky.

Dryd.

CONTENDENT, n. s. [from contend.] Antagonist; opponent; champion; contester. Not used.

In all notable changes and revolutions, the contendents have been still made a prey to the third party.

L'Estrange.

CONTENDER, n. s. [from contend.] Contester; champion.

The contendors for it look upon it as underestable.

Locke.

Those disputes often arise in good earnest where the two contester do really believe the different propositions which they support.

Watts in the Mind.

CONTENT. adj. [contentus, Lat.]

1. Satisfied; so as not to repine; easy, though not highly pleased.

Born to the spacious empire of the Nine,

One would have thought she should have content

To manage well that mighty government.

Dryd.

Who is content, is happy.

Locke.

A man is perfectly content with the state he is in, when he is perfectly without any uneasiness.

Locke.

For of loud boasts, they would contend ease.

Content with science in the vale of peace.

Shaksp. "Epistles."

2. Satisfied, so as not to oppose.

Submit you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers, and be content

To suffer lawful censure.

Shaksp. Coriolanus.

To CONTENT. v. a. [from the adjective.]

1. To satisfy; so as to stop complaint; not to offend; to appease, without plenary happiness or complete gratification.

Content thyself with this much, and let this satisfy thee, that I love thee.

Sidney.

Great minds do sometimes content themselves to threaten, what others would execute.

Tillotson.

Do not contest yourselves with obscure and confused ideas, where clearer are to be attained.

Watts's "Logick."

2. To please; to gratify.

Is the adder better than the eel,

Because his pointed skin contents the eye.

Shaksp. Macbeth.

It doth much content me,

To hear him so talk of'd.

Shaksp. "Hamlet."

If a man so temper his actions, as in some one of them he doth content every faction, the mask of grace will be fuller.

Wheat.

Wheat is contented with a meaner earth, and contenting with a suitable gain.

Care's "Cornwall."

CONTENTEDNESS. n. s. [from contented.]

State of satisfaction in any lot.

Angling was, after tedious study, a calmer of inquiet thoughts, a moderator of passions, a procured of contentedness.

Wood's "Angler."

CONTENTION. n. s. [contentio, Lat.]

1. Strife; debate; contest; quarrell; mutual opposition.

Can we with manes ask what was the difference?

"Safely, I think," says a contenion in publick.

Shaksp.

Avoid foolish questions and genealogies, and contentions and strivings.

Tit. iii. 9.

Can they keep themselves in a perpetual contention with their ease, their reason, and God?

Shaksp.

and not endure a short combat with a sinful custom?

Decay of Piety.

The ancients made contention the principle that regulated the chaos at first; and then love; the one to express the divisions, and the other the mixture of all parties in the middle and common head.

Burnet's "History of the Earth."

2. Emulation; endeavour to excel.

Sons and brother at a strife.

What is your quarrel? how began you first?

"No guard, but a sweet contention."

Shaksp. "Hen. VI."

3. Eagerness; zeal; ardour; vehemence of contention.

Your own earnestness and contention to effect what you are about, will continually suggest you to your several artificers.

Addison.

This is an end, which at first view appears worthy our utmost contention to obtain.

Rogers.

CONTENTIOUS. adj. [from content.] Quarrrelsome; given to debate; perverse; not peaceable.

Thou thinkest much that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin.

Shaksp. King Lear.

There are certain contentious humans that are never to be pleased.

L'Estrange.

Rest made them idle, idleness made them curious, and curiosity contentious.

Decay of Piety.
CONTEST.

n.s. [from the verb. It is now accentuated on the first syllable.] Dispute; difference; debate.

This of old no less contests did move,
Than when for Homer's birth sev'n cities strove.
—D Dryden.

A definition is the only way whereby the meaning of words can be known, without leaving room for contest about it.
—Locke.

Leaves all noisy contests, all inordinate clamours, and blustering language.
—Watts.

CONTESTABLE. adj. [from contest,] That may be contested; disputable; controvertible.

CONTESTABleness. n.s. [from contestable.] Possibility of contest.

CONTINGENCY. n.s. [from contest.] The act of contesting; debate; strife.

Doors shut; visits forbidden, and, which was worse, divers contentions even with the queen herself.
—Wotton.

After years spent in domestic, unseasonable contests, she found means to withdraw. —Clarendon.

To CONTEND. v.a. [contesto, Lat.] To weave together; to unite by interpolation of parts. This word is not in use.

Nature may contest a plant, though that be perfectly mixt concrete, without having all the elements previously presented to her to compose it of.
—Boyle.

The fluid body of quicksilver is contested with the rails it carries up in sublimation. —Boyle.

CONTENTMENT. n.s. [from content, the verb.]

1. Acquiescence, without plenary satisfaction.

Such men's contentment must be wrought by strategy: the usual method of fare is not for them. —Hooker.

Submission is the only reasoning between a creature and its Maker, and contentment in his will is the best remedy we can apply to misfortunes. —Temples.

Contentment, without external honour, is humility; without the pleasure of eating, temperance. —Grea's Cosmologia.

Some place the bliss in action, some in ease; those call it pleasure, and contentment these. —Pope's Essay.

But now no face divine contentment wears, 'Tis all blank sadness, or continual tears. —Pope.

2. Gratification.

At Paris the prince spent one whole day, to give his mind some contentment in viewing of a famous city. —Wotton.

CONTEMPTUS. adj. [contemnitus, Lat.] Bordering upon; touching at the boundaries. This confounded so many of them, as were contemnious to the colonies and garrisons, to the Roman laws. —Hale.

CONTRASTED. adj. [contrastus, Lat.] Of the same country. —Dict.

To CONTEST. v.a. [contesto, Fr. probably from contra testari, Lat.] To dispute; to controvert; to litigate; to call in question.

'Tis evident upon what account none have presumed to contest the proportion of these ancient pieces. —Dryden's Dufresny.

To CONTEST. v.n.

1. To strive; to contend; followed by with.

The difficulty of an argument adds to the pleasure of contending with it, when there are hopes of victory. —Burnet.

2. To vie; to emulate.

I do contend As hotly and as nobly with thy love, As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. —Shakesp. Coriolanus.

Of man, who dares in pomp with Love contend, Unchang'd, immortal, and supernal bliss. —Pope's Odyssey.

CONTIGUITY. n.s. [from contiguous.] Actual contact; situation in which two bodies or countries touch upon each other.

He defined magnetic attraction to be a natural imitation and disposition conforming unto contiguity. —Brown.

If the immediate contiguity of that convex were a real space. —Hale's Origin of Mankind.

CONTINGUOUS. adj. [contiguous, Lat.]

1. Meeting so as to touch; bordering upon each other; not separate.

Flame doth not mingle with flame as air doth with air, or water with water, but only remains contiguous; as it cometh to pass between contiguous bodies. —Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The loud misrule Of chaurs far removed; lest fierce extremes, Contiguous, might dismember the whole frame. —Milton.

The East and West.

Upon the globe, a mathematic point Only divides; thus happiness and misery, All extremes are, still contiguous. —D Dryden's Sophy.

2. It has sometimes with.

Water, being contiguous with air, coolseth it, but moisteneth it not. —Bacon's Nat. Hist.

CONTINUOUSLY. adj. [from continuous.]

Without any intervening spaces.

Thus disordered, they fell upon the proper place. The next of kin contiguous embrace; and foes are sundered by a larger space. —Dryden's Oidid.

CONTINUOUSLY. n.s. [from contiguous.] Close connexion; coherence.

Dict.

CONTINUATION. n.s. [from continentia, Lat.]

1. Restraint; command of one's self.

He knew what to say; he knew also when to leave off, a continence which is practised by few writers. —Dryden's Fable, Porphyr.

2. Forbearance of lawful pleasure.

Content without unlawful venery, is continence; without unlawful chastity. —Grea's Cosmologia.

3 Chastity in general.

Where is he —
In her chamber, making a sermon or continence to her, and roots, and sweats, and rates. —Shakesp. Taming of the Shrew.

Suffer not dishonour to approach The Imperial seat; to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility. —Shakesp. Titus Andronicus.

Chastity is either continence or abstinence; abstinence is that of virgins or widows; continence, of married persons. —Taylor.

5. Continuity; uninterrupted course.

Answers ought to be made before the same judge, before whom the deposition was produced, lest the continuance of the case should be divided; or, in other terms, lest there should be a discontinuance of the cause. —Addis's Parergon.

CONTINUOUS. adj. [continuous, Lat.]

1. Chaste; abstemious; in lawful pleasures.

Life Hath been as continous, as chaste, as true As I am now unhappy. —Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

2. Restrained; moderate; temperate.
I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage go slower. Shakesp. King Lear.

3. Continuous; connected.
The north-east part of Asia, if not contiguous with the west side of America, yet certainly is the least disjoined by sea of all that coast of Asia. Breviary on Languages.

4. Opposing; restraining.

2. Continual adj. [continuus, Lat.]
1. Land not disjoined by the sea from other lands.

A South. Incessant to proceed. The Romans him, continual save Woodward, and not succeeding well material. Milton. digged Hebrews Addison’s thus, Samuel, Pacham. restraining. IValltr. not

Such heart, ed, and sense continuance. Aristotle says, we are a continenter of human assistance. contemporary. again, he shall destroy the producer, or impute the continuance of the species by the destruction of the continuator. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

To CONTINUE. v. n. [continuer, Fr. conti¬

1. To remain in the same state, or place. The multitude continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat. Mathew xx. 52. The popular vote inclines here to continue, and build up here.

2. To last; to be durable. Thy kingdom shall not continue. 1 Samuel, xiii. 4. For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come. There they imagine that an animal of the longest duration should live in a continued motion, without that rest whereby all others continue. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

3. To persevere. If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. John viii. 31. Down rush’d the rain impetuous, and continued till the earth no more was seen. Milton.

To CONTINUE. v. a.

1. To protract, or hold without interruption. O continue thy loving kindness unto them. Psalm xxxvi. 10. You know how to make yourself happy, by only continuing such a life as you have been long accustomed to lead. Pope.

2. To unite without a chasm, or intervening substance. The use of the navel is to continue the infant unto the mother, and by the vessels thereof to convey its aliment and sustenance. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

The dark abyss, whose rolling pulpit. Tamely endur’d a bridge of wooden length, From hell continued, reaching the utmost orb Of this frail world. Milton’s Par. Lost. Here Priam’s son, Deiphobus, he found, Whose face and limbs were one continued wound; Dishonest, with vlopp’d ears, the youth appears, Spill’d of his nose, and shorten’d of his ears. Dryden’s Aeneid.

Where any motion or succession is so slow, as that it keeps not pace with the idea in our minds, there the series of a constant continued succession is lost; and we perceive it not but with certain gaps of rest between. Locke.

He that is of a merry heart, hath a continual feast. Proverbs.

Other care perhaps May have diverted from continual watch Milton. Tis all blank sadness, or continual tears. Pope.

Our great forefathers, kept, The lastingness which li’ilkins. long con— dare A South. Incessant to proceed. The Romans him, continual save Woodward, and not succeeding well material. Milton. digged Hebrews Addison’s thus, Samuel, Pacham. restraining. IValltr. not

Such heart, ed, and sense continuance. Aristotle says, we are a continenter of human assistance. contemporary. again, he shall destroy the producer, or impute the continuance of the species by the destruction of the continuator. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

To CONTINUE. v. n. [continuer, Fr. conti¬

1. To remain in the same state, or place. The multitude continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat. Mathew xx. 52. The popular vote inclines here to continue, and build up here.

2. To last; to be durable. Thy kingdom shall not continue. 1 Samuel, xiii. 4. For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come. There they imagine that an animal of the longest duration should live in a continued motion, without that rest whereby all others continue. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

3. To persevere. If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. John viii. 31. Down rush’d the rain impetuous, and continued till the earth no more was seen. Milton.

To CONTINUE. v. a.

1. To protract, or hold without interruption. O continue thy loving kindness unto them. Psalm xxxvi. 10. You know how to make yourself happy, by only continuing such a life as you have been long accustomed to lead. Pope.

2. To unite without a chasm, or intervening substance. The use of the navel is to continue the infant unto the mother, and by the vessels thereof to convey its aliment and sustenance. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

The dark abyss, whose rolling pulpit. Tamely endur’d a bridge of wooden length, From hell continued, reaching the utmost orb Of this frail world. Milton’s Par. Lost. Here Priam’s son, Deiphobus, he found, Whose face and limbs were one continued wound; Dishonest, with vlopp’d ears, the youth appears, Spill’d of his nose, and shorten’d of his ears. Dryden’s Aeneid.

Where any motion or succession is so slow, as that it keeps not pace with the idea in our minds, there the series of a constant continued succession is lost; and we perceive it not but with certain gaps of rest between. Locke.
CON

CONTINUITY. n.s. [continuus, Lat.] 1. Connexion uninterrupted; cohesion; close union. It is certain, that in all bodies there is an appetite of union, and evituation of solution of continuity. Bacon's Nat. Hist. After the great lights there must be great shadows, which we call reposes; because in reality the sight would be tired, if it were attracted by a continuity of glittering objects. Dryden. It wraps itself about the flame, and by its continuity binds any air or nitre from coming. Addison on Italy.

2. In physic. That texture or cohesion of the parts of an animal body upon the destruction of which there is said to be a solution of continuity. Quincy. As in the natural body a wound or solution of continuity is worse than a corrupt humour, so in the spirit is a corruption of the mind worse than a corrupt humour. The solid parts may be contracted by dissolving their continuity; for a fibre, cut through, contracts itself.

CONTINUOUS. adj. [continus, Lat.] Joined together without the intermission of any space. As the breadth of every ring is thus augmented, the dark intervals must be diminished, until the neighboring rings become continuous, and are blended. Newton's Opticks. To whose dread expense, Continuous depth, and wondrous length of course, Our foods are rills. Thomson's Summer. To CONTORT. v. a. [contortus, Lat.] To twist; to writh. The vertebral arteries are variously contorted. Ray. Air seems to consist of spires contorted into small spheres, through the interstices of which the particles of light may freely pass. Cheyne. CONTOUR. n.s. [from contort.] Twist; curve; kink; flexure. Disruption would be in danger of, upon a great and sudden stretch or contortion. Ray on the Creation. How can she acquire those hundred graces and motions, and airs, the contortions of every muscular motion in the face? Swift. CONTOUR. n.s. [Fr.] The outline; the line by which any figure is defined or terminated.

CONTRA. A Latin preposition, used in composition, which signifies against. CONTRABAND. adj. [contrabando, Ital. contrary to proclamation.] Prohibited; illegal; unlawful. If there happen to be found an irreverent expression, or a thought too wanton, in the cargo, let them be staved or forfeited, like contraband goods. Dryden's Fables. Pref.

To CONTRABAND. v. a. [from the adjective.] To import goods prohibited. To CONTRACT. v. a. [contractus, Lat.] 1. To draw together into less compass. Why love among the virtues is not known? It is, that love contracts them all in one. Donne. 2. To lessen; to make less ample. In all things desuetude does contract and narrow our faculties. Government of the Tongue.

3. To draw the parts of any thing together. To him the angel with contracted brow. Milton. 4. To make a bargain On him the grace did liberty bestow; But first contracted, that, if ever found, His head should pay the forfeit. Dryden's Fables. 5. To betroth; to affiance. The truth is, she and I love since contracted, Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us. Shaksp. She was a lady of the highest condition in that country, and contracted to a man of merit and quality. Tatler.

6. To procure; to bring; to incur; to draw; to get. Of enemies he could not but contract good store, while moving in so high a sphere. King Charles. 7. To shorten; as, life was contracted. 8. To epitomise; to abridge. To CONTRACT. n. 1. To shrink up; to grow short. Whatever empties the vessels, gives room to the contraction of the heart. Arbuthnot on Aliments. 2. To bargain; as, to contract for a quantity of provisions. CONTRACT. port. adj. [from the verb.] Affianced; contracted. First was he contract to Lady Lucy; Your mother lives a witness to that vow. Shaksp. Richard III. CONTRACT. n. s. [from the verb. Anciently accented on the last syllable.] 1. An act whereby two parties are brought together; a bargain; a compact. The agreement upon orders, by mutual contract, with the consent to execute them by common strength, they make the rise of all civil governments. Shall Ward draw contracts with a statesman's skill? Or Japhet pocket, like his grace, a will? Pope. 2. An act whereby a man and woman are betrothed to one another. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?—I did, with his contract with lady Lucy, And his contract by deputy in France. Shaksp. Richard III.

3. A writing in which the terms of a bargain are included. CONTRACTEDNESS. n. s. [from contracted.] The state of being contracted; contractions. Dict. CONTRACTIBILITY. n. s. [from contractible.] Possibility of being contracted; quality of suffering contracture. By this continual contractibility and dilatability by different degrees of heat, the air is kept in a constant motion. Arbuthnot. CONTRACTIBLE. adj. [from contract.] Capable of contraction. Small air bladders, dilatable and contractible, are capable to be inflatated by the admission of air, and to subside at the expulsion of it. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

CONTRACTIONS. n. s. [from contractible.] The quality of suffering contraction. Dict. CONTRACTILE. adj. [from contract.] Having the power of contraction, or of shortening itself. The arteries are elastic tubes, ended with a contractile force, by which they drive the blood still forward. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

CONTRACT. n. s. [contractio, Lat.] 1. The act of contracting or shortening. The main parts of the poem, such as the fable and sentiments, no translator can prejudice but by omissions or contractions. Pope's Essay on Homer. 2. The act of shrinking or shrivelling. Oil of vitriol will throw the stomach into involuntary contractions. Arbuthnot on aliments.

3. The state of being contracted, or drawn into a narrow compass. Some things induce a contraction in the nerves, placed in the mouth of the stomach, which is a great cause of palsy. Barrow.

Comparing the quantity of contraction and dilatation made by all the degrees of each colour, I found it greatest in the red. Newton's Opticks. 4. In grammar. The reduction of two vowels or syllables to one. 5. Any thing in its state of abbreviation or contraction: as, the writing is full of contractions.

CONTRACTOR. n.s. [from contract.] One of the parties to a contract or bargain. Let the measure of your affimation or denial be the understanding of your contractor; for he that deceives the buyer or the seller by speaking what is true, in a sense not understood by the other, is a thief. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy. All matches, friendships, and societies are dangerous and inconvenient, where the contractors are not equal. L'Estaing.

To CONTRADICT. v. a. [contradice, Lat.] 1. To oppose verbally; to assert the contrary to what has been asserted. It is not lawful to contradict a point of history which is known to all the world, as to make Hannibal and Scipio contemporaries with Alexander, or Dryden.

2. To be contrary to; to repugn; to oppose. No truth can contradict any truth. Hooker. I contradict your banes: If you will marry, make your loves to me. Shaksp. King Lear.

CONTRADICTOR. n.s. [from contradigit.] One that contradicts; one that opposes; an opposer.

If no contradictor appears herein, the suit will surely end in a compromise. Aubigny's Parerg. A gentleman is a little sincere in his representations; he is sure to have a dozen contradictions. Swift's Venus in Furs. Swift's Viceroy of Ireland.

CONTRADICTION. n. s. [from contradigit.] 1. Verbal opposition; controversial assertion. That tongue, Inspired with contradiction, durst oppose A third part of the gods. Milton's Par. Lost. 2. Opposition. Consider him that endureth such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied. Heb. xii. 3. Inconsistency with itself; incongruity in words or thoughts. Can he make deathless death? That were Strange contradiction, which to God himself Impossible is held; an argument Of weakness, not of power. Milton's Par. Lost. The apostle's advice, to be angry and sin not, was a contradiction in their philosophy. Smith's Sermons.

If truth be once perceived, we do thereby also perceive whatever is false in opposition to it. Greco's Cosmologia.

4. Contrariety, in thought or effect.
All contradictions grow in those minds, which do not firmly clasp the rock of virtue, nor freely sink into the sea of vanity.

Law human must be made without contradiction unto any positive law scripture.

Contradictory. adj. [from contradic.]

1. Filled with contradictions; inconsistent.

The rules of decency, of government, of justice itself, are so different in one place from what they are in another, so partly-coloured and contradictions, that one would think the species of men altered according to their climate.

2. Inclined to contradict; given to cavil.

3. Opposite to; inconsistent with.

Where the act is annulled, and the expectation immoral, or contradictions to the attributes of God, our hopes we ought never to entertain.

Contradictoryness. n.s. [from contradictions.]

1. Inconsistency; contrariety to itself.

This opinion was, for its absurdity and contradictions, unworthy of the refined spirit of Plato.

2. Disposition to cavil; disputations temporal.

Contradictorily. adv. [from contradict.]

Inconsistently with himself, oppositely to others.

Such as have discussed hereon, have so diversely, contrariety, or contradictorily delivered themselves, that the argument of them can be reasonably deduced.

Contradictoriness. n.s. [from contradictorily.]

Opposition in the highest degree.

Contradictory. adj. [contradictorius, Lat.]

1. Opposition to; inconsistent with.

The Jews hold, that in case two rabblies should happen to contradict one another, they were yet bound to believe the contradictoriness of both.

2. In logic. That which is in the fullest opposition, where both the terms of one proposition are opposite to those of another.

Contradictory. n.s.

A proposition which opposes another in all its terms; contrariety; inconsistency.

It is common with princes to will contradictions; for it is the sedition of power to think to command the end, and yet not to endure the means.

To ascribe unto him a power of election, not to choose or that indifferently, is to make the same thing to be determined to one, and to be not determined to one, which are contradictories.

Contradistinction. n.s. [from contradistinguishing.]

Distinction by opposite qualities.

We must trace the soul in the ways of intellectual actions, whereby we may come to the distinct knowledge of what is meant by imagination, in contradistinction to some other powers.

That there are such things as sins of infancy, in contradistinction to those of presumption, is a truth not to be questioned.

To CONTRADISTINGUISh. v. a. [from contra and distinguishing.] To distinguish not simply by differential but by opposite qualities.

The primary ideas we have peculiar to body, as contradistinguishing to spirit, are the collection, the unolid, and consequently separable, parts, and a power of communicating motion by impulse.

These are our complex ideas of soul and body, as contradistinguishing. Locke.

Contrast. n.s. [from contra and fissure.]

Contrasts, when great, do usually produce a fissure or crack of the skull, either in the same part where the blow was inflicted, and then it is called a contrary part, in which case it is called the name of contrast.

To CONTRAST. n.s. [from contrap and indice, Lat.]

To point out some peculiarity of incident symptom or method of cure, contrary to what the general tenour of the malady requires.

Contra indicate. n.s. [from contranda.

An indication or symptom, which forbids to be done which the main scope of a disease points out at first.

Quincy.

3. To endeavour to give the most simple idea of the question, and the proper thing of the complications of the first, or the contradictions to the second.

Arbuthnot on Aliments.

Contrastre. n.s. (contraregulari, Fr.)

In fortification, is an out-wall built about the main wall of a city.

Chambers.

Contrariety. n.s. [from contra and nitens, Lat.] Reaction; a resistency against pressure.

Dodd.

Contraposition. n.s. [from contra and postion.] A placing over against.

Contraregularity. n.s. [from contra and regularity.] Contrary to rule.

It is not only its not promoting, but its opposing, or at least its natural aptness to oppose, the greatest and best of ends; so that it is not so properly an irregularity as a contraregularity.

Contrary. n.s.

Contrary to; inconsistent with.

The very depositions of witnesses themselves being false, various, contrariety, single, inconclusive.

Ayliffe's Parergon.

Contraries. n.s. [from contrary.]

In logic, propositions which destroy each other, but of which the falsehood of one does not establish the truth of the other.

If two universals differ in quality, they are contraries; as, every man is a tree, no tree is a tree. These can never be both true together, but they may be both false.

Watts's Logic.

Contrary. n.s. [from contrarietas, Lat.]

1. Repugnancy; opposition.

The will about one and the same thing may, in contrary respects, have contrary inclinations, and that without contradiction.

Making a contrariety the place of my memory, in her business, I beheld Pamela's fairness, still looking on Mopsa, but thinking on Pamela. S.

He which will perfectly recover a sick, and restore a diseased, body under health, most not endeavour so much to bring it to a state of simples, contrariety, as of fit proportion in contrariety unto those evils which are to be cured.

Hooker.

It principally failed by late setting out, and by some contrariety of weather.

Their religion had more than negative contrariety to virtue.

There is a contrariety between those things that conscience inclines to, and those that entertain the senses.

South.

These two interests, it is to be feared, cannot be divided; but they will also prove opposite, and rest in a bare diversity, quickly rise into a contrariety.

There is nothing more common than contrariety of opinions; nothing more obvious than that one man wholly disbelieves what another only doubts of, and a third steadfastly believes and truly adheres to.

Locke.

Contrarily. adv. [from contrary.]

1. In a manner contrary.

Many of them conspire to one and the same action, and all this contrarily to the laws of specifick gravity, in whatever posture the body be formed.

2. Different ways; in different directions.

Though all men desire happiness, yet their wills carry them so contrarily, and consequently some of them to what is evil.

Contrariness. n.s. [from contrary.]

Contrariety; opposition.

Contrarious. adj. [from contrary.]

Opposite; repugnant the one to the other.

God of our fathers, what is man!

That thou towards him, with hand so various,

Bacon's Natural History.

Many things, having full reference

To one consent, may work contrariety.

Shakespeare.

Contrariwise. adv. [contrary and wise.]

1. Conversely.

Divers medicines in greater quantity move stool, and in smaller urine; and so, contrariwise, some in greater quantity move urine, and in smaller stool.

Every thing that acts upon the fluids, must, at the same time, act upon the solids, and contrariwise.

Arbuthnot on Aliments.

2. Oppositely.

The matter of faith is constant; the matter, contrariwise, of actions, daily changeable.

This request was never before made by any other kind, but contrariwise, they were humble suitors to have the benefit and protection of the English laws.

Davies on Ireland.

The sun may set and rise;

But we, contrariwise,

Sleep, after our short light,

One everlasting night.

Ralegh's History of the World.

Contrary. adj. [contrarius, Lat.]

1. Opposite; contradictory; not simply different, or not alike, but repugnant, so that one destroys or obstructs the other.

Perhaps such thing, repugnant to her kind.

By strong antipathy the soul may kill;

But what can be contrary to the mind?

Which holds all contraries in concord still?

Davies.

2. Inconsistent; disagreeing.

He that believes it, and yet lives contrary to it, knows that he hath no reason for what he does.

Titianus.

The various and contrary choices that men make in the world, do not argue that they do not all pursue good; but that the same thing is not good to every man alike.

Locke.

3. Adverse; in an opposite direction.

2. Scheme; plan; disposition of parts or causes. Our bodies are made according to the most curious artifice, and orderly contrivance. Glavius's Scepsis.

3. A conceit; a plot; an artifice. Have I not made my contrivance well, To try your love, and make you doubt of mine? Dryden.

There might be a feint, a contrivance in the matter, to draw him into some secret ambush. Atterbury.

To CONTRIVE. v. a. [contriver, Fr.] 1. To plan out; to excogitate. One that slept in the contriving lust, and waked to do it. Shakes. King Lear.

What more likely to contrive this admirable machine of the universe than infinite wisdom? Tillotson.

Our poet has always some beautiful design, which he first establishes, and then contrives the means which will naturally conduct him to his end. Dryden.

2. To wear away. Out of use. Three ages, such as mortal men contrive. Fairy Queen. Please ye, we may contrive this afternoon, And quaff carouses to our mistress' health. Shak.

To CONTRIVE. v. n. To form or design; to plan; to scheme; to complot. Being of cunning minds, That masking habits, and a borrow'd name, Contrive to hide my plagiarism of shame? Prior.

CONTRIVEMENT. n. s. [from contrive]. Dict.

CONTRIVER. n. s. [from contrive.] An inventor; one that plans a design; a schemer. 1. The mistress of your charms, The chiefe contriver of all harms, Was never call'd to bear my part. Shak. Macb. Epecs, who the fraud's contriver was. Denham. Plain loyalty, not built on hope, I leave to your contriver, Pope. None loves his king and country better, Yet none was ever less their debtor. Swift.

Scenes of blood and desolation, I had painted as the common effects of those destructive machines; whereof, he said, some evil genius, enemy to mankind, must have been the first contriver. Swift's Gulliver's Travels.

CONTROL. n. s. [control, Fr.] 1. A register or account kept by another officer, that each may be examined by the other.

2. Check; restraint. Let partial spirits still aloud complain, Think themselves injur'd that they cannot reign; And own no liberty, but where they may. Without control, upon their fellows prey. Waller.

He shall feel a force upon himself from within, and from the control of his own principles, to engage him to do worthily. If the sinner shall win so complete a victory over his conscience, that all those considerations shall be able to strike no terror into his mind, lay no restraint upon his lusts, no control upon his appetites, he is certainly too strong for the means of grace. South's Sermons.

Speak, what Phœbus has inspireth thy soul For common good, and speak without control. Dryden's Homers.

3. Power; authority; superintendence. The beasts, the fishes, and the winged birds, Are their mates' subjects, and at their controls. Shakes. To CONTROL. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To keep under check by a counter-reckoning. To govern; to restrain; to subject. Authority to consent, to control, to punish, as far as with excommunication, whosoever they think worthy. Give me a staff of honour for nine age: But not a sceptre to control the world. Shakes. Titus Andronicus.

Who shall control me for my works? Ecl. v. 3. I feel my virtue struggling in my soul; But stronger passion does it control. Dryden's Aegisthus.

With this he did a herd of goats control. Which by the way he took, and sat to store; Glad like a country swain he pip'd and sung, And playing drove his jolly troop along. Dryden.

O, dear Andrew, says the humble drool, Henceforth may I control, Prior. To overpower; to confute: as, he controlled all the evidence of his adversary. As for the time while he was in the Tower, and the manner of his brother's death, and his own escape, they knew he were the chief that could control. Bacon. The Hen. VIII.

CONTROLLABLE. adj. [from control.] Subject to control; subject to command; subject to be overruled. Passion is the drunkenness of the mind, and therefore, in its present workings, not controllable by reason. Controller. n. s. [from control.] One that has the power of governing or restraining; a superintendent. He does not call his contumelious spirits, Nor cease to be an arrogant controller. The great controller of our fate Design'd to be man, and liv'd in low estate. Dryden.

CONTROLLERSHIP. n. s. [from controller.] The office of a controller.

CONTROLLMENT. n. s. [from control.] 1. The power or act of superintending or restraining. 2. The state of being restrained; restraint. They made war and peace with one another, without control. Davyes on Ireland.

3. Opposition; confiscation. Were it reason that we should suffer the same to pass without controlment, in that current meaning, whereby every where it prevailed. Hooker.

4. Resistance; hostility. There have we war for war, and blood for blood, Controller for controller. Shakes. King John.

CONTROVERSIAL. adj. [from controversy] Relating to disputes; disputations. It happens in controversial discourses as it does in the assaulting of towns, where, if the ground be but firm wherein the besieging armies are erected, there is no further enquiry whom it belongs to, so it affairs but a fit rise for the present purpose. Locke.

4. Controversy. n. s. [controversia, Lat.] 1. Dispute; debate; agitation of contrary opinions; a dispute in common use, and a controversy in writing. How comes it that pass we that are so rent with mutual contentions, and that the church is so much troubled? If men had been willing to learn, all these controversies might have died the very day they were first brought forth. Hooker.

Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness. Timothy. Wild controversy then, which long had slept, Into the press from rude delimeters leapt. Denham. This left no room for controversy about the title, nor for encroachment on the right of others. Locke.

2. A suit in law. If there be a controversy between men, and they cannot agree to have the judges do judge them, then they shall judge the righteous and condemn the wicked. Deustumony, xxv. 1.

3. A quarrel. The Lord hath a controversy with the nations. Jer. xxvi. 31.

4. Opposition; enmity. This is an unusual sense. The torrent ron'd, and we did buffet it with every stroke; throwing it aside, and stemming it with hearts of controversy. Shakes. Julius Caesar.

To CONTROVERT. v. a. [controverso, Lat.] To debate; to ventilate in opposite books; to dispute any thing in writing. If any person shall think fit to controvert them, he may do it very safely for me. Cheven's Philosophical Principles.

Hooker seems to mean by the word controversy, if it be not an error.

Persuasion ought to be fully settled in men's hearts, that, in litigations and controverted causes of such quality, the will of God is to have them to do whatever the justice of judicial and final decision shall determine. Hooker.

CONTROVERTIBLE. adj. [from controvert.] Disputable; that may be the cause of controversy. Disseconding of materijs dubious, and many controvertible truths, we cannot without arrogancy insert a credulity, or imply any farther assent than the probability of our reason and the evidence of our souls. Brown's Vultur Errantium.

CONTROVERTIST. n. s. [from controvert.] Disputant; a man versed or engaged in literary wars or disputations. Who can think himself so considerable as not to deem this mighty mon of demonstration, this prince of controversy, this great lord and possessor of first principles? Tillotson.

CONTUMACIOUS. adj. [contumac, Lat.] Obstinate; perverse; stubborn; inflexible. If he be said to be a contumacious person, who, on his appearance afterwards, departs the court without leave. Aylyge's Parergon.

There is another very efficacious method for subduing of the most obstinate contumacious sinner, and bringing him into the obedience of the faith of Christ. Hammond's Fundamentals.

CONTUMACIOUSLY, adv. [from contumacious.] Obstinately; stubbornly; inflexibly; perversely.

CONTUMACIOUSNESS. n. s. [from contumacious.] Obstinacy; perverseness; inflexibility; stubbornness. From the description I have given of it, a judgment may be given of the difficulty and contumacy of such persons. Walmes.

CONTUMACY. n. s. [from contumacia, Lat.] 1. Obstinacy; perverseness; stubbornness; inflexibility.

Such sets of controversy will promote the Highest To make death in us live. Mil. Par. Lat.

2. [in law.] A wilful contempt and disobedience to any lawful summons or judicial order. Aylyge's Parergon.
CON

These certificates do only, in the generality, mention the party’s contumacies and disobedience.

Contumacious. adj. [contumacious, Lat.]
1. Reproachful; rude; sarcastic; contemptuous.
When scourges and scorns, and contumacious taunts, in open market-place did they use.
To be a publick spectable. Shakespeare, Henry VI.
In the quarrels and tumults at Rome, though the people frequently procured to rude contumacious language, yet no blood was ever drawn in any popular commencements, till the time of the Gracchi.
Swift.
2. Inclined to utter reproach or practise insults; brutal; rude.
There is yet another sort of contumacious persons, who indeed are not chargeable with that circumstance of ill employing their wit for they use none of it.
Government of Tongue.
Giving our holy virgin to the stain Of contumacious, beastly, madbrain’d war.
Shakespeare, Timon.
3. Productive of reproach; shameful; ignominious.
As it is in the highest degree injurious to them, so it is contumacious to him.
Decay of Pig.
Contumeliously. adv. [from contumaciously] Reproachfully; contemptuously; rudely.
The people will not to how great offence, when they are excluded from honours and offices, as when their persons are contumeliously treated upon.
Fare, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates, Thus contumeliously should break the peace.
Shakespeare, Henry VI.
Contumeliousness, n. s. [from contumaciously] Rudeness; reproach.
CONTUMELY. n. s. [contumelia, Lat.]
Rudeness; contumaciousness; bitterness of language; reproach.
If the heads of chief government lie in hands of a few of the wealthiest, then laws, providing for continuance thereof, must make the punishment of contumely and wrong, offered unto any of the common sort, sharp and grievous, that so the evil may be prevented.
Th’ oppressor’s wrong, the proud man’s continuance.
The pang of despit’d love, the law’s delay.
Shakespeare, Hamlet.
It was undervalued and despised with some bitterness and contumely.
Clarendon.
Why should any man be troubled at the continuance of those, whose judgment deserves not to be valued?
Titullus.
Eternal contumely attend that guilty title, which claims exemption from thought, and arrogates to itself the prerogative of lies.
Add. Guard.
To CONTUSE. v. a. [contusus, Lat.]
1. To beat together; to bruise.
Of their roots, barks, and seeds, contusae together, and mingled with other earth, and well watered with warm water, there came forth leaves much like the other.
Boyle.
2. To bruise the flesh without a breach of the continuity.
The figure contains the lumps in cutting them, so that they require to be digerated before they can unite.
Wiseman.
Contusion. n. s. [from contusio]
1. The act of beating or bruising.
Take a piece of glass, and reduce it to powder, it acquiring by contusion a multitude of minute surfaces. Let a diaphanous, degenerate into a white body.
Boyle on Colours.
3. A bruise; a compression of the fibres, distinguished from a wound.
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contumelious, and all bruises of time.
Shakespeare, Henry VI.
The bones, in sharp colds, wax brittle; and all contusions, in hard weather, are more hard to cure.
Bacon.
Convalescence. n. s. [from convalesce, Lat.] Renewal of health; recovery from a disease.
Being in a place out of the reach of all alarm, she recovered her spirits to a reasonable convalescence.
Clarendon.
Convalescent. adj. [convalescent, Lat.] Recovering; returning to a state of health.
Convalecent, adj. [convalecent, Fr.]
1. Consistent with; agreeable to; accordant to. Not now in use.
He is so meek, wise, and merciful, And with his word his work is convalecent.
Spenser’s Pastorals.
2. That may be convened.
To CONVENE. v. n. [convenio, Lat.]
1. To come together; to associate; to unite.
The fire separates the aqueous parts from the other, wherefore they were blended in the concrete, and brings them into the receiver, where they come into a liquor.
Boyle.
In short-sighted men, whose eyes are too prone to the refracting too great, the rays converge and converge in the eyes, before they come at the bottom.
Newton’s Opticks.
2. To assemble for any publick purpose.
There are settled periods of their convening, or a liberty left to the prince for convening the legislature.
Locke.
To CONVENE. v. a.
1. To call together; to assemble; to convene.
No man was better pleased with the convening of this parliament than myself.
King Charles.
All the factsious and schismatical people would freqently, as well in the night as day, entertain themselves by the sound of a bell.
Clarendon.
And now I’th’ almighty father of the gods
Conveys a convoking the bliss abodes.
Pope’s Stock.
2. To summon judicially.
By the papal canon law, clerks, in criminal and civil causes, cannot be convened before any but an ecclesiastical judge.
Agilile.
Convenience. n. s. [conveniencia, conveniency. n. s. [Lat.]
1. Fitness; propriety; convenient.
Convenience is, when a thing or action is so fitted to the circumstances, and the circumstances to it, that thereby it becomes a thing convenient.
Dryden.
In things not commanded of God, yet lawful, because permitted, the question is, What light shall shew us the conveniency which one hath above another?
Hooker.
2. Commodiousness; ease; freedom from difficulties.
A man putting all his pleasures into one, is like a traveller's putting all his goods into one jewel; the value is the same, and the conveniency greater.
South’s Sermons.
Every man must want something for the conveniency of his life, for which he must be obliged to others.
Calamy’s Sermons.
There is another conveniency in this method, during your waiting.
Swift’s Direct to the Feast.
3. Cause of ease; accommodation.
If there be not such a conveniency, voyages must be very uncomfortable.
Wilkins’s Math. Magick.
CON

A man alters his mind as the work proceeds, and will have this or that convenience, of which he had not thought when he began.
Drayden’s Fables. Preface.

There was a pair of spectacles, a pocket perspective, and several other little conveniences, I did not think myself bound to forsake for a moment.
Swift’s Gulliver’s Travels.

4. Fitness of time or place.

Use no farther means.
But, with all brevity and ceremony, Let me have judgment.
Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.
Convenient. adj. [conveniens, Lat.]
1. Fit; suitable; proper; well adapted; commodious.
The least and most trivial episodes, or under actions, are either necessary or convenient; either so necessary, that without them the poem must be imperfect; or so convenient, that no allusion can be imagined more suitable to the place in which they are.
Dryden. Dedication to the Aeneid.
Health itself is but a kind of temper, gotten and preserved by a convenient mixture of contrarieties.
Arbuthnot on Aliments.
2. It has either to or for before the following noun; perhaps it ought generally to have for before persons, and to before things.
Give me neither poverty nor riches, feed me with food convenient for me.
Pope, xxx. 8.

There are some arts that are peculiarly convenient to some particular nations.
Tilton.

Conveniency. adj. [from conveniunt.] Commodious; without difficulty.

This morning know Where shall we find him most conveniently.
Shakespeare, Hamlet.

2. Fitly; with proper adaptation of part to part, or of the whole to the effect proposed.
It would be worth the experiment to inquire, whether or no a sailing chariot might be more conveniently framed with moveable sails, whose force may be impressed from the motion, equivalent to those in a wind-mill.
Wilkins.

CONVENT. n. s. [conventus, Lat.]
1. An assembly of religious persons; a body of monks or nuns.

He came to Leicester.
Lodge’d in the abbey, where the reverend abbot, With all his convent, honourably received him.

2. A religious house; an abbey; a monastery; a nunnery.

The seldom finds in Italy a spot of ground more agreeable than ordinary, that is not covered with a convent.
Addison.

To CONVENE. v. a. [convenio, Lat.]
To call before a judge or judicature.
He pleads his oath
By all the oath will make up, clear;
Whenever he’s convened.
Shakespeare, Measure for Measure.
They sent forth their precepts to attach men, and convene them before themselves in private houses.
Bacon’s Henry VIII.

CONVENTICLE. n. s. [conventicleum, Lat.]
1. An assembly; a meeting.
They are commanded to abstain from all conventicles of men whether it be even, out of the church, to have nothing to do with publick business.
Agilile’s Parergon.

2. An assembly for worship. Generally used in an ill sense, including heresy or schism.

It behoved, that the place where God shall be served by the whole church be a publick place, for the avoiding of poyse conventicles, which, covered under pretence of religion, may serve unto dangerous practices.
Hooker.
The knowledge of men and manners, the freedom of habitations, and conversation with the best company. Dryden.

His apparent, open guilt; I mean his conversations with Shore's wife. Shadp. Richard III.

4. Behaviour; manner of acting in common life.
Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles. 1 Peter.

5. Practical habits; knowledge by long acquaintance.
I set down, out of long experience in business and much conversation in books, what I thought pertinent to this business. Bacon.

With commerce and conversation with these bodies, a man may be enabled to give a near conjecture at the metallic ingredients of any mass. Woodward.

Conversative. adj. [from converses.]
Relating to publick life, and commerce with men; not contemplative. Finding him little studied and contemplative, she chose to endue him with conversative qualities of youth. Wotton.

To CONVERSE. v. n. [converser, Fr. conversor, Lat.]
1. To cohabit with; to hold intercourse with; to be a companion to: followed by with.
By approving the sentiments of a person with whom he conversed, in such particulars as were just he was led over from those points in which he was mistaken. Addison's Freethinker.

For him who lonely loves To seek the distant hills, and there converse With nature. Thomson's Summer.

2. To be acquainted with; to be familiar to action.
I will converse with iron-witted fools, And unrespective boys: none are for me, That look into me with considerate eyes. Shadp. Richard III.

Men then come to be furnished with fewer or more simple ideas from without, according as the objects they converse with afford greater or less variety. Locke.

3. To convey the thoughts reciprocally in talk.
Go therefore half this day, as friend with friend, Converse with Adam. Moxon. Var. Let. Much less can bird with beast, or fish with foul, So well converse. Moxon. Pare. Let.

4. To discourse familiarly upon any subject: with or before the thing.
We had conversed so often on that subject, and he had communicated his thoughts of it so fully to me, that I had not the least remaining difficulty. Dryden's Dryden.

5. To have commerce with a different sex.
Being asked by some of both sexes, in how long a time a woman might be allowed to pray to the gods, after having conversed with a man? If it were a husband, says she, the next day; if a stranger, never. Cavialam.

Converse. n. s. [from the verb. It is sometimes accentuated on the first syllable, sometimes on the last. Pope has used both: the first is more analagous.]
1. Conversation; manner of discourse in familiar life.
His converse is a system fit Alone to fill up all her wit. Swift.

Gen'rous converse, a soul exempt from pride, And love to praise with reason on his side. Pope. Form'd by thy converse happily to stir From grave to gay, from lively to severe. Pope.

2. Acquaintance; cohabitation; familiarity,
Though it be necessitated, by its relation to flesh, to a terrestrial converse; yet it is, like the sun, without contaminating its being.

Gillan's Apol.

By such a free converse with persons of different sects, we shall find that there are persons of good sense and virtue, persons of philotheism and

Watts on the Mind.

3. [In geometry ; from conversus.] A proposition is said to be the converse of another, when, after drawing a conclusion from something first proposed, we proceed to suppose what had been before concluded, and to draw from it what had been proposed. Thus, if two sides of a triangle be equal, the angles opposite to those sides are also equal: the converse of the proposition is, that if two angles of a triangle be equal, the sides opposite to those angles are also equal.

Chambers.

CONVERSELY, adv. [from converse.] With change of order; in a contrary order; reciprocally.

CONVERSION, n. s. [conversio, Lat.]
1. Change from one state into another; transmutation.

Artificial conversion of water into ice, is the work of about two hours; and this of air may be tried in a month's space.

Bacon.

There are no such natural gradations, and conversions of one metal and mineral into another, in the earth, as many have fancied.

Woodward's Natural History.

The conversion of the aliminent into fat, is not properly conversion.

Arbutn. on Aliments.

2. Change from repugnation to grace, from a bad to a good life.

3. Change from one religion to another.

They passed through Phcenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles. Acts xxv. 4.

4. The interchange of terms in an argument; as, no virtue is vice; no vice is virtue.

Chambers.

5. Conversion of Equations, in algebra, is the reducing of a fractional equation into an integral one.

CONVERSIVE, adj. [from converse.] Consensual; sociable.

To CONVERT, v. a. [converto, Lat.'
1. To change into another state; to transmute.

If the whole atmosphere was converted into water it would make no more than eleven yards water about the earth.

Burnet.

2. To change from one religion to another.

Augustine is converted by St. Ambrose's sermon, when he came to it on so much design. Hammond.

3. To turn from a bad to a good life.

He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of transgressions. James v. 20.

Then will I teach transgression ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee. Psalm li. 13.

4. To turn towards any point.

Crystal will calibrate to electricity, and convert the few leases freely placed.

Brown's Fugitive Err.

5. To apply to any use; to appropriate.

The abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. Isaiah, x. 3.

He acquitted himself not like an honest man; for he converted the prize to his own use.

Arbutn. on Coins.

6. To change one proposition into another, so that what was the subject of the first becomes the predicate of the second.

COVExED, particip. adj. [from convert.] Formed convex; protuberant in a circular form.

Doplains are straight; nor have they their spine continued, more continued than circular; such as are翁breers than circu-

Brown's Vulg. Err.

CONVEXELY, adv. [from converted.] In a convex form.

They be drawn convexely crooked in one piece; yet the dolphin, that fleetly Arnhemit, is consequently inverted, and hath its spine depressed.

Brown's Vulg. Err.

CONVEXITY, n. s. [from convert.] Protrubance in a circular form.

Convex glasses supply the defect of plumpness in the eye, and, by increasing the refraction, make the rays converge sooner, so as to converge distinctly at the bottom of the eye if the glass have a due degree of convexity. Newton's Opticks.

If the eye were so piercing as to desire even to open and little objects a hundred leagues off, it would do as little service; it would be terminated by neighbouring hills and woods, or, in the largest and evenest plain, by the very convexity of the earth.

Bentley.

CONVEX, adj. [from convex.] In a convex form.

Almost all, both blunt and sharp, are convexly conical; they are all along convex, not only per ambitum, but between both ends. Greu's Museum.

CONVEXNESS, n. s. [from convex.] Spherical protuberance; convexity.

CONVEXO-CONCAVE, adj. Having the hollow on the inside corresponding to the external protuberance.

These are the phenomena of thick convexo-concave plates of glass which are every where of the same thickness. Newton.

To CONVEX, v. a. [convexo, Lat.]
1. To carry; to transport from one place to another.

Let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judea. Neh. ii. 7.

I will convey them by sea, in floats, unto the place thou shalt appoint me. 1 Kings, v. 9.

2. To hand from one to another.

A divine natural right could not be conveyed down, without any plain, natural, or divine rule concerning it.

Locke.

3. To remove secretly.

There was one conveyed out of my house yesterday by a basket. Shakspeare's Winter's Diet.

4. To bring any thing, as an instrument of transmission; to transmit.

Since there appears not to be any ideas in the mind, before the senses have conveyed any in, I conceive that ideas in the understanding are conval with sensation.

Locke.

5. To transfer: to deliver to another.

The earl of Desmond, before his breaking forth into rebellion, conveyed secretly all his lands to be disposed of in Ireland. Spencer.

Atton's property or private d. mission could not convey any sovereignty or rule to him, who, not having a right to inherit all his father's possessions, could not thereby come to have any sovereignty over his brethren.

Locke.

6. To impart, by means of something.

Men fill one another's heads with noise and sounds, but convey not thereby their thoughts.

Locke.

That which uses to produce the idea, though conveyed in by the usual organ, not being taken notice of, there follows no sensation.

Locke.

Some single imperceptible bodies must come from their eyes, and thereby convey to the brain some motion which produces those ideas.

Locke.
They give energy to our expressions, and convey our thoughts in more ardent and intense phrases, than any in our common tongue. Addison's Spect.

7. To impart; to introduce.

What obscured light the heav'n's did grant,
Did but convey to our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death.

Others convey themselves into the mind by more senses than one.

8. To manage with privacy.

I will convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal. Shakesp. King Lear.

Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown,
To find this title with some show of truth,
Convey'd himself as heir to th' lady Langare. Shakesp.

CONVEYANCE. n. s. [from convey.]
1. The act of removing any thing.

Tell her, thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence. Henry the Sixth. Rich. III.

2. Way for carriage or transportation.

Following the river downward, there is conveyance into the countries named in the text. Swift's Travels.

Iron works ought to be confined to places where there is no conveyance for timber to places of vent, so as to quit the cost of the carriage. Temple.

3. The method of removing secretly from one place to another.

Your husband's here at hand; bethink you of some conveyance; in the house you cannot hide him. Shakesp.

4. The means or instrument by which any thing is conveyed.

We point upon the morning, are unapt To give or to forgive; but when we're stuff'd Those pipes, and these consequences of blood, With wine and feeding, we have supplier souls. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

How such a variety of motions should be regularly conducted in such a wilderness of passages and distinct avenues, by more impellent and material conveyance, I have not the least conjecture. Locke.

5. Transmission; delivery from one to another.

Our author has provided for the descending and conveyance down of Adam's monarchical power, or paternal dominion. Locke.

6. Act of transferring property; grant.

Doth not the act of the parents, in any lawful grant or conveyance, bind their heirs for ever thereunto? Spranger on Ireland.

7. Writing by which property is transferred.

The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more? This begot a suit in the Chancery before the lord Coventry, who found the conveyances in law to be so firm, that in justice he must decree the land to the sett. Chaucer.

8. Secret management; juggling artifice; private removal; secret substitution of one thing for another.

It conneeth herein to pass with men, unadvisedly fallen into error, with them whose state hath no ground to uphold it, but only the help which, by subtle conveyance, they draw out of casual events, arising from day to day, till at length they be clean spent. Close conveyance, and every practice ill. Of coinedage and knavery. Spenser's Hub. Tale.

I am this day the Tower, so I am; Shakesp. Henry VI.

Can they not juggle, and with slight conveyance play with wrong and right? Hudibras.

CONVEYANCE. n. s. [from convey.]
A lawyer who draws writings by which property is transferred.

CONVEYER. n. s. [from convey.] One who conveys things from one place or person to another.

The conveyers of waters of these times content themselves with one inch of full in six hundred feet. Breve and Languages.

Those who stand before earthly princes, in the nearest degree of approach, who are the dispensers of their favours, and conveyers of their wills, to others, do, on that very account, challenge honourable titles to themselves. Add. Spect.

To CONVICT. v. a. [convinc, Lat.]
1. To prove guilty; to detect in guilt.

And they which heard it, being convinced by their own conscience, went out one by one. John, viii. 9.

Things, that at the first shew seemed possible, by ripping up the performance of them, have been convicted of impossibility. Bacon's Holy War.

2. To confute; to discover to be false.

Although not only the reason of any head, but experience of every hand, may well convict it, yet will it not by divers be rejected. Brown's False Edges.

3. To shew by proof or evidence.

If there be no such thing apparent upon record, they do as if one should demand a legacy by virtue of some written testament, whereas there being no such thing specified, he pleads that it must needs be, and bringeth arguments from the love which always the testator bore him; imagining that these proofs will convict a testament to have been made in it, which other men can no where by reading find. Hooker.

CONVICT. adj. [rather the participle of the verb.] Convicted; detected in guilt.

Before I be convicted by course of law, To threaten me with death, is most unjust. Shakesp. Rich. III.

By the civil law, a person convicted, or confessing his own crime, cannot appeal. Austin's Paregor. Convict a papist he, and I a poet. Pope's Fasp. of Horace.

CONVICT. n. s. [from the verb.] A person cast at the bar; one found guilty of the crime charged against him; a criminal detected at his trial.

On the score of humanity, the civil law allows a certain space of time both to the convict and to persons confessing, in order to satisfy the judgment. Austin's Paregor.

CONVICTION. n. s. [from convict.]
1. Detection of guilt, which is, in law, either when a man is outlawed, or appears and confesses, or else is found guilty by the inquest. Cowell.

The third best absent is condemn'd, Convict by Right, and rebel to all law. Austin's Par. Lest. Conviction to the serpent none belongs. Milton's Par. Lost.

2. The act of convincing; confutation; the act of enforcing, by argument, to allow a position.

When therefore the apostle requesteth ability to convict heretics, can we think he judgeth it a thing unlawful, and not rather needful, to use the principal instrument of their conviction, the light of reason? Hooker.

The manner of his convictions was designed, not as a peculiar privilege to him, but as a standing miracle, a lasting argument for the conviction of others, to the very end of the world. Atterbury.

Their wisdom is only of this world, to put false colours upon things, to Shakesp. Hudibras.

They who consider and weigh the testimony, at what distance soever they are placed, cannot entertain any more doubt of the resurrection than the crucifixion of Jesus. Atterbury.

CONВINCIBILITY. n. s. [from convincing.]
In such a manner as to leave no room for doubt or dispute; so as to produce conviction.

This he did so particularly and convincingly, that those of the parliament were in great consternation. Clarendon.

The resurrection is so convincingly attested by such persons, with such circumstances, that they who consider and weigh the testimony, at what distance soever they are placed, cannot entertain any more doubt of the resurrection than the crucifixion of Jesus. Atterbury.

Their wisdom is only of this world, to put false colours upon things, to Shakesp. Hudibras.

They who consider and weigh the testimony, at what distance soever they are placed, cannot entertain any more doubt of the resurrection than the crucifixion of Jesus. Atterbury.
Convivial. adj. [conviensis, Lat.] Re Câmara, a banquet; festal; social. I was the first who set up festivals; not with high tastes our appetities did force, but all and conversation and discourse; which feasts, convivial meetings we did name. Deuham.

Convocation. n.s. [convocatio, Lat.] 1. The act of calling to an assembly. Diaphants, making a general convocation, spake to them in this manner. Sidney.

2. An assembly. On the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you. Ex. xxxii. 29.

3. An assembly of the clergy for consultation upon matters ecclesiastical, in time of parliament: and, as the parliament consists of two distinct houses, so does this; the one called the upper house, where the archbishops and bishops sit severally by themselves; the other the lower house, where all the rest of the clergy are represented by their deputies. Cowell.

To CONVOKE. v. a. [convoco, Lat.] To call together; to summon to an assembly. Assemblies exercise their legislature at the times that their constitution, or their own appurtenances, appoint; if there be no other way prescribed to convene them. Locke.

When next the morning warmed the purple east, Convokes the peacock and the peony. Pope's Odyssey.

The senate originally consisted all of nobles, the people being only convened upon such occasions as fell into the cogitations of the sovereigns. Thomas.

To CONVOLVE. v. a. [convolve, Lat.] To roll together; to roll one part upon another. He writ him to and fro consid'd. Milton.

It is a wonderful artifice how newly hatched maggots, not the parent animal, because she endures when, nor hath neither any instinct, can convolve the stubborn leaf, and bind it with the thread it weaves from its body. Darwin.

By thousands tumble from their honey'd domes Convolve'd and agitating in the dust. Thomson's Autumn.

Convoluted. part. [of the verb I have found no example.] Twisted; rolled upon itself. This differs from Muscovy-glass only in this, that the plates of that are flat and plain, whereas these are corrugated and folded. Woodward on Fossil.

Convoluted. part. [of the verb I have found no example.] Twisted; rolled upon itself. The state of being rolled upon itself; the state of being corrugated, corrugated, in the same or some other manner. Grea's Cosmologia.

A thousand secret, subtle pipes bestow, From which, by numb'rous convolutions wound, Wrap'd with th' attending sense, and twisted round. Blackmore.

2. The state of rolling together in company. And toss'd would round, O'er the calm sea, in convolutions swift. Thomson's Autumn.

To CONVOLVE. v. a. [convoco, Lat.] To call together; to summon to an assembly. Convocation. n. s. [convocatio, Lat.] The stockdove only through the forest coverts, Monmouthshire, Tho'mas's Summer.

Cook. n. s. [coquus, Lat.] One whose profession is to dress and prepare victuals for the table. One mistress Quickly is in the manner of his name, or his dry-nature, or his cook, or his laundry, or his washer, or his wringer. Sheksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

The new-born babe had its first cry by Driven. The cook caught within the raging fire he made. Sheksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Sheksp. Sheksp. Sheksp. Their cooks could make artificial birds and fishes, in default of the real ones, and which exceeded them in the esquissities of the taste. Arbuthnot on Cooks.

Cook-maid. n.s. [cook and maid.] A maid that draws provisions. A friend was comforting me to, that his wife had turned off one of the best cook-maids in England. Addison.

Cook-room. n. s. [cook and room.] A room in which provisions are prepared for the ship's crew. The kitchen of a ship. The commodoty of this new cook-room the merchants having found to be so great, as that in all their ships the cook-rooms are built in their forecastles, contrary to that which had been always used. Raleigh's Lossy.

To Cook. v. a. [coqua, Lat.] 1. To prepare victuals for the table. Hurt either of the crimes been coked to their palates, they might have chang'd more. Sheksp. Cymbeline.

2. To prepare for any purpose. Hanging is the word; sir, if ye be ready for that, you are well cool. Sheksp. Cymbeline.

Cookery. n. s. [from cook.] The art of dressing victuals. Some man's wit Founded their seat's in the void, null, as hot as could well endure it, renewing it as it gives cool. Temple.

Cook. adj. [coker, Dut.] 1. Somewhat cold; approaching to cold. He set his leg in a cold full, as hot as he could well endure it, renewing it as it gives cool. Temple.

2. Not zealous; not ardent; not angry; not foul; without passion; as, a cool friend; a cool dealer.

Cool. n. s. Freedom from heat; soft and refreshing coldness. But here where Luce, at her wonted hour, Amid the cool of you high marble arch, Enjoy the noon-day breeze. Addison's Cato.
COO

Philander was enjoying the cool of the morning, among the dews that lay on every thing about him, and that gave the air a freshness.

Add. on Med.

To Cool. v. a. [kuoel, Dut.] 1. To make cool; to allay heat.
Snow they use in Naples instead of ice, because, as they say, it cools or congeals any liquor sooner.
Add. on Juta.
Jelly of currants, or the jelly of any ripe subacid fruit, is cooling, and very agreeable to the stomach.
Add. on Dict.
2. To quiet passion; to calm anger; to moderate zeal.
My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool.
Shaks. Henry IV.
He will keep his jealousy to himself, and repine in private, because he will be apt to fear some ill effect it may produce in cooling your love to him.
Add. on Spectator.
Had they thought they had been fighting only other people's quarrels, perhaps it might have cooled their zeal.

To Cool. v. n.
1. To grow less hot.
2. To grow less warm with regard to passion or inclination.
My humour shall not cool; I will increase Foul to deal with Passion; I will possess him with yellowness.
Shaks. You never cool while you read Homer.
Dodd. I am impatient till it be done; I will not give myself liberty to think, lest I should cool.
Congre. old Bachelor.

Cooler. n. s. [from cool.]
1. That which has the power of cooling the body.
Coolers are of two sorts; first, those which produce an immediate sense of coolness, which are such as have their parts in less motion than those of the organs of feeling; and secondly, such, as particular viscosity, or grossness of parts, give a greater consistence to the animal fluids than they had before, whereby they cannot move so fast, and therefore will have less of that intestinal force on which their heat depends. The former are fruits, all acid liquors, and common water; and the latter are such as cucumbers, and all substances producing viscosity.
Quinie.
In dogs or cats there appeared the same necessity for a cooler as in man.
Harvey on Consumptions.
Acid things were used only as coolers.
Add. on Aliments.

2. A vessel in which any thing is made cool.
Your first work being thus huddled, laid off into one or more coolers, or cool-bucks, in which leave the sullage behind, and let it run off fine.
Mortier's Husbandry.

COOLLY. adv. [from cool.]
1. Without heat, or sharp cold.
She in the gellid caves, woodland woreth,
And fresh beded with ever-spouting streams,
Sits coolly calm.
Thom. a Summer.
2. Without passion.
Motives that address themselves coolly to our reason, are fittest to be employed upon resensible creatures.
Atterbury.

COOLNESS. n. s. [from cool.]
1. Gentle cold; a soft or mild degree of cold.
This difference consisteth not in the heat or coldness of spirits; for cloves and other spices, nutmeg, and petroleum, have exceeding hot spirits, hot-stewed, yet the continual heat of the sun is not so great as to give warmness.
The toad loveth shade and coolness.
Yonder the harvest of cold months laid up,
Gives a fresh coolness to the royal cup;
There, like still, firm and nutty white,
Temper'd but July with December's frost.
Walker.
The sheep enjoy the coolness of the shades.
Dryden's Virgil.

2. Want of affection; disinclination.
They parted with such coolness towards each other, as if they had not been acquainted.
Clar. Phillips.
2. That matter that works out of the wheals of carriages.
Bailly.
3. It is used in Scotland for the useless dust which falls from large coals.
COOM, or COOM. n. s. [comble, Fr. cumulus, Lat. a heap, Skinner.] A measure of corn containing four bushels.
Bailly.

COOP. n. s. [kype, Dut.]
1. A barrel; a vessel for the preservation of liquids.
2. A cage; a pen for animals, as poultry or sheep.
Gracchus was slain the day the chickens refused to eat out of the coop; and Claudius Fuchter underwrought the like success, when he contemned the trifling and servile counsels of his enemies.
There were a great many crammed coop together in a coop.

To COOP. v. a. [from coop.]
1. To shut up in a narrow compass; to confine; to cage; to imprison: when it is used absolutely, it signifies, perhaps always, the intensive particle upon.

To coop. v. n. [from coop.]
1. A second time within your town;
Whose date is not set forth in open book.
Dryden. Eneid.
One world suffic's not Alexander's mind;
Coop'd up he scam'd, in earth and seas confin'd.
Dryden's Aeneid.
Coop'd up in a narrow isle, observing dreams
With flattering wizards.
Dryden's Journal.
The Tajmies, coop'd within their walls so long,
Unbar their gates, and issue in a throng.
Dryden's Aeneid.

2. The contempt of all other knowledge, as if it were nothing in comparison of law or physic, of astrology or chymistry, coop the understanding up within narrow bounds, and hinder's it from looking abroad into other provinces of the intellectual world.
Locke.
They are coop'd in close by the laws of their country, and the strict guards of those whose interest it is to keep them ignorant.
Locke.
What coop'd whole armies in our walls again! Pope.

COOPE. n. s. [coppe, Fr.] A motion in dancing.

COOPER. n. s. [cop.] One that makes coops or barrels.
Societies of artificers and traders, belonging to some towns corporate, such as weavers and coopers, by virtue of their charters, pretend to no part of jurisdiction.
Child.

COOPERAGE. n. s. [from cooper.] The price paid for cooper's work.

To COOOPERATE. v. a. [con and opera, Lat.]
1. To labour jointly with another to the same end; it has with before the agent, and to before the end.
It pazzell'd and perplex'd the conceits of many, that perhaps would otherwise cooperate with him.
By giving man a free will, he allows man that highest satisfaction and privilege of cooperating to his own felicity.
Bacon. Of Free Will.

2. To concur in producing the same effect.
His mercy will not forgive offenders, or his benignity cooperate to their conversions.

All these causes cooperating, must, at last, weaken their motion.
Chaucer's Feet in England.

COOPERATIVE. adj. [from cooperate.]
Promoting the same end jointly.

COOPERATOR. n. s. [from cooperate.]
He that, by joint endeavours, promotes the same end with others.

COOPTATION. n. s. [coopte, Lat.] Adoption; assumption.

COORDINATE. adj. [croy and ordinatus, Lat.] Holding the same rank; not being subordinate. Thus shell-fish may be divided into two coordinate kinds, crustaceous and testaceous; each of which is again subdivided into many species, subordinate to the kind, but coordinate to each other.
The word Analysis signifies the general and particular heads of a discourse, with their mutual connections, both coordinate and subordinate, drawn out into one or more tables.

COORDINATELY, adv. [from coordinate.]
In the same rank; in the same relation; without subordination.

COORDINATENESS. n. s. [from coordinate.] The state of being coordinate.

COORDINATION. n. s. [from coordinate.] The state of holding the same rank; of standing in the same relation to something higher; collaterality.
In this high court of parliament there is a rare coordination of power in a wholesome mixture of twostarc monarchic, optimacy, and democracy.

COOT. n. s. [maer-het, Dut. coof, Fr.] A small black water-fowl, seen often in fens and marshes.
A laque, the haunt
Of coots, and of the fishing coromant.

Draiden's Fables.

COOP. n. s. [kop, Dut. coo, Sax.] The head; the top of any thing; any thing rising to a head; as, a coop, vulgarly, the head of a cow; a cob castle, properly cap-castle, a small castle or house on a hill; a cob of cherry-stones, for cay, a pile of stones one laid upon another; a tuff on the head of birds.

COPAL. n. s. The Mexican term for a gum.

COPARCENARY. n. s. [from coparcenar.] Joint succession to any inheritance.
In descent to all the daughters in coparcenary, for succession is allotted to the eldest daughter. Hale's History of Common Law.

CO-PA-R-CER. n. a. [from con and particere, Lat.]

Coparcener are otherwise called partyes; and, in common law, are women as well as the equal portion in the inheritance of the ancestor, conveyed. This great lordship was broken and divided, and part of the manor between the five daughters; in every of these portions, the coparceners severally exercised the same jurisdiction, which the earl mahald and his sons had used in the whole.

COPARCEY. n. a. An equal share of coparceners, Phillips's World of Words.

COPARTNER. n. s. [co and partner.]

One that has a share in some common stock or affair; one equally concerned; a sharer; a partner; a partner. Milton has used it both with and in.

Our faithful friends,
Th' associates and copartners of our loss.

Milton's Par. Lost.

Shall I to him make known
As yet my change, and give him topartake
Full happiness with me? Or rather not;
But keep the odds of knowledge in my view.

Without copartners.

Rather by them
I gain'd what I have gair'd, and with them dwell.
Copartners in these regions of my life.

Milton's Par. Regained.

COPARTNERSHIP. n. s. [from copartner.]

The state of bearing an equal part, or possessing an equal share.

In case the father leaves daughters, the daughters equally succeeded to their father, as in copartnership.

COPA'TAIN. adj. [from cop.] High raised, pointed.

Oft, oh, Billian! a silken doublet, a velvet hose, a scarlet cape, and a copatian hat.

Shakspeare. Taming of the Shrew.

COP'AY.' n. s. [It is sometimes written capri, caprè, caprya, caprya, capria, capria.

A gun which distils from a tree in Brasil. It is much used in disorders of the urinary passages.

COPE. [See Cop.]

1. Any thing with which the head is covered.
2. A sacerdotal cloak, or vestment worn in sacred ministration.
3. Any thing which is spread over the head; as the conceave of the skies; any archway over a door.

All these things are contained
Within this goodly cope, both most and least.
Their being love, and daily are increas'd.

Spencer.

Over head the dismal hiss
Of fiery darts in flaming volleys flew,
And flying vauded, their host with fire:
So, under fiery cope, together rush'd.

Battle morn.

Miller's Par. Lost.

The scholar believes there is no man under the cope of heaven, who is so knowing as his master.

Drayton.

To COPE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To cover, as with a cope.

A very large bridge, that is all made of wood, and cope'd over head.

Addison on Italy.

2. To contend with; to oppose.

Know my name is lost,
By treason's tooth bared; shame, and cackle-bit;
Yet an I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.

Shakspeare. King Lear.

3. To reward; to give in return.

I and my friend
Hare, by your wisdom, been this day acquainted
Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof,

Vol. I.

Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew.

We freely offer your courteous parts withal.

Shak. To CopE. v. n.

1. To comend; to struggle; to strive. It has with before the thing or person opposed. In this sense it is a word of doubtful etymology. The conjecture of Janius derives it from coopent to buy, or some other word of the same import; so that to cope with signifies to interlace blouses, or any thing else, with another.

Our trains
Marden by us, that we may persuade the men
We should have coop'd with them.

Shakspeare. Hen. IV.

It is likely then will understand
A thing, like death, to chide away this shame,
That eyes with death itself, to escape from it.

Shakspeare.

But Eve was Eve;

This far his over-match, who, self-deceived,
And rash, before had not better weigh'd
The strength he was to cope with, or his own.

Milton.

They perfectly understood both the loves
And the enemy they had sustained. L'Estrange.

On every plain,

Host coop'd with host, dire was the din of war.

Shakspeare.

Their generals have not been able to cope with the troops of Athens, which I have concluded.

Addison's Whig Examination.

If the mind apply itself once more to easier subjects, and things near a-kno to what is already known; and then advance to the more remote and knotty parts of knowledge by slow degrees, it will allow, in this manner, to cope with great difficulties, and prevail over them with amazing and happy success.

Wits on the Mind.

2. To encounter; to interchange kindness or sentiments.

Thus fresh piece

Thus are even as just a man,
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal. Shak. Hamlet.

To Cope. v. a. To embrace. Not in use.

I will make him tell the tale now.
Where, how, how off, how long ago, and when,
He hath, and is again to cope with your wife.

Shakspeare. Othello.

CoPE'SMATE. n. s. [perhaps for cpersmate, a companion in drinking, or one that falls under, for house;]

Companion; friend. An old word.

No ever staid in place, no spake to wight,
Till that the fox his copemate he had found.

Hudibras's Tale.

COPE'R. n. s. [from cop.]

1. One that copies; a transcriber.

A man is in no danger of having his characters altered by copyers and transcribers. Addis, on Coins.

2. One that imitates; a plagiar; an imitator.

Without invention a painter is but a copy, and as such a plagiarist of others. Drayton's Defence.

Let the faint copyer, on old Tiber's shoe,
Nor mean the task, each breathing bust explore;
Live after line with patient penance trace,
This Roman grandeur, that Athenian grace.

Tickell.

COPING. n. s. [from cope.]
The upper tire of masonry which covers the wall.

All these were of costly stones, even from the foundation into the coping.

1 Kings v. 9.

The coping, the modifications, or details, make a noble show by their grateful projections.

Freycinet.

COPIOUS. adj. [copia, Lat.]

1. Plentiful; abundant; exuberant; in great quantities.

Rose, as in dance, the stately trees, and spread Their branches hung with copious fruit.

Milton.

2. Excess, before the all-bounteous king, who show'd
With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy. Milton.

This rice scarce ariuate indicates the copious use of vinegar and acid fruits. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

The tender heart is peace,
And kindly pours its copious treasures forth
In various courses.

Thomson's Spring.

2. Abounding in words or images; not barren; not confin'd; not concise.

Hill, s. M. of God. Saviour of men! thy name
Shall be the copious matter of my song.

Herculean, and never shall my harp thy praise Forget, nor from thy Father's praise disjoin.

Milton.

COPIOUSLY. adv. [from copious.]

1. Plentifully; abundantly; in great quantities.

2. At large; without brevity or conciseness; diffusely.

These several remains have been so copiously described by abundance of travellers, and other writers, that it is very difficult to make any new discoveries on so beaten a subject.

Addison.

COPI'OUSNESS. n. s. [from copious.]

1. Plenty; abundance; great quantity; exuberance.

2. Diffusion; exuberance of style.

The Roman orator endeavoured to imitate the copiousness of Homer, and the Latin poet made it his business to reach the conciseness of Demosthenes.

Drayton.

COPEST. n. s. [from copy.]

A copier; a transcriber; an imitator.

COPE'LAND. n. s. A piece of ground in which the land terminates with an acute angle.

Dict.

COPE'd. adj. [from cope.] Rising to a tip or head.

It was broad in its basis, and rose copped like a sugar-loaf.

Witcicombe's Trigonom.

A gilded escutcheon being copped and somewhat comin.

Woodward.

COPE'l. n. s. [This word is variously spelt; as copped, cupel, cupel, and cuppel; but I cannot find its etymology.] An instrument used in chymistry, in the form of a dish; well washed, to cleanse them from all their salt; or of bones thoroughly calcined.

Its use is to try and purify gold and silver, which is done by mingling lead with the metal, and exposing it in the cupel to a violent fire a long while. The impurities of the metal will then be carried off in dross, which is called the lichure of gold and silver. The refiners call the cupel a test.

Harris.

COPE'PER. n. s. [科普er, Dut. cupraum, Lat.]

One of the six primitive metals.

Copper is the most ductile and malleable metal, after tin and silver. Of a mixture of copper and lapis cæsarius is formed brass; a composition of copper and tin makes bell-metal; and copper and brass, melted in equal quantities, produces what the French call bronze, used for figures and statues.

Chambers.

Copper is heavier than iron or tin; but lighter than silver, lead, and tin.

Faeschi.

Two vessels of fine copper, precious as gold.

Emo. vii. 27.

COPE'PER. n. s. A vessel made of copper; commonly used for a boiler larger than a movable pot.

They boiled it in a copper to the half; then they poured it into earthen vessels.

Bacon's Natural History.
COPPER-NOSE. n.s. [copper and nose.] A red nose.

Copper-plate. n.s. [copper and work.] A plate where copper is worked or manufactured.

Copperas. n.s. [copperose, Dut. copperoos, Fr. supposed to be found in copper mines only.] A name given to three sorts of vitriol; the green, the bluish green, and the white, which are produced in the mines of Germany, Hungary, and other countries. But what is commonly sold here for copperas, is an artificial vitriol, made of a kind of stones found on the sea-shore in Essex, Hampshire, and so westward, ordinarily called gold stones from their colour. They abound with iron, and are exposed to the weather in beds above ground, and receive the rains and dews, which in time break and dissolves the stones; the liquor that runs off is pressed into boilers, in which is first put old iron which, in boiling, dissolves. This factitious copperas, in many respects, agrees with the native green vitriol. Chambers, Hill.

It may be questioned, whether, in this operation, the iron or copperas be transmitted, from the cation of copperas with copper, and the iron remains after conversion.

Coppersmith. n.s. [copper and smith.] One that manufactures copper.

Salmonese, as the Grecian tale is, Was a mad coppersmith of Els; Up at his forge by morning peep. Swift.

Copperwood. n.s. [vereda, Lat.] 1. A little worm in ships. 2. A worm that frets apparel. 3. A worm breeding in one's hand. Ainsworth.

Coppery. adj. [from copper.] Containing copper; made of copper.

Some springs of Hungary, highly impregnated with vitriolicate salts, dissolve the body of iron put into the water, and deposit, in lieu of the iron particles carried off, coppery particles brought with the water out of the neighbouring copper-mines. Woodward on Estate.

Coppice. n.s. [coppeunc, Fr. from coupe to cut or lop. It is often written cope:] Low woods cut at stated times for fuel; a place over-run with brushwood.

A land, each side whereof was bounded both with high timber trees, and copses of far more humble growth. Stubbs.

Upon the edge of yonder coppice, A stand, where you may have the fairest shoot. Shakespeare.

COPPER-PLATE. n.s. A plate on which pictures are engraved for the nearer impression, distinguished from a wooden cut.

Copper-work. n.s. [copper and work.] A place where copper is worked or manufactured.

This is like those wrought at copper-works. Woodward.

COPPERAS. n.s. [copperose, Dut. copperoos, Fr. supposed to be found in copper mines only.] A name given to three sorts of vitriol; the green, the bluish green, and the white, which are produced in the mines of Germany, Hungary, and other countries. But what is commonly sold here for copperas, is an artificial vitriol, made of a kind of stones found on the sea-shore in Essex, Hampshire, and so westward, ordinarily called gold stones from their colour. They abound with iron, and are exposed to the weather in beds above ground, and receive the rains and dews, which in time break and dissolves the stones; the liquor that runs off is pressed into boilers, in which is first put old iron which, in boiling, dissolves. This factitious copperas, in many respects, agrees with the native green vitriol. Chambers, Hill.

It may be questioned, whether, in this operation, the iron or copperas be transmitted, from the cation of copperas with copper, and the iron remains after conversion.

COPPERSTONE. A name given to copperas.

COPPERSTONE-STONES are lumps and fragments of stone or marble, broke from the adjacent cliffs, rounded by being bowed and tumbled to and again by the action of the water. Woodward.

COPPERED. adj. [from cop.] Rising in a conick form; rising to a point.

There is some difference in this shape, some being flatter on the top, others more coppered. Woodward on Faults.

COPSE. n.s. [abbreviated from coppice.] Short wood cut at a certain growth for fuel; a place overgrown with short wood.

The east quarters of the shire are not destinate of copse woods. Carex's Survey of Cornwall.

Oaks and branches, if the copse be broad; Conformed lie, to the same ashes turn'd. Waller.

But in what quarter of the copse it lay, His eye by certain level could survey. Dryden, Fab. To Copse. v. a. [from the noun.] To preserve underwoods.

The neglect of coping wood cut down, hath been of very evil consequence. Swift's Address to Parliament.

COPULA. n.s. [L.] The word which unites the subject and predicate of a proposition; as, books are dear. To Copulate. v. a. [copula, Lat.] To unite; to conjoin; to link together.

If the force of custom, simple and separate, be great, the force of custom copulate, and conjoin, and collect, is far greater. Bacon.

To Copulate. v. n. To come together as different sexes. Not only the person so copulating are infected, but also their children. Wiedman's Surgery.

COPULATION. n.s. [from copulate.] The congress or embrace of the two sexes. Sandry kinds, even of conjugal copulation, are prohibited as unnatural.

COPULATIVE. adj. [copulativus, Lat.] A term of grammar.

Copulative propositions are those which have more subjects or predicates connected by affirmative or negative conjunctions; as, riches and honours are temptations to pride; Caesar conquered the Gauls and the Britains; neither gold nor silver will purchase immortality. Watts's Logick.

COPY. n.s. [copie, Fr. copy, Lat. copia, copio, late good copia, facere copia crucidenti: Januus inmiscens after his manner, to derive from mixtus labour; because, says he, to copy another's writing is very painful and laborious.] 1. A transcript from the archetype or original.

If virtue's self were lost, we might From your fair mind new copies write. Waller.

I have not the vanity to think my copy equal to the original. Denham.

He spelt forth, not only the copy of God's hands, but also the copy of his perfections, a kind of image or representation of the Deity in small.

The Romans having sent to Athens, and the Greek cities of Italy, for copies of the best laws, chose ten legislators to put them into form. Swift.

2. An individual book; one of many books: as, a good or fair copy.

The very having of the books of God was a matter of its small charge, as they could not be had otherwise than in written copies. Hooker.

3. The autograph; the original; the archetype; that from which any thing is copied.

It was the copy of our conference: In best he slept not, for my urging it; At board he fed not, for my urging it. Shakespeare, Comedy of Errors.

Let him first learn to write, after a copy, all the letters in the vulgar alphabet. Holder's Gram. of Sp.

The first of them I have forgotten, and cannot easily retrieve, because the copy is at the press. Dryden.

4. An instrument by which any conveyance is made in law.

Then know'st thou that Banquo and his Finance lives: But in their nature's copy is not eternal. Shaks. Mac.

5. A picture drawn from another picture.

COPY-BOOK. n.s. [copy and book.] A book in which copies are written for learners to imitate.

COPY-HOLD. n.s. [copy and hold.] A tenure, for which the tenant hath nothing to show but the copy of the rolls made by the steward of his lord's court: for the steward, as he enrolls other things done in the lord's court, so he registers such tenants as are admitted in the court, to any parcel of land or tenement belonging to the manor; and the transcript of this is called the court roll, the copy of which the tenant takes from him, and keeps as his only evidence that he is in every copyhold to which it holds at the will of the lord; yet not simply, but according to the custom of the manor: so that if a copy-holder break not the custom of the manor, and thereby forfeit his tenure, he cannot be turned out at the lord's pleasure. These customs of manors vary, in one point or other, almost in every manor. Some copy-holds are yearly, and some certain: that which is freeable, the lord rates at what fine or income he pleases, when the tenant is admitted into it; that which is certain, is a kind of inheritance, and called in many places customary, because the tenant dying, and the hold being void, the next of blood paying the customary fine, as two shillings for an acre, or so, cannot be denied his admission.

Some copy-holders have, by custom, the wood growing upon their own land, which by law they could not have. Some hold by the verge in ancient demesne; and though they hold by copy, yet are they, in account, a kind of freeholder; for, if such a one commit fe ily, the king hath annum, diem, and vastum, as in case of freehold. Some others hold by common tenure, called mere copy-hold; and, they committing felony, their land escheats to the lord of the manor.

Corell. If a customary tenant die, the widow shall have what the law calls her free bench in all his copy-hold limits.

COPY-HOLDER, n. s. [from copyhold.]
One that is possessed of land in copyhold.

To COPY, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To transcribe; to write after an original; it has sometimes out, a kind of pleonasm.
He who hurts a harmless neighbour's peace,
Who loves a lye, lane slander helps about,
Who writes a libel, or who copies out. Pope's Epist.
2. To imitate; to propose to imitation; to endeavour to resemble.
He that borrows other men's experience, with this design of copying it out, possesses himself of one of the greatest advantages.

Deod of Farty. Set the examples, and their souls inflame
To copy not their great forefathers; fount.

Dryden's King Arthur.

To copy her few nymphs aspir'd,
Swift,

her virtues sweats admir'd.

To COPY, v. n.
1. To do any thing in imitation of something.
Some imagine, that whatsoever they find in the picture of a master, who has acquired reputation, must of necessity be excellent; and never fail, when they copy, to follow the bad as well as the good things.

Dryden's Diffrnency.
2. It has sometimes from before the thing imitated.
When a painter copies from life, he has no privilege of altering features and lineaments, unless precedent that his picture will look better. Dryden.

3. Sometimes after.
Several of our countrymen, and Mr. Dryden in particular, seem very often to have copied after it in their dramatick writings, and in their poems upon love.

Addison's Spectator.

To COQUET, v. a. [from the noun.]
To entertain with compliments and an erous tattle; to treat with an appearance of amorous tenderness.
You are coquetting a maid of honour, my lord, looking on to see how the gamsters play, and I rolling at you both. Swift.

To COQUET, v. n.
To act the lover; to
entiche by blandishments.
Phyllis, who but a month ago
Was married to the Timbridge bean,
I saw coqueting t'other night,
In publick, with that odious knight. Swift.

COQUETRY, n. s. [coqueterie, Fr.] Affection of amorous advances; desire of attracting notice.
I was often in company with a couple of charming woemen, who had all the wit and beauty one could desire in female companions, without a dash of cooquetting, that from time to time gave me a great many apprehensions. Addison's Spectator.

COQUETTE, n. s. [coquette, Fr. from copart a prattler.] A gay, airy girl; a girl who endeavour to attract notice.
The light coquettes in sphyls aloof repair,
And sport and flatter in the fields of air. Pope.
A coquette and a lither-box are sparked.
Abythath and Pope.

COOLANCE, n. s. [conwgle, Welsh, probably from corium leather, Lat.] A boat used in Wales by fishers, made by drawing leather or oiled cloth upon a frame of wicker work.

CORAL, n. s. [corallium, Lat.]
COR

CO'RRED, adj. [from cord.] Made of ropes.

This might be incnch, with a cord ladder.

To climb celestial silver's chamber window. Shak.

CORDELIER, n. s. A Franciscan friar; so named from the cord which serves him for a incense.

And who to assist but a grave cordelier. Prior.

CORDIAL. n. s. [from cord from the heart, Lat.]

1. A medicine that increases the force of the heart, or quickens the circulation.

2. Any medicine that increases strength.

A cordial, properly speaking, is not always what increases the force of the heart; for, by increasing that, the animal may be weakened, as in inflammatory diseases. Whatever increases the natural or animal strength, the force of moving the fluids and muscles, is a cordial; these are such substances as bring the serum of the blood into the proper condition for circulation and nutrition;
as broths made of animal substances, milk, ripe fruits, and whatever is ended with a wholesome but not syngent taste. Arbuthnot on Aliment.

3. Anything that comforts, gladdens, and exhilarates.

Then with some cordials seek for to appease
The inward languor of my wounded heart,
And shun all that I hitherto have devise;
But such sweet cordials pass physicians at once.
Cordials of pity give me now, for
I too weak for parerga grow. Cowley.

You argall, that upholding that upheld the crown,
The scarlet honour of your peaceful gown,
Are the most pleasing objects I can find,
Charms to my sight, and cords to my mind. Dryden.

C'ORDIAL adj.

1. Reviving; invigorating; restorative.

It is a thing I make, which hath the king
Frivolous in his death. I do not know
What is more cordial. Shakspeare, Cymbeline.

He only took cordial waters, in which we infused sometime positive sweets. Prior's Damon.

2. Sincere; hearty; proceeding from the heart; without hypocrisy.

Doctrines are infused among Christians, which are apt to obstruct or intercept the cordial super-"structuring of Christian life, of renovation, where the foundation is duly laid. Hammond.

He, with looks of cordial love.

Hang on her enamour'd. Milton.

C'ORDIALITY, n. s. [from cordial.]

1. Relation to the heart.

That the ancients had any such respects of cordiality, or reference unto the heart, will much be depended on by posterity.

2. Sincerity; freedom from hypocrisy.

C'ORDIALLY adv. [from cordial.]

Sincerely; heartily; without hypocrisy.

Where a strong inveterate love of sin has made any doctrine or proposition wholly unattractive to the heart, no argument, or demonstration, no nor miracle whatsoever, shall be able to bring the heart cordially to close with, and receive it. Smith's Sermon.

C'ORDINER, n. s. [cordonier, Fr.] A shoemaker.

It is so used in divers statutes.

C'ORDON, n. s. [from cord, Fr.] In fortification, a row of stones jutting out before the rampart and the basis of the parapet. Chambers.

C'ORDWAIN, n. s. [cordovan leather, from cordwain in Spain.] Spanish leather.

Her straight legs most bravery were embay'd
In golden baskins of costly cordwain, Fairy Queen.

C'ORDWAINER, n. s. [uncertain whether from dorado, Spanish leather, or from cord, of which shoes were formerly made, and are now used in the Spanish West Indies. Treverus.] A shoemaker.

C'OEUR, n. s. [cœur, Fr.; cor, Lat.]

1. The heart.
COR

4. An excrescence on the feet, hard and painful; probably so called from its form; though by some supposed to be denominated from its corneous or horrid substance.

Ladies, that have your feet
Unplag’d with corn, we’ll have a bout with you,
Shakespeare.

The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry we,
And turn his sleep to wake.
Shak. K. Lear.
Even in ouches, sores and corns do en
Enouve either rain or towards frost.
Bacon’s Nat. History.

The hardest part of the corn is usually in the middle, thrusting itself in a nail; whence it has the Latin appellation of cattle.

He first of that useful secret did explain,
That pricking corns foretold the gathering rain.
Gay’s Pastoral.

It looks there as were regular accumulations and gatherings of humours, growing perhaps in some people as corns.
Arabian.

Thus Lamb, renowned for cutting corns,
An offer’d fee from Radcliffv. scions.
Swift.

To COR. n. a. [from the noun.]
1. To sail; to sprinkle with salt. The word is so used, as Skinner observes, by the old Saxons.

2. To granulate.

CORN-FIELD. n. s. A field where corn is growing.
Pol. Miller enumerates eighteen species of this plant, some with red flowers, and some with white.

CORN-FLOOR. n. s. The floor where corn is stored.

Thou hast loved a reward upon every corn-floor.
Hos. ix. 1.

CORN-FLOWER. n. s. [from corn and flower.]
There be certain corn-flowers, which come seld
Or never in other places, unless they be set,
But only among corn; as the blue-bottle, a kind of yellow marygold, which, being, and furnished.
Bacon’s Natural History.

Corn-flowers are of many sorts: some of them flower in June and July, and others in August. The seeds should be sown in March: they require a good soil.
Marcher.

CORN-LAND. n. s. [corn and land.] Land appropriated to the production of grain.
Pastures and meadows are of such advantage to husbandry, that many prefer them to corn lands.
Marcher’s Husbandry.

CORN-MASTER. n. s. [corn and master.] One that cultivates corn for sale.
Not in use.
I know a nobleman in England, that had the greatest audits of any man in my time; a great grasier, a great sheep-master, a great timber-man, a great colliet, a great corn-master, and a great headman.
Violante.

CORN-MARIGOLD. n. s. [corn and marigold.] A flower.

CORN-MILL. n. s. [corn and mill.] A mill to grind corn into meal.
Save the more laborious work of beating of hemp, by making the axe-tree of the corn-mills longer than ordinary, and placing pins in it to raise large hammers.
Marcher.

CORN-PIPE. n. s. [corn and pipe.]

A pipe made by slitting the joint of a green stalk of corn.
Now the shill corn-pipe, echoing loud to arms,
To rank and file reduce the stragglers swarms.
Ticknel.

CORN-ROCKET. n. s. [from corn and rocket.] A plant.

CORN-ROSE. n. s. A species of poppy.

CORN-SALLY. n. s. [from corn and sally.]
Cornsally is an herb, whose top-leaves are a salt of themselves.
Marcher’s Husbandry.

CORNAGE. n. s. [from corne, Fr. cornu.] A tenure which obliges the landlord to give notice of an invasion by blowing a horn.

CORN-CHOPPER. n. s. [corn and chand-ero.] One that retails corn.

CORN-CUTTER. n. s. [from corn and cut.] A man whose profession is to extirpate corns from the foot.
The nail was not loose, nor did seem to press into the flesh; for there had been a corncutter, who had cleaned it in his house.
I have known a corncutter, who, with a right education, would be an excellent physician.
Spectator.

CORNEL. n. s. [cornus, Lat.] The cornel-tree beareth the fruit commonly called the cornel or cornelian cherry, as well from the name of the tree, as the cornelian stone, the color whereof it somewhat represents. The wood is very durable, and useful for wheel-work.

Marcher.

Take a service-tree, or a cornelian-tree, or an elder-tree, which we know have fruits of harsh and binding juice, and set them near a vine or fig-tree, and see whether the grapes or figs will be the sweeter.
Bacon’s Nat. History.

A huntsman issuing from the wood,
Reducing on her spear she stood. Dryden.
Mean time the goddess, in disdain, bestows
The mast and acorn, brutal food! and strives
The fruits of cornel, as they feast around.
Pope’s Odyssey.

On wildings and on strawberries they fed;
Cornels and hawthorne berries gave the rest,
And falling scarlet-fruitful no afeast. Dryden’s Oriental.

CORNELIAN STONE. See CARNEHIL.

CORNEMUSE. n. s. [Fr.] A kind of rustick flute.

CORNFEOUS, adj. [cornus, Lat.] Hornie; of a substance resembling horn.
Such as have cornous or horney eyes, as lobsters, and crustaceous animals, are generally diminished.
Brown.

The various submarine shrimps are of a cornous or liggous composition, consisting chiefly of a fibrous matter.
Woodward.

CORN. n. s. [cornel, Welsh; cornei, Fr.] 1. An angle; a place inclosed by two walls or lines, which would intersect each other, if drawn beyond the point where they meet.

2. A secret or remote place.
There’s nothing I have done yet, o’ my con-

Deserves a corner. Shak. Henry VIII.
It is better to dwell in a corner of a house top,
Than with a brawling woman under a wide house.
Prov. xxvii. 24.
I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner in a narrow place.
All the inhabitants, in every corner of the island, have been absolutely reduced under his immediate subjection.
Dutch.
Those vices, that lurk in the secret corners of the soul.
Adam.

3. The extremities; the utmost limit; thus every corner is the whole or every part.
Might I but through my prison, once a day,
Behold this maid, all corners else o’ th’ earth
Let liberty make use of.
Shak. Tempest.

I turn’d, and tried each corner of the field.
To find if sleep were there; but sleep was lost.
Dray.

CORN-STONE. n. s. [corner and stone.] The stone that unites the two walls at the corner; the principal stone.
See you your’col, o’ th’ capital, your’ corner-

Shak. A mason was fitting a corner-stone.
Humphry’s Vocal Forest.

CORN-TEETH of a Horse, are the fore teeth between the middling teeth and the tusks; two above and two below, on each side of the jaw, which shoot when the horse is four years and a half old.
Farrier’s Dict.

CORNWISE. ade. [corner and wise.] Diagonally; with the corner in front.

CORNNET. n. s. [cornette, Fr.] 1. A musical instrument blown with the mouth; used anciently in war, probably in the cavalry.
Israel played before the Lord on psaltiers, and on cymbals, and on cornets.
Sam. vi. 5.
Other wind instruments require a forcible breath; as trumpets, cornets, and hunter’s horns.
Bacon’s Natural History.

Cornets and trumpets cannot reach his ear.
Under an actor’s nose, he’s never near.
Drayton’s Jeuental.

2. A company or troop of horse; perhaps as many as had a cornet belonging to them. This sense is now disused.
These noblemen were appointed, with some cornets of horse and bands of foot, to put themselves beyond the hill where the rebels were encamped.
Bacon.
Seventy great horses lay dead in the field, and one cornet was taken.
Howard.
They discerned a body of five cornets of horse very full, standing in very good order to receive them.
Chaucer.

3. The officer that bears the standard of a troop.

4. Cornet of a Horse, is the lowest part of his pate, that runs round the coffin, and is distinguished by the hair that joins and covers the upper part of the hoof.
Farrier’s Dict.

5. A scarf anciently worn by Doctors.
Dict.

6. A head dress.
Dict.

7. Coronet of Paper, is described by Skinner to be a cup of paper, made by retailers for small wares.

CORNETTER. n. s. [from cornet.] A blower of the cornet.
So great was the rattle of trumpeters, cornetters, and other musicians, that even Claudius himself might have heard them.
Habercill on Eornd.

CORNICE. n. s. [corniche, Fr.] The highest projection of a wall or column.
The cornice of the Palazzo Farnese, which makes so beautiful an effect below, when viewed more nearly, will be found not to have its just measure.
Dryden’s Defensy.

The walls were massy brass, the cornice high
Blue metals crown’d, in colours of the sky.
Pope’s Odyssey.

CORNICE Ring. [In gunnery.] The next ring from the muzzle backwards.
Chambers. 413
COR

CORNICLE. n.s. [from cornu, Lat.] A little horn.

There will be found, on either side, two black filaments, or membranous strings, which extend unto the long and shorter cornicles, upon protrusion. Broin's Vulgar Errors.

CORNICULATE. adj. [from cornu, Lat.] A term in botany.

Corniculate plants are such as produce many distinct and horned pods; and corniculate flowers are such hollow flowers as have on their upper part a kind of spur, or little horn. Chambers.

CORNFICK. adj. [from cornu and facie, Lat.] Productive of horns; making horns. Dict.

CONGERIOUS. adj. [corniger, Lat.] Horned; having horns.

Nature, in other congerious animals, hath placed the horns higher, and reclining; as in bucks. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CORNECOPIE. n.s. [Lat.] The horn of plenty; a horn topped with fruits and flowers in the hands of a goddess.

To CORNUTE. n.s. [corunus, Lat.] To bestow horns; to cuckold.

CORNUATED. adj. [corunatus, Lat.] Graverd with horn; horned; cuckolded.

CORNU'TO. n.s. [corunatus, Lat.] A man horned; a cuckold.

The peaking cornuto, her husband, dwelling in a continual larum of jealousy. Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

CORNY. adj. [from cornu, horn, Lat.] 1. Strong or hard like horn; horned.

Up stood the corny read, Embattled in his field. Milton's Par. Lost.

2. [from corn.] Producing graces or corn. Tell me why the ant, 'Nislest summer's plenty, thinks of winter's want; By constant journey's careful to prepare. Her corne, and make the corny ear. Prior.

3. Containing corn.

They lodge in habitations not their own, By their high crops and corny plazards known. Dryden.

COROLLARY. n.s. [corollarium, Lat. from corolla; finis coronat opus: corollair, Fr.] 1. The conclusion: a corollary seems to be a conclusion, whether following from the premises necessarily or not.

Now since we have considered the malignity of this sin of detraction, it is but a natural corollary, that we enforce our vigilance against it. Government of the Tongue.

As a corollary to this preface, in which I have done justice to others, I owe somewhat to myself. Dryden's Fables, Preface.

2. Surplus.

Being a corollary, Shakespeare, Tempest.

CORONAT. n.s. [Lat.] A large flat member of the cornece, so called because it crowns the entablature and the whole order. It is called by workmen the drip. Chambers.

In a cornece the goda or cynations of the cornece, the coping, the modillions or dentiles, make a noble show by their graceful projections. Spec.

CORONAL. n.s. [corona, Lat.] A crown; a garland.

Crowned and bearded with a coronal, And hymen also crowned with wreaths of vine. Spenser.

CORONAL. adj. Belonging to the top of the head.

A man of about forty-five years of age came to me, with a round taberacle between the exca tion, and coronal nature. Ilmarnan.

CORONARY. adj. [coronarius, Lat.] 1. Relating to a crown; seated on the top of the head like a crown.

The basilisk of older times was a proper kind of serpent, not above three palms long, as some account; and different from other serpents by advancing six feet, or more, without any crown spots, upon the brown. Brown.

2. It is applied in anatomy to arteries, which are fancied to encompass the heart in the manner of a garland.

The substance of the heart itself is most certainly made, and nourished by the blood, which is conveyed to it by the coronary arteries. Bentley's Sermons.

CORONATION. n.s. [from corona, Lat.] 1. The act or solemnity of crowning a king.

Fortune smiling at her worketh therein, that a scaffold of execution should grow a scaffold of coronation. Sidney.

Willingly I came to Denmark. To shew my duty in your coronation. Shak. Ham. A cough, Sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's earlairs upon his coronation day. Shak. Henry IV.

Now empress fame had publish'd the renown of Shaks a coronation through the town. Dryden's Macfii.

2. The pomp or assembly present at a corona ton.

In pensive thought read the fancied scene; See coronation wheels in every grove. Pope.

CORONER. n.s. [from corona.] An officer whose duty is to enquire, upon the part of the king, how any violent death was occasioned; for which purpose a jury is impannelled.

Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit by my uncle; for he's in the third degree of drink; he's drowned. Shakespeare.

CORONET. n.s. [coronetta, Italy, the diminutive of corona a crown.] 1. An inferior crown worn by the nobility. The coronet of a duke is adorned with strawberry leaves; that of a marquis has leaves with pearls interposed; that of an earl raises the pearls above the leaves; that of a viscount is surrounded with only pearls; that of a baron has only four pearls.

In his lively Walk'd crowns and corouets; realms and islands were As plates drop from his pocket. Shakespeare, Antony and Cleopatra.

All the rest are countasses. Their coronets say so. Shaksp. Henry VIII.

2. An ornamental head-dress, in poetical language.

The rest was drawn into a coronet of gold, richly set with pearl. Sidney.

Under a coronet his flowing hair, In curls, on either cheek play'd. Milton, Par. Lost.

CORPORAL. n.s. [corporal, Fr.] The lowest officer of the infantry, whose office is to place and remove the sentinels. The crew corporal whisper'd in my ear, Five pounds, if rightly told, would set me clear. Gay.

CORPORAL of a Ship. An officer that hath the charge of setting the watches and sentries, and relieving them; who sees that all the soldiers and sailors keep their arms neat and clean, and teaches them how to use them. He has a mate under him.

Harris.

CORPORAL. adj. [corporal, Fr.] corpus, Lat.] 1. Relating to the body; belonging to the body.

To relief of lancers and weak age. Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil. A hundred alms-houses right well supplied. Spenser, Epist. Henry V.

Reader to some corporal sign about her. More evident than this. Shaksp. Cymbeline.

That God hath been in the body, with corporal eyes, exceedeth the small proportion of my understanding. Raleigh.

Beasts enjoy greater sensual pleasures, and feel fewer corporal pains; and are utter strangers to all those anxious and tormenting thoughts, which per tually haunt and disquiet mankind. Add..notice.

2. Material; not spiritual. In the present language, when body is used philosophically in opposition to spirit, the word corporal is used, as, a corporal being; but otherwise corporal; Corporal is, but having a body; corporal, relating to the body. This distinction seems not ancient.

Whither are ye vanished? Into the air; and what soul's corporal Melted, as breaths, into the wind. Shak. Macbeth. And from these corporal nutrments, perhaps, Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit. Milton's Paradise Lost.

CORPORALITY. n.s. [from corporal.] The quality of being embodied.

If this fiend be not spiritual, yet it approacheth nearer to spirituality; and if he be any corporality, then, of all other, the most subtle and pure. Raleigh's History.

CORPORALLY. adv. [from corporal.] Bodily.

The sun is corporally conjunct with basilius. Brown.

CORPORATE. adj. [from corpus, Lat.] 1. United in a body or community; enabled to act in legal processes as an individual.

Breaking forth like a sudden tempest, he ever run all Munster and Connought, defacing and utterly subverting all corporate towns that were not strongly walled. Spencer on Ireland. The union of Athens being thus at this time a corporate assembly, therefore the renunciation of the commons was usually turned against particular persons. Swift.

2. General; united.

They answer in a joint and corporate voice, That now they are at full. Shaksp. Timon.

CORPORATENESS. n.s. [from corporate.] The state of a bodily corporate; a community. Dict.

CORPORATION. n.s. [from corpus, Lat.] A corporation is a body politic, authorized by the king's charter to have a common seal, one head officer or more, and members, able, by their corporate consent, to grant or receive, in law, any thing within the compass of their charter; even as one man may do by law all things, that by law he is not forbidden; and bindeth the successors, as a single man binds his executor or heir. Cowell. Of angels we are not to consider only what they are, and do, in regard of their own being; but that also which concerneth them, as they are linked into a kind of corporation amongst themselves, and of society with men.

Of this we find some foot-steps in our law, Which doth her root from God and nature take; That thousand now are both together drawn. And of them all one corporation makes. Daven. 414 CORPORATURE. n.s. [from corpus, Lat.] The state of being embodied.

CORPORAL adj. [corporis, Lat.] 1. Having a body; not immaterial; not spiritual. See CORPORAL. The swiftness of those circles attribute, Though numberless, to his omnipotence, That to corporeal substances can be add Speed almost spiritual. Milton's Par. Lost.

Having surveyed the image of God in the soul, we are not to omit those characters that God imprinted upon the body, as much as a spiritual substance could be pictured upon a corporal.

South's Sermons.

God being supposed to be a pure spirit, cannot be the object of any corporeal sense. Tilton.

The course is finish'd which thy fate decreed. And thou from the corporal prison freed. Dryd. F. G. Fix thy corporal and internal eye.

On the young gnat, or new engender'd fly. Prior.

2. It is used by Swift inaccurately for corporal.

I am not in a condition to make a true step even on Ainsbury Downs; and I declare, that a corporal false step is worse than a political Swift.

CORPORALITY. n.s. [from corporis, Lat.] Materiality; the quality of being embodied; the state of having a body, bodiliness. Since philosophy affirmeth, that we are middle substances between the soul and the body, they must admit of some corporeity, which supposes weight or gravity.

Brown. It is the saying of divine Plato, that man in nature's horizon, dividing between the upper hemisphere of immaterial intellects, and this lower of corporeity. Glascott's Metaph. The one attributed corporeity to God, and the other shape and figure. Stillingfleet.

CORPORIFICATION. n.s. [from corporo-] The act of giving body or palpability.

To CORPORIFY. v. a. [from corpus, Lat.] To embody; to insinuate into body, not used.

CORPS. n.s. [corps, Fr. corps, Lat.]

1. A body. That lewd ribald

Laid first his filthy hands on virgin chaste,
To spoil her dainty core, so fair and shene,
Of chastity and honour virgin.

Spenser.

2. A body, in contempt.

Though plentiful, all too little seems
To stuff this man, this vast unhilde-bound corps. Milton.

He looks as man was made, with face erect;
That seems his brittle corps, and seems asham'd He's not all spirit. Dryden's Don Sebastion.

3. A carcass; a dead body; a corpse.

This is no friend

Greet my poor corps, where my bones shall be thrown.

Shakespeare. There was the murder'd corps in covert laid, And violent death in thousand shapes displayed. Dryden's Fables. See where the corps of thy dead son approaches.

Addison.

4. The body, in opposition to the soul.

Cold numness straight bereaves
Her corps of sense, and th' air her soul receives. Dryden.

5. A body of forces.

CORPULANCE. n.s. [corpulentia, Lat.]

1. Bulkingness of body; fleshiness; fulness of flesh.

To what a cumbersome unwieldiness, And burdensome corpulence, my love had grown. Donne.

It is but one species of corpulence; for there may be a bulk without fat from the great quantity of muscular flesh, the case of robust people. Arbuth. on Anin.

2. Spissitude; grossness of matter.

The excessive flesh serves for the vibration of the tail; the heaviness and corpulence of the water requiring a great force to divide it. Bay on the Creation.

CORPULENT. adj. [corpulentus, Lat.] Fleshly; bulky; having great bodily bulk.

We say it is a fleshy stile, when there is much peripheral, and circuit of words; and when, with more than enough, it grows fat and corpulent. Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

Excess of nourishment is hurtful; for it maketh the child stout, and growing in breadth rather than in height. Bacon.

CORPUSCLE. n.s. [corpusculum, Lat.] A small body; a particle of matter; an atom; a little fragment.

It will add much to our satisfaction, if those corpuscles can be discovered with microscopes. Newton's Opticks.

Who knows what are the figures of the little corpuscles that compose and distinguish different bodies? Watts's Legick.

CORPSCELAR. adj. [from corpuscelar.] Corporceal or cellular.

CORPSCEALIAN. n.s. [culum, Lat.] Relating to bodies; comprising bodies. It is the distinguishing epithet of that philosophy, which attempts the rational solution of all physical appearances by the action of a one body upon another.

As to natural philosophy, I do not expect to see any principles proposed, more comprehensive and intelligible than the corporcelealian or mechanical. This may be so said, that the modern corporcelealian talk, in most things, more intelligibly than the mechanians. Boyle.

The mechanical or corporcelealian philosophy, though peradventure the eldest, as well as the best in the world, had left dead for many ages in contempt and oblivion. Boyle.

CORRACLE. See Coracle.

To CORRADE. v. a. [corrado, Lat.] To rub off; to wear away by frequent rubbing; to scrape together.

CORRADATION. n.s. [con and radius, Lat.] A conjunction of rays in one point.

The impression of colour worketh not but by a cone of direct beams; or right lines, whereof the basis is in the object, and the vertical point in the eye; so as there is a corradation, and conjunction of beams. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To CORRECT. v. a. [corrigo, correction, Lat.] 1. To punish; to chastise; to discipline.

Sad accidents, and a state of affliction, is a school of virtue; it corrects levity, and interrupts the confidence of sinners, or right lines, whereof the basis is in the object, and the vertical point in the eye; so as there is a corradation, and conjunction of beams. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. To amend; to take away faults in writings, life, or things.

CORRECT. adj. [corretus, Lat.] Revised or finished with exactness; free from faults.

What verse can do, he has perform'd in this, Which he presumes the most correct of his. Dryden's An. Prot.

Always use the most correct editions; various readings will be only troublesome where the sense is complete. Telen.

CORRECTION. n.s. [from correct.] 1. Punishment; discipline; chastisement; penalty.

Will thou, pupil like

Take thy correction mildly, kiss the rod?

An offensive wife,

That hath engag'd him on to offer stripes, As he is striking, holds his infant up, And hangs roundly correction in the arm. That was upral'd to execution. Shaksp. Rich. I.

Shaksp. Henry IV.

We are all but children here, we are the great master of the family; and he is pleased, by hopes and fears, by mercies and corrections, to instruct us in the ways of life. Vesta.

One fault was too great levity to her servants, to whom she gave good counsel, but too gentle correction. Arbuthnot.

2. Alteration to a better state; the act of taking away faults; amendment.

Another poet, in another age, may take the same liberty with my writings; if, at least, they live long enough to deserve correction. Dryden's Fables. Preface.

3. That which is substituted in the place of any thing wrong. Corrections or improvements should be adjudged, by way of note or commentary, in their proper place. Watts.

4. Reprehension; animadversion.

They proceed with judgment and ingenuity, establishing their assertions not only with great solidity, but submitting them also unto the correction of future discovery. Brown.

5. Abatement of noxious qualities, by the addition of something contrary.

To make ambitious, wholesome, do not take A dram of country's dulness; do not add Correction; but as thy mists purge the bud. Donne.
COR

Correctioner. n.s. [from correction.]
One that has been in the house of correction; a jail-bird. This seems to be the meaning in Shakespeare.
I will have you soundly swinged for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner!
Shaksp. Henry IV.

Corrective. adj. [from correct.]
Having the power to alter or obviate any bad qualities.
Molliencies are pectoral, corrective of bilious alkali.
Arab. nat.

Corrective. n.s.
1. That which has the power of altering or obviation of any thing amiss.
The hair, wool, feathers, and scales, which all animals of prey do swallow, are a reasonable and necessary corrector, to prevent their predilections from filling themselves with too succulent a food.
Humbly speaking, and according to the method of the world, and the little correctives supplied by art and discipline, it seldom falls but an ill principihas its course, and nature makes good its blow.
South's Sermons.
2. Limitation; restriction.
There seems to be such an instance in the regiment which the human soul exercises in relation to the body, that, with certain correctives and exceptions, may give some kind of explication or adumbration thereof.
Hulse's Essay of Mankind.

Correctly. adv. [from correct.]
Accurately; exactly; without faults.
There are ladies, without knowing what tenses and participles, adverbs and prepositional are, speak as properly and as correctly as most gentlemen who have been bred up in the ordinary methods of grammar schools. Locke on Education.
Such lays as neither ebb nor flow, Correctly cold, and regularly hot.
Pop's Essay on Criticism.

Correctness. n.s. [from correct.]
Accuracy; exactness; freedom from faults.
Too much labour often takes away the spirit, by adding to the polishing; so that there remains nothing but a dull correctness, a piece without any considerable faults, but with few beauties.
Drayton's Utopia.
The softness of the flesh, the delicacy of the shape, air, and posture, and the correctness of design, in this statue, are inexpressible.
Addison on Italy.
Late, very late, correctness grew our ease.
Pop. When the third nation breath'd from civil war.

Those pieces have never before been printed from the true copies, or with any tolerable degree of correctness.
Swift.

Corrector. n.s. [from correct.]
1. He that amends, or alters, by punishment or animadversion.
How many does zeal urge rather to do justice on some sins, than to forbear all sin! How many rather to be correctors than practitioners of religion.
Spenser's Faery Queen. With all his faults, he sets up as a universal reformer and corrector of abuses, and a remover of grievances.
Swift.
2. He that revises any thing to free it from faults; as the corrector of the press, that amends the errors committed in printing.
I remember a person, who, by his style and literature, seems to have been the corrector of a haggard press in Little Britain, proceeding generally to an author.
Swift.
3. In medicine.

COR

Such an ingredient in a composition, as guard against or abates the force of another; as the livid salts prevent the grievous violentions of resina purge, by dividing their particles, and preventing their adhering to a potential acumen; and as spices and curative seeds assist the operation of some catharticks, by dissipating wind, and in making a medicine, such a thing is called a corrector, which destroys or diminishes a quality that could not otherwise be dispensed with; this corrector is a quality of quinces driven by destroying its fluidity, and making it capable of mixture.
Quain.

To CORRELATE. v.n. [con and relatus, Lat.]
To have a reciprocal relation, as father and son.

CORRELATION. n.s. [correlatio, Lat.]
The state of being correlative.
CORRELATION. n.s. [corripi, correctum, Lat.]
Objuryation; chiding; reprehension; reproof.
If we must be talking of other people's faults, let it not be to correct, but to amend them, by converting our distraction into admonition and fraternal correction. Government of the Tongue.

To CORRESPOND. v.n. [con and respond, Lat.]
1. To suit; to answer; to be proportionate; to be adequate to; to be adapted to; to fit.
The days, if one be compared with another successively taken through the year, are found not to be equal, and will not justly correspond with any artificial or mechanical equal measures of time.
Holby's Essay on Time.

Words being but empty sounds, any farther than they are signs of our ideas, we cannot but assent to them, as they correspond to those ideas we have, but no farther than that.
Locke.
2. To keep up commerce with another by alternate letters.

CORRESPONDENCE. n.s. [con and correspondent.]
1. Relation; reciprocal adaptation of one thing to another.
Between the law of their heavenly operations, and the actions of men in this our state of mortality, such correspondence there is as maketh it expedient to know in some sort the one, for the other's more perfect direction.
Hooker.
Whatever we fancy, things keep their course and their babitudes, correspondent to, and relation to the same to one another.
Locke.
2. Intercourse; reciprocal intelligence.
I had discovered those unlawful correspondences they had used, and engagements they had made to embolden my kingdoms.
King Charles.
Sure the villains hold a correspondence.
With the enemy, and thus they would betray us.
Denham.

COR

It happens very oddly, that the pope and I should have the same thought much about the same time: my enemies will be apt to say, that we hold a correspondence together, and act by concert in this matter.
Addison.

CORRESPONDENCE. adj. [from correspond.]
Suitable; adapted; agreeable; answerable.
What good or evil is there under the sun, what action correspondent or repugnant unto the law which God hath imposed upon his creatures, but in or upon God doth work, according to the law which himself hath eternally purposed to keep.
Hooker.
And as live zones th' ethereal regions bind.
Five correspondent are to earth assigned.
Dryd. Ovid.

CORRESPONDENT. n.s. One with whom intelligence or commerce is kept up by mutual messages or letters.
He was pleased to command me to send to him, and receive from him authentic letters, and to all his correspondents at home and abroad.
Denham's Dedication.

CORRESPONDENCE. adj. [from correspond.]
Answerable; adapted to any thing.
Prion's six gates 'th city, with massy staples, And correspondent and fulfilling bolts, Sperre up the sons of Troy.
Scotox. Tristus and Caswida.

CORRIGIBLE. adj. [from corrige, Lat.]
1. That which may be altered or amended.
2. He who is a proper object of punishment; punishable.
He was taken up very short, and adjudged corrigible for such presumptuous language.
Howell's Vocal Forest.

3. Corrective; having the power to correct. Not proper, nor used.
Our bodies are our gardens, to which the which our wills are gardeners; so that, if we either have it stilt with idleness, or marred with industry, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our will.
Shakesp. Othello.

CORRIVABLE. n.s. [con and rival.] Rival; competitor.
They had governors commonly out of the two families of the Geraldines and Butlers, both adversaries and corrivals one against the other.
Spence on Ireland.
He, that doth redeem her thence, might wear Without corrival all her dignities.
Shaks. H. IV.

CORRIVALAR. n.s. [from corrival.]
Competition; opposition.

CORROBORANT. adj. [from corroborate.]
Having the power to give strength.
There be divers sorts of bracelets fit to comfort the spirits; and they be of three intentions, refrigera, corroboree, and aperient.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
COR

To CORROBORATE. v. a. [con and ro-bor, Lat.] 1. To confirm; to establish. Machtavel well meant, though in ill-favoured instance, there is no deceiving to the force of nature, nor to the bravery of words, except it be cor-raborate by custom. Bacon.
2. To strengthen; to make strong. To force imagination there be three ways; the authority whereon the belief is derived, means to quicken and corroborate the imagination, and means to trust to it. As to each of them
Bacon.
It was said that the prince himself had, by the sight of foreign courts, and observatons on the different natures of people, and rules of corrobation, much excited and awaked his spirits, and corrobated his judgment. Wotton.
As any limb well and duly exercised grows stronger, the nerves of the body are corroborated thereby. Watts.

CORROBORATION, n.s. [from corroborate.] The act of strengthening or confirming; by confirmation some additional security; addition of strength. The lady herself procured a bullet, for the better corroboration of the marriage. Thomson's Henry VIII.

CORROBORATIVE, adj. [from corroborate.] Having the power of increasing strength.
In the care of an, with a moist inte-eries, as the heart is weakened by too much humidity, the corroboration of an asthmatic facility: and the ulcer also required to be dried. Walsin's Surgery.

To CORRODE. v. a. [corrodo, Lat.] To eat away by degrees, as a menstruum; to prey upon; to consume; to wear away gradually.
Bacon.
Since no living rice with vice, and may corrode
The bad with bad, a spider with a toad;
For so ill thrauls ant them, but they tame ill,
And make her do much good against her will.
Dane.
We know that aquafortis corroding copper, it is which that gives the colour to verdigrise, is wont to reduce it to a green-blue solution.
Boyle on colours.

The nature of mankind, left to itself, would soon have fallen into dissolution, without the incessant and corroding invasions of so long a time.
Hale's Origins of Mankind.

Hambled the Persian's part,
And steeply Alps, the mounds that nature cast;
And with corroding juices, as he went,
A passage through the living rock he rent.
Dryden's Journal.

Fishés, which neither chew their meat, nor griind it in their stomachs, do by a dissolute liquor there provided, corrode and reduce it into a chymus.
Bayle on the Creation.

The blood turning acrimonious, corrodes the vessels, producing almost all the diseases of the inflammable kind. Aubin.
Should jealousy its venom once diffuse,
Corroding every thought, and blasting all
Love's paradise.
Thomas's Spring.

CORRODENT, adj. [from corrode.] Having the power of corroding or wasting any thing away.

CORRODIBILITY, n.s. [from corrodible.] The quality of being corrotable; possibility to be consumed by a menstruum.
CORRODIBLE, adj. [from corrode.] Possibility to be consumed or corroded.
Metals, although corrovable by waters, yet will not suffer a liquation from the powerfulllest heat

COR'ROYD. n.s. [from corrode, Lat.] A defalcation from an allowance or salary,
C O R

superfluous flesh did not.
Amendment really still at hand did wait,
To pluck it out with pincers in a hot
To forfeit, to the use of others.

3. Vitiates; tainted with wickedness; without integrity.
Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. Ephesians, iv. 29.

C O R R U P T I O N.

All those four kinds of corruption are very common in their language; for which reasons the Greek tongue is become much debased.

Brewed on Languages

7. [In law.] An infection growing to a man attainted of felony, or treason, and to his issue; for as he loseth all to the prince, or other lord of the fee, so his issue cannot be heir to him, or to any other ancestor, of whom they might have claimed by him; and if he were noble, or a gentleman, he and his children are made ignoble and ungentle, in respect of the father.

Corru
e.

C O R R U P T I V E.

Having the quality of tainting or vitiating.
Carrying a settled habitude into the corruption of old.
Shakest.

Brown's Yale. Err.

It should be enticed with an acid ferment, or some corruption of meat, and prepared of the chyle.
Shakest.

Ray on the Creation.

The borders with corruptions nay be crown'd.
Dreyden.

C O R R U P T I V E L Y.

1. With corruption; with taint; with vice; without integrity.
O that estates, debts, and offices, Were not deriv'd corruption! that clear honour Were purchase'd by the merit of the wearer.
Shakest.

We have dealt very corruptibly against thee and have not kept the commandments.
Nehemiah, i. 7.

2. Vitiates; improperly; contrary to purity.
We have corrupted contracted most names, both of men and places.
Cudmore's Remains.

C O R R U P T I N E S S.

The quality of corruption; putrescence; vice.
Shakest.

C O R S A I R.

The pirate; one who professes to scour the sea, and seize merchants.
Shakest.

C O R S E.

For he was strong, and of so mighty force,
As ever wielded spear in warlike hand.
Shakest.

2. A dead body; a carcasse; a poetical word.
That from her body full of filth she
He left her hateful head, without remorse;
A stream of coal-black blood forth gushed from her crown.
Shakest.

Spencer.

Set down the corpse; or, by saint Paul,
I'll make a corpse of him that disobeys.
Shakest, Richard III.

What may this mean?
That thou, dead corpse, again in complete steel
Revisit'st thus the gymspace of the moon,
Making night hideous.
Shakest, Hamlet.

Here lay him down, my friends;
Full in my sight, that I may view at pleasure
The bloody corpse, and count those glorious wounds.
Adams.

C O R S E L E T.

A light armour for the forepart of the body.
Some shirts of mail, some coats of plate put on, Some doublets or else, some corset bright. Fairest.
They lash, they flay, they pass, they strive to bore
Their corsets, and their thinnest parts explore.
Dryden.

COS

But heroes, who o' ercome or die,
Have their hearts hang extremely high;
The visage of which, in general heat,
Against their very corsets beat.
Prior.

CORTICAL. adj. [cortex, bark, Lat.]
Barky; belonging to the outer part; belonging to the mind; outward.

Their last extremities form a little gland (all the little glands being united by the cortical part of the brain,) terminating in two little vessels.
Cheyne's Philosophical Principles.

C O R T I C A T E D.

[from coticoccus, Lat.]
Resembling the bark of a tree.
Shakest.

This animal is a kind of lizard, a quaked or deformed plant; that is, without wool, fur, or hair.
Brown.

C O R T I C O S E. adj. [from corticus, Lat.]
Corrupt.

Full of barks.
Diet.

C O R V E T T O.

The curvet.
You must draw the horse in his career with his mane, and turn, doing the corvette and leaping.
Pecham on Drawing.

C O R V U S C A N T. adj. [coruscate, Lat.] Glittering by flashes; flashing.

C O R U S CA T I O N.

n.s. [coruscation, Lat.]
Flash; quick vibration of light.

We see that lightnings and coruscations, which are near at hand, yield no sound.
Bocce Natural Hist.

We may learn that sulphureous stems ashore in the hollows of the earth, and ferment with minerals, and sometimes take fire with a sudden combustion and explosion, like the Philosopher's Staff.
Newton's Opticks.

How heat and moisture mingle in a mass,
Or belch in thunder, or in lightning blaze
Why visible coruscations strike the eye,
And bold tomahawks bluster in the sky.
Garth's Disenvirony.

C O R Y M B I A T E D.

adj. [corymbus, Lat.]
Garnished with branches of berries.
Diet.

C O R Y M B I F O R E S. adj. [from corymbus and fero, Lat.]
Bearing fruit or berries in bunches.

Corymbous plants are distinguished into such as have a radiate flower, as the sunflower; and such as have a clustered flower, as the hemp-agrimony, and woottree; to which are added these a-kiin heroes, such as scabious, teasel, thistle, and the like.
Quincy.

C O R Y M B U S.

n.s. [Lat.]

Amongst the ancient botanists, it was used to express the bunches of berries of vy; amongst modern botanists, it is used for a compound discon flower, whose seeds are not pappus, or do not fly away in down; such as the flowers of elstics, and common marigold.
Quincy.

C O S C I N O M A N Y.

n.s. [from xecinos a sieve, and parrisia divination.]
The art of divination by means of a sieve.
A very ancient practice, mentioned by Theocritus, and still used in some parts of England, to find out persons unknown.
Brooks's Commentaries.

C O S C E F A N T.

n.s. [In geometry.]
The secant of an arch, which is the complement of another to ninety degrees.
Harr.

C O S H E R I N G.

n.s. [Irish.]

Coshering was visitations and progresses made by
The lord and his followers among his tenants;
Wherein he did cate them, as the English proverb is out house and home.

Bocce.

C O S I E R.

n.s. [from cosier, old Fr. to sew.]
A botcher.

Do you make an alcohole of your lady's house,
That ye speake out your corset cassets, without any mitigation or remorse of course.
Shakest, Twelfth Night.
CoSINE. n.s. [in geometry.] The right sine of an arch, which is the complement of another to ninety degrees, Harris.

COSMÉTICK. adj. [cosmérz'-]. Having the power of improving beauty; beautifying.

COSMIC. adj. [cosmíc]. Better cosmetics than a severe temperance and purity, modesty and humility, a gracious temper and calmness of spirit; no true beauty without the signatures of these graces in the very countenance.

Cos'mically. adv. [from cosmical.] Relating to the world; with the sun; not acronyally.

Cos'mical. adj. [cos'mikl]. From the rising of this star, not cosmically, that is, with the sun, but helically, that is, its accession from the rays of the sun, the ancients computed their calendric days.

Cos'mology. n.s. [kosm- and -lógy]. The rise or birth of the world; the creation.

Cosmographer. n.s. [kos'm- and -grapher]. One who writes a description of the world; distinct from geographer, who describes the situation of particular countries.

Cosmographically. adv. [from cosmographical.] In a manner relating to the science by which the structure of the world is discovered and described.

Cosmographical. adj. [from cosmographical.] The science of the general system or affections of the world; distinct from geography, which delivers the situation and boundaries of particular countries.

Cosmogon. n.s. [kosm'g- and -on]. The science of the general system or affections of the world; distinct from geography, which delivers the situation and boundaries of particular countries.

Cosmogog. n.s. [kos-m- and -og-]. A citizen of the world; one who is at home in every place.

Cos'set. n.s. A lamb brought up without the dam.

Cos't. n.s. [co'ast]. Slight and unprofitable, Spen.

Cost. n.s. [kost, Dut.]. As this word is found in the remotest Teutonic dialects, even of the Islandick, it is not probably derived to us from the Latin costus; though it is not unlikely that the French coester comes from the Latin costus.

1. The price of any thing.

2. Sumptuousness; luxury.

Cost of prince in unworthy shoulders. Shak.

Cost let foreign princes vainly boast.

The whole effect of pride and cost. Of cost and value.

For all his cost, he did him nothing but the pay. Wat.

3. Charge; expense.

While he found his daughter maintained without her cost, he was content to be deved to any noise of infamy.

I shall never hold that man my friend, whose tongue shall be my cost. To rumour home retelmed Mortimer. Shak. IV. IV.

Have we eaten at all the king's cost? or hath he given us any? 2 SamueL xxiv. 12.

And wilt thou, 0 cruel heap!

Put poor nature to such care? O! ye who undo our common mother.

To be at charge of such another.

Crashaw.

It is strange to see any ecclesiastical pite, not by ecclesiastical cost and influence, arising above regard; especially in an age in which men's mouths are open against the church, but their hands shut towards it.

He whose body is best, and pleasure most, shall win his supper at our common cost. Dryden's Fables.

Fourteen thousand pounds are paid by Wood for the purchase of his patent; what were other visible costs, I know not; what his latest, is, varnished in conjecture.

Sufft.

4. Loss; fine; detriment.

What they had fondly wished, proved afterwards to their cost over true.

Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.

To Cost. r. v. pret. cost; participle cost. [coster, Fr.] To be brought for; to be had at a price.

The danger and poison are always in readiness; but to bring the action to extremity, and then recover all, will require the art of a writer, and cost him many an outlay. Dryden.

Costa', n.s. [costa, Lat. a rib.] Belonging to the ribs.

Hereby are excluded all cetaceous and cartilaginous fishes; many pestilential, whose ribs are embonpointed, and many costal, which have their ribs embonpointed and embossed.

Costard.

Costard. n.s. [from coster, a head.]

1. A head.

Take him over the costard with the belt of thy sword. Shakes. Richard III.

2. An apple round and bulky like the head.

Many country vixens are driven to shifts; and if our greedy patrons hold us to such conditions, they will make us turn costard mongers, genoers, or sell ale.

Burton in Melancholy.

COSTIV. adj. [constitutus, Lat. constituir, Fr.]

1. Bound in the body; having the excre- tion obstructed.

When the passage of the gall becomes obstrued the body grows ever, and the excrements of the belly incontinently follow.

While faster than his costard brain indits, Philo's quick hand in flowing letters writes; his case appears to me like honest Tugue's, when he was run away with by his legs. Prior.

2. Close; impermeable.

Chy in dry seasons is costive, hardening with the sun and wind, till unbroken by industry, so as to admit of the sir and heavily influences. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Costiveness. n.s. [from costive.]

The state of the body in which excretion is obstructed.

Concerns dispersive malady natriated forms out of the guts and into the parts of the body, occasioning head-aches, fevers, loss of appetite, and disturbance of connexion. Harvey.

COt.

Costiveness has ill effects, and is hard to be dealt with by physic; purging medicines rather increase than removing the evil. Locke on Edn.

Costliness. n.s. [from costly.] Sumptuousness; expensiveness.

Though not with costliness, yet with clearness of thought, when you could have cost them nothing; 2 SamueL xxx. 42.

And, to be great indeed, f ret.

Costly. adj. [from cost.]

Sumptuous; expensive; of a high price.

Costly this thing they shamed the price can buy, But not express in fancy; rich, not gaudy.

For the apparel proclaims the man. Shak. Ham. Leave for a while the costly country-vest.

Costly, adv. [from costly.]

Costly; not acronyally.

Costly habit as thy nurse can buy, But not express in fancy; rich, not gaudy.

The costume the pleasures of the great. Dryden.

The chapels of St. Lawrence will be perhaps the most costly piece of work on the earth, when completed. Addison.

It is here speaking of Paradise, which he represents as a most charming and delightful place, abounding with things not only useful and convenient, but even the most rare and valuable, the most costly and desirable. Mortimer's Nat. Hist.

Costmary. n.s. [costus, Lat.] An herb.

Costrel. n.s. [supposed to be derived from coster.] A bottle.

Cot.

At the end of the names of places.

Cot.

Cot. a cottage.

Cot. n.s. [Cot.s, Sax. cot, Welsh.] A small house; a cottage; a hut; a mean habitation.

What that usage meant, Which in her eat the daily practice. Dryn. Q.

Bredes. Besides, his cot, his forks, and bounds of land, are now on sale: and at our sheep cot now, By permission of his absentee, they call it Bredes. That you will feed on. Shak. As you like it.

Theekin made himself stools for all manner of beasts, and used to feed. 2 Chron. xxv. 20.

A steady temple shoots within the skies; The crickets of their cot in columns rise; The pavement, pitch'd marble they behold; The gates with sculpture gran'd the seats and tiles of gold. Dryd. Bæcsis and Philemon.

As soon encountred on th' sea's top, it's said. At poor Philemon's cot, in the wild breast of a ragon.

Cot. n.s. An abridgment of cotquean.

Cotquean. n.s. [in geometry.] The tangent of an arch which is the complement of another to ninety degrees.

Harris.

To Cot. r.a. This word, which I have found only in Chapman, seems to signify the same as To leave behind, To overpass.

Wrote his word had prov'd with deeds, Had more ground been allowed the race, and cost for his steeds. Chapman's Hinds.

Cotemporary. adj. [con and tempus, Lat.] Living at the same time; coetaneous; contemporaneous.

What would not to a rational man, contemporaneous with the first vouch, have appeared probable, is now used as certain, because several have been from him, said it one after another. Locke.

Costland. n.s. [from land and land.] Land appurtenant to a cottage.

Cotquean. n.s. [probably from coquin, Fr.] A man who busies himself with women's affairs.

Look to the loake meats, good Angelica; Space not for easter. — Go, go, you cotquean, go.

Get your to bed. Shakes. Romeo and Juliet.

A statesman should be as ridiculous a creature as a coster; each of the states should keep within its bounds. Addison.
COTTAGE. n. s. [from cottage.] 1. One who lives in a hut or cottage. Let us from our farms call forth our cotton-towners. Swift. The most ignorant Irish cottager will not sell his cow for a great. Swift's Address to Parliament. 2. A cottage, in law, is one that lives on the common, without paying rent, and without any land of his own. Had the husbandman and plowman be as their workfolks and labourers; or else more cottagers, which are thus housed beggars. Bacon's Nat. VII. 3. In geometry, or number of inhabitants, of a condition between gentlemans and cottagers. Bacon's Hist. II. COTTIER. n. s. [from cottage.] One who inhabits a cott. DICT. COTTON. n. s. [named, according to Skinner, from the down that adheres to the mala cotonea, or quince, called by the Italians cotogni; whence cotone, It. cotton, Fr.] 1. The down of the cotton-tree. The pin ought to be as thick as a rolling-pin, and covered with cotton, that its hardness may not be offensive. Wiseman. 2. Cloth made of cotton. COTTON. n. s. A plant. The species are, 1. Shrubby cotton. 2. The most excellent American cotton, with a greenish seed. 3. A native shrub of cotton, of the island of Providence. 4. The tree cotton. 5. Tree cotton, with a yellow flower. The first sort is cultivated plentifully in Canaria, Limnos, Cyprus, Malta, Sicily, and at Naples; as also between Jerusalem and Damascus, from whence the cotton is brought annually into these northern parts of Europe. The cotton is the wood which incloses or wraps up the seeds, and is contained in a kind of brown husk, or seed-vessel, growing upon this shrub. It is from this sort that the vast quantities of cotton are taken, which furnish our parts of the world. The second and third sorts are annual; these are cultivated in the West Indies in great plenty. But the fourth and fifth sorts grow in Egypt: these abide many years, and often arrive to be trees of great height. Miller. TO COTTON. v. n. 1. To rise with a knap. 2. To cement; to unite with: a cant word. A quarrel will end in one of you being turned off, in which case it will not be easy to cotton with another. Swift. TO COUCH. v. n. [couch, Fr.] 1. To lie down on a place of repose. If I court more women, you'll couch with more men. Shakesp. DRYDEN'S ENEID. 2. To lie down on the knuckles, as a beast to rest. Trees bent their heads to hear him sing his song, Fierce tyrers couch'd around, and told'd their fawning tongues. These, when dead Comes like a rushing lion, couch like spaniels, With folding tongues, and tremble at the clock. 3. To lie down in secret, or in ambush. We'll couch i' th' castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies. Skalk, Merry title i' th' Water. The cast of Angels couch'd in a farrow, and was pass'd over for dead, until a horse was brought for his escape. 4. To lie in a bed, or stratum. Bless'd of the Lord be his land, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath. Deut. xxxii. 13. 5. To stoop, or bend down; to lower in fear, in pain, in respect. These couchings, and these lowly curstesies, Might stir the blood of ordinary men. Shakesp. Julius Caesar. Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens. Genesis, xlix. 14. TO COUCH. n. a. 1. To repose; to lay on a place of repose. Where unbos'ted youth, with unstali'd brain, Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign. Shakesp. 2. To lay down any thing in a bed, or stratum. If the weather be warm, we immediately couch mast about an inch thick; but if a hotter season require it, we spread it on the floor much thinner. Sikes cider, the New Englander's Handbok. The sea and the land make one globe; and the waters couch themselves, as close as may be, to the centre of this globe, in a spherical convexity. Burnet's Theory of the Earth. 3. To bed; to hide in another body. It is at this day in use at Gaza, to couch pestilens, or vessel of earth, in their walls, to gather the wind from the top, and to pass it down in spouts into rooms. Bacon's Nat. Hist. 4. To involve; to include; to comprise. But who will call these noble, who deceive, By meaner acts, the dignity of their race? Whose only title to their fathers' name Is couch'd in the dead letters of their name? Dryden's Judas. That great argument for a future state, which St. Paul hath couched in the words I have read to you. St. Peter's Sermon. 5. To include secretly; to hide: with under. The foundation of all parables, is some analogy or similitude between the topical or allusive part of the parable, and the thing couched under it, and intended by it. South. There is all this, and more, that lies naturally couched under repentance. Literature. The true notion of the institution being lost, the tradition of the deluge, which was couched under it, was thereupon killed, and lost. Woodward's Natural History. 6. To lay close to another. And over all with brazen scales was array'd, Like plated coat of steel, so couched near. That thought might reach. That thought might reach. Spencer. 7. To fix the spear in the rest, in the posture of attack. The knight 'gan fairly couch his steady spear, And fiercely ran at him with rigorous might. Spenser. Before each van Prick'd forth the airy knights, and couch'd their spears, Till thickest legions close. Milton's Par. Lost. COVE. n. s. The former wave in air His flaming sword, &c. couch'd with his spear. Dryden's Aeneid. 8. To depress the condensations crystalline humour or film that overspreads the pupil of the eye. This is improperly called couching the eye, for couching the cataract: with equal impropriety they sometimes speak of couching the patient. Some artist, whose nice hand couch the cataracts, and clears his sight, And all at once a flask of glorious light Comes rushing on his eyes. Dryden. Whether the cataract be wasted by being separated from its cavity, or never knew positively, by dissecting one that had been couch'd, Sharp. COUCH. n. s. [from the verb.] 1. A seat of repose, on which it is common to lie down dressed. So Satan fell; and straight a fiery globe Of angels on full sail of wing flew high, Who on their flaming wings receiv'd him soft From his uneasy station, and upon As on a floating coach, through the light air. Milton's Paradise Regained. To loll on couches rich in cushion seats, And lay their guilty limbs in Tyrian beds. Dryden's Virgil's Georgics. O ye immortal power, that guard the just, Watch round his couch, and soften his repose! Addison's Cato. 2. A bed; a place of repose. Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damask incest. Shakep. Hamilt. Dire was the tossing, deep the groans; despair Tended the sick, bustress from couch to couch. Milton's Par. Lost. This gentle knight, inspir'd by jolly May, Forsook his rocky couch in early day. Dryd. End. 3. A layer, or stratum. This heap is called by matsters a couch, or bed, of raw mait. Mortimer's Husbandry. COUCHANT. adj. [couchant, Fr.] Lying down; squattting. If a lion were the count of Judah, yet were it not probably a lion rampant, but rather couchant or dormant. Brown. As a tiger, who by chance hath spied, In some purdun, two gentle fawns at play, Straight couches close; then rising, changes oft his couch and watch. Byron's Par. Lost. COUCHEE. n. s. [Fr.] Bedtime; the time of visiting late at night. None of her sylvan subjects made her count; Leaves and couches pass'd without her resort. Dryd. COUCHER. n. s. [from couch.] He that couches or depresses cataracts. COUCHEFELLOW. n. s. [couch and fellow.] Bedfellow; companion. I have granted upon my good friends for three reprieves for you, and your couchefellows, Nim; or else you had looked through the grate like a goose of baboon's. Shakep. COUCHGRASS. n. s. A weed. The couchgrass, for the first year, insensibly robs most plants in sandy grounds a apt to them. Mortimer's Husbandry. COVE. n. s. 1. A small creek or bay. 2. A shelter; a cover. COVENANT. n. s. [convenant, Fr. convenement, Lat.] 1. A contract; a stipulation. He makes a covenant never to destroy The earth again by flood; nor let the sea Surpass his bounds. Milton's Par. Lost. The English make the ocean their abode, Whose ready sails with every wind can fly, And make a cov'nant with th' inconstant sky. Water.
COV

Sone men live as if they had made a covenant with hell; let divines, fathers, friends, say what they will, they stop their ears against them.

2. An agreement on certain terms; a compact.
A covenant is a mutual compact, as we now consider it; the law is a covenant consisting of clauses, in G 4's part, made over to man; and of conditions, on man's part, required by God.

3. To write a containing the terms of an agreement.
I shall but lend my diamond till your return; let there be covenants drawn between us.

To Coven, n. s. [from covenar.] A party to a covenant; a stipulator; a bargainer.
Both of them were respective titles of their admission into the several covenants, and the covenants become thereby entitled to the respective privileges.

Covenanter, n. s. [from covenant.] One who takes a covenant. A word introduced in the civil wars.
The covenants shall have no more assurance of mutual assistance each from other, after the taking of the covenant, than they had before.

COVENOUS, adj. [from covin.] Fraudulent; collusive; trickish.
I wish some means devised for the restraint of these inordinate and covetous leases of lands, held in chief, for hundreds or thousands of years.

To COVER, v. a. [cover.] To overspread any thing with something else.
The pastures are clothed with flocks, the valleys also are covered over with corn. Psal. Ixxiv. 13.

Over sea'd, sea.
Sea without shore.
The flaming mount appear'd
In Dathan cover'd with a cloud. Milton.

2. To conceal under something hid over.
Nor were their outward only with the skins
Of beasts, but inward nakedness, much more
Opulence, with their right of righteousness.
Array'd, cover'd from his father's sight. Milton.

COVER, v. i. Cover me, ye people!
Ye cedars with innumerable branches.
Hide me, that I may never see them more. Milton.

COV

In life's cool vale let my low scene be haid,
Cover me, gods, with Tuilpe's thickest shade.

Or lead me to some solitary place,
Cover my retreat from human race.

Dryden's Virgil.

3. To hide by superficial appearances.
4. To overwhelm; to bury.

5. To conceal from notice or punishment.
Charity shall cover the multitude of sins.

May's cover.

6. To shelter; to protect.
His calm and blameless life
Does with substantial blessedness abound,
And the soft wings of peace cover him round.

Cowley.

7. To inoculate; to brood on.
Natural historians observe, that only the male
Birds have voices; that their songs begin a little Before breeding time, and end a little after; that Whilst the hen is covering her eggs, the male
Generally takes his stand upon a neighbouring Booth within her hearing, and by that Means assures her with his songs during the whole
Time of her sitting.

Addison's Spectator.

8. To copulate with a female.

9. To wear the hat, or garment of the head,
As a mark of superiority or independence.
That king had conferred the honour of grandeur
Upon him, which was of no other advantage or significance to him, than to be covered in the presence
Of that king.

Dryden.

COVER, n. s. [from cover.] Any thing that is laid over another.
The secular tests are but a general cover, not shaped
According to the parts; the skin is shaped according to the parts.

The fountains could be strengthened no other way than by making a strong cover or arch over them.

Orestes' bulky rage,
Unsatisfied with margins closely writ,
Foamo's o'er the covers, and not finished yet.

Dryden's Journal.

1. A conceninent; a screen; a veil; a super Appearance, under which something is hidden.
The truth and reason of things may be artifically and effectually concealed, under the cover,
Either of a real fact or of a supposed one. L. Tac.

As the spleen has great inconveniences, so the presence of it is a handsome cover for imperfections.

Clifford on the Spleen.

2. Shelter; defence from weather.
In the mean time, by being compelled to lodge in the field, which grew now to be very cold,
Whilst his army was under cover, they might be forced to retire.

Clarendon.

COVER-SHAME. n. s. [cover and shame.]
Some appearance used to conceal infamy.

Does he put on holy garments for a cover-shame of his deserts?

Dryden's Spanish Priest.

COVERING, n. s. [from cover.] Dress; vesture; any thing spread over another.
The women took and spread a covering over the well's mouth.

2 Sam. xvii. 19.

Bring some covering for this naked soul.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

Through her flesh methinks is seen
The brightest soul that dwells within;
Our eyes the subtle covering pass,
And see the lily through its glass.

Cowley.

COV

Then from the floor he rais'd a royal bed,
With coverings of Sidonian purple spread.

Dryden's Fable.

Sometimes Providence casts things so, that truth
And interest lie the same way; and when it is Wrapt up in this covering, men can be content to fall.
South.

COVERLET, n. s. [coverlet, Fr.] The outermost of the bedclothes; that under Which all the rest are concealed.
Lay her in lilies and in violets,
And alken curtains over her display.

South.

COVER, n. s. [from cover; cover't, Fr.] A shelter; a defence.
Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab:
Be thou a cover to them from the face of the spoilers.

Isaiah, xvi. 3.

There shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the day-time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and rain.

Isaiah, iv. 6.

They are by sudden alarm, or watch-word, to be called to their military motions, under sky
Or covert, according to the season, as was the Roman want.

Milton on Education.

It was the hour of night, when thus the Son
Command'd him, and each other covertly,
And every covert, and the infamous grove,
The scene of his past triumphs and his love.

Shakspear. Romeo and Juliet.

I shall be your faithful guide.
Through this gloomy covert wide.

Milton.

The scenes of his past triumphs and his loves.

Denham.

Deep into some thick covert would I run,
Impe measurable to the stars or sun.

Dryden's State of Innocence.

The deer is lost; I've track'd her to her covert;
Be sure ye mind the word; and when I give it,
Bash in at once, and seize upon your prey.

Addison's Essay.

COVERT, adj. [cover't, Fr.]

1. Sheltered; not open; not exposed.
You are of either side the green to plant a covert allay, upon carpenter's work, about twelve
Foot in height, by which you may go in shade into the garden.

Bacon.

The fox is a beast also very prejudicial to the Husbandman, especially in places that are near Forest-woods and covert places.

Together let us beat this ample field,
Try what the open, what the covert yield.

J. S. Pope. Essay.

2. Secret; hidden; private; insidious.
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclosed
And open perils safest answered.

Shakspear. Julius Caesar.

By what best way,
Whether of open war, or covert guile,
We now debate.

Dryden's Paradise Lost.

COVERT. adj. [cover't, Fr.]
The state of a woman sheltered by marriage under
Her husband; as covert baron, femme covert.

Instead of her being under covert baron, to be Under covert feuit myself to have my body dis
Abled, and my head fortify'd.

Dryden's Spanish Priest.
COV

COVENTRY. n. s. [from covert and way.] It is, in fortification, a space of ground level with the field, on the edge of the ditch, three or four fathoms broad, ranging quite round the half moons, or other works toward the town. One of the sides of a siege is to make a judgment on the covert-way, because usually the besieged pallisade it along the middle, and undermining it on all sides. It is sometimes called the corridor, and sometimes the counter-scarp, because it is on the edge of the escarp.

Cov'ERTLY. adv. [from covert.] Secretly; in private with secrecy.

Yet still Aragon (so his foe was lighted)
Lay lurking, covertly him to surprise.

How can't thou cross this marriage?
—Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly, that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

Shakesp. Much ado about Nothing.

Amongst the poets, Persius covertly strikes at Nero; some of whose verses he recites with scorn and indignation.

Dryden.

COVERTNESS. n. s. [from covert.] Secrecy; privacy.

COVET. n. s. [from covert.]

1. Shelter; defense; not exposure.

It may be it is rather the shade, or other covert, that they take likening in, than the virtue of the highway. Beza. Nat. Hist.

He saw their tale, that sought

This thing so to force, and so severe,
To suffer any thing to thrive beyond the height of a scrub, in those islands, unless protected by walls, or other like coverture.

If we offended.

2. [in law.] The estate and condition of a married woman, who, by the laws of our realm, is in potentate viri, and therefore disabled to contract with any, to the prejudice of herself or her husband, without his allowance or confirmation. Cowell.

The infancy of king Edward VI. and the coverture of queen Mary, did, in fact disable them to accomplish the conquest of Ireland.

Davies on Ireland.

To COVET. v. a. [conventa, Fr.]

1. To desire instrumentally; to desire beyond due bounds.

If 'tis a sit to covert honour,
I am the most-edified man alive. Shaks. Hen. V. I am yet Unknown to woman; never was forewarned;

Schemy's heart that mine own was.
At no time broke my faith. Shakesp. Macbeth.

O father! can it be, that souls sublime
Return to visit our terrestrial clime?
And that the generous mind, released by death,
Can covert lazy limbs and mortal breath?

Dryden's Eneid.

2. To desire earnestly.

All things coventing as much as may be to be like unto God in being ever; that which cannot be contained personally, doth seek to continue itself another way, by aspiring and propagation.

Hobbes.

But covert earnestly the best gifts. 1 Cor. xii. 31.

To COVET. v. a. To have a strong desire.

The love of money is the root of all evil, which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith.

Hobbes.

But covert earnestly the best gifts. 1 Cor. xii. 31.

Cov'ETABLE. adj. [from covert.] To be wished for; to be coveted.

Diet.

Cov'ETARY, n. s. [conventile, Fr.] Avarice; covetousness of money. Not in use.

Most wretched wight, whom nothing but suffering,
Whose greasy lust did back in greatest store;
Whose need had end, but no end coveting. Fairy Q.
COU

When ship-money was transacted at the council-board, they looked upon it as a work of that power they were obliged to trust. Clarendon.

And Pallas, if she broke the laws, Must yield her for the stronger cause; A shade can be so much admired For wisdom at Jove's council-board. Swift.

COUNSEL. n.s. [consilium, Lat.]
1. Advice; direction.
There is as much difference between the counsel of a friend, and that of a man given himself, as there is between the counsel of a friend and of a flatterer. Bacon.
The best counsel he could give him was, to go to his parliament. Becaue me not, Whereon I live, you gently look, you said, Thy counsel in this is a duchess. Milton.
2. Consultation; interchange of opinions.
I hold as little counsel with weak fears, As you, or any Scot that lives. Shak, Hen. IV.
3. Deliberation; examination of consequences.
The will confess, therefore, in the working of that first cause, that counsel is used, reason followed, and a way observed. Hooker.
4. Prudence; art; mechanism.
O how counsel is the wisdom of old men, and understanding and counsel to men of honour.
5. Secrecy; the secrets entrusted in counsel.
The players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.
6. Scheme; purpose; design. Not in use. The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations. Psalms.xxxiii. 11.
6. God, from whom all holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works do proceed.
Counsellor.
7. Those that plead a cause; the counsellors. This seems only an abbreviation usual in conversation.
Your hand, a covenant; we will have these things set down by lawful counsel. Shak, Cymbeline.
For the advocates and counsel that plead, patience and gravity of learning is an essential part of justice; and an over-speaking judge is no well-tempered tribunal. Bacon.
What says any counsel learned in the law? Pope.
To COUNSEL, v. a. [consilii, Lat.]
1. To give advice or counsel to any person.
But say, Lucetta, now we are alone, Would you then counsel me to fall in love? Shak, The Spanish Tragedy.
2. To advise any thing.
The less he had been our shame, The less his counsel'd crime which brands the Dyerden's Fables.
COUNSELLABLE. adj. [from counsel].
Willing to receive and follow the advice or opinions of others.
Very few men of great parts were more counsellable than he; so that he would seldom be in danger of advice or errors, if he would communicate his own thoughts to Disquisition. Clarendon.
COUNSELLOR, n.s. [from counsel. This should rather be written counsellor.]
1. One that gives advice.
His mother was his counsellor to do wickedly. 2 Chron. xxiii. 3.
She would be a counsellor of good things, and a comfort in cares. Wisdom, viii. 9.
Death of thy soul! Those llenchekes of thine are counsellors to fear. Shakspeare, Macbeth.
2. Confidant; bosom friend.
In such green palaces the first kings reign'd, Steph in their shades, and angels entertain'd; With such old counsellors they did advise.
And by frequenting sacred groves grew wise. Waller.
3. One whose province is to deliberate and advise upon publick affairs.
You are a counsellor, and by that virtue no man dare accuse you. Shakspeare, Henry VIII.
Of counsellors there are two sorts: the first, counselari, as I may term them; such are the prince of Wales, and others of the king's sons: but the ordinary sort of counsellors are such as the king, out of a due consideration of their worth and abilities, and withal of their fidelity to his person and to his crown, calleth to be of council with him, in his ordinary government. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
4. One that is consulted in a case of law.
A counsellor bred in the knowledge of the municipal and statute laws, who honestly inform a just prince how far his prerogatives extend. Dryden's Juvenal, Dedications.
COUNCILLSHIP. n. s. [from counsellor.] The office or post of a privy counsellor.
Of the great offices and offices of the kingdom, the most part are such as cannot well be served from the counsellorship. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
To COUNCIL, v. a. [complet, Fr. computus, Lat.]
1. To number; to tell.
Here for, that great I can count every one, And view the Frenchmen. Shakspeare, Henry VI.
The vicious count their years; vitious, their acts.
For the preferments of the world, be that would reckon upon all the accidents that depend upon, may as well undertake to count the sands, or to sum up infinity. Dryden.
When men in sickness lingering lie, They count the tedious hours by months and years. Dryden.
3. To preserve a reckoning.
Some people in America count their years by the coming of certain birds amongst them at their certain seasons, and leaving them at others.
Locke.
3. To reckon; to place to an account.
He believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for righteousness. Genesis, xv. 6.
Not barely the plowman's pains is to be counted into the bread we eat; the labour of those who broke the oaken staff must all be charged on the account of labour. Locke.
4. To esteem; to account; to reckon; to consider as having a certain character, whether good or evil.
When once he comprehended any thing above this, as the differences of time, affirmations, negations, and contradictions in speech, we then count it to have some use of natural reason. Hooker.
COUNT. n. s. [compte, Fr. computus, Lat.]
1. Number.
That we up to your palaces may mount, Of blessed saints for to increase the count. Spenser's Epiphanal.
2. Reckoning; number summing.
By my count, I was your mother much upon these years. Shak.
Since I saw you last, There is a change upon you. ——Well, I know not.
What counts hard fortune casts upon my face. Shakesp.
COUNT. n. s. [comptre, Fr. comes, Lat.]
A title of foreign nobility, supposed equivalent to an earl. Spenser's Ireland.
COUNTENANCE. n. s. [contenance, Fr.]
1. The form of the face; the system of the features.
2. Air; look.
A made countenance about her mouth, between simpering and smiling; her head, bowed somewhat down, seemed to languish with over-much idleness. Sidney.
Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see the blush. Nor change my countenance for this arrest: A heart unspotted is not easily damned. Shak, Henry VI.
So spake our sire, and by his countenance seem'd entering on studious thoughts abstruse. Milton, To whom, with countenance calm, and soul sedate, Thus Turnus.
Dyerden's Fables.
3. Calmness of look; composure of face.
She seem'd severe; nor was a troubled look, Or trembling hand, the usual present tool: Yet kept her countenance, when the lad removed Discus'd the heart unfortunately loud. Dyerden's Fables.
The two great maxims of any great man at court are, always to keep his countenance, and use to keep his word. Swift.
4. Confidence of mind; aspect of assurance; it is commonly used in these phrases, in countenance, and out of countenance.
The night beginning to persuade some retiring place, the gentleman, even out of countenance before he began his speech, invited me to judge that night with her father. Sidney.
We will not make your countenance to fail by the answer ye shall receive. Bacon's New Atlantis.
Their best friends were out of countenance, because they found that the imputations, which their enemies had laid upon them, were well grounded. Clarendon.
COU

Your examples will meet at every turn, and put an end to contention in every place: even in private corners it will soon lose confidence.

Sprunt's Sermons.

When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such his friends, by ready, gods,
With all your thunderbolts
Shakest. Julius Cæsar.

Shakest.

3. The table on which goods are viewed, and money told, in a shop.

A fine glossy mixt, that robes our counters every night; and then goes out, and spends it upon our cuckold-makers.

Dryden.

4. Counter of a Horse, is that part of a horse's fore-hand that lies between the shoulder and under the neck. Far. Diet.

Counter, ade. [counter, Fr. contre, Lat.]

Contrary; in opposition: to it is commonly used with the verb run, perhaps by a metaphor from the old tournaments.

Shall we erect two wools in God's, and make the will of his purpose and intention run counter to the will of his approbation?

Shakest. Titus.

Shakest. The merchant, and the gain of the kingdom, are so far from being always parallel, that frequently they run counter one to the other.

Shakest. Child on Tende.

He thinks it brave, at first setting out, to signalize himself in running counter to all the rules of virtue.

Shakest. Aristotle.

2. The wrong way; contrarily to the right course.

Now cheerfully on the false trail they err.

Shakest. Hamlet.

3. Contrary ways.

A man, whom I cannot deny, may oblige me to use persuasions to another, which, at the same time I am speaking, I may wish may not prevail on him: in this case it is plain, the will and the desire run counter.

Shakest. Locke.

4. The face, in opposition to the back.

Not in use.

Shakest. Sandy's Journal.

This word is often found in composition, and may be placed before either nouns or verbs used in a sense of opposition.

That design was no sooner known, but others of an opposite party were appointed to set a counter-education on foot.

Shakest. Clarendon.

To COUNTERACT, r. a. [counter and act.]

To hinder any thing from its effect by contrary agency.

In this case we can find no principle within him strong enough to counteract that principle, and to relieve him.

Shakest. Bacon.

To COUNTERBALANCE, r. a. [counter and balance.] To weigh against; to act against with an opposite weight.

There was so much air drawn out of the vessel, that the remaining air was not able to counterbalance the weight of the water.

Spurrier. Few of Adam's children are not born with some bias, which is the business of education either to make or unmake.

Shakest. COUNTERBALANCE. n. s. [from the verb.]

Opposite weight; equivalent power.

Shakest. But peaceful kings, o'er martial people set,
Each other's noise and counterbalance are.

Dryden's An. Morn.

Money is the counterbalance to all other things purchaseable by it, and, lying, as it were, in the opposite scale of commerce.

Locke.

To COUNTERBUFF. n. a. [from counter and buff.]

To impel in a direction opposite to the former impulse; to strike back.

The godly ship, betwixt the winds and tides Force back and forwards, in a circle rides;

Stuattl'd with the different blows; then shoots amain.

Till counterbuff'd she stops, and sleeps again.

Dryden.

COUNTERBUFF. n. s. [counter and buff.]

A blow in a contrary direction; a stroke that produces a recoil.

He at the second gave him such a counterbuff, that, because Phalantus was not to be driven from the saddle, the saddle with broken girths was driven from the horse.

Sidney.

COUNTERCASTER. n. s. [from counter, for a false piece of money, and caster.]

A word of contempt for an arithmetician; a book-keeper; a caster of accounts; a reckoner.

1. of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyzicus, must be led and cal'd
By debtor and creditor, this countercaster.

Shakest. Othello.

To COUNTERCHANGE, n. s. [counter and change.]

Exchange; reciprocation. She, like harmless lightning, throws her eye On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting Each object with a joy. The counterchange Is severely in all.

Shakest. Cynthia.

To COUNTERCHANGE. r. a. [counter and receive.

COUNTERCHARM. n. s. [counter and charm.]

That by which a charm is dissolved; that which has the power of destroying the effects of a charm.

Now Touch'd by countercharms they change again,

And seem majestic, and recall'd to the near.

Pope's Odyssey.

To COUNTERCHARM. r. a. [counter and charm.]

To destroy the effect of an enchantment. Like a spell it was to keep us invulnerable, and so countercharm all our crimes, that they should only be active to please, not hurt us.

Sir Trist. of Pity.

To COUNTERCHECK. r. a. [counter and check.]

To oppose; to stop with sudden opposition.

COUNTERCHECK. n. s. [from the verb.]

Stop; rebuke.

If again I said his heart was not well cut, he would say I lie; this is called the countercheck.

Shakest.

To COUNTERDRAW. r. a. [counter and draw.]

With painters, to copy a design or painting by means of a fine linen cloth, an oiled paper, or other transparent matter, whereby the original, appearing through, are traced with a pencil.

Chambers.

COUNTEREVIDENCE. n. s. [from counter and evidence.]

Testimony by which the deposition of some former witness is opposed.

Some itself detects its more palpable deceits by a counter-evidence, and the more ordinary impostors seldom outlive the first Glimpse.

We have little reason to question his testimony in the case, seeing it is backed by others of good credit; and all because there is no counter-evidence, nor any witness, that appears against it.

Burnet's Theory of the Earth.

To COUNTERFEIT. v. a. [contre-sauter, Fr.]

1. To copy with an intent to pass the copy for an original; to forge.

What art thou, that countefits the person of a king?

Shaks. Henry IV.

It came into this priest's fancy to cause this bad counterfeit and personate the second son of Edward IV., supposed to be murdered. Bacon's H. IV.

There have been some that could counterfeit the distance of voices, which is a secondary object of hearing, in such sort as, when they stayed fast by you, you would think the speech came from afar off in a fearful manner. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

So loudly a man, where couldst thou find Shadows to counterfeit that face? H.'s PI.

It happens, that not one single line or thought is contained in this imposture, although it appears that he who countefits me had heard or read the true one.

Surt.

2. To imitate; to copy; to resemble.

And sah, you mortal engines! whose rude threats
Th' immortal Virgin's dread clausures controvert,

Facet!

Shaks. Othello.

O Eve! evil hour thou didst give ear To that false warof, of whomsoever taught To counterfeit man's voice.

Milton's Par. Lost.

To counterfeit, is to put on the likeness and appearance of some real excellency; Behold not; who would not pretend to have them, if there never had been diamonds.

Tillotson.

COUNTERFEIT. adj. [from the verb.]

1. That which is made in imitation of another, with intent to pass for the original; forged; fictitious.

I learn

Now of my own experience, not by talk.

How countefits a coin they are, who friends Bear in visit-superscription; in prosperous days They stand, but to adverse withdraw their head.

Milton.

General observations drawn from particulars, are the jewel of knowledge, comprehending great store in a little room; but they are therefore to be made with the greater care and caution, lest, if we take counterfeit for it, and so false, our shame be the greater, when our stock comes to a severe scrutiny.

Locke.

2. Deceitful; hypocritical.

True friends appear less mor'd than countefits.

Roscuon.

COUNTERFEIT. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. One who personates another; an impostor.

I am no countefit; to die is to be a countefit; for here is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man.

This priest, being utterly unacquainted with the true person, according to whose pattern he should shape his counterfeit, yet could pretend it possible for him to instruct his player, either in gesture or fashion, or in fit answers to questions, come near to the marked part.

But trust me, child, I am much inclin'd to fear None countefits in this your Jupiter. Addison's Sat.

2. Something made in imitation of another, intended to pass for that which it resembles, a forgery.

My father was I know not where.

When I was stamp'd, Some coiner, with his tools, Made me a countefit; yet my mother seem'd The Dian of that time.

Shaks. Cymbeline.

COUNTERFEIT.

There would be no countefit for but for the sake of something real; though pretenders seem to be what they really are, yet they pretend to be something that really is.

COUNTERFEITEN. n.s. [from counterfeit.]

A forger; one who countefits in order to pass for originals.

Henry the Second altered the coin, which was corrupted by counterfeiters, to the great good of the commonwealth.

COUNTERFEITLY. adv. [from counterfeit.]

Falsely; fictitiously; with forgery.

Since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have any capital in the practice of the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeit.

Shaks. Comedies.

COUNTERFEITMENT. n. s. [counter and forger.

Ferment opposed to ferment. What unnatural motions and countefitments must a medley of intemperance produce in the body! When I behold a fashionable table, I fancy we innocuous dissimulators, looking in sunshine amidst the dishes.

Addison's Spectator.

COUNTERFEITNESS. n.s. [counterfeits, Fr.]

The act of countefitting; forgery; not in use.

And his man Reynold, with fine countefit, supports his credit and his countefit.

Hubbard's Tale.

Such is the face of falsehood, such the sight Of foul Lusus. A word is heard, a light Is laid away, and countefitness known.

Fairly Q.

COUNTERFORT. n. s. [from counter and fort.]

Couteforts, buttresses or spurs, are pillars serving to support walls or terraces subject to bargain.

Chambers.

COUNTERGAGE. n. s. [from counter and gage.]

In carpentry, by transferring the breadth of a mortise to the place where the tenon is to be, in order to make them fit each other.

Chambers.

COUNTERGUARD. n. s. [from counter and guard.]

A small rampart, with palisades and ditch, to cover some part of the body of the place.

Milit. Dict.

COUNTERLIGHT. n. s. [from counter and light.]

A window or light opposite to anything, which makes it appear to have a disadvantage.

Chambers.

To COUNTERMAN. v. a. [contremener, Fr.]

1. To order the contrary to what was ordered or intended before; to contradict, annul, or repeal a command.

In states notoriously irreligious, a secret and irresistible power countermaneirs their deepest projects, and unites their policies with destruction and a curse.

South.

2. To oppose; to contradict the orders of another.

For was it alter anything, is to lift up ourselves against God, and, as it were, to contemn and his.

Hooker.

3. To prohibit.

An action countermaneirs letting blood in cholerick bodies, because he extinguish the blood a bridge of the gall.

Harvey.

COUNTERMARK. n.s. [counter and mark.]

1. A second or third mark put on a bale of goods belonging to several merchants, that it may not be opened but in the presence of them all.

2. The mark of the goldsmiths company, to show the metal is standard, added to that of the assayer.

3. An artificial cavity made in the teeth of horses that have outgrown their natural mark, to disguise their age.

4. A mark, added to a medal a long time after it is struck, by which the curious know the several changes in value which it has undergone.

Chambers.

To COUNTERMARK. v. a. [counter and mark.]

A horse is said to be countermarked, when his corner teeth are artificially made hollow, a false mark being made in the hollow place, to imitate the eye of the bean, to conceal the horse's age.

Fors's Dict.

COUNCIL. n.s. [counter and mine.]

1. A well or hole sunk into the ground, from which a gallery or branch runs out under ground, to seek out the enemy's mine, and disorder it.

Milit. Dict.

After this they mined the walls, laid the powder, and rambled the mouths; but the citizens made a counterman, and thereto they poured such a plenty of water, that the wet powder could not be fired.

Shak's Ham."rord.

He thinking himself countenanced, knowing no counterman against contemn but terror, began to let nothing pass, which might be danger of a fault, without sharp punishment.

Sidney.

3. A stratagem by which any contrivance is defeated.

The matter being brought to a trial of skill, the counterman was only an act of self-preservation.

L'Estrange.

To COUNCIL. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To delve a passage into an enemy's mine, by which the powder may evaporate without mischief.

2. To counterfeit; to defeat by secret measures.

Thus infallibly it must be, if God do not miraculously countermane us, and do more for us than we can do against ourselves.

Decayeaf Pity.
COUNCIL

these countermonitory would — verse them, or occasion a later arrival. Collier.

COUNTERM'R. n.s. [contremur, Fr.] A wall built up behind another wall, to supply its place. The great shot flying through the breach, did beat down the houses; but the countermure, new built against the breach, standing upon a lower ground, it seldom touched. Knolles.

COUNTERNAT' RAL. adj. [counter and natural.] Contrary to nature.

COUNTERNOISE. m.s. [counter and noise.] A sound by which any other noise is overpowered. They endeavored, either by a constant succession of sensual delights, to charm and dull asleep, or else by a counteraction of revolting and rousing excesses to drown, the softer whispers of their conscience. Calamy’s Sermon.

COUNTEROPENING. n.s. [counter and opening.] An aperture or vent on the contrary side. A tent, plugging up the orifice, would make the matter recur to the part disposed to receive it, and mark the place for a counteropening. Sharp’s Surgery.

COUNTERPLACE. m.s. [counter and place.] Contrary measure; attempts in opposition to any scheme.

When the least counterparts are made to these resolutions, it will then be time enough for our enemies to strike. Hooker.

COUNTERPANE. n.s. [contrepoint, Fr.] A coverlet for a bed, or any thing else woven in squares. It is sometimes written, according to etymology, counterpoint.

In ivory coffers I have stuff’d my crowns;
In cyprus chests my arms counterpane. Shakesp.

COUNTERPART. n.s. [counter and part.] The correspondent part; the part which answers to another, as the two papers of a contract; the part which fits another, as the key of a cypher.

In some things the laws of Normandy agreed with the laws of England; so that they seem to be, as it were, copies or counterparts one of another. Hale’s Law of England.

An old fellow with a young wench, may pass for a counterpart of this fable. L’Estrange.

Oh counterpart.

Of our soft sex, who are you made our lords?
So bold, so great, so godlike are you forta.
How can you love so silly things as women? Dryd.

He is to consider the thought of his author, and his words, and to find out the counterpart to each in another language. Dryden.

In the discovery, the two different plots look like counterparts and copies of one another. Addison’s Spectator.

COUNTERPL'A. n.s. [from counter and plea.] In law, a replication; as, if a stranger to the action began desire to be admitted to say what he can for the safeguard of his estate, that which the demandant allege against this request is called a counterpla. Convell.

To COUNTERPL'OY. v. a. [counter and plot.] To oppose one machine by another; to counteract another.

COUNTERPLOT. n.s. [from the verb.] An artifice opposed to an artifice.

The wolf that had a plot upon the kid, was confounded by a counterplot of the kid’s upon the wolf; and such a counterplot as the wolf, with all his sagacity, was not able to smell out. L’Estrange.

COU

COU

COU

COU

COUNTERPOINT. n.s. A coverlet woven in squares, commonly spoken counterpart. See COUNCIL.

To COUNTERPOISE. v.a. [counter and poise.]

1. To counterbalance; to be equi-pomdenr to; to act against with equal weight.

Our spoils we have brought home

Do more than counterpoise a full third part

The charge of the war, by Shakespeare. Dryden.

The force and the distance of weights counter poising one another, ought to be reciprocals.

Dryden on the Soul.

2. To produce a contrary action by an equal weight.

The heaviness of bodies must be counterpoised by a plummet fastened about the pulley to the axis. Wotton.

3. To act with equal power against any person or cause.

So many freeholders of England will be able to beard to and to counterpoise the rest. Spenser on Ireland.

COUNTERPOISE. n.s. [from counter and poise.]

1. Equipoise; equivalence of weight; equal force in the opposite scale of the balance.

Take her by the hand,

And tell her she is thine; to whom I promise

A counterpoise, if not in thy estate,

A balance more right.

Shakesp. All’s well that ends well.

Fastening that to our exact balance, we put a mettalic counterpoise into the opposite scale. Boyle’s Spring of the Air.

2. The state of being placed in the opposite scale of the balance.

’Tis Eternal hung forth his golden scales,

Wherein all things created first he weighs.

The pendulous round earth, with balance’d air

In counterpoise. Milton’s Par. Lost.

3. Equipoise; equivalence of power.

The second nobles are a counterpoise to the higher nobility, that they grow not too potent. Bacon.

Their generals, by their credit in the army, were, with the magistrates and other civil officers,

a sort of counterpoise to the power of the people. Swift.

COUNTERPOISON. n.s. [counter and poison.]

Antidote; medicine by which the effects of poison are obviated.

Counterpoisons must be adapted to the cause; for example, in poison from sublimate corrosive, and arsenick. Arberuth.

COUNTERPRESSURE. n.s. [counter and pressure.]

Opposite force; power acting in contrary directions.

Does it not all mechanic heads confound,

That troops of atoms from all parts around,

Of equal number, and of equal force,

Should to this single point direct their course;

That so the counterpressure every way,

Of equal vigour, might their motions stay,

And by a steady pause the whole in quiet lay?

Blackmore.

COUNTERPROJECT. n.s. [counter and project.]

Correspondent part of a scheme.

A clear reason why they never sent any forces to Spain, and why the obligation not to enter into a treaty of peace with France, until that entire monarchy was yielded as a preliminary, was struck out of the counterproject by the Dutch.

Sedley.

To COUNTERPROVE. v.a. [counter and prove.]

To take off a design in black lead, or red chalk, by passing it through the rolling-press with another piece of paper, both being moistened with a sponge.

Chambers.

To COUNTERROLL. v.a. [counter and roll.]

This is now generally written as it is spoken, control. To preserve the power of detecting frauds by another account.

COUNTERROLLMENT. n.s. [from counter and roll.]

A counter account; controlment.

This manner of exercising the office, hath many testimonies, interchangeable warrants, and counterrollments, whereby each running through the hands, and resting in the power of many several persons, is sufficient to argue and convinc all manner of falsehood. Bacon.

COUNTERSCARP. n.s. [from counter and scarp.]

That side of the ditch which is next the camp, or properly the talus that supports the earth of the cover-way; although by this term is often understood the whole covert-way, with its parapet and glacis; and so it is to be understood when it is said the enemy lodged themselves on the countercarp, Harris.

To COUNTERSIGN v.a. [from counter and sign.]

To sign an order or patent of a superior, in quality of secretary, to render it more authentic. Thus charters are signed by the king, and countersigned by a secretary of state, or lord chancellor. Chambers.

COUNTERTE’NOR. n.s. [from counter and tenor.]

One of the mean or middle parts of music: so called, as it were, opposite to the tenor. Harris.

I am deaf: this deafness unqualifies me for all company, except a few friends with counteretmorse voices. Swift.

COUNTERTIDE. n.s. [counter and tide.]

Contrary tide; fluctuations of the water.

Such were our counteracts at land, and so Presaging of the fatal blow,

In your prodigious cbb and flow. Dryden.

COUNTERTIME. n.s. [counter and time; contretemps, Fr.]

1. The defence or resistance of a horse, that intercepts his cadence, and the measure of his manage. Farrier’s Dict.

2. Defence; opposition.

Let cheerfulness on happy fortune wait,
And give not thus the countertime to fate.

Dryden’s Anargyra.

COUNTERTURN. n.s. [counter and turn.]

The catastasis, called by the Romans status, the height and full growth of the play, we may call properly the countertime, which destroys that expectation, embroils the action in new difficulties, and leaves you far distant from that hope in which it found you. Dryden on Dramatick Poesy.

To COUNTERVAIL. v.a. [contra and valeo, Lat.] To be equivalent to; to have equal force or value; to act against with equal power.

In some men there may be found such qualities as are able to countervail those exceptions which might be taken against them, and such men’s authority is not likely to be shaken off. Hooper.

And therewithal he fiercely at him flew,
And with important outrage him assailed;
Who, soon prepar’d to field, his sword forth drew,
And him with equal valour countervail’d. Fairy Queen.

The outward streams, which descend, must be of so much force as to countervail all that weight

As the accounts of the king's court, the accounts of the county, and the accounts of the parish are all important, we shall examine them in detail.

COUNTY. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Opposition; a posture in which two persons front each other.

2. Contrast; a position in which two dissimilar things illustrate each other.

3. Countenance; a fanny and caprice; that effect of loving vice. Pope.

COUNTIES. n. s. [comitiss., Lat. countesse, Fr.] The lady of an earl or count.

COUNTING-HOUSE. n. s. [count and house.] The room appropriated by traders to their books and accounts.

COUNTY. n. s. [comitie, Fr. contrate, Lat., Low Lat., supposed to be contracted from contrata.] A tract of ground; a region, as distinguished from other regions. They are used to express concerning the description of those countries of which they would be informed. Spratt.

COUNTY, n. s. [comitie, Fr. contrate, Low Lat., supposed to be contracted from contrata.]
1. A tract of land; a region, as distinguished from other regions. They are used to express concerning the description of those countries of which they would be informed. Spratt.

2. The parts of a region distant from cities; rural parts.

Would I house a house of happiness lettre.
Nature alone should be the architect.

She'll build it more convenient than great,
And doubtless in the country chuse her seat.

Countress.

I see them hurry from country to town, and then from the town back again into the country. Spenser.

3. The place which any man inhabits, or in which he present resides.

Send out money to the country round.
Hang that talk of fear.

4. The place of one's birth; the native soil.

The king set on foot a restoration in the ornaments and advantages of the country. Swift.

O save my country, Heaven! shall you be my last.

Pope.

5. The inhabitants of any region.

All things, in a general voice,
Cried late upon him; all their prayers and love
Were set on Hereford.

Shakespeare, Henry IV.

COUNTRY. adj.
1. Rustic; rural; villatical.

Cannot a country wench know that, having received a shilling from one that owes her three, and a shilling also from another that owes her three, the remaining debits in each of her hands are equal?

I never meant any other, than that Mr. Trot should confine himself to country dances. Spectator.

He cannot come near a positive, clear idea of a positive infinite, than the country fellow had of the water which was yet to pass the channel of the river where he and Locke. Talk but with country people, or young people, and you shall find that the notions they apply this name to, are so odd, that nobody can imagine they were taught by a rational man. Locke.

A country gentleman, learning Latin in the university, succeeds to his mansion-house.

Locke.

The love mechanics of a country town do something to do who. Locke.

Come, we'll see to our country seat repaired.

The native home of innocence and love. Norris.

Of an interest opposite to that of courts; as, the country party.

2. Peculiar to a region or people.

She laughed the cruel tyrant to scorn, spake in her country language. Marcellus, v. 27.

Rude; ignorant; untaught.

We make a country man dumb, whom we will not allow to speak but by the rules of grammar.

Drayton's Dysnomy.

COUNTRYMAN, n. s. [from country and man.]
1. One born in the same country, or tract of ground.

See, who comes here?

My countryman; but yet I know him not.

Shakespeare, Macbeth.

Homer, great bard! so fate ordain'd, arose,

And, bold as were his countrymen in fight,

Smeltch's for actions from degrading prose,

And set their battles in eternal light.

Prior.

The British soldiers, act with greater vigour under the conduct of one whom they do not consider only as their leader, but as their countryman.

Addison on the War.

2. A rustic; one that inhabits the rural parts.

All that have business to the court, and all countrymen coming up to the city, leave their wives in the country.

Graunt.

3. A farmer; a husbandman.

A countryman's look in his corn.

Coun.'

A countryman.

A county, subdivision.

A countryman's look in his corn.

A countryman.

5. A male and his female.

So shall all the couples three.

Oh! alas! I lost a couple, that twist heaven and earth.

Might thus have stood, beguiling wonder, as an gracious couple do.

Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.

I have read of a feigned commonwealth, where the married couple are permitted, before they contract, to see one another naked. Boe. Neael Slone.
The careful couple join their tears,
And then invoke the gods with pious prayer.
Drayden.

All succeeding generations of men are the progeny of one primitive couple.
Heathcliff's Sermon.

TO COUPLE. [couple, Lat.]

1. To chain together.
Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds;
And couple Clove订阅 their deep-mouth'd Brach.
Shakespeare.

2. To join one to another.
What greater ills have the heavens in store,
To couple coming harms with sorrow past. Sidney
And couple with Syren's song, like Juno's war.
Still we were coupled and inseparable.
Shakespeare. As you like it.

Put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent together; it may be one. Erasmus, xxvi. 11.
They behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.
Pope.

3. To couple with the other; to join in wedlock.
I shall rejoice to see you so coupled, as may be fit both for your honour and your satisfaction.
Sidney.

I am just going to assist with the archbishop in degrading a person who couples all our beggars, by which I shall make one happy man.
Swift.

TO COUPLE. P. R. TO JOIN IN EMBRACES.
Water beasts, holding various sorts of beasts come from several parts to drink; and so being refreshed, fall to couple, and many times with several kinds of fishes.
Burns.

Then, with thy lusty crew,
Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men,
And coupled with them, and begot a race.
Milton's Paradise Regained.

That great variety of brutes in Africa, is by reason of the meeting together of brutes of several species at water, and the promiscuous coupleings of males and females of several species.
Hale's
couplet. [couplet.]
a greatly intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to search with much like a burning-glass.
Ten brace and more of greyhounds—stouty, fair,
And tall as staggs, ran loose, and coursed around his chair. All, at once
Relapsing quick, as quickly re-ascend
And mix, and churn, extinguishing, and renew
All other coursing in a noise of shot.
Thomson's Autumn.

COUSER. n.s. [from course; courier; Fr.]
1. A swift horse; a war horse; a word not used in prose.
He proudly prickles on his courser strong,
And to my charm he pricks with spurs of shame and wrong.
Then to his absent guest the king decreed
A pair of courser, born of heavy breed;
Who from their nostrils breath'd ethereal fire,
Whom Circe stole from her celestial sire.
Thy impatient courser pants in every vein,
And, pawing, seems to hate the distant plain;
Hills, vales, and floods appear already cross'd,
And, ere he know the steps are lost. Prent.
2. One who purses the sport of coursing hares.
A leash is a leathern thong, by which a falconer holds his hawk, or a courier leads his greyhound.

COURT. n.s. [court, Fr. coeur, Dut. curt, low Lat.]
1. The place where the prince resides: the palace,
Here you keep a hundred knights and squires,
Men so disorderly, so dashing bold,
That our court, infected with their manners,
Shews like a riotous inn; epicurism and lust
Make it a scene of sin, even in the presence of
Than a prate palace. Shakes. King Lear.
It shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for a king. Josh. xx. 13.
His exactness, that every man should have his due, was such, that you would never hear a court: the politeness with which this justice was administered, would convince you he never had lived out of one. Prior's Dedication.
A suppliant to your royal court I come. Pope's Odyssey.
2. The hall or chamber where justice is administered.
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the court?
Shakes. St. Paul being brought unto the highest court in Athens, to give an account of the doctrine he had preached concerning Jesus and the resurrection, took occasion to imprint on those magistrates a future state. Atterbury.
3. Open space before a house.
You must have, before you come to the front, three courts: a green court plain, with a wall about it; a second court of the same, but more
A great deal more, with little towers, or other embellishments, upon the wall, and a third court, open, with the front, not to be built but inclosed with a walled wall.
Bacon. Supposing it were the king's bedchamber, yet the most meanest man in the tragedy must come and Dispatch his business, rather than in the lobby or court yard (which is fit for him) for fear the stage should be cleared, and the scenes broken. Dryden.
4. A small opening inclosed with houses, and paved with broad stones, distinguished from a street.

COURT. n.s. [court and dressier; Fr.]
1. One that dresses the court, or persons of rank; a flatterer.
There are many ways of flattering; such arts of giving colours, appearances, and reconciliations, by this court-dressier, fancy.
Locke.
COURT-FAVOUR. n.s. Favours or benefits bestowed by princes.
We part with the blessings of both worlds: for pleasures, court-favours, and commissions; and at last, when we have sold ourselves to our lusts, we grow sick of our bargain. L'Estrange.
The hand or manner of writing used in records and judicial proceedings. He can make obligations, and write court-hand. Shakesp.

A lady conversant or employed in court. The lady informed, long confirmed, is as useful to them, as the appearing long in the same clothes or fashion is to a court-lady. Locke.

Elegant of manners; polite; well-bred; full of acts of respect. He had deserved worthy of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who have been suppiced and courted to the people. Shaks. Courteous.

Respectfully; civilly; complaisantly. He thought them to be gentlemen of much more worth than their habits betrayed, yet let them courteously pass. Wotton.

A woman of the town; a prostitute; a strumpet. In a brave night to cool acourte. Shaks. King Lear.

A woman of the town, spent his whole estate upon her. Addison.

Elegance of manners; civility; complaisance. Sir, you are very welcome to our house: It must appear in other ways than words, therefore I scant this breathing courtier. Shaks. Merchant of Venice.

Who have seen his estate, his hospitality, his courtiers to strangers. Peacham.

He, who was compassed of all the elements of affability and courtesy towards all kind of people, brought himself to a habit of neglect, and even of rudeness, towards the queen. Clarendon.

Is sooner found in lovely shades With flowers deckt, and top-dress'd hills, And courts of princes, where it first was man'd. Milton.

So gentle of condition was he known, That through the court his courtesy was known. Dryden's Fables.

An act of civility or respect. You spurn'd me such a day; another time You call'd me dog, and, for these courtiers, I'll lend you thus much virtue. Shaks. Merchant of Venice.

Repulse you there, while I to the hard return, and force their sounding courtier. Shaks. King Lear.

When I was last at Exeter, The mayor in courtesy should do the court. Shaks. Richard III.

Sound all the lofty instruments of war, And by that music let us all embrace; For bear's to earth some of us never shall A second time do such a courtesy. Esqu. Shaksp. Henry IV. Other states, assuredly, cannot be justly accused for not staying for the first blow; or for not accepting Polyphemus's courtesy, to be the last of those that shall be cajoled.

The reverence made by women. Some country girl, scarce to a cou'rety bred, Would I much rather than Cornelia wed; If, superficial, laughingly, proud, and vain, She brought her father's triumphs in her train. Dryden's Judgment.

The poor creature was as full of courtesy as if I had been her godmother: the truth on 'tis, I entreat you, to make her look something Christian-like. Congreve's Old Bachelor.

A tenure, not of right, but by the favour of others; as, to hold upon courtesy. The the petty traffickers, That court'sy to them, do them reverence. Shak.

To make a reverence in the manner of ladies. If I should meet her in my way, We hardly court'd you to each other. Prior.

One that frequents or attends the courts of princes. He hath been a courtier, he swears. —— If any man doubts that, let him put me to my paragon, I have had a trade; I have flatter'd a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with nine enemies; I have undone three petty rulers; I have had four courtiers, and like; I have had four retinues, and I have fought one. Shaksp. As you like it. You are a flattering boy; now, I see you'll be a courtier. Shaks. Alceste. Winder.

You know I am not courier, nor versed in state-affairs. Bacon.

The principal figure in a picture, is like a king among his courtiers, who ought to dim the lustre of his attendants. Dryden.

Two that courts or solicit the favour of another. What Made thee, all honour'd, honest Roman Brutus, With the arm's rest, courtesies of beauteous freemanship? To drench the capital? Shaks. Ant. and Cleop. There was not among all our princes a greater courtier of the people than Richard III.; not out of fear, but wisdom, Sedlacking.

See CURTAIN. Courtlieke. adj. [court-like.] Elegant; polite.

Our English tongue is, I will not say as sacred as the Hebrew, or as learned as the Greek, but as fluent as the Latin, as courteous as the Spanish, as courtly as the French, and as amorous as the Italian. Camden's Remains.

Elegance of manners; grace of mien; complaisance; civility.
COW

For when men by their wives are cow'd,
Their horns of course are understood.

Cow-herd. n. s. [cow, and hyena. Sax. a keeper.]
One whose occupation is to tend cows.

Cow-house. n. s. [cow and house.]
The house in which kine are kept.

You must house your milch-cows, that you give hay to, in your cow-house all night.

Cow-leech. n. s. [cow and leech.]
One who professes to cure distempered cows.

To Cow-leech. v. n.
To profess to cure cows.

Though there are many pretenders to the art of fasting, and cow-treading, yet many of them are very ignorant, especially in the country.

Cow-mer. n. s. [cow and weed.]
A species of chervil.

Cow-wheat. n. s. [cow and wheat.]
A plant.

Cómord. n. s. [coured, Fr. of uncertain derivation.]

1. A pothole; a wretch whose predominant passion is fear.

Pyrocles did such wonders, beyond belief, as was always meant to baffle courage, though he had been a coward.

Sidney.

There was a soldier that vaunted, before Julius Cæsar, of the hurts he had received in his face.

Cæsar, knowing him to be but a coward, told him, You were best take heed, next time you run away, how you look back.

Cæsar.

Some are brave one day, and cowards another, as great captains have often told me, from their own experience and observation.

Temple.

Cowardly.

n. s. [from coward.]
The character of a coward; meanness; a word not now in use.

A very valiant boy, and more a coward than a hare; his dishonesty appears in leaving his friend there in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Shakespeare.

To Cow'er. v. n. [corrier, Welsh; courber, Fr. or perhaps borrowed from the manner in which a cow sinks on her knees.]
To sink by bending the knees; to stoop; to shrink.

Let the tail be put over the man's head above water, then he cow'er down, and the bell be pressed down with him.

Cratère.

The splitting rocks cow'er'd in the skiing sands and would not dash with them their ragged sides.

Shakespeare.

At he spake, each bird and beast beheld, Approaching two and two; there cow'ering low.

With compassion, each bird stoop'd on its wing.

Milton.

Our dame sits cow'ring o'er a kitchen fire,
I draw fresh air, and nature's works admire.

Dryden.

Co-wish. adj. [from To cow, to ave.]
Timorous; fearful; mean; pusillanimous; cowardly. Not in use.

It is the coward terror of his spirit,
That darest not undertake: he'll not feel worse
Which tie him to an answer.

Shak. King Lear.

Cowkeeper. n. s. [cow and keeper.]
One whose business is to keep cows.

The terms cowkeeper and herdswoman are used by our ancestors; but there are no finer words in this Greek language.

Brooke.

Cowl. n. s. [cugle, Saxcom; cucullus, Lat.]
1. A monk's hood.

You may imagine that Francis Cronfield did scratch his head, when he had sweated inventively, to signify his name, saint Francis with his friezy cowl in a corridor.

Cowen.

What differ more, you cry, than crown and cowl?

I'll tell you, friend, a wise man and a fool.

Page.

2. [Perhaps from cool, cooler, a vessel in which hot liquor is set to cool;] A vessel in which water is carried on a pole between two.

Cow-staff. n. s. [cowl and staff;] The staff on which a vessel is supported between two men.

Mounting him upon a cow-staff,
Which (tossing him something high)
He apprehended to be Pegasus.

Snatching the light by a cupped hand; the staff must have a bunch in the middle, somewhat wedg'd, and covered with a soft bolster.

Wigan.

Cow-slip. n. s. [paralytic; cup-lippe, Sax. as some think, from their resemblance to the breath of a cow; perhaps from growing much in pasture grounds, and often meeting the cow's lip.]

Cow-slip is also called paul, grows wild in the meadows, and is a species of primrose.

Miller.

He might as well say, that a cow-slip is as white as a lily.

Sidney.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I.

In a cow-slip's bell I lie.

Shak. Tempest.

Thy little sons
Permit to range the pastures; gladly they
Will now the cowdy pastures, faintly sweet.

Philips.

Cows-wulgwort. n. s. A species of Mullein.

Coxcomb. n. s. [cock and comb, corrupted from cock's comb.]

1. The top of the head.

As the cockney did to the ears, when he put them in the pästry alive; they rapped them o'th' comb with a stick, and cried, Dows, wantons, down.

Shak. King Lear.

2. The comb resembling that of a cock, which licensed fools wore formerly in their caps.

There, take my coaxcomb; why, this fellow has banished two of his daughters, and did the third a bleeding against his will; and for his coaxcomb, thou must needs wear my coaxcomb.

Shakespeare.

It is a vanity for every pretending coaxcomb to make himself one of the party still with his better.

They overflowed with smart repartees, and were only distinguished from the intended wits by being called coaxcombs, though they observed not so scandalous a name.

Daven.

Some are bewildered in the maze of school;
And some made coaxcombs, more natural meant but fools.

Page.

4. A kind of red flower.

Coxcomical. adj. [from coaxcomb.] Foppish; conceited; a low word, unworthy of use.

Because, as he was a very natural writer, and they were without prejaces, without prejudice, with an open and self-sufficient spirit, and without the influence of coaxcomical, senseless cull, they were at liberty to receive the impressions which things naturally made on their minds.

Daven.

COY

[Coi. Fr. from quicuit, Lat.]

1. Modest; decent.

Jason is coi as is a made;
He looked pitiously, but thought he said Chancer.

2. Reserved; not accessible; not easily condescending to familiarity.

And vain delight she saw he light did pass,
A foe of folly and immutual toy.

Still solemn sad, or still disdainful coy.

Swayer.

Like Phœbus sung the no less anxious lay;
Like Daphne she, as lovely, and as coy.

Wallace.

At this season every smile of the sun, like the smile of a coy lady, is as dear as it is unconcealed.

Page.

The Nile's coy source.

Granger.

To Coy. v. n. [from the adjective.]

1. To behave with reserve; to reject familiarity.

What, coying it again?

No more; but make me happy to my gust.

That is, without your struggling.

Retire. I beg you, leave me.

Thus to coy it?

With one who knows you too!

Roose's J. Shaks.
COZ
If he can't
To bear Cominian speaks, I'll keep at home,
Shakesp. Cominianus.
To COY. v. a. [for decoy.] To allure. Not in use.
I'll mean things all their loves,
Shakesp. Coriolanus.
COY. n. s. [from coy.] Reserve; with discretion to familiarity.
This said, his hand he eagerly snatched off
COYNESS. n. s. [from coy.] Reserve; unwilling to become familiar.
When the sun bathed the earth and water,
Shakesp. Venus and Adonis.
COYSTER. n. s. A species of degenerate hawk.
One they might trust, their common wrongs to wreak;
The speclet and the coystrel were too weak.
Dredg. Hind and Panther.
COZ. n. s. A cant or familiar word, contracted from cousin.
Be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say that, some good thing comes to.
Shakesp. Henry V.
To COZEN. v. a. [To cose is in the old Scotch dialect, as Junius observes, to chop or change; whence cose to cheat; because in such traffick there is commonly fraud.] To cheat; to trick; to defraud.
Let the queen pay never so fully, let the master-pay never so diligently, let the deputy or general look to them never so exactly, yet they can cheat them all.
Spenser.
Gowing, loved an man so well that he could e'en him, and expose him to publick mirth for having been cowed.
Cherleton.
He that suffers a government to be abused by carelessness or neglect, dues the same thing with him that maliciously and corruptly sets himself to cheat it.
Dredg. Estrainge.
You are not obliged to a literal belief of what the poet says; but you are pleased with the image, without being convinced by the fiction.
Dredg. Estrainge.
What warrant to lengthen out his date
A day, and take a pride to cose fate
Dredg. Estrainge.
Children may be excused into a knowledge of the letters, and being taught to read, without perceiving it to be any thing but a sport.
Locke on Education.
COZENAGE. n. s. [from c.c. born.] Fraud; deceit; artifice; fallacy; trick; cheat; the practice of cheating.
They say this town is full of cozenage,
As nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dug. cozeners.
Woe to those who without honesty is mere craft and cozenage: and therefore the reputation of honesty must first be gotten, which cannot be but by living well; a good life is a main argument.
Ben Jonson's Discoveries.
There's so much things as that we beauty call it,
It is never cazenall ever.
For though some long ago
I'll yet discern certain mingled so and so,
That doth not tie me now from casting new.
Success.
Imaginary offers themselves to our impatient minds, which entertain those counterfeit Leaves, without the least suspicion of their cunning, Glavius's Scipios.
Strange cozenage! none would live past years again,
Yet all hope pleasure in what yet remain;
CRA
And from the dregs of life think to receive
What the first sprightly running could not give.
Dredg. Aaron's Anger.
But all these are trifles, if we consider the fraud
Coezage of trailling men and shopkeepers.
Seft.
COZENER. n. s. [from c.c.] A cheat; a defrauder.
Indeed, Sir, there are cเนeners abroad, and therefore it behoves men to be wise.
Shakesp. Winter's Tale.
CRAB. n. s. [crabbe, Sax. krabbe, Dut.] 1. A crustacean fish.
Those that cast their shell are, the lobster, the crab, the crawfis, the molussum or doleful, and the crawfish. The old shells are never turned inside out, so as it is like they scale off and crumble away by degrees.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The fox catches crab fish with his tail, which Olaus Magnus saith he himself was an eye witness of.
Derham.
2. A wild apple; the tree that bears a wild apple.
Noble stock
Was graft with crab tree slip, whose fruit thou art.
Shakesp.
Ferch me a dozen crab, tree staves, and strong ones; these are but swipes.
Shakesp. Henry VII.
When roasted crab hiss in the bowl,
Then again as the starting started out,
Dredg.
Tell why a graft, taking nourishment from a crab stock, shall have a fruit more noble than its name and parent.
Taylor.
3. A prevaricating scorcer person.
4. A wooden engine with three claws for launching of ships, or heaving them into the dock.
Phillips.
5. The sign in the zodiac.
Then parts the Twins and Crab, the Dog di-Sides,
And Argo's keel, that broke the frothy tides.
Creek.
CRAB. adj. It is used by way of contempt for any sour or degenerate fruit; as, a crab cherry, a crab plum.
Better loneliness their worn soul can boast
Than the crab vintage of the neighing horse.
Dredg.
CRABBED. adj. [from crab.] 1. Peevish; morose; cynical; sour.
A man of years, yet fresh as mule appear,
Of scrawd complexion, and crabbed hue,
Shakesp. Henry IV.
That him full uncomely did shine.
Spenser.
O, she is
Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed;
And he's compos'd of harshness.
Shak. Tempest.
2. Harsh; unpleasing.
That was when
Three crabb'd months had sour'd themselves to death,
Shakesp.
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And clepe thyselv my love.
Shak. Winter's Tale.
How charming is divine philosophy!
Not harsh and crabbed, as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of musical sweetest.
Shakesp. Cymbeline.
Where no crude surfeit reigns.
Miller.
3. Difficult; perplexing.
Besides, he was a scribbled philosopher,
And had read ev'ry text and gloss over;
What'er the crabbed' est author hath,
He understand'd implicit faith.
Hudibras.
Lucrétius had chosen a subject natural, crabbed.
Dredg.
Your crabb'd rogues that read Lucrétius
Are against gods, you know.
Prior.
Your crabb'dly. adv. [from crabbed.] Peevisibly; morosely; with perplexity.
CRABBEDNESS. n. s. [from crabbed.]
1. Sourness of taste.
2. Sourness of countenance; asperity of manners.
CRA
3. Difficulty; perplexity.
CRABER. n. s. The poor fish here enemies enough, beside such unnatural fishermen as otters, the coromant, and the craver, which some call the water-rat.
Shakesp. Henry VI.
CRABS-EYES. n. s. Whitish bodies, rounded
At both ends, and depressed on the other, heavy, moderately hard, and without smell. They are not the eyes of any creature, nor do they belong to the crab, but are produced by the common crawfish: the stones are bred in two separate bags, one on each side of the stomach. They are alkaline, absorbent, and in some degree diuretic.
Hill.
Several persons had, in vain, endeavoured to store themselves with crabs-eyes.
Byrd.
CRACK. n. s. [crack, Dut.] 1. A sudden disruption, by which the parts are separated but a little way from each other.
2. The chink; fissure, or vacuity made by disruption; a narrow breach.
Confusions, when great, do usually produce a fissure or crack of the skull, either in the same part where the blow was inflicted, or in the contrary part.
Macros.
In which it would crack in many places; and those cracks, as they dilated, would appear of a pretty good, but yet obscure and dark, sky-color.
Newton's Opticks.
3. The sound of any body bursting or falling.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As canons overcharged with double cracks.
Shakesp. Macbeth.
Now day appears, and with the day the king,
Whose early care had spurn'd him of his rest
Far off the cracks of falling houses ring,
And shrieks of subjects pierce his tender breast.
Dredg.
4. Any sudden and quick sound.
A fourth—stout eye!
What! will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom?
Shakesp.
Vulcan was employed in hammering out thunderbolts, that every now and then flew up from the anvils with dreadful cracks and flashes.
Addison.
5. Change of the voice in puberty.
And let us, Paladine, though now our voices,
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground.
Shakesp.
I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
Shak. Winter's Tale.
7. Craziness of intellect.
8. A man crazed.
I have invented projects for raising millions, without furthering the subject; but cannot get the parliament to listen to me, who look upon me as a crack and a projector.
Addison.
10. A baste.
Losings, backlings, and vain-glorying crackers.
All those that fort did bend their batteries.
Spenser.
11. A boaster.
This is only in low phrase.
To CRACK, v. a. [cracken, Dut.]
1. To break into chinks; to divide the parts a little from each other.
Look to your pipes, and castrate them with fresh and warm litter out of the stable, a good thickness, lest the frost crack them.
Mortimer.
2. To break; to split.
O, madam, my heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Shakesp.
To crack a nut with a man for cracking nuts,
When you can catch a nut, it is proof that you have succeeded,
A man who can crack nuts, I say, is a man who can crack nuts,
And if you can catch a nut, you will be able to catch a nut.

Shakep. King Lear.

Thus will I quarrel with a man for cracking nuts,
Having no other reason but that he has a hazel eye.

Shakep. Timon of Athens.

Should a wild fig-trees take her native bent,
And heave below the garden mony,
Who hath disposed, but thou, the winding way. Where springs down from the steepy crags do beat, that small infant which had fallen in. A lion spied a goat upon the crag of a high rock. E. L'estrang.

3. The neck.
They look like bigger, as bulls that been bate, And thrown the crag so stiff and so state. Spenser.

4. The small end of a neck of mutton: a low word.
CRAUGHT, adj. [from crog.] Full of inequalities and prominences.

On a huge hill,
Cragged and steep, truth stands. Crashaw.

CRAUGHTNESS. n. s. [from cragged.]
Fullness of crags or prominent rocks.
The craggedness or steepness of that mountain, maketh many parts of it in a manner inaccessible. Burrowes.

CRAGGINESS. n. s. [from craggy.]
The state of being craggy.

Craggy. adj. [from crog.] Rugged; full of prominences; rough to walk on, or climb.

That same wicked wight
His dwellingplace is in a hollow cave,
Far underneath a craggy cliff a sight,
Dark, doleful, dreary, like a greedy grave. Spenser.

It was impossible to pass up the woody and craggy hills, without the loss of these commanders. Raleigh's Essay.

Mountsincers that from Severus came.
And from the craggy cliffs of Tetrica. Dryden.

The town and republic of St. Marino stands on the top of a very high and craggy mountain. Addison on Italy.

To CRAM. r. a. [cramman, Sax.]
1. To stuff; to fill with more than can conveniently be held.

As much love in rhyme,
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ on both sides the leaf, margin and all. Shakespeare.

Being thus cram'd in the basket, a couple of Ford's knives were called. Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Thou hast spoken as if thy eldest son should be a fool, whose skull Jove cram with brimstone. Shakespeare.

Cram not in people by sending too fast company; but so that the number may live well in the plantation, and not by suchcare be penury. Bacon.

2. To fill with food beyond satiety.

You'd mollify a judge, would cram a spire; Or else some smiles from court you may desire. King.

I am sure children would be freer from diseases, if they were cram'd up so much as they are by food and matter, and were kept wholly from flesh the first three years. Locke.

As may be eating all day, and, for want of digestion, is never nourished; so these endless readers may cram themselves in vain with intellectual food. Swift.

But Aminus, crafty seem
Came cram'd with capons from where Poldi dines. Pope.

3. To thrust in by force.

You cram these words into mine ears, against The stomach of my sense. Shakespeare. Tempest.

Holler, quoth Hulindus, this sword Shall deny thy false threat cram that word. Huldahs.

Fate has cram'd us all into one sense, And that even now existing. Dryden's Cleomene. In another printed paper it is roundly expressed, that he will cram his brass down our throats.

To CRAM. r. n. To eat beyond satiety.
The godly dance, who fleshly fulfills damns, Seods with her maid, or with her chaplain cramns.

CRA'MO. n. s. [a cant word, probably without etymology.] A play at which one gives a word, to which another finds a rhyme; a rhyme.

So Medius, when he drain'd his skull To celebrate this activity of truism, His similis in order set,
And ev're crambo he could get. Spenser.

CRAMP, n. s. [cranpe, Dut. cramp, Fr.]
1. A spasm or contraction of the limbs, generally removed by warmth and rubbice.

For this, he sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps, Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up. Shakespeare. Tempest.

In a retreat he conducts any lucubrity; marry, in coming on, he has the cramp. Shakespeare.

The cramp concom of contraction of sinews; which is manifest, in that it cometh either by cold or dryness, draughts.

Bacon's Natural History.
Hares, said to live on hencop, do not make good the tradition; and he that observes what ver¬ siges, cramps, and convulsions follow thereon, in these animals, will be of our belief. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. A restriction; confinement; obstruction; shackle.
A narrow fortune is a cramp to a great mind, and lays a man under incapacities of serving his country. Addison.

3. A piece of iron bent at each end, by which two bodies are held together.
To the appendage of these there should be fastened a sharp grapple, or cram of iron, which may be apt to take hold of any place where it is. Whibbs.

CRAMP. adj. Difficult; knotty; a low term.

To CRAMP. r. a. [from the noun.]
1. To pain with cramps or twitches.

When the contracted limbs were cram'd, ev'n then
A wat'ry humour swell'd, and ooz'd again. Dryden's Virgil.

2. To restrain; to confine; to obstruct; to hinder.

It is impossible to conceive the number of inconveniences that will ensue, if borrowing be cramp'd. Addison.

There are few but find that some companies ben¬numb and cram them, so that in them they can neither speak nor do any thing that is handsomely,

He who serves has still restraints of dread upon his spirits, which, even in the midst of action, cramps and tires up his activity. Burke's Speech. Dr. Hammond observes to contract and cramp the sense of proprieties. Boretti's Theory.

The antiques are for cramping their subjects into as narrow a space as they can, and for reducing the whole extent of a science into a few general maximis. Marius used all endeavors for depressing the nobles, and raising the people, particularly for cramping the former in their power of jurisdiction.

No more
Th'expansive atmosphere is cram'd with cold,
But fall of life, and living soul.
Thomson's Spring.

3. To bind with crampions.
CRAMPISH. n. s. [from cram and fish.]
The torpedo, which benumbs the hands of those that touch it.

CRAMPION. n. s. [from cram and iron.]
See CRAMP. sense 3.

CRANGE, n. s. [cramming, a Low Lat.] A liberty to use a crape for drawing up wares from the vessels, at any creek of the sea or wharf, unto the land, and to make profit of. It signifies also the money paid and taken for the same. Cowell.

CRANE. n. s. [quin, Sax. kraun, Dut.

1. A bird with a long beak.
Like a crane, or a swallow, so did I chatter. Job. 18. 8. Milton.

2. An instrument made with ropes, pulleys, and hooks, by which great weights are raised.

In case the mount about it be so ponderous as not to be moved by ordinary force, you may then raise it with a crane. Mortimer.

Then commerce brought into the publick walk The busy merchant, the big waggone built, Tho'mson's Autumn.

3. A siphoon; a crooked pipe for drawing liquors out of a cask.
CRANES-BILL. n. s. [from crane and bill.]
1. An herb.
2. A pair of pincers terminating in a point, used by surgeons.

CRANBURN. n. s. [Lat.]
The skull.
In wounds made by contrition, when the crane¬burn is a little jagged, you ought not presently to crowd in dossils; for if that contused flesh be well digested, the bone will becom with the wound with much difficulty. Thus the strong crane.

CRANK. n. s. [This word is perhaps a contraction of crane-neck, to which it may bear some resemblance, and is part of the instrument called a crane.]
1. A crank is the end of an iron axis turned square down, and again turned square to the first turning down; so that on the last turning down a leather thong is slpt, to tread the treadle-wheel about. Mason.

2. Any bending or winding passage. I cast it in the rivers of your heart, Even to the court, the heart to th' seat 'o' th' brain; And through the cranks and offices of man, The strongest nerves, and small inferior vein, From which they receive that natural competency, Whereby they live. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

3. Any conceit formed by twisting or changing, in any manner, the form or meaning of a word.
Haste thee, my lord, and bring with thee Jest and youthful pility, Quips and cranks, and wanton wiles, Nods and beaks, and welted smiles, Such as hang on Hebe's cheek, And love to live in dimple sleek. Milton.

CRANK. adj. [from oncrank, Dut. Skinner.
1. Healthy; sprightly; sometimes corrupted to cranky. Not in use.

They brook'd as big as bulls that been bate, And bear the crag so stiff and so state.
As cockle on his dunghill crowing crane. Spenser.

2. Among sailors, a ship is said to be crank; when, by the form of its bottom, or by being loaded too much above, it is liable to be overset. [from kronck, Dut. sick.]

To CRANKLE. r. n. [from crank; as it signifies something bent.] To run in and out; to run in flexures and windings.

See how this river comes cracking in, And e'ers from the best of all my land.
A huge half moon, a monstrous cradle out. Shakespeare. Henry IV.

To CRANKLE. r. a. To break into unequal surfaces; to break into angles.
Old Vag's strongest. Philips.

CRANLES. n. s. [from the verb] Inequalities; angular prominences.

CRANKESS. n. s. [from crank; as it signifies something bent.]

434
1. Health; vigour.
2. Disposition to overeat.

CRA'NNED. adj. [from cranny.] Full of chinks.

A wall it is, as I would have you think.
That is but a crannied hole or chink. Shakespeare.

A very fair fruit, and not unlike a citron; but somewhat rougher chopt and cranimal, vulgarly remembred the marks of Adam's teeth. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CRANNY. n. s. [cren, Fr. crene, Lat.] A chink; a fissure; a crevice.
The eye of the understanding is like the eye of the sense; for as you may see great objects through small crannies or holes, so you may see great axioms of nature through small and contemptible inst-

And therefore best and bide about,
To find a cranny to creep out. Hudibras.

In a firm building the cavities ought not to be filled with rubbish, but with brick or stone, stote, to the crannies. Dryden.

Within the soaking of water and springs, with streams and currents in the veins and crannies.
Arthur's John Bull.

He skipped from room to room, ran up stairs and down, and cast his eyes on the kitchen to the garrets, and peeped into every cranny. Arbuthnot.

CRAPE. n. s. [crepa, low Lat.] A thin stuff, loosely woven, of which the dress of the emperor is sometimes made.

And proud Roxana, fird, with jealous rage.
With fifty yards of crapes shall sweep the stage. Swift.

To thee I often call'd in vain,
Against that assassin in crapes. Swift.

'Tis from high life high characters are drawn.
A saint in crapes is twice a saint in laws. Pope.

CRAPULENCE. n. s. [crapula a surfeit, Lat.] Drunkenness; sickness by intemperance. Dict.

CRAPULOUS. adj. [crapulous, Lat.] Drunken; intemperate; sick with intemperance. Dict.

To CRASH. v. n. [a word probably formed from the thing.] To make a loud complicated noise, as of many things falling or breaking at once.

There shall be a great crashing from the hill. Zeph. ii. 10.

When convulsions cleave the nether earth,
Before the dismal yawm appears, the ground
Trembles and heaves, the roving houses crack,
Smith.

To CRASH. v. a. To break or bruise.

My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montague, I say you come and crush a cup of wine. Shakesp.

Mr. WARBURTON has it, crush a cup of wine.

To crash, says HAMMER, is to be merry: a crash being a word still used in some counties for a merry bout. It is surely better to read crack. See CRACK.

CRASH. n. s. [from the verb.] A loud sudden mixed sound, as of many things broken at the same time.

ሪrı 1.

Seemingly ill-natured, Ill-natured,
Seem to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and, with a hideous crash,
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear. Shakesp. Hamlet.

Having set my 1 by the hazardable: I looked upon the uncertainty of riches, the decay of beauty, and the Crash of worlds, with as much contempt as ever Plato did. Pope.

CRASHIS. n. s. [crashis.] Temperature; constitution arising from the various properties of humours.

The fancies of men are so immediately diversified by the individual crisis, that every man owns something which he alone is like him. Cramouille.

A man may be naturally inclined to pride, lust, and anger; as these inclinations are founded in a peculiar crisis and constitution of the blood and spirits. South.

CRASS. adj. [crassus, Lat.] Gross; course; not thin; not comminuted; not subtle; not consisting of small parts.

Iron, in aquafortis, will fall into solution, with noise and friction; as also a crust and exudation, caused from the combustion of the sublimate of iron with the acid nitrous spirits of Metals are intermixed with common terrestrial trial matter, so as not to be discoverable by human industry; or, if discoverable, so diffused and scattered amongst the crust and mud, as not to be found, that it would never be possible to separate and extract it. Woodward's Natural History.

CRAS'SITUDE. n. s. [crasitudo, Lat.] Grossness; coarseness; thickness.

As a leave, or piece of paper or parchment; for, if they have a greater crasitudo, they will alter in their own body, though they spend not. Bacon.

To this, which vonomoth up blumen,
Of that crasitudo, as living bodies, bound hand and foot, cast into it, have been borne up, and not sucked new. Hackett on Providence.

The terrestrial matter carried by rivers into the sea, is saturated therein partly by the greater crasitudo of the sea-water, and partly by its constant agitation. Woodward.

CRASTINATION. n. s. [from cras, Lat., to-morrow.] Delay. Dict.

CRATCH. n. s. [creche, Fr. crates, Lat.] The palisaded frame in which hay is put for cattle.

When, being expelled out of Paradise by reason of six, thou wentest in the chains of death; I was imprisoned in the prison of thee. When I was laden, the cratch was in the cramp, I was wrapped in swelling-clouds. Hackett on Providence.

CRAVAT. n. s. [of uncertain etymology.] A neckcloth; any thing worn about the neck.

Less deliquents have been scour'd,
And hemp on woollen and'd;
Which others for cravats have worn
About their necks. Hudibras.

The restrictive were applied, one over another, to her throat: then we put her on a craret. Peters. Surgeon's Surgery.

To CRAVE. v. a. [crapan, Lat.]

1. To ask with earnestness; to ask with submission; to beg; to entreat.

What one petition is there found in the whole
Litany, whereof we shall ever be able at any time to say, that no man living needeth the grace or benefit therein craved at God's hands? Hackett.

As for my noble friends, I crave your pardons;
But for the mutable rank,-scurrilous many,
Let them regard me as I do not regard them. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

The poor people, not knowing where to hide themselves from you, nor of whom to whom to crave help, fled as males and women disdained.

I would crave leave here, under the word action, to comprehend the forbearance too of any thing proposed. Locke.

Each avaricious, of the rising current craves;
Each shepherd's prey returns the parting waves.
Prior.

2. To ask insatiably.

The subjects surely, the more their princes gave,
To advantage only took the more to cravat. Denham.

Him dost thou mean, who, spite of all his store,
Is ever cravat, and will stand there;
Who cheats for halfpence, and who doffs his coat.
To save a farthing in a forty-shilling. Dryden. Penitus.

3. To long; to wish unreasonably.

Levy push our on from one vain desire to other, in a regular visciditude and succession of egresses and satisfactions; of wanting and satisfying wantings. South.

4. To call for importantly.

Now is the time; the year and the rain is ripe for a call. Balfour. King Lear.

The antecedent concomitants and effects of such a composition are, as is too great quantities;
some eruptions, and also a craving appetite, especially of terrestrial and absorbent substances.

5. Sometimes with for before the thing sought.

One time may crave for love,
But more would prove

This heart too little, that too great. Suckling.

CRAVEN. n. s. [derived by Skinner from crase, as one that craves or begs his life: perhaps it comes originally from the noise made by a conquered cock.]

1. A cock conquered and dispirited.

What is your crest a crook?

A crookless cock, so Kate will be my hen.

No cock of mine; you crook too like a crook. Shakesp.

2. A coward; a recreant; a weak-hearted spiritless fellow.

Is it fit this soldier keep his ear?

He is a coward and a villain too. Shaks. H. V.

CRAVEN. adj. Cowardly; base.

Upon his coward breast
A bloody cross, and on his craven crest
A bunch of hair discoloured diversly. Spencer.

Whether he be
Bestial oblivion, or some craven scripule,
And lurking too precise on the earth
A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part
Wisdom, and ever three parts coward. Shaks. Hamlet.

Yet if the innocent some mercy find,
From cowardice, not ruth, did that proceed;
His noble foes durst not his craven kind
Exasperate by such a bloody deed.

To CRAVEN. v. a. [from the noun.] To make recreant or cowardly.

Gainst self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
The craven say weak hands and do call cymbeline.

CRAYER. n. s. [from crase.] An instable asker. It is used in Clarissa.

To CRUNCH. v. a. [schrantsen, Dut.
whence the vulgar say more properly to scramuch.] To crush in the mouth.

This word is used by Swift.

CRAW. n. s. [kroe, Dan.] The crop or first stomach of birds.

In birds there is no mastication or comminution of the meat in the mouth; but, in such as are not carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop or crake, or at least into a kind of ante-stomach in which I have observed in certain, especially piscivorous birds. Ray on the Creation.

CRAWFISH. n. s. [sometimes written crayfish, properly crevice; in Fr. crevisee.]
A small crustaceous fish found in brooks; the small lobster of fresh water.

Those that cast their shell are the lobster,
the crab, the crawfish, the bobbin or dishman,
and the tortoise. Bacon.

Let me to crake live crawfish recommend.

The common crawfish, and the sea crawfish, both produce the stones called crabs eyes. Hill.

To CRAWL. v. n. [krielen, Dut.]

1. To creep; to move with a slow motion; to move without rising from the ground, as a worm.
Then through the holy pillar, and the cloud,
God looking forth, will trouble all his host,
And craze their chariot wheels.

2. To powder.
The tin one smooth to the crazing mill, which,
to two grinding stones, brusheth it to a fine sand.

3. To crack the brain; to impair the intellect.
I lov'd him, friend,
No father his son dearer, true, to tel thee,
That grief hath craze'd my wit, Shakesp. King Lear.

2. Weakness of intellect.

CRAZENESS. n. s. [from crazed.]
Deceit; brokeness; diminution of intellect.

2. Broken; deceitful.

CRAZEDNESS. n. s. [from crazed.]

CRAZY. adj. [crazed.]

CREAM. n. s. [from cream.]

CREAM-faced. adj. [cream and faced.]

CREAMY. adj. [from cream.]

CREAM-fac'd, cream-faced. adj. [from cream.]

CREANCE. n. s. [Fr.] Is, in falconry, a fine small line, fastened to a hawk's leash when she is first harnessed.

CREASE. n. s. [from crease, Lat. chalk.]

CREATOR. n. s. [cor. to crea//on.]

CREATIVE. r. v. a. [creato, Lat.]

1. To form out of nothing; to cause to exist.

2. To make a harsh protracted noise.

To CRAZE. r. a. [craze, Fr. to break to pieces.]

1. To break; to crush; to weaken.

2. A drawing or design done with a pencil or crayon.

To CREAM. r. v. a. [creamer, Fr. to break to pieces.]

1. To break; to crush; to weaken.

2. The unctuous or oily part of milk, which, when it is cold, floats on the top, and is changed by the agitation of the churn into butter; the flower of milk.

3. The cream is used to make cakes.

4. The cream is used to make cream cheese.

5. The cream is used to make cream sauce.

6. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

7. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

8. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

9. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

10. The cream is used to make cream for puddings.

11. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

12. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

13. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

14. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

15. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

16. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

17. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

18. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

19. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

20. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

21. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

22. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

23. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

24. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

25. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

26. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

27. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

28. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

29. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

30. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.

31. The cream is used to make cream for custards.

32. The cream is used to make cream for pies.

33. The cream is used to make cream for tarts.

34. The cream is used to make cream for cakes.
CRE

Long abstinence is troublesome to acid constitutions, by the unseasonableness it creates in the stomach.

Arbuthnot.

3. To begot.
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

4. To invest with a new character.
Arise, my knights of the battle; I create you companions to our person, and will fit you with dignities becoming your estates.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

5. To give new qualities; to put any thing in a new state.
The best British undertaker had but a proportion of three thousand acres for himself, with power to create a ruin, and hold a court, harbinger of things.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

CREATION. n. s. [from create.]
1. The act of creating or conferring existence.
Consider the immensity of the Divine Love, expressed in all the emanations of his providence; in his creation, in his conservation of us.

Tayler.

2. The act of investing with new qualities or character: as, the creation of peers.

3. The things created; the universe.
As subjects then the whole creature came, and from their natures Adam did them impose.

Prior.

Shakesp. Julius Caesar.

4. Any thing produced, or caused; Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? Or art thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?

Shakesp. Macbeth.

CREATIVE. adj. [from create.]
1. Having the power to create.
But come, ye generous minds, in whose wide thought,
Of all his works, creative beauty burns With warmest beam.

Thomson. Spring.

2. Exerting the act of creation.
To trace the outgoings of the ancient of days in the first instance, and of his creative power, is a research too arduous and difficult...

Swift.

CREATOR. n. s. [creator, Lat.]
The being that bestows existence.

Open, ye heavens, your living doors; let in The great Creator, from his work return'd Magnificent; his six days work, a world.

Milton.

When you lie down, close your eyes with a short prayer, count yourself into the hands of your faithful Creator; and when you have done, trust him yourself, as you must do when you are dying.

Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

CREATURE. n. s. [creature, low Lat.]
1. A being not self-existent, but created by the supreme power.
Worship these personages for the worship they did not give to the creator, or for the worship they did give to his creatures.

Shakesp. St. John's.

2. Any thing created.
God's first creature was light. Bacon's New. Atl. Imperfect the world, and all the creatures in it, must be acknowledged in many respects to be.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

3. An animal, not human.
The queen pretended satisfaction of her knowledge only in killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs.

Shakesp. Cymbeline.

4. A general term for man.
Yet crime in her could never creature find; But for his love, and for her own self sake, She wander'd from one to other Ind. Spenser.

Most cursed of all creatures under sky, Lo, Tantalus, I here torment thee. Spenser.

Though he might burst his lungs to call for help, No creature would assist or pity him, Recantam.

5. A word of contempt for a human being.
Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home; Is this a holiday? Shakesp. Julius Caesar.

He would into the stews,
And from the company the creatures pluck a glove.

And wear it as a favour. Shakesp. Rich. III.

I've heard that guilty creatures, at a play,
Have, by the very cunning of the scene,
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
They have proclaimed their malfeasances.

Shakesp. Hamlet.

Nor think too-right of thy ill nature,
But of thy follies, idle creature.

Prior.

A good poet so no sooner communicates his works, as it is imagined he is a vain young creature, given up to the ambition of fame.

Spenser.

6. A word of petty tenderness.
And then, Sir, would he gripe and wring my hand;

Cry, Oh sweet creature! and then kiss me hard.

Shakesp. Dryden's Fable.

Ah, cruel creature, whom dost thou discharge?

The gods, to live in woods, have left the skies.

Shakesp. Dryden's Virgil.

Some young creature have learnt their letters; and syllables by having them passed upon little tablets.

Watts.

7. A person who owes his rise or his fortune to another.
He sends to colonel Massew to send him men, which he, being a creature of Essex's, refused.

Clarendon.

The duke's creature he desired to be esteemed.

Clarendon.

Great princes thus, when favourable they raise,
To justify their grace, their creatures praise.

Shakesp. Dryden.

The design was discovered by a person whom every body knows to be the creature of a certain great man.

Swift.

CREATURALLY. adj. [from creaturely.]
Having the qualities of a creature.

The several parts of relatives, or creaturely infinities, may have finite proportions to one another.

Cheyne. Philosophical Principles.

CREDIBLE. n. s. [from credible, Lat.]
Frequent.

CREDIBLE. n. s. [from credible, Lat.]
Frequent.

CREDIBILITY. n. s. [from credible.]
Credibility; worthiness of belief; just claim to belief.

The credibleness of a good part of these narratives has been confirmed to us by a practiser of physique.

Boyle.

CREDIBILITY. adj. [from credible, Lat.]
Worthy of credit; deserving of belief; having a just claim to belief.

The ground of credibility is the credibility of things credited; and things are made credible, either by the known condition and quality of the utterer, or by the manifest likelihood of truth in themselves.

Hawke.

None can demonstrate to me, that there is such an island as Jamaica; yet, upon the testimony of credible persons, I am free from doubt.

Tillotson.

CREDIBILITY. n. s. [from credible.]
A manner that claims belief.

This, with the loss of so few of the English as is scarce credible; being, as hath been rather contended than credible reported, but of one man, though not a few hurt.

Bacon.

CREDIT. n. s. [credit, Fr.]
1. Belief; credit.

Ne let it seem that credence this exceeds,
For he that made the creature was known right well
To have done much more admirable deeds;
It Merlin was.

Love and wisdom,
Approved so to your majesty, may plead
For ample credence.

Shakesp.

They did not only underhand give out that this was the true earl; but the friar, finding some credence in the people, took boldness in the pulpit to declare as much.

Bacon.

2. That which gives a claim to credit or belief.
After they had delivered to the king their letters of credence, they were delivered to a chamber richly furnished.

Rayward.

CREDENDA. n. s. [Lat.]
Things to be believed; articles of faith: distinguished in theology from agenda, or practical duties.

South.
We are contended to take this upon your credit, and to think it may be.

The things which we properly believe, be as much as we receive upon the credit of divine testimony.

The author would have done well to have left the credit of a single section.

5. Trust reposed, with regard to property: correlative to debt.

Credit is nothing but the expectation of money, within some limited time.

6. Promise given.

They have never thought of violating the public credit, or of alienating the revenues to other uses than to what they have been thus assigned.

Addison.

7. Influence; power not compulsive; interest.

She employed his utmost credit to relieve us, which was as great as a beloved son with a mother.

Sidney.

They sent him likewise a copy of their supplication to the king, and desired him to use his credit that a treaty might be entered into.

Claridon.

Having credit enough with his master to provide for his own interest, he troubled not himself for that of other men.

Clarendon.

To CREDIT, v. a [credo, Lat.]

1. To believe.

Now I change my mind, and党中央 crerdv things that do presage.

Shakesp.

To credit the unutilsibility both of this union and motion, we need no more than to consider it.

Glanville.

2. To procure credit or honour to any thing.

Marry be her monument stand so,

To credit this rade age; and show

To credit my actions, when even we.

Some patterns did of virtue see.

Waller.

It was not upon design to credit these papers, nor to compliment a society so much above flatery.

At present you credit the church as much by your government, as you did the school formerly by your wit.

South.

3. To trust; to confide in.

4. To admit as a debtor.

CREDIBLE adj [from credit.]

1. Reputable; above contempt.

He settled him in a good creditable way of living, having procured him by his interest one of the best places of the country.

Arbuthnot's John Bull.

2. Honourable; estimable.

The contemplation of things, that do not serve to promote our happiness, is but a more capricious sort of foolishness, a more pardoable and creditable kind of ignorance.

Titlon.

CREDITABLENESS n. s. [from creditable.]

Reputation; estimation.

Among all these snares, there is none more engaging than the creditableness and respect of customary vices.

Decay of Pity.

CREDIBLY, adv [from creditable.]

Reputably; without disgrace.

Many will chose rather to neglect their duty safe; and credibly, then to get a broken pate for the church's service, only to be rewarded with that which will break their hearts too.

South.

CREDITOR n. s [ creditor, Lat.]

1. He to whom a debt is owed; he that gives credit: correlative to debtor.

There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot take but break.

Shakesp.

I am so used to consider myself as creditor and debtor, that I often state my accounts after the same manner, with regard to heaven and my own soul.

Addison's Spectator.
CRE

2. An iron used to slide along the grate in kitchens.
3. A kind of patten or clog worn by women.

CREP'HOLE. n. s. [creep and hole.]
1. A hole into which any animal may creep to escape danger.
2. A subterfuge; an excuse.

CREEP'INGLY. adv. [from creeping.]
Slowly; after the manner of a reptile.

CREE'PLE. n. s. [from creep.]
A lame person; a cripple.

To whom this world must itself refer
As all the interlocution of her,
She, she is dead, she's dead when you know'st this,
Thou know'st how lame a creeple this world is.

CREMA'TION. n. s. [crematio, Lat.]
A burning.

CRE'MOR. n. s. [Lat.]
A milky substance; a soft liquor resembling cream.
The food is swallowed into the stomach, where, mingled with digestive juices, it is reduced into a chyle or creamer.

CRE'PANNE. n. s. [With farriers.]
An ulcer seated in the midst of the forepart of the foot.

To CREPITATE. v. n. [crepito, Lat.]
To make a small cracking noise.

Crepitation, n. s. [From crepitate.]
A small cracking noise.

CREPT. particpl. [From creep.]
There are certain men creep in unawares.
From this fair vine, but that her arms surround Her married clan, had creep along the ground. Pope.

CREPS'COLE. n. s. [From crepusculum, Lat.]
Twilight.

CREP'USCULOUS. adj. [crepusculum, Lat.]
Glimmering; in a state between light and darkness.

A close apprehension of the one, maybe afford a glimmering light and crepuscular glances of the other.
The beginnings of philosophy were in a crepuscular obscurity, and it is yet scarce past the dawn.

CRESCEN'T. adj. [From cresco, Lat.]
Increasing; growing; in a state of increase.

I have seen him in Brittan; he was then of a crescent note.

Cresc. Cyighbelne.

With these in troop,
Came Astoreth, whom the Phoenicians call'd
A star, queen of heaven, with crescent horns. Milton.

CRESCEN'T. n. s. [CrescenS, Lat.]
The moon in her state of increase; any similitude of the moon increasing.
My power's a crescent, and my angling hope
Says it will come to th' full. Shaks. Ant. and Cleop.

Or Bactrian sophy, from the horns
Of Turanian, from the leaves and waste beyond
The realm of Aladale, in his retreat. Milton.

Jove in dusky clouds involves the skies,
And the faint crescent shoots by fits before their eyes. Dryden.

CRESCIVE. adj. [From cresco, Lat.]
Increasing; growing.

So the prince obscured his contemplation
Under the veil of wilderness, which no doubt
Grew, like the summer grass, fastest by sight,
Useless, yet creaves in his faculty. Shaks. Hen. V.

CRESS. n. s. [Perhaps from crese, it being a quick grower; nasturtium, Lat.]
An herb.

Its flower consists of four leaves, placed in form of a cross; the jointed petals from the cross of the flower-cup, and becomes a roundish smooth fruit, divided into two cells, and furnished with seeds, inacently by a virtue of the species. Miller.

His court, with buttocks and creases stord,
With soaps unbought, and sallets, beat his board. Pope.

CRE'SSET. n. s. [croissette, Fr. because beacons had crosses antiently on their tops.]
A great light set upon a beacon, light-house, or watch-tower. Hammar. They still raise armies in Scotland by carrying about the fire-cross.

At my nativity
The front of hear'n was full of fiery sparks,
Of burning crescent. Shaks. Henry IV.

The from the arch roof.
Pendent by subtle magic, many a row
Of starry lamps, and blazing crescents, fed
With naphtha and asphaltus, yielded light
As from a sky. Milton's Paradise Lost.

CREST. n. s. [crista, Lat.]
1. The plume or feathers on the top of the ancient helmet; the helmet.
Its valor, shown upon our crest to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Ev'n in the bosom of our adversaries. Shaks. Henry IV.

2. The comb of a cock; whence Milton calls him crested.
Others on ground
Walk'd firm; the created cock, whose clarion sounds
The silent hours. Milton's Par. Lost.

3. The ornament of the helmet in heraldry.
Of what esteem were it, in the time of king Edward the Third's reign, may appear by his giving an eagle, which he himself had formerly borne, for a crest to William Montacute, earl of Salisbury, for a crested helmet. Camden's Remains.

The horn;
It was a crest ere thou wast born:
Thus father's father thus did say.

4. Any tuft or ornament on the head; as which some of the poets assign to serpents.
Their crests divide,
And, tow'ring o'er his head, in triumph ride.
Dryden's Virgil.

5. Pride; spirit; fire; courage; livelihood of men.
When horses should endure the bloody spot,
They fall their crests. Shaks.

CRESTED. adj. [From crest; cristatus, Lat.]

To Crib. v. a. [From the noun.] To shut up in a narrow habitation; to confine; to cage.
Now I am ebbing'd, crib'd, confined, bound in To uneasy doubts and fears. Shaks. Macbeth.

CRI'BAGE. n. s. A game at cards.

CRI'BLE. n. s. [Crubam, Lat.]
A corn-sieve.

Dict.
CRIP

CRIPTE. n. s. [crisbro, Lat.] The act of siting, or separating by a sieve.

CRICK. n. s. 1. [From cricce, Ital.] The noise of a door. 2. [From cręçe, Sax. a stake.] A painful stiffness in the neck.

CRICKET. n. s. [kreekal, from kreekal to make a noise, Dut.] 1. An insect that squeaks or chirps about ovens and fireplaces. Didst thou not hear a noise?

—Shakes.

Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth.
Milton.

And shrilling crickets in the lamily cried. Gay.

2. [From cręçek, a stick.] A sport, at which the contenders drive a ball with sticks in opposition to each other. The judge, to dance, his brother sergeant call; The scrotum at cricket urge the ball. Pope.

3. [From krikelen, Germ. to creep.] A low seat or stool.

CRICKETING Apple. n. s. A small species of apple.

CRIC. n. s. [from cry.] The officer whose business is to cry or make proclamation. He openeth his mouth like a crow. Exell, s. x. 13.

The cries contesting silence, and the whole multitude present stand in a suspense.

Brocwood on Languages.

The cry call'd about,
Our old nobility of Trojan blood,
Who gave among the crowd for their preciuous food.

CRIME. n. s. [crimen, Lat. crime, Fr.] An act contrary to right; an offence; a great fault; an act of wickedness. High God, be witness that I guiltless am; But if yourself, Sir knight, ye guilty find, Or wrapped be in leaves of former slave, With crime do not it cover, but disclose the same. Spenser.

Undergo with me one guilt, one crime,
Of tasting. Like in punishment
As in their crime.

Milton.

No word's so fine, if 'tis no crime to love. Pope.

CRIMINAL adj. [from crime and full.] Wicked; criminal; faulty in a high degree; contrary to duty; contrary to virtue.

You proceeded not against these feats,
So criminals and so capital nature.
Shak. Hamlet.

CRIMLESS. adj. [from crime.] Innocent; without crime.

My foes could not procure me any seath,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Shak. Henry VI.

CRIMINAL adj. [from crime.] 1. Faulty; contrary to right; contrary to duty; contrary to law.

Live thou, and to thy mother dead attest,
That clear she died from blinshion criminal.
Spenser.

What we approve in our friend, we can hardly be induced to think criminal in ourselves. Rogers.

2. Guilty; tainted with crime; not innocent.

The neglect of any of the relative duties, renders our criminal to be the sight of God. Rogers.

3. Not civil; as, a criminal prosecution; the criminal law.

CRIMINAL. n. s. [from crime.] 1. A man accused.

Was ever criminal forbid to plead?
Curb your ill-manner'd zeal. Dryden's Span. Fr.

2. A man guilty of a crime.

All three persons that had held chief place of authority in the countries; all three ruined, by war, or by any other disaster, but by justice and sentence, as delinquents and criminals. Bacon.

CRIMINALLY. adv. [from criminal.]

Not innocently; wickedly; guiltily. As our thoughts extend to all subjects, they may be criminally employed on all. Rogers.

CRIMINALITY. n. s. [from criminal.]

Guiltiness; want of innocence.

CRIMINATION. n. s. [criminatio, Lat.] The act of accusing; accusation; arraignment; charge.

CRIMINATORY. adj. [from crimina, Lat.]

Relating to accusation; accusations; censures.

CRIMINOUS. adj. [criminus, Lat.]

Wicked; Guilty; guilty.

The punishment that belongs to that great and criminal guilt, is the forfeiture of his right and claim to all mercies, which are made over to him by Christ. Hammond.

CRIMINOUSLY. adv. [from criminal.]

Enormously; very wickedly.

Some particular duties of piety and charity, which were most criminally omitted before. Harsam.

CRIMINOUSLY. adv. [criminously, It. commonly written as it is pronounced, crinson.] A species of red colour.

Upon her head a crimson crown,
With damask roses and daffadilies set.
Bay leaves between,
And primroses green.
Embellish the white violet, Spencer's Pastoral.

CRIMPED adj. [from crumble, or crimp.] 1. Frangible; brittle; easily crumbled; easily reduced to powder.

Now the Fowler, warned
By these good omen's, with swift early steps,
Treads the crisp earth, ranging through fields and des.

2. Not consistent; not forcible: a low cant word.

The evidence is crisp; the witnesses swear backwards and forwards, and contradict themselves; and his tenants what he would have them. To CRIMPLE. v. a. [from rumple, crumple, crimple.] To contract; to corrugate; to cause to shrink or contract.

He passed the outcry through them, and accordingly crumpled them up. Warton's Sarsrey.

CRIMSON. n. s. [crimsono, Ital.]

1. Red, somewhat darkened with blue. As crimson seems to be little else than a very deep red, with an eye of blue; so some kinds of red seem to be little else than heightened yellow.

Boyé on Colours.

Why does the soil endure
The blushing poppy with a crimson hue? Prior.

2. Red in general.

Can you blame her then, being a maid yet rose over with the virgin crinism of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy, in his naked seeming self? to all Shakspeare, Henry V.

Beauty's ensign yet is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks. Shak.

The crimson stream distaint'd his arms around,
And the disdainful soul came rushing through the wound. Dryden's Aeneid.

To CRIMSON. v. a. [from the noun.] To dye with crimson.

Pardon me, Julia. Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart! Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand Sign'd in thy spoor, and crimson'd in thy lute. Shak.
CRI

The undertaking, which I am now laying down, was entered upon in the very crisis of the late rebellion, when it was the duty of every Briton to contribute his utmost assistance to the government, in a manner suitable to his station and abilities.

Addison's Freeholder.

CRISP. adj. [crispus, Lat.]

1. Curled.

Winds more crisp on the forehead than cows.

Bacon.

The Ethiopian black, flat, nerved, and crisp headed.

Hulse.

2. Indented; winding.

You symptoms, call'd Nails, of the winding hanks,

With your shed'd crowns, and ever harmless books,

Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land Answer your summons; Juno does command.

Shakesp. Hen. IV.

3. Brittle; friable.

In frosty weather, musick within doors soundeth better; which may be by reason, not of the disposition of the air, but of the wood or string of the instrument, which is made more crisp, and so more porous and hollow.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To CRISP. v. a. [crispus, Lat.]

1. To curl; to contract into knots or curls.

Sever, affrighted with their bloody looks,

Ran fearlessly among the trembling reeds,

And hid his crisp'd head in the hollow bank.

Shakesp. Hist. IV.

Young I'd have him too;

Yet a man, with crisp'd hair,

Cast in thousand waves and rings.

For love's fingers, and his rings. Ben Jonson.

Spirit of wine is not only off for inflammations in general, but also crisps up the vessels of the dura mater and brain, and sometimes produces a garrulous speech.

Sharp's Surgery.

2. To twist.

Along the crisp'd shades and bow's

Revels the spruce and jocund spring.

Milton.

3. To indent; to run in and out.

From that sapphire found the crisp'd hanks,

Rolling on orient pearl and sands of gold.

Ran nectar, visiting each plant.

Milton.

CRISPATION. n. s. [from crisp.]

1. The act of curling.

Some differ in the hair and feathers, both in the quantity and quality of them; as locusts are hissant, and have great nuts; the she's are smooth, like cats.

Bacon.

CRISPISING-PIN. n. s. [from crisp.]

A curling iron.

The changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the crisping-pins.

Tinial, ii. 22.

CRISPISULCENT. adj. [crispisulcans, Lat.] Waved, or undulating, as lightning is represented.

Dict.

CRISPNESS. n. s. [from crisp.] Curledness.

CRISPY. adj. [from crisp.] Curled.

So are those crispy smoky locks, oft known

To be the dowry of a second head.

Shakesp. Merchant of Venice.

CRIERION. n. s. [criterio.] A mark by which any thing is judged of, with regard to its goodness or badness.

Mutual agreement and endurance was the badge of primitive believers; but we may be known by the contrary criterion.

Gmellius's Scipias

We have here a sure infallible criterion by which every man may discover and find out the gracious or ungracious disposition of his own heart.

South.

Vol. I.

CRI

By what criterion do you eat, do ye think,

If this is pita's for sweetness, that for sinnk?

Pope's Horace.

CRITIC. n. s. [criticis.] 1. A man skilled in the art of judging of literature; a man able to distinguish the faults and beauties of writing.

This settles truer ideas in men's minds of several things, when he names in things, authors, than all the large and laborious arguments of critics.

Locke.

Now learn what words critics ought to show,

For it is half a judge's task to know.

Pope.

2. An examiner; a judge.

But you with pleasure own your errors past,

And make each day a critic on the last.

Pope.

3. A snarler; a curper; a caviller.

Critics I saw, that others name deface,

And fix their own with labour in their place.

Where an author has many beauties consistent with virtue, piety, and truth, let not little critical exalt themselves, and shower down their dilatory articles.

Addison. v. a. [criticize, to criticize.] Critical, relating to critics, to the art of judging of literary performances.

Thence arts o'er all the northern world advance,

But critical learning flourish'd most in France.

Pope.

CRITIC, n. s.

1. A critical examination; critical remarks; animadversions.

I should be glad if I could persuade him to continue his good offices, and write such another critical examination on any thing of mine.

Dryden.

I should as soon expect to see a critic on the peasy of a ring, as on the inscription of a medal.

Addison on Medals.

If ideas and words were distinctly weighed, and duly considered, they would afford us another sort of logic and criticism than what we have hitherto acquainted with.

Locke.

What is every year of a wise man's life, but a censure and critic on the past?

Pope.

Not that my gui to critics was confined:

My verse gave ample lessons to mankind.

Pope.

To CRITIC. v. n. [from critic.] To play the critic; to criticize.

They do but trace over the paths that have been beaten by the ancients; or comment, criticize, and flourish on the Teresa.

Trench.

CRITICAL. adj. [from critic.] 1. Exact; nicely judicious; accurate; diligent.

It is submitted to the judgement of more critical men to direct and determine what is graceful and what is not.

Vigil was so critical in the rites of religion, that he would never have brought in such prayers as these, if they had not been agreeable to the most strictest sects.

Dryden.

2. Relating to criticism; as, he wrote a critical dissertation on the last play.

Captions: inclined to find fault.

Would that thou wouldst write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

O gentle lady, do not put me to 't;

For I am nothing, if not critical.

Shakesp. Othello.

4. [from crisis.] Comprising the time at which a great event is determined.

The moon is supposed to be measured by sevens, and the critical or decrescendo days to be decided on that occasion.

Brown's Luge.

5. Decisive; nice.

Opportunity is in respect to time, in some sense; as time is in respect to eternity: it is the smallest moment, the exact point, the critical minute, on which every good work so much depends.

The people cannot but recent to see their apprehensions of the power of France, in so critical a manner, wholly his enemies.

Swift.

6. Producing a crisis or change of the disease: as, a critical sweat.

CRITICALLY. adv. [from critical.]

1. In a critical manner; exactly; curiously.

Difficult it is to understand the purity of English writers, whether from the old masters, and a proper style from our learned, and a proper style from our corrupt one.

Drake.

These shells, which are digged up out of the earth, several hundreds of which I now keep by me, I have been neatly and critically examined by very many learned men.

Woodward.

2. At the exact point of time.

CRITICALLY. n. s. [from critical.]

Exactness; accuracy; nicety; incidence at a particular point of time.

To CRITICISE. v. n. [from critic.]

1. To play the critic; to judge; to write remarks upon any performance of literature; to point out faults and beauties.

They who can criticize so weakly, as to imagine I have done my worst, may be convinced, at their own cost, that I can write severely with more ease than I can gently.

Dryden.

Know well each ancient's proper character;

Without all this at once before your eyes,

Cavel you may, but never criticise.

Pope.

2. To animadvert upon as faulty.

Nor would I have his father look so narrowly into these accounts, as to take occasion from thence to criticize his opinions.

Locke.

To CRITICISE. v. a. [from critic.] To censure; to pass judgment upon.

Nor shall I look upon it as any breach of charity, to criticize the author, so long as I keep clear of the person.

Addison.

CRITICISM. n. s. [from critic.]

1. Criticism, as it was first instituted by Aristotle, was meant a standard of judging well.

Dryden's Innocence.

Pref.

2. Remark; animadversion; critical observations.

There is not a Greek or Latin critic, who has not shewn, even in the style of his criticism, that he was a master of all the elegance and delicacy of his native tongue.

Addison.

To CROAK. v. n. [spaceeanz, Sax. croare, Ital. crocare, Lat.]

1. To make a hoarse low noise, like a frog.

The subtle swallow flies about the brook,

And querulous frogs in muddy pools do croak,

May's Virgil.

So when Joe's block descended from on high,

Loud thunder to its bottom shook the bow,

And the hoarse nation croak'd.

Pope.

Blood, stuff'd in skins, is British Christians food;

And France robs nasee of the croaking breed.

Gay.

2. To caw, or cry as a raven or crow.

The raven himself is hoarse,

That croak's the fatal entrance of Duncan

Under battle-scouts.

Shakesp.

The hoarse raven, on the blasted bough,

By croaking from the left, presag'd the coming blow.

Thistle.

At the same time the walk of elms, with the croaking of the ravens, looks exceeding solemn and venerable.

Addison.

3. It may be used in contempt for any disagreeable, offensive, or repugnant thing.

Their understandings are but little instructed; when all the while that pain is laid out to still the croaking of their own bellies.

Locke.
CROAK. n. s. [from the verb.] The cry or voice of a frog or raven. The swallows sent the croaks of their loquacious race. Dryden.

Was that a raven’s croak, or my son’s voice? No matter which, I’ll to the grave and hide mine Lee.

Crocords. adj. [croceus, Lat.] Consisting of saffron, like saffron. Dict.

CROCIATION. n. s. [crocatio, Lat.] The croaking of frogs or ravens. Dict.

CROCK. n. s. [kruich, Dut.] A cup; any vessel made of earth. Crockery.

CROCODILE. n. s. [from σαφρόν, and ἀδερ, fearing.] An amphibious voracious animal, in shape resembling a lizard, and found in Egypt and the Indies. It is covered with very hard scales, which cannot, without great difficulty, be pierced; except under the belly, where the skin is tender. It has a wide mouth through which, from rows of teeth, sharp and separated, which enter one another, it runs with great swiftness; but does not easily turn itself. It is long lived, and is said to grow continually to its death. Some are fifteen or eighteen cubits long. Crocodiles lay their eggs, resembling goose-eggs, sometimes amounting to sixty, near the waterside, covering them with the sand, that the heat of the sun may hatch them. Cabinet.

Croak. n. s. [croak, Fr.]

Like a crocodile.

CROFT. n. s. [cropt, Sax.] A little close joining to a house, that is used for corn or pasture. This have I learn’d, Tending my flocks hard by, I’th’billy crofts That bow this bottom glade. Milton.

Croisade. n. s. [croisade, Fr. from croise, croak.] A cross a cross. A holy war; a war carried on against infidels under the banner of the cross. See that he take the name of Urban, because a pope of that name did first institute the croisade; and, as with an holy trumpet, did stir up the voyage for the Holy Land. Bacon.

CRO'SES. n. s.

1. Pilgrims who carry a cross.

2. Soldiers who fight against infidels under the banner of the cross. CRON. n. s. [cron, Sax., according to Verstegan; kronie, Dut. according to Skinner.]

1. An old crook. Fresh herrings plenty Michel brings, With fatted crooks, and such old things. Tusser.

2. In contempt, an old woman. Take up, I say, give up thy crook. Shakesp. Winter’s Tale.

The crook being in bed with him on the wedding night, and finding his averting, endeavoring to win his affection by reason. Dryden.

CRO'NET. n. s. The hair which grows over the top of a horse’s hoof. CRONY. n. s. [a cunt word.] An old acquaintance; a companion of long standing.

So when the Scots, your constant cronies, The esquires of your cause and monied, Hudibr. To oblige your crook Swift, Bring our dune a new year’s gift. Swift. Strange an astraligator should die Without one wonder in the sky! Not one of all your crook stars To pay a duty at the price! Swift.

CROOK. n. s. [crok, Fr.]

Any crooked or bent instrument.

1. A sheephook. I sing the man who Judah’s sceptre bore In that right hand which held the crook before. Cowley.

He left his crook, he left his flocks, And wand’ring through the lonely rocks, He mould’r’d a crookless vale. Prior.

3. Any thing bent; a meander. Those tall sapphire-colour’d brooks, Which condiment-like, with curious crooks, Sweet islands make in that sweet land. Sidney.

To CROOK, v. a. [crocher, Fr.]

1. To bend, to turn into a hook. It is highly probable, that this disease proceeds from a redundant acidity, because vinegar will soften and crook tender bones. Arbuthnot x Dict.

2. To pervert from rectitude; to divert from the original end. Whatever affairs pass such a man’s hands, be crook’d them to his own ends; which must needs be often eccentric to the ends of his master. Bacon.

To CROOK, v. n. To be bent; to have a curvature. Their shoes and patterns are soured and piked more than a finger long, crooking upwars. Caxton.

CROOKBACK. n. s. [crook and back.] A term of reproach for a man that has gibbons shoulders. Aye, crookback, here I stand to answer thee. Or any he be the proudest of that sort. Shaks. Hen. VI.

CROOKBACKED. adj. Having bent shoulders.

A dwarf as well may for a giant pass, As negro for a swan; a crook-backed be call’d Farnon. Dryden’s Journal. There are millions of truths that a man is not, or may not think himself, concerned to know; as, whether our king Richard III. was crook-backed or no. Locke.

CROOKED. adj. [crocher, Fr.]

1. Bent; n. straight; curved. A bell or a cannon may be heard beyond a hill which intercepts the sound of the cannon; and sounds are propagated as readily through crooked pipes, as through straight ones. Newton’s Opticks.

Mathematicians say of a straight line, that it is as well an index of its own rectitude as of the obliquity of a crooked one. Woodward’s Nat. Hist.

2. Winding; oblique; anfractuous. A man shall never want crooked paths to walk in. The thoughts that he is in the right way, where ever he has the footsteps of others to follow. Locke.

Among the crooked lanes on every hedge, The glow-worm lights his gem. Thomas. Summer.

3. Perverse; untoward; without rectitude of mind; given to obliquity of conduct. They have corrupted themselves; they are a perverse and crooked generation. Deut. xxxii. 5. Hence, heap of wrath; foul, indigested lump! As crooked in thy manners as thy shape. Shaks. Henry VI.

We were not born crooked; we learned those windings and turnings of the serpent. South.

CROOKEDLY. adv. [from crooked.]

1. Not in a straight line.

2. Untowardly; not complacently.

If we walk perversely with God, he will walk crookedly towards us. Taylor’s Rule of Living Holy.

CROOKEDNESS. n. s. [from crooked.]

1. Deviation from straightforward; curvity; the state of being infected; inflection. I doth know what is straight, doth even thereby discern what is crooked; because the absence of straightforwardness, in bodies capable thereof, is crookedness. Hooker.

2. Deformity of a gibbons body.

When the heathens offered sacrifices to their false gods, they would make a severe search to see if there were any crookeds or spots, any uncleanliness or deformity, in their sacrifices. Taylor’s Hearty Communicant.

CROP. n. s. [crop, Sax.] The crop of a bird; the first stomach into which its meat descends. In birds there is no mastication or commination of the meat in the mouth; but in such as are not carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop or crop.

CROP. n. s. [crop, Sax.] The crop of a bird; the first stomach into which its meat descends. In birds there is no mastication or commination of the meat in the mouth; but in such as are not carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop or crop.

CRO'FULL. adj. [crop and full.] Satiated; with a full belly.

He, stretch’d out all the chimney’s length, Basks at the fire his hairy strength; and, crop full, out of his fling Ere the first cock his matin rings. Milton.

CROP'SICK. adj. [crop and sick.] Sick with repulsion; sick with excess and debauchery.

Strange odds! where crop-sick drunkard’s must engage A hungry foe, and arm’d with sober rage. Tate’s Journal.

CROP. n. s. (croppa, Sax.)

1. The highest part or end of any thing; as the head of a tree, the ear of corn.

2. The harvest; the corn gathered after a field; the product of the field.

And this of all my harvest hope I have, Nought reaped but a weedy crop of care. Spenser’s Pastorals.

Lob’ring the soil, and reaping plentiful crop, Corn, wine, and oil. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

The fountain which from Helicon proceeds, That sacred stream, should never water weeds, Nor make the crop of thorns and thistles grow. Recanomet.

Nothing is more prejudicial to your crop than mowing of it too soon. Martineur’s Husbandry.

3. Any thing cut off.

Godless of steel, and from the razor free, It falls a plentiful crop reserv’d for thee. Dryden’s Fables.

To CROP. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To cut off the ends of any thing; to mow; to reap; to lop.
CRO

CRO

CRO

CRO

The mind brings all the ends of a long and various hypothesis together; see how one part coheres with, and depends upon, another; and so clears the apparent contradictions, and contradictions, that seemed to lie cross and uncoy, and to make the whole unintelligible.

South.

7. Contrary to wish; unfortunate.

We bear the great reasonableness of not only a contained, but also a thankful acquaintance in any condition, and under the crossed and severest passages of Providence.

South.

We bear the great reasonableness of not only a contained, but also a thankful acquaintance in any condition, and under the crossed and severest passages of Providence.

South.

CROSS, prep.

1. Athwart: so as to intersect any thing; transversely, across.

The enemy had, in the woods before them, cut down great trees across the ways, so that their horses could not possibly pass that way.

Knolles.

Between the midst and these gods assigned Two habitable seats of human kind; And cross their limits cut a sloping way, Which the twelve signs in beantick order sway.

Dryden's Virgil.

CROSS. n. a. [from the noun.]

1. To lay one body, or draw one line, athwart another.

This for'ceth the stubbornist, for the cause, To cross the cudgel to the laws; What that by breaking them 'had gained,' By their support might be maintained. Hudibras.

The knight, or cross-bill, whose bill is thick and strong, with the tips crossing one another, with great readiness breaks open far-corn, apples, and other fruit, to come at their kernels; so as if the crossing of the bill was designed for this service.

Derham's Physico-Theology.

I shall most carefully observe, not to cross over or derive the copy of such passages for the future, and only to mark in the margin.

Pope.

A hunted hare treads back her mazes, and crosses and confounds her father track. Watts.

2. To sign with the cross.

Frisia

Returns to farmer rich, and bless their huts, And exercise the beds, and cross the walls. Dryden.

3. To cancel: as, to cross an article.

To pass over.

He conquers this proud Turk as far as the Hellespont, which he essayed, and made a visit to the Greek emperor at Constantinople. Temple.

We found the hero, for whom only sake We sought the dark abodes, and crossed the bitter lake. Dryden.

5. To move laterally, obliquely, or athwart; not in opposition; not in the same line.

But he then spaying, 'gan to turn aside, For fear, as see'd, or for some forrein lost: More greedy they of news, fast towards him do cross. Spencer.

To thwart; to interpose obstruction; to embarrass; to obstruct; to hinder; to counteract.

Still do I cross this wretch, wahoos take in hand. Hooker.
The king no longer could endure
Thus to be cross'd in what he did intend. Daniel.
He was so great an enemy to Digby and Colpeper, who were so openly present in debates of the war with the officers that he cross'd all they proposed.
Buried in private, and so suddenly!
It cross'd my design, which was to follow
The rites of funeral fitting his degree. Dryden.
So many had cross'd my course on the sea,
Which France and Holland wanted pow'r to cross, we urge an unseen fate. Dryden.
The firm in peril there,
Though still by faction, vice, and fortune cross'd,
Shall find the generous labour not lost.
Addison's Cato.
7. Not to concur, to be inconsistent with.
Then their wills clash with their understandings, and their appetites cross their duty. Locke.
8. To contravene; to hinder by authority; to countermarch.
No governor is suffer'd to go on with any one course, but upon the least information he is either stopped and cross'd, or other courses appointed him from hence. Spencer on Ireland.
It may make my case dangerous, to cross this in the smallest. Shaksp. Measure for Measure.
9. To conduct.
In this there is not a syllable which any ways cross us. Hobbes.
It is certain, however, it cross'd the received opinion, that sounds may be created without air. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
10. To debar; to preclude.
From his loan no hopeful branch shall spring.
To cross me from the golden time I look for. Shaksp.

To CROSS. n. 7.
1. To lie athwart another thing.
2. To be inconsistent. Men's actions do not always cross with reason.

CROSS-BAR-SHOT. n. s. A round shot, or great bullet, with a bar of iron put through it. Harris.

CROSS-EXAMINE. v. a. [cross and examine.] To try the faith of evidence by captious questions of the contrary party. If we may but cross-examine and interrogate their distresses, their words, their threats, we shall soon confound the invalidity of their most solemn confessions. Dryden's Folly.
The judges shall, as they think fit, interrogate or cross-examine the witnesses. Spectator.

CROSS-STAFF. n. s. [from cross and staff.] An instrument commonly called the fore-staff, used by seamen to place the meridian altitude of the sun or stars. Harris.

CROSS-BITE. n. s. [cross and bite.] A deception; a cheat. The fox, that trusted to his address and manage, without so much as dreaming of a cross-bite from so silly an animal, fell himself into the pit that he had digg'd for another. L'Estrange.

To CROSS-BITE. v. a. [from the noun.] To contravene by deception. No rhetoric must be spent against cross-biting a country evidence, and flogging him out of his senses. Collier.

That many knotty points there are, Which all discuss, but few can clear; As nature still had thought it, for some by ends, to cross-bite wit. Prior.

CROSS-BOW. n. s. [cross and bow.] A missive weapon, formed by placing a bow athwart a stock. Gentlemen suffer their beasts to run wild in their woods, and as wide and as far as the ground, where they are hunted and killed with cross-bows and pieces in the manner of deer. Carew of Cornwall.

The master of the cross-bows, lord Ramburges. Shaksp.

Testimony is like the shot of a long bow, which owes its efficacy to the force of the shooter; argument is like the shot of the cross-bow, equally formidable whether discharged by a giant or a dwarf. Boile.

CROSS-BOWER. n. s. [from cross-bow:] A shooter with a cross-bow. The French assisted themselves by land with the cross-bows of Genoa against the English. Raleigh's Essay.

CROSSGRAINED. adj. [cross and grain.] 1. Having the fibres transverse or irregular.
If the stuff proves cross-grained in any part of its length, then you must turn your stone to plane it the contrary way, so far as it runs crossgrained. Mason.

2. Perverse; troublesome; vexatious. We find in sullen wits, and cross-grained works of modern wits, the wonder of the ignorant. Hodges. The spirit of contradiction, in a cross-grained woman, is incorrigible. L'Estrange.
She was none of your cross-grained, temperaut, scolding judgment, but one had so good a hand of it that he was there in the house in the morning. Arbuthnot's John Bull.
But wisdom, peevishness, and cross-grained, must be opposed, to be invincible. Prior.

CROSSLY. adv. [from cross:] 1. Athwart; so as to intersect something else.

2. Oppositely; adversely; in opposition to. He that provides for this life, but takes no care for eternity, is wise for a moment, but a fool for ever. And acts as unworthyly and crossly to the reason of things, as can be imagined. Tillotson.

3. Un fortunately.

CROSSNESS. n. s. [From cross.] 1. Transverseness; intersection.
2. Perverseness; peevishness. The lighter sort of malignity, tameth but to a crossness or obstinacy to oppose; but the deeper sort, to envy, or worse mischief. Bacon.

I deny nothing, fit to be grained, out of crossness or fault of judgment; but only opposed; to be invincible. Prior.

CROW. n. s. [crows,crowes, crowed, crowing.] 1. To stoop low; to lie close to the ground: as, the lion crouches to his master.

2. To fawn; to bend servilely; to stoop meekly. One that is left in thine house, shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver and a morsel of bread. 1 Sam. viii. 26.

At his heels, Leasht in like bounds, should famish, sword, and fire.
Crouch for employment. Shaksp. Hen. V.

They fawn and crouch to men of parts, whom they cannot ruin; quote them, when they are present; and, when they are absent, steal their pens. Dryden.
Too well the vigour of that arm they know; They lick the dust, and crouch beneath their fatal yoke. Dryden.
Your shameful story shall record of me,
The men all crouch'd, and left a woman free. Dryden.

CROUP. n. s. [croup, crane.] 1. The tumult of a fowl.

2. The butlocks of a horse.

CROUPADES. n. s. [from croup.] Higher leaps than those of corvetes, that keep the fire and blind quarters of the horse in an equal height, so that he trusses his legs under his belly without yerking. Farrar's Diet.

CROW. n. s. [crape, Sax. corus, Lat.] A large black bird that feeds upon the carcasses of beasts.

The crows and crows, that wing the midway air,
Shew scarce so gross as beteles. Shak. King Lear.
To crow he like imperial grace affords,
And though and daws, and such republic birds. Dryden.

To pluck a Crow, is to be industrious or contentious about that which is of no value. If you dispute, we must even pluck a crow about it. Dryden.

That you and I must pull a crow. Hudibras.
3. A piece of iron, with a beak, used as a lever to force open doors; as the Latins called a hook corvis.

The crow is used as a lever to lift up the ends of great heavy timbers, and then they thrust the claws between the ground and the timber; and laying some stuff behind the crow, they draw the other end of the plank backward, and so raise the timber. [Montu's Mechanical Exercises]

Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.
Shaksp. Romeo and Juliet.

Against the gate employ yon crow of tine.
Southern.

4. [From To crow.] The voice of a cock, or the noise which he makes in his gaiety.

CROWFOOT. n. s. [from crow and foot; in Lat. ranunculus.] A flower.

CROWFOOT. n. s. [from crow and foot and] A catbird, or piece of iron with four points, two, three, or four inches long; so that whatever way it falls, one point is up. It is used in war for incommo-ding the cavalry. [Military Dict.]

To CROW. v. n. preterit. I crow, or crowed; I have crowed. [capan, Sax.]

To make the noise which a crow makes in gaiety or defiance. But even then the morning cock crow loud.
S. Hemlent

Diogenes called an ill physician, cock. Why? Why saith he. Diogenes answered. Because when you crow, men rise to rise. [Bacon.]

That the lion trembles at the crowing of the cock, king James, upon trial, found to be fabulous. [Hakewill.]

Within this homestead live'd, without a peer
For crowing loud, the noble Chanticleer,
So bright his cock.
Dryden's Fables.

2. To boast; to bully; to vapour; to bluster; to swagger.

Selby is crowing and, though always defeated by his wife, still crowing on. [Grandison.]

CROWD. n. s. [croud, Sax.]

1. A multitude confusedly pressed together.

2. A promiscuous medley, without order or distinction.

He could then compare the confusion of a multitude to that tumult he had observed in the far-off seas, toting and breaking among its crowd of islands. [Pope.]

3. The vulgar; the populace.

He went not with the crowd to see a shrine,
But fed us by the way with food divine.
Dryden's Fables.

4. [From cruch, Welch.] A fiddle.

Hark how the minstrels 'gim' to shill abroad;
Their merry music that responds from far,
The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling crowd;
That well agree withouten brass or spar.
Spenser's Faithfull

His fiddle is your proper purchase,
Want in the service of the churchers;
And by your doom must be allow'd
To be, or be no more, a crow.
Hudibras.

To CROWD. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To fill with confused multitudes.

A mind which is ever crowding its memory with things which it learns, may cramp the invention itself.
Watts.

2. To press close together.

The time disorder'd, doth in common sense
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form.
To hold our safety up.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

It seems the sea doth still, and narrower from age to age, and sinks more within its channel and the boulders of the earth, according as it can make its way into all those subterraneous cavities, and crowd the air out of them.
Burnet's Theory.

CRO

As the mind itself is thought to take up no space, so its actions seem to require no time; but many of them seem to be crowded into an instant.
Locke.

Then let us fill
This little interval, this pause of life,
With all the virtues we can crowd into it.
Addison's Cato

3. To incumber by multitudes.

How short is life! Why will vain couriers
And crowd a vainer monarch for a smile?

4. To crowd Sail. [a sea phrase.] To spread wide the sails upon the yards.

To CROWD. v. n.

1. To swarm; to be numerous and confused.

They follow their undaunted king;
Crowd through their gates; and, in the fields of light.
The shocking squadrions meet in mortal fight.
Dryden's Virgil.

2. To thrust among a multitude.

A mighty man, had not some cunning sin
Amidst so many virtues crowd'd.
Cowper's Divinity.

CROWDER. n. s. [from crowd and]
A fielder.
Chase-chase sung by a blind crowder.
Shinwell.

CROWKEEPER. n. s. [crow and keep-]
A scarecrow.

That fellow handles his bow like a crowkeeper.
Shaksp.

CROWN. n. s. [crown, Fr. crom, Dut. corona, Lat.]

1. The ornament of the head which descripts imperial and regal dignity.

If thou be a king, where is thy crown?
—My crown is in my heart, not on my head:
My crown is called content.
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.
Shaksp. Henry VI.

2. A garland.

Receive a crown for thy well ordering of the church.
Ecclesiast. Psalm. xcxi.

3. Reward; honorary distinction.

They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible.
1 Cor. ix. 55.

Let merit crowns, and justice laurels give,
But let me happy by your witty life.
Dryd. Epist.

4. Regal power; royalty.

The succession of a crown in several countries places it on different heads.
Locke.

5. The top of the head, in a contemptuous sense.

If he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches,
Make us strange street.
Shaksp. Tempest.

While his head was working upon this thought, the toy took him in the crown to send for the songster.
L'Estrange.

I should! if fortune or a mistress crowns,
Some plums in business, others shave their crowns.
Pope.

6. The top of any thing, as of a mountain.

Upon the crown o' th' cliff, what thing was that Which parted from you?
Shaksp. King Lear.

Huge trunks of trees, sild'ed from the steepy crown.
Of the bare mountains, roll with ruin down.
Dryden's Aeneid.

7. Part of the hat that covers the head.

I once opened a marked athe fracture; it was
About as big as the crown of a man's hat, and lay underneath the pectoral muscle. [Sharp's Surgery.

8. A piece of money anciently stamped with a crown; five shillings.

Trust not your servants, who may misinform you, by which they may perhaps gain a few shillings. [Bacon.

But he that can eat beef, and feed on bread which is so round,
May satisfy his appetite, and owe no man a crown.
Shaksp.

An ounce of silver, whether in pence, gros., or half-crowns, silver or dutavoons, or in bullion, is, and eternally will be, of equal value to any other ounce of silver.
Locke.

9. Honour; ornament; decoration; excellence; dignity.

Such experience is the crown of old men.
Eccles. xxiv. 6.

Therefore, my brethren, dearly beloved, and longed for, my joy and crown, stand fast in the Lord.
Phil. iv. 1.

10. Completion; accomplishment.

CROWN-IMPERIAL. n. s. [corona imperialis; Lat.] A plant.

To CROWN. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To invest with the crown or regal ornament.

Hast you not come upon your eye, my lord,
William lord Hastings had pronounced you part;
I mean your voice for crowning of the king.
Shaksp. Richard III.

Her who farest does appear.
Crow her queen of all the year.
Dryden.

2. To cover, as with a crown.

Umbr, the priest, the proud Mariana led,
And peaceful olives crown'd his hoary head.
Dryden's Aeneid.

3. To dignify; to adorn; to make illustrious.

Thou hast made him a lower than the angels, and hast crown'd him with glory and honour.
Psal. viii. 5.

She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Shaksp.

4. To reward; to recompense.

Urg your success; devise a lasting name,
She'll crown a grateful and a constant fame.
Racemonn.

5. To complete; to perfect.

The lasting and crowning privilege, or rather dignity, of friendship, is to surround.
South.

6. To terminate; to finish.

All these a milk-white honeycomb surround,
Which is in the midst the country banquet crown'd.
Dryden.

CROWNGLASS. n. s. The finest sort of window-glass.

CROWNPOINT. n. s. A post, which in some buildings, stands upright in the middle, between two principal rafters.

CROWNSCAB. n. s. A stinking filthy scab, that breeds round about the corners of a horse's hoof, and is a cancerous and painful sore. [Turris's Dict.

CROWN-THISTLE. n. s. [corona impetialis.] A flower.

CROWNWHEEL. n. s. The upper wheel of a watch next the balance, which is driven by it.

CROWNWORKS. n. s. [in fortification.] Bulwarks advanced towards the field, to gain some hill or rising ground.
Harris.
More familiar grows, the table crums
Attract his slender feet.

Thomson's Winter.

To CRUMBLE. v. a. [from crump.] To break into small pieces; to comminute; to dissever.

Flesh is but the glass which holds the dust
That measures all our time, which also shall
Be crumbled into dust.

Herbert.

If he with his bare hand can unbend thy points,
And crush all thy sinews.

By frequent parceling and subdividing of inheritances, in process of time they became so divided and crumbled, that they were few pieces of able estates.

Atterbury.

The bill leaves three hundred pounds to the mother church; which they can divide like wise, and crumble as low as their will and pleasure will dispose of them.

To CRUMBLE. v. n. To fall into small pieces.

There is so hot a summer in my brain,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust.

Shakep. King John.

Nor is the profit small the peasant makes,
Who smooths with barley, or who pounds with rakes.

The crumpling cloaks.

Dryden's Georgics.

Ambition sigh'd: she found it vain to trust
The faithless cohn, and the crumbling bust.

Sack.

If the stone be brittle, it will often crumble, and pass in the form of gravel.

Arbuthnot on Diet.

What that bever, when its materials crumble.

Must not inevitably tumble?

Swift.

For the little land that remains, provision is made by the late act against popery, that will crumble away.

Swift.

CRUMENAL. n. s. [from crumen, Lat.] A purse.

The fat ox, that wooman ligye in the stall,
Is now fast stalled in her crumenal. Spencer's Past.

CRUMMY. adj. [from crum.] Soft.

CRUMP. adj. [crump, Sax. crum, Dut. krumm, Germ.] Crooked in back.

When the workmen took measure of him, he was crump shouldered, and the right side higher than the left.

L'Estrange.

To CRUMPLE. v. a. [from crump; or corrupted from rumple, rompel, Dut.] To crush to wrinkles; to crush to put it into wrinkles; to crush together in complications.

Sir Roger alighted from his horse, and exposing his palm to two or three that stood by him, they crumpled it into all shapes, and diligent scored every line should be made, could, Addison.

CRUMPLING. n. s. A small degenerable apple.

To CRUNK. V. n. To cry like a to crunkle. crane.

Dict.

CRUPPER. n. s. [from croupe, Fr. the buttocks of the horse.] That part of the horseman's furniture that reaches from the saddle to the tail.

Clopmon had received such a blow, that he had lost the reins of his horse, with his head well high touching the crupper of the horse. Sidney.
Where have you left the money that I gave you?

—Of sixpence that I had a Wednesday last,
To pay the saddler for my master's crupper.

Shakep.

Full of the rivals met, and neither spar'd
His utmost force, and each forgot to ward:
The hight was the saddle to the saddle bitt; the other backward to the crupper sent. Dryden.

CRURAL adj. [from crus, crusis, Lat.] Belonging to the leg.

The sharpness of the teeth, and the strength of the crural muscles, in lions and tygers, are the cause of the great and habitual immorality of these animals.

Arbuthnot.

CRUSADE. n. s. See Croisade.

CRUSA'DO. 1. An expedition against the infidels.
2. A coin stamped with a cross.

I believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of crusades.

Shakep. Othello.

CRUSE. See CRUISE.

CRUISE. n. s. A goldsmith's melting pot.

To CRUISE. v. a. [cruzer, Fr.] 1. To press between two opposite bodies; to squeeze; to force by oppression.
The ass thrust him to the wall, and crush'd
Balamah's foot against the wall.

Numbers, xxii. 25.

Cold causes rheums and deliriums from the head, and some asthmatics crus'd out perrual matter.

Hazlitt.

He crus'd treasure out of his subjects purses by forfeitures upon penal laws.

Bacon.

Bacchus, that first out of the purple grape
Crush'd the sweet poison of misfortune.

If taught and fell like one, but death dec'd me:
I wanted weight of feebly
Moors upon me,
To crush my soul out.

Crus'ed Don Sebastion.

2. To press with violence.

You speak him far—
—I don't extend him, Sir: within himself
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure fully.

Shakep. Cymbeline.

When loud winds from different quarters run,
Vast clouds encountering one another crush.

Waller.

3. To overwhelm; to beat down.

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down, with a heavy fall,
Th' usurping helmits of our adversaries.

Addison, Richard III.

Vain is the force of man, and hea'n's as vain,
To crush the pillars which the pile sustain.

Dryden's Enid.

4. To subdue; to conquer beyond resistance.

They use them to plague their enemies, or to oppress and crush some of their own too stubborn freetholders.

Milton.

Milton
evo: the had not that honour in it 't had it;
for
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
True word to sword.

Shakep. Coriolanus.

This act
Shall bruise the head of Satan, crush his strength,
Defeating sin and death, his two main arms.

Milton.

What can that man fear, who takes care to please a being that is so able to crush all his adversaries? a being that can divert any misfortune from befailing him, or turn any such misfortune to his advantage?

Addison's Guardian.

To CRUSH. v. n. To be condensed; to come into a close body.

CRUSH. n. s. [from the verb.] A collison; the act of rushing together.

Thus shall flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wrack of matter, and the crush of worlds.

Addison's Cato.

CRUST. n. s. [crustia, Lat.] 1. Any shell, or external coat, by which any body is enveloped.

I have known the statue of an emperor quite hid under a crust of dough.

Addison on Metal.

2. An encrustation; a collection of matter into a hard body.

Were the river a confusion of so many different bodies, if they had been all actually dissolved, they would have least formed one continued crust; as we see the scorium of metals always gathers into a solid piece.

Addison on Italy.
To CRY. v. n. [crying, Fr.]

1. To speak with vehemence and loudness.

2. To cry importunately.

3. To explain.

4. To proclaim; to make public.

5. To utter lamentations.

6. To hawker proclamation of wares to be sold in the street: as, the cries of London.

7. Acclamation; popular favour.

8. Voice; utterance; manner of vocal expression.

9. Important call.

CRY. n. s. [crij, Fr.]

1. Lamentation; shriek; scream.

To CRY down. v. a.

1. To blame; to depreciate; to decry.

2. To prohibit.

3. To overbear.

4. To overwhelm.

To CRY out, v. n.

1. To exclaim; to scream; to clamour.

2. To complain loudly.

3. To blame; to censure: with of, against, upon.

4. To declare loud.

5. To be in labour.

6. Crying up.

7. To cause to be cried up.

8. To weep; to shed tears.

9. To utter an inarticulate voice, as an animal.

10. To weep, as a bound on a scent.

11. To proclaim publicly something lost or found, in order to its recovery or restitution.

C R Y

Rhyme is a crutch that lifts the weak alone,
Supports the feeble, but retards the strong. Smith.
The dumb shall sing, the lame his crutch forge,
And leap exulting like the bounding stag.
Pope's Moral.

2. It is used for old age.

3. Beauty doth vanish age, as if new born.

4. And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy. Shak.

To CRUTCH. r. a. [from crutch.] To support on crutches as a cradle.

5. I have seen De Goez and De Luy, to relieve,

6. Two fools that crutch their feeble sense on verse.

To CRY. v. n. [crying, Fr.]

1. To speak with vehemence and loudness.

2. Methought I heard a voice cry. Sleep no more! Macbeth doth murder sleep! the innocent sleep.

4. While his falling tears the stream supplied,

5. Thus mourning to his mother goddess cried.

6. Dryden.

To CRY. v. n. [crying, Fr.]

1. To make public; to proclaim.

2. To proclaim; to make public.

3. Go and cry in the ears of Jerusalem.

4. Jeremiah, ii. 2.

5. To explain.

6. Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,

7. Nor build their grills on the grates of great men.

8. For then my goddess blood must cry against them.

9. What's the matter,

10. That in the several places of the city

11. You cry against the noble senate?

12. Shak.

13. If dressing, mistreating, and oppressing,

14. Take up thy day, the sun himself will cry against thee.

15. Herbert.

16. Lynceous having obtained the favour of sev-

17. ing his ships and navies, surprised at the con-

18. trivice, cried out, that they were built with

19. more human art.

20. Arcturus on Colus.

6. To utter Lamentations.

We came crying hither:

Thou know'st, the first time that we smelt the air,

We wailed and cried as the cradle's infancy.

Shakesp. King Lear.

Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart;

but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit.

Isaiah, xiv. 14.

When evil has been upon philosophers, they groan as pitifully, and cry out aloud, as other men.

Tilottam.

7. To wail, as an infant.

Should some god tell me, that I should be born,

And cry again, his offer I should scorn. Denham.

Thus, in a starr'd night, four children cry.

For the rich spangles that adorn the sky. Waller.

He struggles first for breath, and cries for aid;

Then helps in his mother's lap is laid.

Dryden's Fables.

The child certainly knows, that the worm-eaten or mustard-seed it refutes, is not the apple of the eye.

Locke.

8. To weep; to shed tears.

Her who still weeps with sappy eyes,

And her who is dry, and never cries. Donne.

9. To utter an inarticulate voice, as an animal.

He giveth to the beast his food and to the young ravens which cry.

Psalm cxliii. 9.

The beasts of the field cry also unto them.

Job, xii. 20.

10. To yelp, as a hound on a scent.

He cried upon it at the nearest loss;

Trust me, I take him for the better dog. Shak.

To CRY. v. a.

To proclaim publickly something lost or found, in order to its recovery or restitution.

C R Y

She seeks, she sighs, but no where spies him;

Love is lost, and thus she cries him. Crash.
CRYPTOLOGY. n.s. [Gk. kryptós, hidden, and λογική, language]. Enigmatical language.

CRYSTAL. n.s. [L. crystallum].
1. Crystals are hard, pellicul, and naturally colourless bodies, of regularly angular figures, composed of simple, not filamentous plates, not flexible or elastic, giving fire with steel, not fermenting with acid menstrua, and calcining in a strong fire. There are many species of it produced in different parts of the globe.

CRYSTALLIZATION. n.s. [from crystallize].
1. Congelation into crystals. Such a combination of saline particles as resembles the form of a crystal, variously modified, according to the nature of the salts. The method is by dissolving any saline body in water, and filtering it, to evaporate, till a film appear at the top, and then let it stand to show, and this doth by that attractive force which is in all bodies, and particularly in salt, by reason of its solidity: whereby, when the menstruum or fluid, in which such particles flow, is sated enough or evaporated, so that the saline particles are within each other's attractive powers, they draw one another more than they are drawn by the fluid, then will they run into crystals. And this is peculiar to that, let them be so much divided and reduced into minute particles, yet when they be formed into crystals, each of them reassume their proper shape, so that one might judge of the figure of the whole, from that of its figure. This being an immutable and perpetual law, by knowing the figure of the crystal, we may know the texture of the particles ought to be, which can form those crystals; and, on the other hand, by knowing the texture of the particles, may determine the figure of the crystals.

CRYSTAL adj.
1. Consisting of crystal.
2. Bright; clear; transparent; lucid; pellicul.
   In groves we live, and lie in mossy beds. Byr. Cymb.

CRYSTALLINE, adj. [crystallinus, L.]
1. Consisting of crystal.
   Mount eagle to my palace crystalline. Spenser, Cymbeline.
   We provided ourselves with some small receivers, blown of crystalline glass. Boyle.
2. Bright; clear; transparent; transparent.
   The clarifying of water is an experimental tendency to the health; besides the pleasure of the eye, new water is crystalline. It is effected by casting in and breaking pellucida at the head of the current, that the water may strain through them. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

CUB. n.s. [of uncertain etymology].
1. The young of a beast; generally of a bear or fox.
   I would starve the sternest eyes that look. Pluck the young sucking cub from the she-bear. Shak.
   This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch. The lion, and the bony-pinned wolf, keep their fur dry. Shak. King Lear.
   In the eagle's destroying one fox's cub, his power executed with expulsion. L'Estrange.
2. A young, wild, a whole, perhaps of any viviparous fish.
   Two mighty whales, which swelling seas had lost. Two whelk-like creatures, which kept the fisher at his work. migrating in great numbers over the space of four miles. Hakluyt's Origin of Mankind.

CUBICAL. adj. [from cube].
1. Having the form or properties of a cube.
   A close vessel, containing ten cubical feet of air, will not suffer a wax candle of an ounce to burn in it above an hour before it be suffocated. Boyle's Math. Mag.
   It is above a hundred to one, against any particular throw, that you do not get any given set of faces with four cubical dice; but there are so many several combinations of the six faces of four dice. Bailey's Serm. on Magic.
2. It is applied to numbers.
   The number of four multiplied into itself, produced the square square of sixteen; and that again multiplied by four, produced the cube number of sixty-four. If we suppose a multitude actually infinite, there must be infinite roots, and square and cubical numbers; yet, of necessity, the root is but the fourth part of the quotient, and the sixteenth part of the cubical number. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

CUBICALNESS. n.s. [from cubical].
The state or quality of being cubical.

CUBICULARY, adj. [from cubiculum, L.]
Fitted for the posture of lying down.

CUBIFORM. adj. [from cube and form].
Of the shape of a cube.
CUC

was originally the distance from the elbow, bending inwards, to the extremity of the middle finger. This measure is the fourth part of a well-proportioned man’s stature. Some fix the Hebrew cubit at twenty inches and a half; Paris measure; and others at eighteen. Cabinet.

From the tip of the elbow to the end of the long finger, is half a yard, and a quarter of the man’s stature, having five inches, but the first measure we read of, the art of Noah being framed and measured by cubits. Holder on Time.

CUBIT. [cubitus, Lat.] Containing only the length of a cubit. The watchmen of Tyre might well be called pygmies, the towers of that city being so high, that men below them appeared dwarfish. Bruna’s Vulg. Err.

CUCKSTING. n.s. An engine invented for the punishment of scolds and unquiet women, which, in ancient times, was called tumult. Cowell.

These mounted on a chair-curdle, Which modern call a cuckoo-cuckoo-stool, March proudly to the river’s side. Hudibras.

CUCKOLD. n.s. [cocus, Fr. from cokkoo.] One that is married to an adulteress; one whose wife is false to his bed. But for all the worldly why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for’t.

Shakespeare, Othello.

There have been, or I am much deceived, cuckolds ere now; And many a man there is, ev’n at this present, Now while I speak this, holds his wife by th’ arm, That little thinks she has been slutt’s in’t absence. For though the law makes null th’ adulterer’s deed, Of lusts to her, the cuckold may succeed.

Ever since the reign of king Charles II, the adulterer is made a cuckold, the dudetled virgin is disbundled, and adultery and fornication are committed with less ridicule and great.

Swift.

To CUCKOLD, r.o.

1. To corrupt a man’s wife; to bring upon him the reproach of having an adulterous wife; to rob a man of his wife’s fidelity.

If thou canst cuckold him, thou do’st thyself a pleasure, and me a service. Shakespeare, Othello.

2. To wrong a husband by unchastity.

But suffer not thy wife abroad to roam, Nor strut in streets with assumption pace; For that’s to cuckold thee before thy face. Draper’s Journal.

CUCKOLDLY. adj. [from cuckold.] Having the qualities of a cuckold; poor; mean; cowardly; sneaking.

Poor cuckoldly knife, I know him not; yet I would with thee to cut up mine own; they say the jealous knife hath bastes of money. Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

CUCKOLDMAKER. n.s. [cuckold and make.] One that makes a practice of corrupting wives.

If I suppose a man had that head to hit, either young or old, he or she, cuckold, or cuckoldmaker, let me never hope to see a chime again. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

One Hernando, cuckoldmaker of this city, contrived to steal her away. Drayton’s Spanish Friar.

CUCKOLDOM. n.s. [from cuckold.] 1. The act of adultery.

She is thinking on nothing but her colonel, and conspiring cuckolddom against me. Spenser’s Spanish Friar.

2. The state of a cuckold.

It is a true saying, that the last man of the parish that knows of his cuckoldom, is himself. Aubrey’s quaint John Bull.

CUCKOO. n.s. [cuculus, Lat. cucceo, Welsh; coo; French; cockkock, Dutch.] 1. A bird which appears in the spring, and is said to suck the eggs of other birds, and lay her own to be hatched in their place: from which practice, it was usual to alarm a husband, at the approach of an adulterer, by calling cuckoo; which, by mistake, was in time applied to the husband. This bird is remarkable for the uniformity of his note, from which his name in most tongues seems to have been formed.

Finding morning, like a cuckoo by a nightingale, alone with Pamela, I came in. Sidney.

The merry cuckoo, messenger of spring, His trumpet shrill hath thrice already sounded. Spenser.

The plain song cuckoo gray, Whose note full baremost can boast mark, And dare not answer nay, Shakespear.

Take heed, have open eye; for thieves do foot by night. Shakespeare.

Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds affright. Shakespear.

I deduce, From the first note the hollow cuckoo sings, The symphony of spring; and touch a theme Unknown to fame; the passion of the grove. Thomson.

2. It is a name of contempt.

Why, what a rascal art thou, then to praise him so for running!—A horseback, ye cuckoo;—but a foot, he will not budge a foot. Shakespear, Henry IV.

CUCKOO-BUD. n.s. [cardaminus, Cucurbitac[a, Lat.] The name of a flower.

When dazies pied, and violet blue, And cockoo-bud of yellow hue, Do paint the meadows much delight. Shakespear.

Nettles, cuckoo-bud, and dandle, and all this side wonder. Shak. King Lear.

CUCKOO-SPITTEL. n.s. [cuckoo and spittle.] Cuckoo-spittle, or wood-scorre, is that spumous dew or exudation, or both, found upon plants, especially about the joints of lavender and rosemary; observable with us about the latter end of May. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

CUCULLATE. adj. [cucullus, hooded; cucullated, Lat.] 1. Hooded; covered, as with a hood or cowl.

2. Having the resemblance or shape of a hood.

They are differently cucullated, and capuchoned upon the head and back. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

CUCUMBER. n.s. [cucumis, Lat.] The name of a plant, and also of the fruit of that plant.

It hath a flower consisting of one single leaf, bell-shaped, and expanded toward the top, and cut into many segments; of which some are male or barren, having no endero, but only a large style in the middle, charged with a fruit: others are female, or fruitful, being fastened to an enlarged, which is afterwards covered with a vessel, for the most part oblong and tuberous, which is divided into three or four cells, including many oblong seeds. The species are, 1. The common cucumber. 2. The white cucumber. 3. The long sugar cucumber. 4. Cucumis anguria, which grows along the surface deep. With crooked bodies and with bellies deep. Dioscur’s Fergus.

CUCURBITACEOUS. adj. [from cecurbi, Lat. a gourd.] Cucurbitaceous plants are those which resemble a gourd; such as the papaw and melon. Chaun.

CUCURBITE. n.s. [cucurbita, Lat.] A chymical vessel, commonly called a body, made of earth or glass, in the shape of a gourd, and therefore called cucumber. Quincy.

I have for curiosity’s sake distilled quicksilver in a cucurbit, fitted with a capacious glass head.

Let common yellow sulphur be put into a cucurbit glass, upon which pour the strongest aqua fortis. Mortimer.

CUD. n.s. [cude, Sax.] That food which is reposest in the first stomach in order to rumination, or to be chewed again. Many times, when my master’s calf came hither to chew its cud in this fresh place, I might see the young bull testify his love. Sidney.

You ran to your hangman, and in a moment, when on a flow’ty bank he knew the cud. Dryden.

CUDDEN. n.s. [without etymology.] A CUDDY; claw; a stupid rustick; a low dolt; a low bad word.

The slaving cudden, proud in his staff, Stood ready gaping with pardons in his hand. Dryden.

To Cuddle r.n. [a low word, I believe, without etymology.] To lie close to; to set.

Have you mark’d a partridge pecks,
Viewing the tow’ring falcon night?
She cuddles low behind the brake;
Nor would she stay, nor darts she fly. Prior.

CUDGEL. n.s. [kudse, Dnt.] 1. A stick to strike with, lighter than a club, shorter than a pole.

Vine twigs, while they are green, are brittle; yet the wood, dried, is extreme tough; and was used by the captains of armies, amongst the Romans, for their cudgels.

Bacon.

And cudgel with a faint and bones:
Tremble and vanish. Hudibras.

The ass was quickly given to understand, with a good cudgel, the difference betwixt the one playfellow and the other. Dryden.

His sturdy officer ne’er failed to crack
His knotty cudgel on his tougher lock. Lock.

This, if well reflected on, would make people more wary in the use of the rod and the cudgel.

Draper’s Journal.

CUDGEL. n.s. [without etymology.] Cudgel, r.o.

1. To cross the Cudgels; is to forbear the contest, from the practice of cudgel-players to lay one over the other.

It is much better to give way, than it would be to contend at first, and then either to cross the cudgels, or to be baffled in the conclusion. L’Estrange.

To CUDGEL. r.o. [from the noun.]

1. To beat with a stick.

My lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said he would cudgel you. Shakespeare, Henry IV.

The ass courting his master, just as the spaniel had done, instead of being stroked and made much of, is only rated off and cudgelled for all his courtesies. South.

Three duels he fought, three vir’tu’d his life; Went home, and was cudgell’d again by his Web.

Swift.
2. To jest in general.
Cudgel thy brain no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating.
Shakespeare, Hamlet.

A good woman happened to pass by, as a company of young fellows were cudgelling a walnut tree, and asked them what they did for art.
L'Estrange.

CUDGEL-PROOF. adj. Able to resist a stick.

His docket was of sturdy stuff. And though not sword, yet cudgel-proof.
Hudibras.

CUL, n. s. A small sea-fish.

Of sound fish there are brett, sprat, cudles, eel, and Carew.

CUDWEEDE, n. s. [From cud and weed.]

A plant.
Miller.

1. The tail end of any thing; as, the long curl of a wig.

2. The last words of a speech, which the player, who is to answer, catches, and regards as intention to begin.
Pynomas, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.
Shakespeare, Midsummer Night's Dream.

3. A hint; an intimation; a short direction.

What 'sc Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, that he should weep for her? What would he do, had he the motive and the cue for passion? That I have? He would drown the stocks with tears.
Shakespeare.

4. Let him know how many servants there are, of both sexes, who expect such, and give them their cue to attend in two lines, as he leaves the house.
Swift.

4. The part which any man is to play in his turn.

Hold your hands, both you of my inclination, and the rest;
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it. Without a prompter.
Shakespeare, Othello.

Neither is Otello here a more much more taking gentleman: nothing appears in his cue to move pity, or any way make the audience of his party.
Roper's Tragedies of the Lost Age.

CUL...PO. n. s. [Spanish.] To be in cuerpo, is to be without the upper coat or cloak, so as to discover the true shape of the cuerpo or body.

Exposed in cuerpo to their rage.
Without my arms and equipage. Hudibras.

CUFF, n. s. [Cuff, a battle; cuffare to fight, Ital.]

1. A blow with the fist: a box; a stroke.
The priest let fall the book:
And as he stoop'd again to take it up,
The brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff,
That down fell priest and book, and book and priest.
Shakespeare.

There was no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.
Shakespeare.

He gave her a cuff on the ear, and she would prick him with her knitting-needle.
Addison's John Bull.

Their own sects, which now he denounces, would be soon at cuffs again with each other about power and pretension.
Swift.

2. It is used of birds that fight with their talons.

To Cuff. v. n. [From the noun.] To fight; to scuffle.

Chapping faces acted by the court.
While the peers cuff to make the rabble sport.

To CUFF. v. a.

Dryden's Journal.

To CULL. v. a. [Cull, Fr.]

To select from others; to pick out of many.
The best of every thing they had been culled out for themselves, if there were in their locks any poor diseased thing not worth the keeping, they thought it good enough for the altar of Cull.
Hooke.

Our engines shall be best
Against the haws of this resisting town:
Call for our chiefest men at discretion,
To call the plots of best advantage.
Shakespeare, King John.

Like the bee, culling from every bower,
Our thighs are packed with wax, our mouths with honey.
Shakespeare.

I do remember an apothecary
In tatter'd weeds, with over-sleeving browns,
Culling of simples.
Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet.

Then in a moment fortune shall call forth,
Out of one side, her happy minion.
Shakespeare, King John.

The choiceest of the British, the Roman, Savoy, and Norman laws, being culled, as it were, this grand charter was extracted.

Here's a Parlel of Beasts.
When false flowrs of rhetoric thou wouldst call,
Trust nature, do not labour to be dull.
Dryden.

From his beard he culls,
For slaughter, four the fairest of his bulls.

Dryden's Virgin.

When the current pieces of the same demonstration are of different weights, then the traders in money cull out the heavier, and melt them down with profit.
Lecer.

With humble duty and officious base,
I'll cull the fairest weed for thy repast.
Prior.

The various off-tings of the world appear:
From each she neatly culls with curious toil,
And decks the goddess with the gilt ring spoil.
Pope.

CULLER. n. s. [From cull.] One who picks or chooses.

CULLION. n. s. [From cogline a fool, Ital. or perhaps from scullion. It seems to import meanness rather than folly.] A scoundrel; a mean wretch.

Such a one as leaves a gentleman. And makes a god of such a cullion.
Shakespeare, Taming of the Shrew.

Up to the breach, you dogs! avaunt you cullions.
Shakespeare.

CULLIONLY. adj. [From cullion.] Having the qualities of a cullion; mean; base.

I'll make a top o' th' moonshine of you: you whoreson, cullionly, barber-monster draw.
Shakespeare, King Lear.

CULMBINE. n. s. [More properly spelt COLUMBINE.]
The flowers of this plant are beautifully variegated with blue, purple, red, and white.
Miller.
Her goodly bosom, like a strawberry bed;
Her neck, like a bunch of cullumbines.
Spenser.

CULLY. n. s. [Cogline, Ital. a fool.] A man deceived or imposed upon; as by sharpers, or a strumpet.
Why should you, whose mother-wits are furnish'd with all parts and perfections, be fop'd to put all tricks upon our cattle sex, and we are none?
Hudibras.
Yet the rich cullies may their boasting space; They purchase but sophisticated ware.
Dryden.
He takes it in might judgier, because I won't let him make over by deed as his lawful cullie.
Arabian.

To CULLY. v. a. [From the noun.] To be fool; to cheat; to trick; to deceive; to impose upon.

CULMIFORM. adj. [Culmus, and fr. Lat.]

Culmiform plants are such as have a smooth pointed stalk, and smooth leaves, and at each joint the stalk is wrapped about with single, narrow, long, sharp-pointed leaves, and their seeds are contained in short husks.
Quin.
CUL

There are also several sorts of grasses, both of the Cypris and Cuminum kinds; some with broader, others with narrower leaves.

A standard on Foenus.

The properest food of the vegetable kingdom is taken from the fumicelous or mealy seeds of some cuminum, as caraway, anise, fennel, caraway, hay, rye, malt, panite, millet.

Arab. Athlith.

To CULMINATE. v. n. [culmen, Lat.] To be vertical; to be in the meridian.

Far and wide his eye commands; For sight an obstacle here or, or aisle, But all sunshine as when his beams at noon Culminate in the equator. Milton’s P. L. Tot.

CULMINATION. n. s. [from culminate.] The transit of a planet through the meridian.

CULPABILITY. n. s. [from culpable.]
Blamelessness.

CULPABLE, adj. [culpabilis, Lat.]

1. Criminal. Proceed no stricter against our uncle Gloster, Than from true evidence of good esteem He be approv’d in practice culpable. Shak. H. VI.

2. Guilty; with of. The being perhaps culpable of this crime, or favourers of their friends. Spenser’s State of Fla. IF.

3. Blameable; blameworthy. The wisdom of God setteth before us in Scripture, patterns of virtue, and the sins of one of them without somewhat noted wherein they were culpable; to the end that to Him alone it might always be acknowledged, Thine only art hol. Thine only art just. Hawker. All such ignorance is voluntary, and therefore culpable; forsook whan in every man’s power to have prevented it. South.

CULPABILITY. n. s. [from culpable.]
Blame; guilt.

CULPABLY, adv. [from culpable.] Blamably; criminally.

If we perform this duty pitifully and culpably, it is not to be expected we should communicate kindly.

CULPIT. n. s. [about this word there is great dispute. It is used by the judge at criminal trials, who, when the prisoner declares himself not guilty, and put himself upon his trial, answers Culprit, God send thee a good deliverance.

It is likely that it is a corruption of Quo’l paroit, May it so appear, the wish of the judge being that the prisoner may be found innocent. A man arraigned before his judge.

The knight appeared, and silence they proclain:

Then first the culprit answer’d to his name;

And, after form of law, was last require to name that thing which woman most desire d. Dry.

An author in the condition of a culprit; the publick are his judges: by allowing too much, and condoning too far, he may injure his own cause; and by pleading and asserting too boldly, he may displease the court. Prior’s Prov. to Solomon.

CULP. n. s. [culter, Lat.] The iron of the plough perpendicular to the share. It is commonly written coulter.

Her fellow lost.

The dart, the ball, and rank runny, Dost run upon; while that the cutter ruts That should deracinate such savagery.

Studby, Henry V.

To CULTIVATE. v. a. [cultivar, Fr.]

1. To forward or improve the product of the earth by natural industry.

These excellent seeds implanted in your birth, will, if cultivated, be most flourishing in production; and, as the soil is good, and no cost nor care wanting to improve it, we must entertain hopes of the richest harvest. Tilton on the Classics.

2. To improve; to meliorate.

Were we but conscious of our fault, and patient to cultivate our thoughts, Our voice would flourish. Waller.

To make man mild and submissive to man, To cultivate the face, and soften savage With wisdom, discipline, and liberal arts, Th’embellishments of life. Addison’s Cato.

CULTIVATION. n. s. [from cultitate.]

1. The art or practice of improving soils, and forwarding or meliorating vegetables.

2. Improvement in general; promotion; melioration.

An inanimate light discovers the common notions of good and evil, which, by cultivation and improvement, may be advanced to higher and brighter discoveries. South. A foundation of good sense, and a cultivation of learning, are required to give a seasoning to reflection, and make us taste the blessing. Draper.

CULTIVATOR. n. s. [from cultivate.] One who improves, promotes, or meliorates; or endeavours to forward any vegetable product, or any thing else capable of improvement.

It has been lately complained of, by some cultivators of Italian grass, that a great quantity of the seed not only sprouts up. Pope.

CULTURE. n. s. [cultura, Lat.]

1. The act of cultivation; the act of tilling the ground; tillage. Give us seed unto our heart, and culture to our understanding, that there may come fruit of it. 2 Esdras, viii. 6.

These last three were slower than the ordinary wheat of itself; and this culture did rather retard than advance. Bacon.

The plough was not invented till after the deluge; the earth requiring little or no care or culture, but yielding it so freely and without labour and toil. Woodward.

Where grows? Whence grows it not? If vain our till, We ought to blame the culture, not the soil, Fix’d to no spot is happiness sincere. Pope.

They rose as vigorous as the sun; Then to the culture of the willing glebe. Thomson.

2. Art of improvement and melioration.

One might wear any passion out of a family of culture, as skilful gardeners not a colour out of a plant that house or garden.

Thus to CULTURE. v. a. [from the noun.] To cultivate; to manure; to till. It is used by Thomson, but without authority.

CULVER. n. s. [columba, Lat. culpea, Sax.] A pigeon. An old word.

Had he so done, he had him snatch’d away, More light than culture in the faulconer’s fast. Spenser.

Whence borne on liquid wings. The sounding culture shoots. Thomson’s Spring.

CULVERIN. n. s. [colouivre, Fr.] A species of ordnance; originally a hawk.

A whole cannon requires, for every charge, forty pounds of powder, and a bullet of sixty-four pounds; a culverin, sixteen pounds of powder, and a bullet of ninety-six pounds; a demi-culverine, twelve pounds of powder, and a bullet of twelve pounds. Which are used in the same way.

Here a well polish’d mall giveth us the joy To see our prince his matchless force employ: No sooner has he touch’d the flying ball, But it’s already more than half the mall; And such a fury from his arm’s has go, As from a smacking culverin were shot. Waller.

CULVERKEY. n. s. A flower.

Looking down the meadows I could see a girl cropping culverkeys and cowslips, to make garlands. Walton’s Angler.

To CUMBER. v. a. [kornem, komberen to disturb, Dut.]

1. To embarrass; to entangle; to obstruct.

Why asks he that which avails him not in fight, And would but cumber and retard his flight, In which his only excellence is pleased? You give him death that interposes his haste. Dryden’s Fables.

Hardly his head the pluming of the crowns,

Clung’d with his clouds, and cumber’d with his wings. Dryden.

The meaning and mastery of a tongue, being uneasy and unpleasant enough in itself, should not be cumber’d with any other difficulties, as is done in this way of proceeding. Locke.

2. To crowd or load with something useless. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. Shakesp. Timon.

The multiplying variety of arguments, especially frivolous ones, is not only lost labour, but cumbereth the memory to no purpose. Locke.

3. To involve in difficulties and dangers; to distress. Dostomick fury, and fierce civil strife, Shall cumber all the lands of Italy. Shakesp. Julius Caesar.

4. To busy; to distract with multiplicity of cares. Marshes were cumber’d about much serving. Lask.

5. To be troublesome in any place.

Doth the bramble cumber a garden? It makes the better hedge; where, if it chances to prick the owner, it will tear the thistle. Great’s Cosmog.

CUMBER. n. s. [koburk, Dut.] Vexation; cumberliness; embarrassment; obstruction; hindrance; disturbance; distress.

By the occasion thereof I was brought to as great cumber and danger, as lightly any might escape. Sidory.

Thus fade thy helps, and thus thy cumber spring.

Shakesp. S. W.

The greatest ships are least serviceable, go very deep in water, and are of marvelous charge and cumberful cumber. Raleigh.

CUMBERSOME. adj. [from cumber.]

1. Troublesome; vexations.

Thinking it too early, as long as they had any day, to break off so pleasing a company, with ready to perform a cumbrous obedience. Sidory.

2. Burdensome; embarrassing.

I was drawn in to write the first part by accident, and to write the second by some defects in the first; these are the chief reproaches of authors. Arbuthnot in Aliments.

3. Unwieldy; unmanageable.

Very long tubes are cumberous, and scarce to be readily managed. Newton’s Opticks.

CUMBERSOMELY. adv. [from cumber-some.] In a troublesome manner; in a manner that produces hindrance and vexation.

CUMBERSOMENESS. n. s. [from cumber-some.] Encumbrance; hindrance; obstruction.

CUMBRANCE. n. s. [from cumber.] Burden; hindrance; impediment.

Mostly it riches the, the toll of fools. The wise man’s cumberance, if not share; more apt to slacken virtue, and abate her edge,

Thus prompt her to do aught may merit praise. Milton.

CUMBOUS. adj. [from cumber.]

1. Troublesome; vexatious; disturbing.

A cloud of cumbrous grutes du him modest, All striving to link their festering stings, That from their noon’s pace he no where can rest. Spenser.

2. Oppressive; burdensome.
CUN

Henceforth \( \text{I} \) fly not death, nor would prolong Life much! \( \text{Bent} \) rather, how \( \text{I} \) may be quit, Fairest and easiest, of this cumbrous charge. \( \text{Mitt.} \)
They rear'd him from the ground,
And from his cumbrous arms his limbs unbound;
There'sd a vein.
Dryden.
Possession's load was grown so great,
He sunk beneath the cumbrous weight. \( \text{Swift.} \)

3. Jumbled; obstructing each other.
And over them Aristeus high--lift
Came the artful, cunning, and unbridled
Cupid.
Spenser.

4. Artful, ad. [from cunning.] Artfully; sily; subtly; by fraudulent contrivance; craggy.

Amounst other cribs in this nature, there was difficult enquiry made of such as had raised and dispersed a rust; and rumour, a little before the field fought, that the rebels had the day, and that the king's army was overthrown, and the king fell; whereby it was supposed, that many sucdres were cunningly put off and kept back.

I must meet my danger, and destroy him first;
But cunningly and closely. \( \text{Denham's} \) Sprig.
When stock is high, they come between,
Making by second-hand their offers;
Then cunningly retire unseen,
With each a million in his coffers. \( \text{Swift.} \)

CUNNINGMAN. n. s. [cunning and man.]
A man who pretends to tell fortunes, or teach how to recover stolen goods.
He sent him for a strong detachment
Of beadle, constable, and watchmen,
\( \text{T} \) attack the cunningman for plunder
\( \text{Committed} \) falsely on his lamber. \( \text{Hudibras} \)

CUNNINGNESS. n. s. [from cunning.]
Deceitfulness; siness.

CUP. n. s. [cup. \( \text{Spens.} \) Kep. \( \text{Dut.} \) \( \text{cope.} \) \( \text{Fr.} \)]
1. A small vessel to drink in.
He sent him Paraphus's cup into his hand,
after the former manner when \( \text{he} \) was his butler.
Genius.

2. The liquor contained in the cup: the draught.
When which the \( \text{vill} \) enchantress perceiv'd,
With cup thus charmed imparting she decreed.
\( \text{Spenser.} \)

All friends shall taste the
Wages of their vicious lives.
The cups of their deservings
Shakesp. \( \text{King Lear.} \)
Will's please your lordship, drink a cup of sack?
Shakesp.

They that never had the use
Of the grape's surprising juice,
To the first delicious cup
Their first return render they.
Waller.

The best, the dearest favor of the sky
Must taste that cup; for \( \text{man} \) is born to die.
Dryden. \( \text{Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eternity.} \)

3. [In the plural.] Social entertainment; merry bout.
Then shall our names,
Familiar in their mouth as household words,
Be in their flowing cups fresh remember'd.
Shakesp. \( \text{Henry V.} \)

Let us suppose that \( \text{I} \) were reasoning, as one friend
To another; but that \( \text{I} \) should be
In our cups, without care, without any great affection to either party.
\( \text{Shakesp.} \)

It was near a miracle to see an old man short,
Since his last cup of wine, in that the hazard of
His life was depend'd upon. \( \text{Dryden.} \)

Thence from cups to civil broils;
Milton, in his cups of a fainting summer's day,
His limbs disjointed, and all sick.--
\( \text{Shakesp.} \)

His hand refuses to sustain the bowl.
Dryden. \( \text{Parnas.} \)

4. Any thing hollow like a cup; as, the husk of an acorn; the bell of a flower.
A pyrites of the same colour and shape placed in the cavity of another of a hemiphrick figure, in much the same manner as an oyster in its cap.
\( \text{Hudibras} \)

Cup and Can. Familiar companions.
The can is the large vessel out of which the cup is filled, and to which it is a constant associate.
You boasting tell us where you'd dine,
And how your lordship was so kind.
Swear he's a most facetious man;
That you and he are cup and can:
You travel with a heavy heart;
And quite mistake preferring a road. \( \text{Swift.} \)

6. [copper, Fr. to searify.] A glass to draw the blood in scarification.

Arbitrator:

To CUP. r. a. [from the noun.]
1. To supply with cups. This sense is obsolete.
Plumpy Bacchus, with pinke yeares,
In thy vats our cares be drowned;
With thy grapes my heart shall be crown'd?
Cup us till the world go round.
Dryden. \( \text{Falstaff.} \)

2. [copper, to cut, Fr.] To fix a glass bell or encircle upon the skin, to draw the blood in scarification.
The cloathed blood lies heavy on his heart,
Corrogers, and there remains in spite of art;
Nor breathing veins nor coppering prevail;
All outward remedies and inward fail.
Dryden. \( \text{Falstaff.} \)

You have quartered all the soul language upon me,
that could be raked out of the air of Billingsgate,
without knowing who I am, or whether I deserve to be cupped and searified at this rate.
\( \text{Addison's Spectator.} \)

Blistering, cupping, and bleeding, are seldom of use but to the idle and indifferent.

The can is the large vessel out of which
the cup is filled, and to which it is a constant associate.
You boasting tell us where you'd dine,
And how your lordship was so kind.
Swear he's a most facetious man;
That you and he are cup and can:
You travel with a heavy heart;
And quite mistake preferring a road. \( \text{Swift.} \)

6. [copper, Fr. to searify.] A glass to draw the blood in scarification.

Arbitrator:

To CUP. r. a. [from the noun.]
1. To supply with cups. This sense is obsolete.
Plumpy Bacchus, with pinke yeares,
In thy vats our cares be drowned;
With thy grapes my heart shall be crown'd?
Cup us till the world go round.
Dryden. \( \text{Falstaff.} \)

2. [copper, to cut, Fr.] To fix a glass bell or encircle upon the skin, to draw the blood in scarification.
The cloathed blood lies heavy on his heart,
Corrogers, and there remains in spite of art;
Nor breathing veins nor coppering prevail;
All outward remedies and inward fail.
Dryden. \( \text{Falstaff.} \)

You have quartered all the soul language upon me,
that could be raked out of the air of Billingsgate,
without knowing who I am, or whether I
deserve to be cupped and searified at this rate.
\( \text{Addison's Spectator.} \)
CUR

1. A worthless degenerate dog.
   - A cur, Sir.
   - Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog.
   - Here's an old drudging cur turned off to shift for himself, for want of the very tenth part of the food that he had lost in his master's service. L'Estrange
   - A cur may bear the name of trigger, or waver.
   - Denotes the noblest or the fairest heart.
   - Dryden's Jovial.
CUR

CUR

Cur

CUR.

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur

CUR.

Cur
6. The papers stamped in the English colonies by authority, and passing for money.

CURRENT. adj. [currents, Lat.]
1. Circulatory; passing from hand to hand. Shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.
2. Generally received; uncontradicted; authoritative. Many strange brunts are received for current. Sid. Because they openly repose supposed disorders of state are taken for principal friends to the common benefit of all, under this fair and plausible colour, whatsoever they utter pashen for good and current.
3. Common; general. They have been trained up from their infancy in one set of notions, without ever hearing or knowing what other opinions are current among mankind.
4. Popular; such as is established by vulgar estimation.
   We are also to consider the difference between worth an merit, strictly taken; that is a man's intrinsic, this his current, value; which is less or more, as men have occasion for him. Growth's Com.
5. Fashionable; popular.
   Oft leaving what is natural and fit, The current folly proves our ready wit;
   And authors think their reputation safe, Which lives as long as fools are pleased to laugh.

CURRENT, n. s. [ribes, Lat.]
1. The tree bath no prickles: the leaves are large; the flower consists of five leaves, placed in form of a rose; the ovary, which arises from the centre of the flowercup, becomes a globular fruit, produced in bunches.
2. A small dried grape: properly written corinthis.
   They butcher'd currants on fat veal bestow'd, As though with virgin lover's heart's blood, Insipid taste, 0b friend, to them who Paris know, Where rosmolbe, shallot, and the ran garlick grow.

CURRENCY, n. s. [from current.]
1. Circulation; power of passing from hand to hand. The currency of those half-pence would, in the universal opinion of our people, be utterly destructive to this kingdom.
2. General reception; as, the report had a long currency.
3. Fliency; readiness of utterance; easiness of pronunciation.
4. Continuance; constant flow; uninterrupted course. The currency of time to establish a custom, ought to be with a continuance from the beginning to the end of the term prescribed. Astley's Pareg.
5. General esteem; the rate at which any thing is vulgarly valued.
   He that thinketh Spain to be some great overmaster of this estate, assisted as it is, and may be, is no good mathematician, but takes greatness of kingdoms according to their bulk and currency, and after inlatinarick value.

CURRENCEY. n. s. [from current.]
1. In a constant motion.
2. Without opposition.
   The very cause which maketh the simple and ignorant to think they even see how the word of God runneth current upon their skie, is, that their minds are forestalled, and their conceptions perverted beforehand.
3. Popularity; fashionable; generally.
4. Without ceasing.

CURRENCEYNESS. n. s. [from current.]
2. General reception.
3. Easiness of pronunciation.
   When substantialities combineth with delightfulness, and currentness with stayedness, how can the language sound other than most full of sweetnesse? Camden's Remains.

CURRENCEY. n. s. [corrius, Lat.] One who dresses and pares leather for those who make shoes, or other things.
   A currer bought a bear-skin of a huntsman, and then dressed it for the use of L'Estrange.

CURRISS. adj. [from currish.]
Having the qualities of a degenerate dog; brutal; sour; quarrelsome; malignant; churlish; uncivil; untractable; impracticable.
   Sweet speaking of a currish heart exclains.

To CURE, v. a. [coriun, Lat.]
1. To dress leather, by beating and rubbing.
2. To beat; to brust; to thrash; to chastise.
   A deep design't to divide
   The well affected that confide;
   By setting brother against brother.

To CURE at-handed. I may expect her to take care of her family, and carry her wife in case of refusal. Addison's Spect.

To CURE a horse with a scratching instrument, so as to smooth his coat, and promote his flesh.

4. To scratch in kindness; to rub down with flattery; to tickle.
   If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would hum our men; 1 may expect her to take care of her family, and carry her wife in case of refusal.

5. To cure Favour. To become a favourite by petty officiousness, slight kindnesses, or flattery.
   He judged them still over-abetted to fawn upon the heathens, and to carry favour with in-delicacy.
   But this humour succeeded so with the puppy, that an ass would go the same way to work to carry favour for himself. L'Estrange.
CUSHION. n.s. [husen, Dut. kussen, Fr.] A pillow far the seat; a soft pad placed upon a chair.

Curtate. n.s. [in astronomy.] The distance of a planet's place from the sun, reduced to the eclipsic.

Curtation. n.s. [from curto, to shorten, Lat.] The interval between a planet's distance from the sun and the curtailed distance.

Curtelasse. See Curtlass.

Curtelax. { See Curtalax.

Curtisy. See Courtesy.

Curved. adj. [curvatus, Lat.] Bent; crooked.

Curvature. n.s. [from curva.] Crookedness; inflexion; manner of bending.

Cuvier. n.s. [curvo, Lat.] Anything bent; a flexure or crookedness of any particular form.

Curved. adj. [curvus, Lat.] Crooked; bent; inflected; not straight.

Custom. n.s. [customa.] A word expressing the points or horns of the moon, or other luminaries.

Customable. adj. [from cuspius, Lat.] Customizable.

Customarily. adv. [from customa.] Commonly; habitually; frequently.

Customarily. n.s. [from customable.]

1. Frequency; habit. 2. Conformity to custom.

Custody. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Possession; restraint of liberty.
2. Under the custody and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
3. Defence; preservation; security.
4. For our cocked, is custody severe, and stripes and arbitrary punishment inflicted.

CUSTOME. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.
2. Care; guardianship; charge.
3. Sent to the church, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
4. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
5. To keep the proper and chargeable of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
6. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
7. The ship is an easy matter, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.

CUSTOME. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.
2. Care; guardianship; charge.
3. Defence; preservation; security.
4. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
5. To keep the proper and chargeable of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
6. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
7. The ship is an easy matter, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.

CUSTOME. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.
2. Care; guardianship; charge.
3. Defence; preservation; security.
4. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
5. To keep the proper and chargeable of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
6. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
7. The ship is an easy matter, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.

CUSTOME. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.
2. Care; guardianship; charge.
3. Defence; preservation; security.
4. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
5. To keep the proper and chargeable of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
6. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
7. The ship is an easy matter, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.

CUSTOME. n.s. [custodia, Lat.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.
2. Care; guardianship; charge.
3. Defence; preservation; security.
4. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
5. To keep the proper and chargeable of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.
6. We being strangers here, how that trust it?
7. The ship is an easy matter, and charge of the sons of the church, shall be the boards of the tabernacle.

CUT

CUSTOMARY. adj. [from custom.] 1. Conformable to established custom; according to prescription.

2. Habitual. We should avoid the profane and irreverent use of God's name, by cursing, or customary swearing: and take heed of the neglect of his worship, and of anything belonging to it. *Tilston."

CUSTOMER. n.s. [from custom.] 1. One who frequents any place of sale for the sake of purchasing. One would think it Overdone's house; for here be many customers. Shakespeare.

CUSTOMER, the. 1. A buckler-bearer.

CUT. pret. cut, part. cutt, pass. cut. [probably from the French contour, a knife] 1. To penetrate with an edged instrument; to divide any thing by a sharp edge.

Aye, cut my face sunder,
That my great heart may have some scope to bear;
Or else I swoon with this dead killing news.
Shakespeare, Richard III.

And when two hearts were joint'd by mutual love,
The sword of justice cuts upon the knot,
And severs era for ever.
Dryden's Spanish Friar.

Some I have cut away with scissors.
Wieman's Surgery.

2. To hew.

Thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon.
Chron. II.

3. To curve, to make by sculpture.

Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
Shakespeare.

The truth is blunted by time; but the plate of it is neatly cut upon the wall of a neighbouring building.
Addison.

4. To form any thing by cutting.

Or did they beat the gibbet into thin plates, and cut it into wines.
Exod. xxiii. 3.

5. To divide by passing through.

6. To pierce with any unnecessary occasion.

The man was cut to the heart with these consolations.
Addison.

7. To divide packs of cards.

Suppose they in their heart remain, Exempt from error and from pain; And frankly leave us, human elves,
To cut and shuffle for ourselves.
Prior.

We're sure in vain the cards condemn,
Ourselves both cut and shuffled them.
Prior.

Take a fresh pack, nor is it worth our grieving,
Who cuts or shuffles with our partly leaving.
Granville.

8. To intersect; to cross: as, one line cuts another at right angles.

9. To cut down. To fell; to hew down. All the timber whereof was cut down in the mountains of Cilicia.

10. To cut down. To excel; to overpower; a low phrase.

So great is his natural eloquence, that be cuts down the finest orator, and destroys the best entertainment, as soon as ever he appears to be heard.
Addison's Count Tartufi.

11. To cut off. To separate from the other parts by cutting.

And they caught him, and cut off his thumbs. Jud. i. 6.

12. To cut off. To destroy; to extirpate; to put to death uninterminably.

All Spain was first conquered by the Romans, and filled with colonies from them, which were still increased, and the native Spaniards still cut off.
Spencer on Ireland.

I should cut off the nobles for their lands.
Shakespeare, Macbeth.

This great commander was suddenly cut off by a fatal stroke, given him with a small common instrument.
Horne.

Irenius was likewise cut off by martyrdom.
Addison.

Ill-fated prince! too negligent of life! Cut off in the fresh ripening prime of manhood.
Even in the pride of life, Philip's Doting Mother.

13. To cut off. To rescind; to separate.

To take away.

Fret the will lither, and we shall determine how to cut off some charge in legacies.
*He that cutteth twenty years of life.
Cut off so many years of fearing death.*
Shakespeare, Julius Cæsar.

Presume not upon thy God, who is thine, but he is; There he regards not, owns not, hath cut off;
Quite from his people.
Milton's Agonistes.

The proposal of a remonstrance from me, cut off the hopes of further rewards.
Smollett.

14. To cut off. To intercept; to hinder from union or return.

The king of this island, a wise man and a great warrior, had the matter so, as he cut off their land forces from their ships.
Pocai.

His party was so much inferior to the enemy, that it would infallibly be cut off.
Clarendon.

15. To cut off. To put an end to; to obviate.

To cut off contents, commissioners were appointed to make certain the limits.
Haward.

To cut off all further meditations and interrogations, the king desired him to give over all thoughts of excuse.
Clarendon.

It may compose our unnatural hatreds, and cut off frequent occasions of brutal rage and insolence.
Addison.

16. To cut off. To withhold.

We are concerned to cut off all occasion from these, who seek occasion, that they may have whereof to accuse us.
Rogers.

17. To cut off. To preclude.

Every one who lives in the practice of any voluntary sin, actually cuts himself off from the benefits and profession of Christianity.
Addison.

This only object of my real care, Cut from hope, from joys, from delight, In some few post mortal hours is hurl'd From wealth, from pow'rs, from love, and from itself.
Prior.

Why should those who wait at altars be cut off from partaking in the general benefits of law, or
Swift.

18. To cut off. To interrupt; to silence.

It is no grace to a judge to shew quickness of conceit in cutting off evidence or counsel too short.
Bacon.

19. To cut off. To apostrophise; to abbreviate.

No vowel can be cut off before another, when we cannot sink the pronunciation of it.
Swift.

20. To cut out. To shape; to form.

By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out the purity of his.
Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

1. I, for my part, do not like images cut out in juyniper, or other garden-stuff; they be for children.

Bacon.

There is a large table at Montmorancy cut out of the thickness of a vice stock.

The antiquaries being but indiftferent tailors, they wrangle profudely about the cutting out the top of the head.
Arbuthnot on Cynics.

They have a large forest cut out into walks, extremely thick and gloomy.
Addison.

21. To cut out. To scheme; to contrive.

Having a most persifling fancy kindled within the very bowels of his own forest, he had work enough cut him out to extinguish it.
Howel.

Every man had cut out a place for himself in his own short head. I could reckon up in my army two or three lord-treasurers.
Addison.

22. To cut out. To adapt.

You know I am not cut out for writing a treatise, nor have a genius to pen any thing exactly.
Rymer.

23. To cut out. To debar.

I am cut out from any thing but common acknowlledgements, or common discourse.
Pop.

24. To cut out. To excel; to outdo.

25. To cut short. To hinder from proceeding by sudden interruption.

Thus much he spoke, and more he would have said,
But the stern hero turn'd aside his head, And cut him short.
Dryden's Enocil.

Achilles cut him short; and thus replied,
My worth, allow'd in words, is in effect denied.
Dryden.

26. To cut short. To abbreviate; as, the soldiers were cut short of their pay.

27. To cut up. To divide an animal into convenient pieces.

The boar's intemperance, and the note upon him afterwards, on the cutting him up, that he had no brains in his head, may be moralized into a sensual man.
L. Larrouse.

28. To cut up. To eradicate.

Who cut up mallow by the bushes, and juniper-roots for their meat.
Job.

This doctrine cuts up all government by the roots.
Locke.

29. To cut v. n.

1. To make way by dividing; to divide by passing through.

When the teeth are ready to cut, the upper part is rubbed with hard substances, which inflames, by a natural instinct, the gums.

2. To perform the operation of lithotomy.

He saved the lives of thousands by his manner of cutting for the stone.
Pop.

3. To interfere: as, a horse that cuts.

CUT. adj. Prepared for use; a metaphor from hewn timber.

Sets of phrases, cut and dry, Evenmore the tongue supply.
CUT

CUT. n.s. [from the norn.] 1. The action of a sharp or edged instrument; the blow of an ax or sword. 2. The impression or separation of continuity, made by an edge or sharp instrument: distinguished from that made by perforation with a pointed instrument. 3. A wound made by cutting. Sharp weapons, according to the force, cut into the bone many ways; which cuts are called soles, and are reckoned among the fractures. 4. A channel made by art. This great cut or ditch Sestositta the rich king of Egypt, and long after him Potimacus Philadelphia, purposed to have made a great deal wider and deeper, thereby to have let the Red Sea into the Mediterranean. Knolles. 5. A part cut off from the rest. Suppose a head to be ten foot long, and one end, one cut is reckoned so many foot. Martineau's Husbandry. 6. A small particle; a shred. It hath a number of short cuts or shreadings, which may be better called wickers than shreaders. Hooker. 7. A lot made by cutting a stick. My lady Zahmatic and my daughter Mopsa may draw a short cut with a stick first. Suidens. A man may as reasonably draw cuts for his tenants, and regulate his persuasion by the cast of a die. Locke. 8. A near passage, by which some angle is cut off. The ignorant took heart to enter upon this great calling, and instead of cutting their way in through the knowledge of the tongues, the fathers and councils, they have taken another and a shorter cut. South. There is a shorter cut, an easier passage. Decoy of Pity. The evidence of my sense is simple and immediate, and therefore I have but a shorter cut thereby to the ascent to the truth of the things so evidenced. Hale's Origin of Mankind. But the gentleman would see me part of my way, and carry me a short cut through his own ground, which saved me half a mile's ride. Swift's Examiner. 9. A picture cut or carved upon a stamp of wood or copper, and impressed from it. In this form, according to his description, he is set forth in the prints or cuts of martyrs by Cevalerius. Brown. It is I believe, used improperly by Addison. Madame Dufler, from some old cuts of Terence, fancies that the larva or person of the Roman actors was not only a vizard for the face, but had false hair to it. Addison on Italy. 10. The stamp on which a picture is carved, and by which it is impressed. The act or practice of dividing a pack of cards. How can the mise her aid impart, Unskil'd in all the terms of art? Or in harmonious numbers put The deal, the shuffle of the cut. Swift. 12. Fashion; form; shape; manner of cutting into shape. Their clothes are after such a Pagan cut too, That, sure, they've worn out Christianon. Shah. Henry VIII. His tawny beard was th' equal grace Both of his wisdom and his face; In cut and dye so like a tile, A sudden view it would begin. Hudibras. They were so familiarly acquainted with him, as to know the very cut of his beard. Stillingfleet. Children love breaches, not for their cut or ease, but because the having them is a mark or step toward manhood. A third desires you to observe well the togs on such a reverse, and asks you whether you can in consequence tell, from the sleeve of it, to be of the true Roman cut. Addison. Sometimes an old fellow shall wear this or that sort of cut in his chattels with great integrity. Addis. Spectator. Will thou buy there some high heads of the newest cut for my daughter? Dr. Johnson's History of John Bull, de. A proverbial expression for men of all kinds. It is borrowed from dogs. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman. Ay, that I will, come cut and long tail, under the degree of a squire. Shaw, Merry Wives of Windsor. At quintain he, In honour of this birthday. Both halliards; 'tis either wide countree; Come cut and long tail; for there be Six brothers as bold as he. Ben Jon. Underwood. CUTANEOUS. adj. [from cutis, Lat.] relating to the skin. This superficial tis. is more readily cut into the cutaneous or remotest parts of the body. Faller on Humours. Some sorts of cutaneous eruptions are assisted by feeding much on acid unripe fruits and farinaceous substances. Arthus. CUTICLE. n.s. [cuticula, Lat.] 1. The first and outermost covering of the body, commonly called the scarffin. This is that soft skin which rises in a blister upon any burning, or the application of a blistering plaster. A nurse, by putting the surface of the true skin, to which it is also tied by the vessels which nourish it, though they are so small as not to be seen. When the scarffin is examined with a microscope, it appears to be made up of several layers of exceedingly small scales. Quincy. In each of the very fingers there are bones and gristles, and ligaments and membranes, and muscles, and tendons, and nerves and arteries, and veins and skin, and cuticle and nail. Bentley's Sermons. 2. A thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor. When any salutary liquor is evaporated to cuticle, and let cool, the salt concretes in regular figures; which argues that the particles of the salt, before they concurred, floated in the liquor at equal distances in rank and file, Newton's Opticks. CUTICULAR. adj. [from cutis, Lat.] belonging to the skin. Cut, signifies knowledge or skill. So Cuthicas a knowing conquorer; Cuthred, a knowing counsellor; Cuthbert, famous for skill. Much of the same nature are Sophocles and Sophimnas. Gibson's Camden. CUTLASS. n.s. [cutelas, Fr.] This word is written sometimes cutlass, sometimes cutlere; in Shakespeare, cutlere; and in Pope, cutlass. A broad cutting sword; the word is much in use among the seamen. Were 't not better That I did suit me all points like a man? A gallant cutlasse upon my thigh, A bow-spear in my hand. Shakes. As you like it. To the bodkin. Cutlass of the famous Will of 1698. Where the fag pockets slept beneath the sun; To or his cutlass launch'd the spouting blood. They quarter'd, sing'd, and bid on for old Fag. Pope. CUTLER. n.s. [cuteller, Fr.] One who makes or sells knives. A purlsey rig. That she did give, whose poesy was For all the world like cutlers poetry. Upon a knife; love me, and leave me not. Shakespeare. In a bye cutler's shop he bought a tempey knife; so clemp was the instrument of this great attempt. Wotton. He chose no other instrument than an ordinary knife, which he bought of a common cutler. Clarron. CUTPURSE. n.s. [cut and purse.] One who steals by the method of cutting purses; a common practice when men wore their purses at their girdles, as was once the custom. A thief; a robber. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cutpurse. Shakespeare. Winter's Tale. A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, That from a shelf the precious diadem stole. And put it in his pocket. Shakespeare, Hamlet. There was no tawny, no bawd, But cutpurse, nor bungler abroad! Hudibras. If we could imagine a whole nation to be cutpurse and robbers, what would then be kept that square dealing and equity in such a monstrous den of thieves! Bentley's Sermons. CUTTER. n.s. [from cut.] An agent or instrument that cuts any thing. 2. A nimble boat that cuts the water. 3. [sic]esures.] The teeth that cut the meat. The molares, or grinders, are the chief, nearest the centre of motion, because there is a greater strength or force required to chew the meat than to bite a piece; and the cutters before, that they may be ready to cut off a morsel from any solid food, to be transmitted to the grinders. Ray on the Creation. 4. An officer in the Exchequer that provides wood for the tallies, and cuts the wood paid upon them: and then casts the same into the court to be written upon. Cowell. CUT-THROAT. n.s. [cut and throat.] A ruffian; a murderer; a butcher of men; an assassin. Will you then suffer these robbers, cut-throats, base people, gathered out of all the corners of Christendom, to waste your countries, spoil your cities, murder your people, and trouble all your states? Knolles. Perhaps the cut-throat may rather take his copy from the Parisian massacres, one of the horrid instances of barbarous inhumanity that ever was known. South. The ruffian robbers by no justice are'd, And unpaid cutthroat soldiers are abroad; Those wretched souls, who, harden'd in each ill, To save complaints and prosecution, kill. Draper's Journal. CUT-THROAT. adj. Cruel; inhuman; barbarous. If to take above fifty in the hundred be extremity, this in truth can be none other than cut-throat and abominable dealing. Carew's Survey of Cornwall. CUTTING. n.s. [from cut.] A piece cut off; a chop. The burning of the cuttings of vines, and exsting them upon land, doth much good. Bacon's Nat. Hist. Many are propagated above ground by slips or cuttings. Ray.
C Y L

CUTTLE. n. s. [sepia.] A fish, which, when he is pursued by a fish of prey, throws out a black liquor, by which he darkens the water and escapes.

It is somewhat strange, that the blood of all birds, and beasts, and fishes, should be of a red colour, and only the blood of the cuttle be as blue as blue can be.

He that uses many words for the explaining any subject, doth, like the cuttle fish, hide himself for the most part in his own ink. Ray on the Creation.

CUTTLE. n. s. [from cuttle.] A foul-mouthed fellow; a fellow who blackens the character of others. Hamner.

Away, you curst rascal; you filthy hung away; by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouth and chop it, if you play the saucy cuttle with me. Shaksp. Henry IV.

C Y C L E. n. s. [cyclic, Lat. cyclus,] 1. A circle.

2. A round of times; a space in which the same revolutions begin again; a periodical space of time.

3. A method, or account of a method, continued till the same course begins again.

We thought we should not attempt an inaccessible work, if here we endeavoured to present our readers with a complete cycle of what is requisite to be done throughout every month of the year. Evelyn's Calendar.

4. Imaginary orbs; a circle in the heavens.

How build, unbuild, contrive
To save appearances: how gird the sphere
With centric, and excentric, scribbled o'er Cyclic, and cycloidal shape. Milton.

CYCLOID. n. s. [from κυκλοεις, of κύκλος, and εἶπε,] A geometrical curve, of which the genesis may be conceived by imagining a nail in the circumference of a wheel: the line which the nail describes in the air, while the wheel revolves in a right line, is the cycloid.

CYCLOIDAL. adj. [from cycloid.] Relating to a cycloid; as the cycloidal space, is the space contained between the cycloid and its substance. Chambers.

CYCLOPÉDIA. n. s. [κύκλωπ and πεδία,] A circle of knowledge; a course of the sciences.

CYCNET. n. s. [from cygna, Lat.] A young swan.

I am the cygnet to this pase faint swan,
Who chains a delicate lyre to his own death. Shaksp. King John.

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,
Keeping them prisoners under her wings.
Shak. Henry VI.

Cygnetts, from grey, turn white.

Bacon: Nat. Hist.

Young cygnets are good meat, if fattened with oats; but, fed with weeds, they taste fishy.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

CYLINDER. n. s. [κύλινδρος,] A body having two flat surfaces and one circular.

The quantity of water which every revolution does carry, according to any inclination of the cylinder, may be easily found. Wilkins.

The square will make you ready for all manner of compartments, basins, pedestals, plots, and buildings; your cylinder, for vaulted towers, and round buildings. Peacham.

CYLINDRICAL. adj. [from cylinder.]

CYLINDRICAL CYLINDER] Partaking of the nature of a cylinder; having the form of a cylinder.

Miners ferri stilactitii, when several of the cylinder stream are contiguous, and grow together into one nodule, is called brashiron ore. Woodward's Natural History.

Obstructions must be most incident to such parts of the body where the circulation and the elastic fibers are both small; and those glands, which are the extremities of arteries formed into cylindrical canals. Arbuthnot. On Atm.

CYMA'R. n. s. [properly written simar.] A slight covering; a scarf.

Her comedy limbs composed with decent care;
Her body shaded with a slight exsar;
Her bosom to the view was only bare. Dryd.

CYMATHIUM. n. s. [Lat. from κυμαθις,] a little wave,] A member of architecture, whereof one half is convex, and the other concave. There are two sorts, of which one is hollow below, as the other is above.

Harris.

In a cornice, the gola, or cymathium of the cornice, the coping, the modillions, or dentelli, make a kind show by their grace fulproportions. Spectator.

CYMBAL NAL, n. s. [cymbalum, Lat.] A musical instrument.

The trumpets, sackbut, psalteries, and futes, Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance.

If wrath should fail, I'll bus her with cares,
Silence her clamorous voice with louder wars;
Trumpets and drums shall fright her from the trash;
As sounding cymbals aid the lab'ring moon. Dryd. Brev. Anguze.

CYNANTHROPHY. n. s. [κυνανθρωπος, and ανθρωπος,] A species of madness in which men have the qualities of dogs.

CYNAR'TOMACIES. [κυναιρτομαχια,] A word coined by Butler, to denote bear-baiting with a dog.

That some occult design doth lie
In bloody cynar'tomachy,
Is plain enough to him that knows
How saints lead broken ones by the nose. Hudibras.

CYNEGETICKS. n. s. [κυναγοικα,] The art of hunting; the art of training and hunting with dogs.

There are extant, in Greek, four books of cynegetics, by Brown's Tuffe. Fbr.

CYNICAL. adj. [κυνικος,] Having the cynick; qualities of a dog; curiish; brutal; snarling; satirical.

He doth believe that some new-fangled wit (it is his cynical phrase) will some time or other find his willius.

CYNICK. n. s. [κυνικος,] A philosopher of the snarling or curiish sort; a follower of Diogenes; a rude man; a snarler; a misanthrope.

How vilely doth this cynick thine
Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence. Shak.

C Y N

CYN'. See CYON.

Gather cyon for grafts before the beds sprout. Linneus.

CYPRESS-TREE. n. s. [cypressus, Lat.] 1. The cypress is a tall straight tree, produced with great difficulty. Its fruit is of no use: its leaves are bitter, and the very smell and shade of it are dangerous. Hence the Romans looked upon it to be a fatal tree, and made use of it at funerals, and in mournful ceremonies. The cypress-tree is always green, and never either roots or is worm eaten.

Calmet.

In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowned;
In cypress chess my arms counterpane. Shaksp. He taketh the cypress and the oak, which he strengtheneth for himself among the trees of the forest. 4. Hen VIII. 14.

Poplars and alders ever-vigouring play'd,
And nudging cypress form'd a fragrant shade. Pope's Odyssey.

C Y Z

2. Being anciently used in funerals, it is the emblem of mourning.

Poison be their drink,
Their sweeter shade a grove of cypress trees. Spence. Fitz. Henry VI.

CYPRIUS. n. s. [I suppose from the place where it was made; or corruptly from cypresse, as being used in mourning.] A thin transparent black stuff.

Lawn as white a driven snow,
Cypress black as e'er was crow. Shak. Wint. Tale. A cypress, not a bosom, Shak.

Hides my poor heart! Shak.

C Y S T. n. s. [kyste,] A bag containing

CYSTIS. some morbid matter.

In taking it out, the cystis broke, and showed itself by its matter to be a mellectis. Warton's Surgery.

There may be a consumption, with a paralytic spitting, when the vomit is contained in a cyst or bag; upon the breaking of which the patient is commonly suffocated. Arbuthnot on Diet.

CYSTIC. adj. [from cyst a bag.] Contained in a bag.

The bile is of two sorts; the cystitic, or that contained in the gall-bladder, a sort of repository for the gall; or the hepatic, or what flows immediately from the liver. Arbuthnot.

CYSTOTOMY. n. s. [κυστος and τομα,] The act or practice of opening incysted tumours, or cutting the bag in which any morbid matter is contained.

C Y Z

A (Scalavonian word, written more properly tzer.) The title of the emperor of Russia.

CZARINA. n. s. [from czar.] The empress C Y Z of Russia.

DAB

D is a consonant nearly approaching in sound to T, but formed by a stronger appulse of the tongue to the upper part of the mouth. The sound of D in English is uniform, and it is never mute.

DACE. n. s. [of uncertain derivation: in most provinces called dace. Leuciscus.] A small river fish, resembling a roach, but less.

Let me live harmless, and near the brink
Of Trent or Avon have a dwelling place;
Where I may see my quill or cork sink down
With eager bite of perch, or bleak, or dace, or tench.

DADDY. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A small lump of anything.
2. A blow with something moist or soft.
3. Something moist or slimy thrown upon one.

4. [In low language.] An artist; a man expert at something. This is not used in writing.
5. A kind of small flat fish.

Of flat fish there are rays, bowks, dabbs, plaice. Carew.

DADDY. n. s. [of adjective dadd.] A small water fowl, called likewise Dobchick, and Didupper, and Dipchick, Colombus. Roy.

A dobchick waddles through the copse
On feet and wings, and lies, and wades, and hops. Pope.

DADDLE. v. a. [dabcelen, Dutcbr.] To smear; to daub; to spatter; to bespinkle; to wet. A shuttle, like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood. Shakspe. Richard III.
I scarified, and dabbled the wound with oil of turpentine. Winsor's Surgery.

Mean while the South, rising with dabbled wings,
A sable cloud athwart the velvctin skies. Swift.

DAPPLE. v. n.
1. To play in water; to move in water or mud.

Neither will a spirit, that dwells with stars*
Dabbe in this impurer mind. Gunning's Apel.

The little one complained of her legs, that she could neither swim nor dabble with them. L. Est.

But when he found the boys at play,
And saw them dabbling in their play,
And mark the progress of their work. Swift.

2. To do any thing in a slight, superficial, or shallow manner; to tamper.

Shakespeare shall be put into your hands, as clear and as fair as it came out of them; though you, I think, have been dabbling here and there with the text, I have had more reverence for the writer and the printer, and left every thing standing.

DABBLED. n. s. [from dabble.]
1. One that plays in water.
2. One that meddles without mastery; one that never goes to the bottom of an affair; a superficial meddler.

He dares not complain of the tooth-ach, lest our dabblers in politics should be ready to swear against him for dissection. Swift.

DAG. n. s. [dague, Fr.]
1. A dagger.

2. A hand-gun; a pistol: so called from serving the purpose of a dagger, being carried secretly, and doing mischief suddenly. It is in neither sense now used.

To DAG. v. a. [from daggle.] To daggle; to bemire; to let fall in the water: a low word.

DAGGER. n. s. [dague, Fr.]
1. A short sword; a poniard.

She ran to her son's dagger, and struck herself a mortal wound. Sidney.

This sword a dagger had his page,
And was but little for his age; And therefore waited on him as
As dwells upon knightly servit, do, Hudibras.

He strikes himself with his dagger; but being interrupted by one of his friends, he stabs him, and breaks the dagger on one of his ribs. Addison.

2. [In fencing schools.] A blunt blade of iron with a basket hilt, used for defense.

3. [With printers.] The obelisk; a mark of reference in form of a dagger; as [†].

DAGGERS-DRAWING. n. s. [dagger and draw.] The act of drawing daggers: approach to open violence.

They always are at daggers-drawing,
And one another chaffering.

Hudibras.

I have heart of a quarrel in a tavern, where all were at daggers-drawing, till one desired to know the subject of the quarrel. Swift.

To DAGGLE. v. a. [from dag dew; a word, according to Mr. Lyt., derived from the Danish; according to Skinner, from Daeg sprinkled, or begun to dip. They are probably all of the same root.]

To dip negligently in mire or water; to bemire; to bespinkle.

To DAGGLE. v. n. To be in the mire; to run through wet or dirt.

Nor like a puppy, daggled through the town,
To fetch and carry sing-song up and down. Pope.

DAGGLED-TAIL. [daggled and tall.] Be- mired; dipped in the water or mud; bespattered.

The gentlemen of wit and pleasure are apt to be chocked at the sight of so many daggled-tailed persons, that happen to fall in their way. Swift.

DAILY. adj. [dale, Sax.] Happening every day, or very frequently; done every day; quotidian.

Much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince. Shak.

Case, man of woman born! to hope relief
From daily trouble, and continued grief. Prior.

DAILY. adv. Every day; very often.

Let that man with better sense advise,
That of the world that part to us is left;
And daily through hardy enterprise
Many great regions are discovered. Fairy Queen.

A man with whom I conversed almost daily for years together.

DAMN. n. s. [damn, Fr.]
1. Elegantly; deliciously.

Truth is a naked and open day-light, that doth
Fast these joggles and schemers and triumphs of the world, half so stately and damnably as candle-light.

Bacon.

2. Deliciously; pleasantly.

There is no region on earth so damnably watered, with such great navigable rivers. Howell's Vocab. F.
DAI

Those young suitors had been accustomed to nothing but to sleep well, and fare dainty.

3. Nicely; ceremoniously; scrupulously.
4. Squeamishly; fastidiously.

DAINTINESS. n.s. [from dainty.]

1. Delicacy; softness.
What should yet thy palate please?

Daintinesses to be different.
Sleek'd limbs and finest blood. Ben Jonson.

2. Elegance; nicety.
The duke excelled in the daintiness of his leg and foot, and the curl of the fine shape of his hands. Watton.

3. Delicacy; deliciousness.
It was more notorious for the daintiness of the provision which he served than for the Dainty and dainty.

All things that are dainty.

4. Squeamishness; fastidiously.
Of sand, and lime, and clay, Vitruvius hath discoursed without any daintiness. Watton.

5. Ceremoniousness; scrupulously.

DAINTY. adj. [derived from dain, an old French word for delicate; which yet I cannot find in dictionaries.]

1. Pleasing to the palate; of exquisite taste; delicious.
Higher conceptions required for sweetness, or pleasure of taste, and therefore all your dainty are capable of nothing but a little dry.

2. Delicate; of acute sensibility; nice;
squeamish; soft; luxurious; tender.
This is the lowest, yet the daintiest sense;

Dainty.
She makes dainty.

And with dainty hands and so nice.

3. Scrupulous; ceremonious.
Which of you all

Dainty.
I shall have use for your hand.

But let us not be dainty of leave-taking.

Therefore to horse;

Shak. Macbeth.

4. Elegant; tenderly, languishingly, or effeminate beautifully.
My house, within the city,

Dainty.
Richly furnished with plate and gold.

Shak. and others to have her dainty hand. Shak.

Why should ye be so crook'd to yourself,

Dainty.
And to those dainty limbs, which nature

Dainty.
Doth grace and delicacy. Milton.

5. Nice; affectionately fine; in contempt.
Your dainty speakers have the curse,

Dainty.
To plead bad causes down to worse.

Prior.

DAIL. n.s.
1. Something nice or delicate; a delicacy;
something of exquisite taste.
Be not desirous of his dainties; for they are delightful meat. Proverbs, xxviii. 3.

A worm bred breath in mead, of the shape of a large white maggot, which is given as a great dainty to nightingales. Bacon

Sleek'd hands, and doth not dye her dainty store.

Bacon

Unbought dainties of the poor. Dryden.

The shepherd swains, with sure abundance didst.

On the fat flocks and rural dainties feast. Pope.

2. A word of fondness formerly in use.
Why, that's my dainty; I shall miss thee;

Dainty.
But yet thou shalt have freedom. Shak. Tempest.

There's a fortune coming.
Towards you, dainty, that will take thee thus,

Dainty.
And set thee aloof. Ben Jonson.

DAVY. n.s. [from dey, an old word for milk. Mr. Lyce.]
1. The occupation or art of making various kinds of food from milk.
Grounds were turned much in England either to feeding or dairy; and this advanced the trade of English butter. Temple.

2. The place where milk is manufactured.
You have no more wealth
Than the coarse and country fare.

That doth haunt the hearth or dairy. Ben Jonson.

White stores and milkman's coats stand.
A thousand hands that wander on the plain. Dryden.

She in pens his flock will fold,

And then produce her dairy store. Dryden.

3. Pasture for milk-cows.
Ground where milk-cows are kept.

Dairy.
Milk being well housewived, are exceeding

Dairy.
Children, in dairy counties, do wax more tall than where they feed more upon bread and flesh.

Bacon.

Dairymaid. n.s. [dairy and maid.]
The woman servant whose business is to manage the milk.
The poorest of the sex have still an itch
To know their fortunes, equal to the rich;

The dairymaid enquires if she shall take
The trinity taylor, and the cook forsyde. Dryden.

Come up quickly, or we shall conclude that you are in love with one of Sir Roger's dairy maids. Addison.

DAISY. n.s. [from day's eye. Chaucer.]
A spring flower.
It hath a perennial root; the stalks are naked, and covered only with the power of sealy and simple, divided into many segments to the foot-stalk. The flowers are radiated; and the Daisy.

Heed this, and fear not for thy beauty.

Daisy.
Now anthora shows, now the daisy spring;

Daisy.
Now leaves the trees, and floods adorn the Daisy.

This will find thee picking of daisies, or smelling at a lock of hay. Addison.

Fair handed spring unequales every grace;

Daisy.
The daisy, primrose, violet.

Thomson.

DALE. n.s. [dalci, Gothic; dal, Dut.
and Germ.]
A low place between hills;
a vale; a valley.

Long lost with storms, and beat with bitter winds,

Dale.
High over hills, and low adown the dale.
She wand'ring many a wood, and meand'ring many a vale.

Dale.
Too oft the downfall of the fairy state.
This dale, a pleasing region, but not leastest,

Dale.
This vale possesst' they, and had still possesst'

Dale.
He steals along the lonely dale. Thomas. Spring.

DALLANCE. n.s. [from dally.]

1. Interchange of caresses; acts of fondness.
Look thou be true; do not give dalliance
To much the rove; the strongest caths are straw
To th' heart of blood. Shak. Tempest.

Not gentle purpose, nor endearing smiles,

Dally.
Wanted; or youthful dalliance, as bespeaks
Fair couple kind'd in happy nuptial league.

Dally.
Alone as they. Milton.

I'll head my people;

Dally.
Then think of my danger o'er;

Dally.
My warlike spirits work now another way,

Dally.
And my soul's to'di to trumpets. Dryden.

2. Conjoval conversation.
The giant, self-domayned with the sound,
Where with his Daless dalliance found,

Dally.
In haste came rushing forth from inner bow.

Dally.
That bow'er not mystickly, where the sappient king

Dally.
Held dalliance with his fair Egyptian spouse.

Milton.

DAM

Thou claimest me for thy sire,
And my fair son here show'st me, the dear pledge
Of dalliance had with thee in thine. Milton.

3. Delay; procrastination.
Both wind and tide stay for this gentleman;

Dally.
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Good God, that you have done us dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise. Shake.

DALLIER. n.s. [from dally.]
A trifler; a fondler.
The daily dalliers with pleasant words, with smiling countenances, and with wagers purposed to be lost before they were purposed to be made.

Ascham.

DALLOP. n.s. [of unknown etymology.]
A tuft, or clump; not in use.
Of barley, the first and second green, yeast,

Dally.
Leaves standing unduly stiff, they do bind. Tusser.

DALLY. n.s. [dolten, Dut. to trifle.]
1. To trifle; to play the fool; to amuse one's self with idle play; to lose time in trifles; to procrastinate idly.

If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life,

Dally.
With daintiness, and all that offer to defend him,

Dally.
Stand in assured loss. Shak. King Lear.

He left his ear, and laying his hand on

Dally.
Upon his arms, with courage bold

Dally.
Cried out, 'tis now no time to dally.

Shak. King Lear.

The enemy begin to dally,

Dally.
We have friended too long already, it is made too

Dally.
to dally any longer, when our souls are at stake.

Dally.
One hundred thousand pounds must be raised;

Dally.
For there is no dallying with hunger. Swift.

2. To exchange caresses; to play the wanton; to fondle.
He is not lolling on a lewd love bed,

Dally.
But on his knees at meditation;

Dally.
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,

Dally.
But dallying, with two deep divines.

Shak. King Lear.

3. To sport; to play the fool.
She her aile buildeth in the cedar's top,

Dally.
And dally with the wind, and scorns the sun.

Shak. King Lear.

4. To delay.
They that would not be reformed by that correction, wherein he dallyed with them, shall feel a

To DALLY. n.a.
To put off; to delay; to amuse till a proper opportunity.
He sat down to perform service, not by the hazard of one set battle, but by dallying off the time with often skirmishes.

Knot.'s Hist. Del. (From French, which formerly signified mother. Had Nero never been an emperor, should never his d ates have been slaine. Chaucer.)

1. The mother: used of beast, or other animals not human.

The dam run lowing up and down.
Looking the way her harmless young went,
And so sought not but wall her during loss. Shak.

Mother, says a sick kike, let me have your prayers.—Alas, my child, says the dam, which of the four shall I go to? To Strange.

Birds bring but one morsel of meat at a time, and have not fewer, it may be, than seven or eight young in the nest together, which, at the return of their dams, do all at once, with equal greediness, hold up their heads and gaze. Bay.

2. A human mother, in contempt or detection.
This hat is none of mine;

Dally.
It is the issue of Polixena;

Dally.
Hence with it, and, together with the dam,

Dally.
Commits it to the fire. Shak. Winter's Tale.

DAM. n.s. [Dain, Dut.]
A mole or bank to confine water.

As when the sea breaks o'er its bounds,

Dally.
And overflows the level grounds,

Dally. the crags and dams, that like a skeen

Dally.
Did keep it out, now keep it in. Huds.

403
DAM

Not with so fierce a rage the dashing flood
Rors, when he finds his rapid course thwarted;
Bears down the dam with unresisted sway;
And sweeps the cattle and the cots away.
Let all thy waters flow away,
Bear down the dam, and open every door.
Dyer.
The inside of the dam must be very smooth and well spread: If it is made sloping on either side, it is the better.
Mortimer's Fashandy.

To DAM. v.a. [semen, pope-cumman, Sax. daumen, Dut.]
1. To confine, or shut up, water by moles or dams.
I'll have the current in this place dam'd up;
And yet the sea, with silver Trent shall red again.
In a new channel, fair and evenly.
Shakespeare, H.V.

How I would go,
But that my doors are hateful to my eyes,
Fill'd all along with gaping creditors.
Watchful as owlers when their game will spring.
Dowry.

Boggy lands are fed by springs, pent by a weight of earth, that dams in the water, and causes it to spread.
Mortimer.

'Tis you must drive that trouble from your soul.
As streams, when dam'd up, forget their ancient current,
And, wound'ring at their banks, in other channels flow.
South. Low.

2. It is used by Shakespeare of fire, and by Milton of light.
The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns.
Milton.

Moon! If your influence be quite dam'd up
With black incrusting gums, some gentle taper,
Though a rush-candle from the wicker hole
Of some clay-lined cup, we visit us
With thy long level'd rule of streamless light.
Milton.

DAMAGE. n.s. [damage, Fr.]
1. Mischief; hurt; detriment.

Gross errors and absurdisces many commit for want of a friend to tell them of; to the great damage both of their fame and fortune.
Beau.

So from this their honest donors do more hurt and damage to the English subjects than to the Irish enemies, by their continual cess and extorion.
Dryden.

He repulsed the enemy very much to their damage.
Clarendon.

2. Loss; mischief suffered.
His heart exults him in the harm
Already done, to have dispens'd heav'n.
My damage fondly de're d!
Milton.

3. The value of mischief done.
There's many a man that were not able, though they should be willing to sell all they have in Ireland, to pay the damages which had been sustained by the war.
Clarendon.

4. Reparation of damage; retribution.
The bolder, demanded restitution of the spoils taken by the Scots, or damages for the same, barn.
Tell me whether, upon exhibiting the several particulars which I have related to you, I may not sue her for damages in a court of justice.
Addison.

[In Law.] Any hurt or hindrance that a man taketh in his estate. In the common law it particularly signifies a part of what the jurers be to enquire of; for, after verdict given of the principal cause, they are likewise asked their consciences touching costs, which are the charges such, and damages, which arise from the hindrance which the plaintiff, or demandant both suffered, by means of the wrong done him by the defendant or tenant.
Cowell.

When the judge had awarded due damages to a person into whose field a neighbour's oxen had broke, it is reported that he reversed his own sentence, when he heard that the oxen, which had done this mischief, were his own.
Watts.

To DAMAGE. v.a. [from the noun.] To mischief; to injure; to impair; to hurt; to harm.

I consider time as an immense ocean, into which many noble authors are entirely swallowed up, many very much shatter'd and damaged, some quite disjointed and broken into pieces. In addition,

To DAMAGE. v.a. To take damage, or be damaged.

DAMAGEABLE. adj. [from damage.]
1. Susceptible of hurt: as, damageable goods,

2. Mischievous; pernicious.

Obscene and immoral talk is offensive to the purity of God, damageable and injurious to the innocence of our neighbours, and most pernicious to ourselves.
Government of Tongue.

DAMASCENE. n.s. [damascenus, from Damascus.]
A small plum; a damson, as it is now spoken.

In April follow the cherry-tree in blossom, the damascene and plum-trees in blossom, and the white thorn in leaf.
Bacon. In fruits the white commonly is measure as the pear plums and damascene; and the choicest plums are black.

DAMASK. n.s. [damasquin, Fr. damaschine, Ital. from Damascus.]
1. Linen or silk woven in a manner invented at Damascus, by which part, by a various direction of the threads, exhibits flowers or other forms.

Any weaver which his work doth boast
In diapar, damask, or in lyne.
Spen.

Wipe your shoes, for want of a cloth, with a damask, in Shakespeare's Rules.

2. It is used for red colour in Fairfirth, from the damask rose.
And for some desire perplexed was her spirit,
Her damask late, now changing to pure white.
Fairfirth.

To DAMAGE. v.a. [from the noun.]
1. To form flowers uponstuff.

To variagare; to diversify,
They sat recline
On the soft downy bank, damask'd with flowers.
Milton.

Around him dance the rosy hours,
And damasking the ground with flowers,
With ambrosial sweets perfuming the mouth.
Fenton.

3. To adorn steel-work with figures; practised, I suppose, first at Damascus.

DAMASK-PLUM. See PLUM.

DAMASK-ROSE. n.s. The rose of Damascus; a red rose.
See Rose.

Damasque-roses have not been known in Europe above one hundred years, and now are uncommon.
Bacon.

No gradual bloom is wanting from the bud,
Nor bound carnations, nor spotted pins,
Nor, shower'd from ev'ry blush the damask-rose.
Tennyson.

DAMASKENING. n.s. [from damasquin, Fr.] The art or act of adorning iron or steel, by making incisions, and filling them up with gold or silver wire: used in enriching the blades of swords, and locks of pistols.
Chamber.

DAME. n.s. [dame, Fr. dam, Span.]
1. A lady; the old title of honour to women.
The word done originally signified a mistress of a family, who was a lady; and it is used still in the English law to signify a lady; but in common use, now-a-days, it represents a farmer's wife or a mistress of a family of the lower rank in the country.
Watts's Logic.

Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honou r I am perfect.
Shak.

DAM.

Not all these lords do see me half so much
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
Shak.

Shut your mouth, dame! Shakesp, King Lear.
Not reign of creatures, universal dame! Milton.

2. It is still used in poetry for women of rank.

His father Faunus, a Laurennian dame.
His mother, fair Marica was her name.
Dryd. Who would not repeat that bliss,
And frequent sights of such a dame be.
Shak.

Buy with the hazard of his fame! Weller.

3. Mistress of a low family.

They killed the poor cock; for, say they, if it were not for his wittiness his dame, she would not awake.
L'Estrange.

4. Woman in general.

The holy willing dames enough; there cannot be
That virtue to you, to devour so many.
As will to greatness dedicate themselves. Shak.

DAMES-VIOLET. n.s. A plant, called also a sunk's queen's gillyflower.
Milton.

To DAME. v.a. [dame, Lat.]
1. To doom to eternal torments in a future state.

It is most necessary, that the church, by doctrine and decrees, do to damn and send to hell for ever, those facts and opinions.
Bacon.

2. To procure or cause to be eternally condemned.

That which he continues ignorant of, having done the utmost lying in his power that he might not be ignorant of it, shall not damn him.
South's Sermons.

3. To condemn.
His own impartial thought
Will damn, and conscience will record the fault.
Dryd.

4. To hoot or hiss any publick performance; to explode.
They damn themselves, nor will you muse descend
To clap with such who looks and knaves commend.
Dryd.

For the great dos of wit, Phæbus gives them full privilege alone
To damn all others, and cry up their own.
Dryd.

You are so good a critic, that it is the greatest happiness of the modern poets that you do not hear their works; and, next, that you are so not so arant a critic as to damn them, like the rest, without hearing.
 Pope.

DAMNABLE. adj. [from damn.] 1. Deserving damnation; justly doomed to never-ending punishment.

The great ones of learning with greater earnestness-clause here, about the unhappy minds with the snares of his damnable opinion. Hunter.
He's a creature unpard'ed, unfit for death; And to transport him in the mind, We were damnable.
Shakesp. Meas for Meas.

As he does not reckon every schism of a damnable nature, so he is far from classing with the new opinion of those who make it no crime.
Swift.

2. It is sometimes indecently used in a low and ridiculous sense; odious, pernicious.

O thou damnable fellow I did not pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches! Shak. Much. for Mox.

DAMNABLY. adv. [from damnable.]
1. In such a manner as to incur eternal punishment; so as to be excluded from mercy.

We will propose the question, whether those who hold the fundamentals of faith may deny Christ damnable, in respect of those consequences that arise from them?
South's Sermons.

2. It is indigenously used in a ludicrous sense; odiously, hatefully.

The more sweetly they bestowed upon them, the more damnably those reserves stuck. Dryd.

DAMNATION. n.s. [from damn.] Exclusion from divine mercy; condemnation to eternal punishment.

464
DAM

To DAMN. r. a. [from damnific.] Procuring loss; mischievous.

To DAMNIFY. r. a. [from damnifico.] To make; to discourage.

DAN

The term old of honour for men as we now say Master. I know not that it was ever used in prose, and imagine it to have been rather of ludicrous import. Don Chaucer well of English undefiled.

This whimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy, this signor Junio's giant dwarf, don Cupid, Shak. Dick, if this story pleases thee, pray thank don Pape, who told it me.

To DANSE, r. a. [dancer, Fr. danzar, Span. and some think from tunzor, Arab. a dance; as Jovius, who loves to derive his penances, etc. (from ancien.) To move in measure; to move with steps correspondent to the sound of instruments.

What say you to young Mr. Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses.

To DANCE Attendance. r. n. To wait with simplicity and observance. We are sooner weary to dance attendance at the gates of foreign lords, than to carry the good leisure of their own magnificats. Raleigh's Essay. It uplifts him.

To let your father's friend, for three long months, Thus dance attendance for a word of audience, Shak.
Dancing School. n. s [dancing and school] The school where the art of dancing is taught.

Dancing with me at the English dancing-schools, and teach Iavveres high, and swift contrapunt; saying grace is only in our heads. Shakesp. A certain Egyptian king endowed a dancing school for the instruction of apes of quality.

Dandie lion. n. s. [dent de lion, Fr.] The name of a play.

It agrees in every respect with the hawkhead, but only in its having a single naked, with one flower upon the top. For cowardly is as to let dandies spread; but for Blenheimia, blithesome maid, is dead! Gay's Pantaloon.

Dandiprat. n. s. [dandrin, Fr.] A little fellow; an archin: a word used sometimes in fondness, sometimes in contempt.

To Dandle. v. a. [dandle, Dut.] To shake a child on the knee, or in the hands, to please and quiet him.

They shall ye suck, and shall be born upon her sides, and be dandled upon her knees. Isaiah.

For children, which, like fairy spirits, often skip into our chamber those night, and kiss and dandled on thy father's knee, were bidden next day to tell what they did see. Doane.

Courts are but superficial schools To dandle fools. Bacon.

Sporting the lion ramp'd, and in his paw Milton.

Motion occasional sleep, as we find by the common use of rocking toward children in cradles, or dandling them in their nurses arms. Tillotson.

2. To fonelle; to treat like a child.

Their child shall be advance'd, and be received for the emperor's heir.
The emperor dandle him for his own.

They have put me in a silk gown, and a giddy fool's cap; I am ashamed to be dandled thus, and cannot look in the glass without blushing, to see myself turned into such a little pretty master. Addison's Guardian.

3. To delay; to procrastinate; to protract by trilles; not in use.

Captains do so dandle their doings, and dally in the service, as if they would not have the one my subdue.

Spenser.

Dandle. n. s. [from dandle.] He that dandles or fonelles children.

Dandruff. n. s. [often written don-driff; from ran the itch, and spop sor-dil, filthy.] Scabs in the head; scurf at the roots of the hair.

Dane-wort. n. s. A species of elder; called also dwarf elder, or all-bottle.

Danger. n. s. [danger, Fr. of uncertain derivation. Skinner derives it from damnum, Damage from angaria, Minhew from measure, to which Janius seems inclined.] Risk; hazard; peril.

They that sail on the sea, tell of the danger. Fouch. xiiii. 34.

Our craft is in danger to be set at nought. Gen. x. 27.

He hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger. Dryden.

More danger now from man alone we find, than from the rocks, the billows, and the wind. Warton.

To Danger. v. a. [from the noun.] To put in hazard; to endanger.

Pompey's son stands up For the main soldier; whose quality going on, The sides o' th' world may danger. Shakesp.
Dark

I never in my life
Did hear a challenge, nor more modestly,
Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
Shakespeare.

Here she stands:
Take but possession of her with a touch;
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.
Shakespeare.

He had many days come half seas over;
And sometimes wishing further, came and lay at
The mouth of the harbour, during them to fight.
Knolles.

Masters of the arts of policy thought that they might even dare and defy Providence to the face.
South.

All cold, but in her breast, I will desist;
And dare all heart but that in Colia's eyes.

Time! I dare thee to discover
Such a youth, and such a lover.
Dryden.

Presumptuous wretch! with mortal art to dare
Immortal power, and brave the thunderer.
Graville.

to dare Larks. To catch them by means of a looking-glass, or by keeping a bird of prey hovering aloft, which keeps them in a maze till caught; to amaze.

Shrinks are dipped up in shallow water with little round nets, not much unlike which is used for daring larks.

As larks he dare't shun the hobby's flight.
Dryden.

Dare. n. s. [from the verb.] Defiance; challenge.

Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea.
Shakespeare.

Dare. n. s. A small fish, the same with dace. Levicinus.

Dareful. adj. [dare and full.] Full of defiance; not in use.

We might have met them dareful, beared to beard,
And bold them backward home.
Shakespeare.

Daring. adj. [from daring.] Bold;
adventurous; fearless; courageous; intrepid;
brave; stout.

The last George has many metaphors, but not so daring as this: for human passions may be more naturally ascribed to a bee than to an inanimate plant.

The song too daring, and the theme too great.
Prior.

Grieve not, 0 daring prince, that noble hour
Pope.

Daringly. adv. [from daring.] Boldly;
courageously; fearlessly; intimidatingly; outrageously.

Some of the great principles of religion are every day openly and daringly attacked from the press.

Your brother, sir'd with his success,
Too daringly upon the foe did press.
Halifax.

Daringness. n. s. [from daring.] Boldness.

Dark. adj. [see, Sax.]

1. Not light; wanting light.

Foneness, his son, who keeps him company,
Must embrace the late of that dark hour.
Shakespeare.

While we converse with her, we mark
No want of day, nor think it dark.
Wallace.

2. Not of a showy or vivid colour.

If the image be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean.
Levicaus.

I do make the generality of the people more inclined to have dark coloured hair than flaxen.
Boyle.

3. Blind; without the enjoyment of light.

Thus wretched daughter of a dark old man,
Conduct my weary steps.
Dryden and Lee's Ondipus

4. Opake; not transparent; as, lead is a dark body.

5. Obscure; not perspicuous.

What may seem dark at the first, will afterwords be found more plain.
Shakespeare.

Mean time we shall express our darker purpose.
Shakespeare.

6. Not enlightened by knowledge; ignorant.

The age, wherein he liv'd, was dark; but he Could not wish want, who taught the world to see.
Shakespeare.

7. Gloomy; not cheerful.

All men of dark tempers, according to their degree of melancholy or enthusiasm, may find con vents fitted to their humours.
Addison on Italy.

Dark. n. s.

1. Darkness; obscurity; want of light.

Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes;
Nor he in pop through the blanket of the dark,
To cry, hold, hold.
Shakespeare, Marter.

Cloud and ever-during dark
Surrounds me! from the cheerful ways of men.
Coll.

Whereas seeing requires light, and a free medium, and a right line to the objects, we can hear in the dark immured, and by curve lines.
Holden.

2. Obscurity; condition of one unknown.

All he says of himself, that he is an obscure person;
one, I suppose he means, that is in the dark.
Shakespeare.

3. Want of knowledge.

Till we ourselves perceive by our own under standings, we are as much in the dark, and as void of knowledge, as before.
Shakespeare.

4. To dare. v. a. [from the noun.] To darken; to obscure; to befuddle.
Fair when that cloud of pride, which oft doth
Darken her goodly light, with smiles she drives away.
Spenser.

To dark. v. a. [from dark.

1. To make dark; to deprive of light.

Black with surrounding forests then stood,
That hang above, and darken'd all the flood.
Addison.

Whether the darkness from the room invite,
Or whiten'd wall provoke the skene to write.
Pope.

2. To cloud; to perplex.

Such was his wisdom, that his confidence did seldom darken his foresight, especially in things near hand.
Bacon.

3. To foul; to sully.

The lusts and passions of men do sully and darken their minds, even by a natural influence.
Tillotson.

To darken. v. n. To grow dark.

Darkling. [Participle, as it seems, from darkle, yet I have never found;
or perhaps a kind of diminutiv of dark, as young, youngling.]

Being in the dark; being without light:
A word merely poetical.

O, wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
Shakespeare.

Darkling stands
The varying shore 'tis world;
Shakespeare.

Sings darkling, and, in shadier covert hid,
Tunes her nocturnal note.
Milton.

Darkling they mount their fate, whom Cicero's pow'r,
With words and wicked herbs, from human kind
Has stood, and in brutal shapes confound.' Dryden.

Darkly. adv. [from dark.]

In a situation void of light; obscurely; blindly;
gloomily; uncertainly.

Dar. n. s. [Illum.] A weed growing in the fields.
DAS

He was met evm now
Crown’d with each fancier and laurel-leaves,
Darnel, and all the nile weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. Shakesp.

ye corn for bread!

To Da’raine. r. a. [This word is by Ju-

It is to dare; it seems to me

prepare for battle; to range troops

The toun-boys parted in twain, the one side calling themselves Pompeians the other Cesari-and then darting a kind of battle, but without arms, the cesarians got the hand.

Coves Warwick, backing of the duke of York;

Darrain your battle; for they are at hand. Shan-

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,

or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To应用 to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar,Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.

DART. n. [see Dar, Fr.]

1. A missile weapon thrown by the hand;

a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of

rock or Flint, there another with a dart, arrow,
or lance. Peacham.

O’erhead’d with darts, which from ait they

To apply to the fight; of single combats.

Therewith they ‘gan to luter gready,

Redoubled battle ready to range. Spencer.
DAU

DATE-tree. n.s. See PALM, of which it is a species.

To Date. v.a. [from the noun.] To note with the time at which any thing is written or done.

'Tis all one, in respect of eternal duration yet beyond, whether we begin the world so many millions of years or days ago, or from the time of about six thousand years.

To all their dated books they turn round; These Albus printed, those Du Suci has bound.

DALEless. adj. [from date.] Without any fixed term.

The by-now hours shall not determine
The dateless moments of the heart's desire.

DAVIE. adj. [datisus, Lat.]
1. [In grammar.] The epithet of the case that signifies the person to whom any thing is given.

2. [In law.] These are termed dative executors, who are appointed such by the judge's decree; as administrators with us here in England.

Ayleiffe.

To DAUB. v.a. [dauben, Dut. dauber, Fr.]
1. To smear with something adhesive.

She took for him an ark of hullrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch.

Exodus.

2. To paint coarsely.

Hasty daubing will but spoil the picture, and make it so unnatural as must want false light to set it off.

Dygenia.

3. To cover with something specious or grossy, something that disguises what it lies upon.

So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue, He liv'd from all attainder of suspect. Shakespeare.

4. To lay on any thing gaudily or ostentatiously.

Since princes will have such things, it is better they should be graced with elegance, than daubed with cost. Bacon.

Let him daub'd with lace, live high, and wrong; Sometimes be hasty, but he never poor. Dryden.

5. To flatter grossly.

Let every one, therefore, attend the sentence of his conscience; for, he may be sure, it will not daub his faults.

To DAUB. v.n.
To play the hypocrite: this sense is not in use.

I cannot daub it further; And yet I must. Shakespeare.

DAUBER. n.s. [from daub.] 1. One that daubs.

2. A coarse low painter.

Parts of different species jumbled together, according to the mad imagination of the dauber, to cause laughter.

Dryden.

A sign-post dauber would disdain to paint.

The one-eyed hero on his elephant,

The treacherous tapster, Thomas,

Hangs a new angel two doors from us, As has dauber's hands can make it. Swift.

3. A low flatterer.

DAUBRY. n.s. [from daub.] An old word for any thing artful.

She works by charms, by spells; and such daubry as this is beyond our element. Shakespeare.

DAUBY. adj. [from daub.] Viscous; glutinous; adhesive.

D A Y

The noble thrones do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do. Shakespeare, Mar. 1.

DAY SPRING.

Would you thy advantage of the light delay,
If, striking first, you were to win the day? Dryden, 1.

7. An appointed or fixed time.
Or if my debtor do not keep their day,
Deny their hands, and then refuse to pay. Milton.

8. A day appointed for some commemoration.

The field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianos, Shakespeare, 1.

9. From day to day; without certainty of continuance.
For every man must pass through the fields of time. Bacon.

To-day.

To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

Psalm.

The past is all by death posses,
And frival fate, that guards the rest.

By giving, bids us live to-day. Fenton.

DA YBED. n. s. [day and bed.]
A bed used for idleness and luxury in the day-time.

Calling my officers about me, to my branched glove bow; having come down from a day bed, where I have left Oliva sleeping. Shakespeare, Troilus Night.

DA YBOOK. n. s. [from day and book.] A tradesman's journal; a book in which all the occurrences of the day are set down.

DA YBREAK. n. s. [day and break.]
The day; the first appearance of light.

I watched the early glories of her eyes,
As men for daybreak watch the Eastern skies. Dryden.

DA YLAUR. n. s. [day and labour.]
Labour by the day; labour divided into daily tasks.

With God exact day break, light denied,
I fondly ask. Milton.

Daybreak was but an hard and a dry kind of lived to a man that could get an estate with two or three strokes of his pen. South.

DA YLAU RER. n. s. [from day- break.]
One that works by the day.

In one night, ere glance of morn,
His shadow fell hard through the cold.

That ten day workers could not end. Milton.

The day-breaker, in a country village, has commonly but a small pittance of courage. Locke.

DA YLIGHT. n. s. [day and light.]
The light of the day, as opposed to that of the moon, or a taper.

By this the drooping daybreak 'gan to fade,
And yield his room to sad succeeding night.

The brightest flowers,
That shall be lovely, and last day-break.

Fairy Queen.

Thou shalt buy this day,
If ever I thy face by day-break see.

Shakespeare.

Now go thy way.

Shakespeare.

They, by day-break passing through the Turks front, recovered the haven, to the joy of the siegued Christians. Knolles.

He walked in daylight, and disdain'd to hide
An act, to which by honour he is tied. Dryden.

Will you murder a man in plain day-break? Dryden.

Though rough bears in covert seek sence,
White foxes stay, with cunning innocence;
That crafty kind with daybreak can dispense. Dryden.

If bodies be illuminated by the ordinary prismatic colours, they will appear neither of their own day-break colours, nor of the colour of the light ittay upon them, but of some middle colours between.

Newton's Opticks.

DAY-LILY, n. s. The same with ASPHO-
DEL, which see.

DAY- MAN. n. s. [day and man.] An old word for umpire. Ainsworth. Perhaps rather, surety.

D A Z

For what art thou,
That mak'st thyself his daybreak, to prolong
The vengeance prest? Fairy Queen.

DAY SPRING. n. s. [day and spring.]
The rise of the day; the dawn; the first appearance of light.

So all ere day spring, under conscious night,
Secret things finish'd, and in crime set. Milton.

The breath of heaven fresh-blowing, pure and sweet, with daybreak born, here leave me to aspire.

Milton.

DAY STAR. n. s. [day and star.]
The morning star.

I meant to make her fair, and free, and wise,
Of greatest height, and yet more great than great;
Nor led like influence from his lucient seat.

Sunk though he be beneath the watry floor;
So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet anon repairs his drooping head. Milton.

DAYTIME. n. s. [day and time.]
The time in which there is light; opposed to night.

In the daytime Fame sitteth in a watch-tower,
And trieth most by night; she nailgeth things done with things not done, and is a terror to great cities. Bacon.

My ants never brought out their corn but in the night, when the sun did shine, and kept it under ground in the daytime. Addison.

DAY WORK. n. s. [day and work.]
Work imposed by the day: day-labour.
True labour in the vineyard of thy Lord,
Ere prime thon hast th' impos'd daywork done.
Fairfax.

To DAZZLE, v. a. [spars, Sax.] To over power with light; to strike with too strong lustre; to hinder the act of seeing by too much light suddenly introduced.

They smote the glistering armes, as they stand,
With quivering beams, which dazz'd the wound'ring
Poor human kind, all dazz'd in open day.
Enr after bliss, and blindly miss their way. Dryden.

D A Z ED. adj. [rather dazzled. See DAI
SY.] Besprinkled with daisies.

Let us
Find out the prettiest dazzled plot we can,
And make him a grave. Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

To DAZZLE. v. a. [See DAZE.]
1. To overpower with light; to hinder the action of the eye by sudden lustre.

Pears use to be represented in such an imaginary fashion, as they rather dazzle man's eyes than open them.

How is it that some wits are interrupted,
That now they dazzled are, now clearly see?

Davies.

2. To strike or surprise with splendour.

Those heavenly stapes,
Will dazzle now this earthly with their blaze
Insensibly bright.

Milton.

The places that have either shining sentiments or mannerings, have no occasion for them: a dazzling expression rather damages them, and serves only to eclipse their beauty. Dryden.

Ah, friend to dazzle let the vain design;
To raise the thought, or touch the heart, he thine,
When the moon doth dazzle and the sun shine.

Regius.

To DAZZLE. v. a. To be overpowered with light; to lose the power of sight.

Dazzle mine eyes? or do I see three stars?
Shakespeare.

Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,
And you shall read when mine begins to dazzle.
Shakespeare.

An overbright-maker maketh the eyes dazzle,
Insomuch as personal looking against the sun would cause blindness.

Bacon.

D E A

I dare not trust these eyes;
They dance in mistis, and dazzle with surprise. Dryden.

DEACON. n. s. [diaconus, Lat.]
1. One of the lowest of the three orders of the clergy.
Likewise must the deacon be grave. 2 Tim. iii. 8.
The constitutions that the apostles made concerning deacons and widows, are very importantly

2. In Scotland. An overseer of the poor.
5. Also and the master of an incorporated company.

DEACONESS. n. s. [from deacon.]
A female officer in the ancient church.

DEACONRY n. s. [from deacon.] The DEACONSHIP. office or dignity of a deacon.

DEAD. adj. [dead, Sax. dead, Dut.] 1. Depri-vened of life; examined.
The queen, my lord, is dead.

She should have died hereafter.
Shakespeare, Marthet.

A brute or a man are another thing, when they are alive, from what they are when dead. Giot.

She either from her hopeless lower bed,
Or with dishonourable graves.

Dryd.

2. With of before the cause of death.
This Indian told them, that, mistaking their course, the crew, all except himself, were dead of hunger.

Aristarchus.

3. Without life; inanimate.

All, but all truth, drops dead-born from the press.

Like the last gazette, or like the last address, Pope.

4. Immitating death; senseless; motionless.
At thy rebuke, 0 God of Jacob, both the char riot and horse are cast into a dead sleep.

Psalm.

Anointing of the forehead, neck, feet, and backbone, we know is used for procuring deat sleeps.

Bacon.

5. Unactive; motionless.
The tin sold sometimes higher, and sometimes lower, according to the quick vent and abun dance, or the dead sale and scarcity. Care.

Nay, there's a time when ev'n the rolling year
Seems to stand still; dead calms are in the ocean.
When not a breath disturbs the dewy main. Lee.

They cannot bear the dead weight of unemployed time lying upon their hands, nor the un casing it is to do nothing at all. Locke.

6. Empty; vacant.

This colour often carries the mind away, yea, it descendeth the scence; and it sembleth to the eye as if the colour of the matter distance of way.

Dryd.

or distance of way, if it he all dead and continued, or then if it be trees or buildings, or any other marks whereby the eye may divide it.

Bacon.

Nought but a blank remenis, a dead void space,
A step of life, that promises such a race. Dryden.

7. Useless; unprofitable.
The commodities of the kingdom they took, though they lay dead upon their hands for want of vent.

Bacon.

People made a prince that he is irremissible, and he will take care not to let so glorious an attribute lie dead and useless by him.

Addison.

8. Dull; gloomy; unemployed.

Travelling over Amnsus, then covered with deep snow, they came in the dead wnter to Alex purs.

Knolles.

There is something unspeakably cheerful in a spot of ground which is covered with trees, that smiles amongst all the rigours of winter, and gives us to view of the most gay season in the midst of that which is the most dead and melancholy.

Addison.

9. Still; obscure.

Their flight was only deferred until they might cover their disorders by the dead darkness of the night.

Hayward.

10. Having no resemblance of life.
DEAD

At a second sitting, though I alter not the draught, I must touch the same features over again, and change the dead colouring of the whole.

Dyson.

11. Obsolete; dull; not sprightly; used of sounds.

We took a bell of about two inches in diameter at the bottom, which was supported in the midst of the cavity of the receiver by a bent stick. In which when it was closed up, the bell seemed to sound more dead than it did when just before it sounded in the open air.

Dyson.

12. Dull; frigid; not animated; not affecting.

How cold and dead does a prayer appear, that is composed in the most elegant forms of speech, when it is not heightened by solemnity of phrase, or reverence towards the sacred writings of the Old Testament?

13. Tasteless; vapid; spiritless; used of liquors.

Somewhat is left under dead walls and dry ditches.

15. Without the natural force or efficacy: as, a dead fire.

16. Without the power of vegetation: as, a dead bough.

17. [In theology.] The state of spiritual death, lying under the power of sin.

You hath been quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins.

Ephes. ii. 1.

DEAD. n. s. Dead men.

Love from high, with just disdain,

The dead inspired with vital life again.

Dyson.

The ancient Romans generally buried their dead near the great roads.

Addison.

That the dead shall rise and live again, is beyond the discovery of reason, and is purely a matter of faith.

Locke.

The worn out band had sung, in nober lays.

How the last trumpet wakes the lazy dead, Smith.

DEAD. n. s. Time in which there is remarkable stillness or gloom; as at midwinter and midnight.

After this life, to hope for the favours of mercy then, is to expect an harvest in the dead of winter.

South.

In the dead of the night, when the men and their dogs were all asleep.

Collins.

At length, in dead of night, the ghost appears.

Of her unhappy lord.

Dyson.

To DEAD. e. n. [from the noun.] To lose, power, of whatsoever kind.

From so soon as it is out of the fire, deadest straitways.

Bacon's Natural History.

To DEAD. f. a.

To DEADEN. f. a.

1. To deprive of any kind of force or sensation.

That the sound may be extinguished or deader, by discharging the pent air, before it commeth to the mouth of the piece, and to the open air, is not probable.

Bacon.

It is requisite that the tympanum be tense, and hard stuffed, otherwise the loss of that membrane will certainly dead and damp the sound.

Holker.

This notion would be quickly deadened by contemnirations.

Glanville's Sceptical Enquiries.

We will not oppose any thing to them that is hard and stubborn, but by a soft answer deaden their force by degrees.

Burnet's Theory.

Our dreams are great instances of that activity which is natural to the human soul, and which is not in the power of sleep to deaden any more.

Spectator.

Anomalies are such things as relax the tension of the usually robust fibres, or destroy the particular acrimony which occasions the pain; or what deadens the sensation of the brain, by prooucing a cure.

Arbuthnot on Diet.

2. To make vapid, or spiritless.

The beer and the wine, as well within water as above, have not been pulled or deader at all.

Bacon.

DEAD-DOING. part. adj. [dead and do.]

Destructive; killing; mischievous; having the power to make dead.

Hold, O dear lord, your dead soul and fasting,

Then loud he cried, I am thy humble thrall.

Spenser.

They never care how many others.

They kill, without regard of mothers,

Or wives, or children, so they can.

Make up some fierce dead doing man.

Hudibras.

DEAD-LIFT. n. s. [dead and lift.] Hopeless exigence.

And have no power at all, nor shift,

To help itself at a dead-lift.

Hudibras.

DEADLY. adj. [from dead.]

1. Destructive; mortal; murderous.

She then on Romeo calls—As if that name,

Shot from the deadly level of a gun.

Dyson.

Dir nor her.

Dyson.

Dry mourning will decay more deadly bring.

And with a forward air,

Give sorrow vent, and let the lutes go.

Dyson.

2. Mortal; implacable.

The Unhospital'd, in number innumerable, are deadly enemies unto the Turks.

Kneale.

DEADLY. adv.

1. In a manner resembling the dead.

Like dumb statues, or unbearing stones,

Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.

Shak.

Young Arctic heard, and up he ran with haste.

And ask'd him why he look'd so deadly wan?

Dyson.

2. Mortally.

I break Pharoah's arm, and he shall be slain before him with the goings of a deadly wounded man.

Es. xxxvi. 21.

3. Implacably; irremediably; destructively.

It is sometimes used in a ludicrous sense, only to enforce the signification of a word.

Methinks schoolboys, set to cuf.

Will not confess that they have done enough,

Though deadly weary.

Orrery.

And give an impression, that Lewis was so deadly envenomed a man, that he was afraid to venture himself alone with him.

Arbuthnot.

DEADNESS. n. s. [from dead.]

1. Frigidity; want of warmth; want of arbour; want of affection.

His nation is defect in inclination, by taking off our natural deadness and disaffection towards them.

Rogers.

2. Weakness of the vital powers; languor; faintness; inactivity of the spirits, and inward languishing.

Dyson and Lee's Oedipus.

3. Vapidity of liquors; loss of spirit.

Drunkenness or flatness in crier is often occasioned by the too free admission of air into the vessels.

Mortimer.

DEADNETTE. n. s. A weed; the same with archangel.

DEAD-RECKONING. n. s. [a sea term.]

That estimation or conjecture which the seaman make of the place where a ship is, by keeping an account of her way by the log, by knowing the course they have steered by the compass, and by rectifying all with allowance for drift or lee way; so that this reckoning is without any observation of the sun, moon, stars, and is to be rectified as often as any good observation can be had.

DEAF. adj. [doef, Dut.]

1. Wanting the sense of hearing.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf.

Shak.

Infected minds.

To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.

Shak.

The chief design here intended is to instruct such as are deaf and dumb, and dumb only by consequence of their want of hearing.

Hold.

If any sins afflict our life.

With that prime ill, a talking wife.

Till death shall bring the kind relief.

We must be patient, or be dead.

Prior.

Thou mayst still be young to me.

Where I can hear the news.

Oh ne'er may fortune show her spite.

To make me deaf, and mend my sight, Swift.

2. It has to be the thing that ought to be heard.

I will be deaf to pleading and excuses.

Or tears not prayers shall purchase out abuses.

Shak.

Oh, that men's ears should be,

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery!

Shak.

Whilst virtue courts them, but, alas, in vain!

Fly from her kind embracing arms,

Deaf to her fondest call, blind to her greatest charms.

Reynolds.

Not so, for one indulg'd, they sweep the main.

Deaf to the call, or, but in vain.

Dyson.

Hope, too long with vain delusion fed,

To deaf the rumour of fallacious fame.

Grant to the roll of death both his glorious name.

Pop.

3. Deprived of the power of hearing.

Deaf with the noise, I took my hasty flight.

No mortal courage can support the fright.

Dyson.

4. Obscurely heard.

Nor silence is within, nor voice express,

But a deaf noise of sounds that never cease;

Confus'd and chiding like the hollow roar

Of tides receding from the imitated shore.

Dyson.

The rest were set'd with sullen discontent,

And a deaf murmur through the squadrons went.

Dyson.

To DEAF. v. a. To deprive of the power of hearing.

Hearing bath deaf'd our sailors; and if they know not how to hear, there's none know what to say.

Dore.

A swarm of their aerial shapes appears.

And, But'tring round his temples, deaf'd his ears.

Dyson.

To DEAFEN. v. a. [from deaf.] To deprive of the power of hearing.

But Salins enters: and, exclaiming loud

For justice, deafens and disturbs the crowd.

Dyson.

From shouting men, and horns, and dogs, he flies.

Deaf'd and stunn'd with their promiscuous cries.

Addison.

DEAFLY. adv. [from deaf.]

1. Without sense of sound.

2. Obscurely to the ear.

DEAFNESS. n. s. [from deaf.]

1. Want of the power of hearing; want of sense of sounds.

Those who are deaf and dumb, are dumb by consequence from their deafness.

Hold.

The Damocles had never been witt, but at his request, and for his deafness; for, he had been able to converse with me, do you think I had amused my time so ill?

Pop.

2. Unwillingness to hear.

I found such a deafness, that no declamation from the bishops could take place.

King Charles.

DEAL. n. s. [dcl., Dut.]

1. Part.

A great deal of thet which had been, was now to be bestowed in the church.

Inorer.

2. Quantity; degree of more or less.

It was formerly joined with different words, to limit its meaning; as, some deal, in some degree, to some amount: we now either say, a great deal, or a deal without an adjective; but this is commonly, if not always, ludicrous or contemptuous.

When men's affections do frame their opinion as, they are in defence of error more earnest, a great transcription, deal, deal, for the most part, sound believers in the maintenance of truth, apprehending according to the posture of that evidence which, being yielded.

There is, indeed, store of matters, fitter and better for that great deal for teachers to spend some labour in. Hooker.

To weep with them that weep, doth ease some sorrow.

But sorrow floured at is double death. Shakesp. What a deal of cold business doth a man miscarry the better part of life in! In scattering compliances, and tendering visits. Ben Jonson.

The charge some deal thee hateful honour may, that noble Dodone had while here he lived.

Possibly some never so much as doubted of the safety of their spiritual estate; and, if so, they have so much the more reason, a great deal, to doubt of it.

Smith.
The author, who knew that such a design as that could not be carried on without a great deal of and simplicity, has puzzled and perplexed his cause. Addison.

3. [From the verb to deal.] The art or practice of dealing cards.

How can the better of his aid impart, Unskill'd in all the terms of art? Or in harmonious numbers put The deal, the shuff'e, and the cut? Swift.

4. [deal. Duct.] Fir-wood, or the wood of pines.

I have also found, that a piece of deal, far thicker than one would easily imagine, being purposely interspersed between my eye, placed in a room, and the clearer daylight, was not only somewhat transparent, but appeared quite through a lovely red. Doyle on Colours.

To Deal. a. [dealer, Duct.]

1. To distribute; to dispose to different persons.

Deal thy bread to the hungry, and bring the poor that are cast out to thy house. Isaiah, viii, 7. One with a broken truncheon deals his blows. Swift.

His lifted arms around his head he throws. And deals in whistling air his empty blows. Dryd. He was rankling, in this, being rather to act than to know, their portion of knowledge is dealt them accordingly. Addison.

How Spain prepares her banners to unfold, And Rome deals out her blessings and her load. Tickell.

Had the great men of antiquity been possessed of the art of printing, they would have made an advantage of it, in dealing out their lectures to the public. Addison.

If you deal out great quantities of strong liquor to the mob, there will be many drunk. Watts.

2. To scatter; to throw about.

Keep me from the vengeance of thy darts, When she's devoted issue felt. When hissing through the skies the feather'd deaths were dealt. Dryd.

3. To give gradually, or one after another.

The nightly mallet deals resounding blows. Gay.

4. To distribute the cards.

To Deal. v. n.

1. To traffic; to transact business; to trade.

It is generally better to deal by speech than by letter; and by a man himself, than by the mediation of a third. This is to drive a wholesome trade, when all petty merchants deal but for parcels.

They buy and sell, they deal and trade. South.

2. A trader or trafficker.

Where fraud is practised and connived at, the honest dealer is always undone, and the knave gets the advantage. Gay's Travels.

3. A person who deals the cards.

Dealing. n. s. [from deal.]

1. Practice; action.

Concerning the dealings of men, who administer government, and unto whom the execution of laws, he power, and judgment, is sitteth in heaven. Hooker.

What sorts of these are! Whose own hard dealing teach them to suspect The thoughts of others. Shakesp.

But this was neither one pope's fault, nor one presbyter's; a story of the empire, that means to tell all of their dealings in this kind. Raleigh.

2. Intercourse.

It were to be wished, that men would promote the happiness of one another, in all their private dealings, among those who lie within their influence. Addison.

3. Measure of treatment; mode in which one treats another.

God's gracious dealings with men, are the aids and auxiliaries necessary to us in the pursuit of happiness. Hammond.

4. Traffic; business.

The doctor must needs die rich; he had great dealings in his way for many years. Swift.

Deambulation. n. s. [deambulatio, Lat.] The act of walking abroad.

Deambulatory. adj. [deambulat.] Relating to the practice of walking abroad.

Dean. n. s. [decanus, Lat. doyen Fr.]

From the Greek, θεον. In English, ten; because he was anciently set over a ten or prebendaries at least in some cathedral church. Asp's Paragon.

As there are two foundations of cathedral churches in England, the old and the new (the new are those which Henry VIII. upon suppression of allibus transformed from abbots; e. p. prior, and convent, to dean and chapter) so these are two means of creating these deans; for those of the old foundation are brought to their dignity, much like bishops, the king first sending out his regnum eire to the chapter, the chapter then choosing and the king confirming; others, which have not had the same usage, are of a later date. Those of the new foundation are, by a shorter course, installed by virtue of the king's letters patent, without either election or confirmation.

This word is also applied to divers, that are chief of certain peculiar churches or chapels; as the dean of the king's chapel, the dean of the Arches, the dean of St. George's chapel at Windsor, and the dean of Bucking in Essex. Cawdell.

The dean and canons, or prebendaries, of cathedral churches, were of great use in the church; they were not only to be counsel with the bishop for his revenue, but chiefly for government in causes ecclesiastical. Use your best means to prefer such to those places who are fit for that purpose. Bacon.

Deanery. n. s. [from dean.]

1. The office of a dean.

He could no longer keep the deanery of the chapel-royal. Clarendon.

2. The revenue of a dean.

Put both deans in one; or, if that's too much trouble, instead of the deans make the deans double Swift.

3. The house of a dean.

Take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly. Shakesp.

Deanship. n. s. [from dean.] The office and rank of a dean.

Dear. adj. [deop, Sax.]

1. Beloved; favourite; darling.
DEA

Your brother Glaster hates you.
—Oh, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear.
Shakespeare.

The dear, dear name she gives in flowing tears,
Hastens over the tomb.
Addison's Oedipus.
And the last joy was dearer than the rest.
Pope.

2. Valuable; of a high price; costly.

What made directors cheat the South-sea men? To feed the last joy was dearer than the rest. Pope.

3. Scarcely; not plentiful: as, a dear year.

It seems to be sometimes used in Shakespeare for dear: sad; hateful; grievous.
What endearing boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in terms so bloudy, and so dear.
Hast made the error: Shakespeare. Timon. Let us return, And strain what other mean's is left unto us.
In our dear peril, Shakespeare. Timon. Some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up a while:
When I am known a night, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. Shak. King Lear.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven's
Or ever I had seen that day. Shakespeare. Hamlet.
The other banished son, with his dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless. Shak. Titus Andronicus.
DEAR. n. s. A word of endearment; darling.
That kiss
I carried from they dear; and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
Go, dear; each minute does new danger bring.
See, my dear,
How lavish nature has adorn'd the year. Dryden.

DEARBOUGHT. adj. [dear and bought.]
Purchased at an high price.

Pleasant love
Of Paradise; dearbought with lastling won. Milton.
Such dearbought blessings happen evry day,
Because we know not for what things to pray.
Dryden.

Forget not what my ransom cost,
Nor let my dearbought soul be lost. Romance.

DEARLING. n. s. [now written darling.]
Favourite.
They do feast on nectar, heavenly wise,
With Hercules and Hebe, and the rest
Of Venus' dearlings, through her bounty blest.
Spenser.

DEARY. Adv. [from dear.]
1. With great fondness.
For the unquestionable virtues of her person and mind, he loved her dearly.
Wotton.

2. At an high price.
It is rare bought, and then also bought dearly enough with such a fine.
Turns shall dearly pay for faith forewarned.
And corps, and swords, and shields, on Tyber
Born. My father detests, and let him still detest it.
My father detests, and let him still detest it.
He buys his mistress dearly with his throne. Dryden.
To DEARN. n. a. [by near, Sax. to hide.]
To mend clothes. See DARN.

DEARNESS. n. s. [from dear.]
1. Fondness; kindness; love.
My brother holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage.
Shakespeare.

The whole senate dedicated an altar to Friendship, as to a goddess, in respect of the great dearness of friendship between two men.
He who hates his neighbour mortally, and wisely too, must profess all the dearness of friendship, with readiness to serve him.
South.

2. Scarcity; high price.
Landroards prohibit tenants from plowing, which is seen in the dearness of corn.
Swift.

DEARLY. Adv. [dearly, Sax.] Secretly; privately; unseen. Obsolete.

Vol. I.
DEB

As deathwatch you have rid this sweet young prince. Shaksp.

DEATHWATCH. n. s. [death and watch.] An insect that makes a ticking noise like that of a watch, and is superstition imagined to prognosticate death. The citation deathwatch click'd the happy head of Calv. We learn to press our approaching death in a family by ravens, and little worms, which we therefore call a deathwatch. Watts. Miners are much worms, silk worms, and deathwatch physicians. PEP.

To DEAVARTE. n. a. [deaurare, Lat.] To gild, or cover with gold. Dict.

DEAVARATION. n. s. [From deaurate.] The act of gilding.

DEBACCAITION. n. s. [debaccatio, Lat.] A raging; a madness. Dict.

To DEBA'RE, v. a. [From debar and barba, Lat.] To deprive of his beard. Dict.

To DEBA'RK, v. a. [Debarque, Fr.] To disembark. Dict.

To DEBA'R. v. a. [From bar.] To exclude; to preclude; to shut out from any thing; to hinder.

The same boat's and the same buildings are found, prepared from all commerce by impassable mountains, lakes, and deserts. Ralgh's Essay. Not so strictly hath our Lord imposed Labour, as to debar us when we need Refreshment, whether food, or talk between, From the mind of Milton.

Civility, intended to make us easy, is employed in laying chains and fetters upon us, in debarren us of our wishes, and in crossing most reasonable desires. Swift.

To DEBASE, v. a. [From base.]
1. To reduce from a higher to a lower state. Homer intended to teach, that pleasure and sensuality debasen men into beasts.

As much as you raise silver, you debase gold; for, as they are in the condition of two things put in opposite scales; as much as the one rises, the other falls. Locke.

2. To make mean; to sink into meaness; to make desplicable; to degrade.

It is a kind of taking God's name in vain, to debase religion with such frivolous disputes. Hoole.

A man who has no religion has not leisure to consider of every slight expense, and will not debase himself to the management of every trifle. Dryden.

Restraining others, yet himself not free; Made impotent by pow'rs, deba'd by dignity. Dryd.

3. To sink; to vitiate with debasement.

He ought to be careful of not letting his subject be less in his style, and betray him into a meaness of expression. Addis.

Hunting after arguments to make good one side of a question, and wholly to refuse those which favour the other, is so far from giving truth its due value, that it wholly debases it. Locke.

4. To adulterate; to lessen in value by base admixtures.

He returned the coin, which was much debased and debased in the times and troubles of the times of King Stephen. Hale.

Was no debased hard, and to stone hard enough to touch them. Hudibras.

DEBASEMENT. n. s. [From debase.] The act of debasing or degrading; degradation.

It is a wretched debasement of that sprightly faculty, to make use, thus to be made the interpreter to a goat or bear. Government of the Tongue.

DEBAKER. n. s. [From debase.] He that debases; he that adulterates; he that degrades another; he that sinks the value of things, or destroys the dignity of persons.

DEBATEABLE. adj. [From debate.] Disputable; that which is, or may be, subject to controversy.

The French requested, that the debaseable ground, and the Scottish hostages, might be restored to the Scots. Haywood.

DEBATE. n. s. [Debat. Fr.]
1. A personal dispute; a controversy.

A way that men ordinarily use, to force others to submit to their judgments, and receive their opinions in a dispute, is to require the adversary to admit what they alledge as a proof, or to assign a better. Locke.

2. A quarrel; a contest; it is not now used of hostile contest.

Now, lords, if we can't doth give successful end to this debate that blmacheth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Shak. His time is short, and will not suffer a statute Betwixt the dearst friends to raise debate. Dryden.

To DEBATE. v. a. [Debate, Fr.] To controvert; to dispute; to contest.

Debate was then the club by which himself, and discover not a secret to another. Prov. xxv. 9.

He could not debate any thing without some confusion, even when the question was not of moment. Clarendon.

To DEBATE. v. n.
1. To deliberate.

You several times have been consider'd and debate'd on. Shakep.

2. To dispute.

He presents that great soul debating upon the subject of life and death with his intimate friends. Tyler.

DEBATEFUL. adj. [From debate.]
1. [Of persons.] Quarrsomes; contentious.

2. [Of things.] Contested; occasioning quarrels.

DEBATEMENT. n. s. [From debate.]
Controversy; deliberation. Without debate would, more often, be less. He should the greatest soul to defend. Shak.

DEBATE'RY. n. s. [From debate.] A disputant; a controvertist.

To DEBAUCH. v. a. [Debauch, Fr.; debacchari, Lat.] To corrupt; to vitiate.

A man must have got his conscience thoroughly debauched and hardened, before he can arrive to the height of sin. South.

This it is to concern things that are unjust; first, to debauch a king to break his laws, and then to seek protection. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

2. To corrupt with lewdness.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires, Men so disorder'd, so debacch'd, and belov'd that this our court, infected with their manners, Shews like a riotous inn. Shakesp. King Lear.

3. To corrupt by intemperance.

No man's reason did ever dictate to him, that it is reasonable for him to debauch himself by intemperance and brutish sensuality. Tickleton.

DEBAUCH. n. s. [From the verb.]
1. A fit of intemperance.

He will for some time continue himself within the bounds of sobriety; till within a little while he recovers his former debauch, and is well again, and then his appetite returns. Calamy.

2. Intemperance; excess; vice.

The first physiognomy of debauchery were made; Excess began, and sloth sustains; the trade. Dryd.

DEBAUche'e. n. s. [From debauché, Fr.] A lecher; a drunkard; a man given to intemperance.

Could we but prevail with the greatest debauchees among us to change their lives, we should find it no very hard matter to change their judgments. South.

DEBAUCHER. n. s. [From debauch.] One who seduces others to intemperance or lewdness; a corrupter.

DEBAUCHERY. n. s. [From debauch.] The practice of excess; intemperance; lewdness.

Oppose vices by their contrary virtues; hypocrisy by sober piety, and debauchery by temperance. Spratt.

These magistrates, instead of lessening enormities, occasion just twice as much debauchery as there would be without them. Swift.

DEBAUCHMENT. n. s. [From debauch.] The act of debauching or vitiating; corruption.

They told them ancient stories of the ravishment of chaste maidens, or the debauchment of nations, or the extreme poverty of learned persons. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

To DEBEL. v. a. [Debello, Lat.] To DEBELLATE. § To conquer; to overcome in war: not now in use.

It doth notably set forth the consent of all nations in ages, in the approbation of the exterminating and debauching of giants, monsters, and foreign tyrants, not only as lawful, but as meritorious even of divine honour. Bacon's Holy War. Him long of old Thou didst debel, and down from heaven cast. With all his army. Milton.

DEBELLATION. n. s. [From debellatio, Lat.] The act of conquering in war.

DEBENTURE. n. s. [Debentur, Lat. from deben, a.] A writ or note, by which a debt is claimed.

You modern wits, should each man bring his claim. Have desperate debentures on your fame; And little would be left you, I'm afraid. If all your debts to Greece and Rome were paid. Swift.

DEBIL adj. [debilis, Lat.] Weak; feeble; languid; faint; without strength; impotent. Impotent. I have not wash'd my nose; that bled, Or fail'd some debile wretch, which without note There's many else have done. Shakep.

To DEBILITATE. v. a. [Debilis, Lat.] To weaken; to make faint; to enfeeble; to emasculate.

In the lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life, they seemed as weakly to fail as their debilitated posterity ever after. Brown's Fuge. Erse.

The spirits being rendered languid, are incapable of purifying the blood, and debilitated in attracting nutriment. Harvey on Consumptions.

DEBILITATION. n. s. [From debilatio, Lat.] The act of weakening.

The weakness cannot return any thing of strength, honour, or safety to the head, but a debilitation and ruin. King Charles I.

DEBILITY. n. s. [Debilitas, Lat.] Weakness; feebleness; languor; faintness; imbecility. Methinks I am pater of thy passion, And in thy case do glass mine own debility. Sidney.

Alot too vaporous or perspicibl will subject it to the inconveniences of too strong a perspiration, which are debility, faintness, and sometimes sudden death. Arnaubot.
DEBONAIR. adj. [debonnaire, Fr.] Elegant; civil; well-bred; gentle; complaisant: an obsolete word.

Crying, let be that lady debonnaire,
Though she would not thyself prepare To battle, if thou mean her love to win. Spenser.

Let her with thee a day; their fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonnaire.

Milton.

The nature of the one is debonnaire and accessible; of the other, refined and superlative: the one quick and spiritful, the other slow and saturnine.

Holland's 'Local Forest.'

And she that was not only passing fair,
But was also debonnaire. Pope.

Resolved's the passive doctrine to fulfil. Dryden.

DEBONAIRLY. adv. [from debonnaire.] Elegantly; with a genteel air.

DEBT. n. s. [debitum, Lat. dette, Fr.]
1. That which one man owes to another.

There was one that died greatly in debt: Well, says one, if he be gone, then he hath carried five hundred ducats of mine with him into the other world: Bacon's Apothegms.

The debt of ten thousand talents, which the servant obeyed, was the no slight ordinary sum.

To this great loss a sea of tears is due: But the whole debt not to be paid by you. Waller.

Swift, a thousand pounds in debt, takes horse, and in a night's feet Rides as capably. Swift.

2. That which any one is obliged to do or suffer.

Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt;
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
But like a man he die. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

DEBTED. part. [from debt. To Debt is not found. Indebted; obliged to.

Which do amount to three odd ducats more Than I stand indebted to this gentleman. Shakespeare.

DEBTOR. n. s. [debtor, Lat.]
1. He that owes something to another.

I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise. Romans i. 14.

2. One that owes money.

I'll bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first. Shakespeare.

If he be ample plain Should ha'ly on ill-fated shoulder lay Of debtors, Strait his body, to the touch, Observe 'em, as would kings were wont.

To some enchanted castle is convey'd. Philips.

There died my father, no man's servant.

And there I'll die, or worse, nor better. Pope.

This case of debtors in Rome, for the first four centuries, was, after the set: time for payment, no choice but either to pay, or be the creditor's slave. Swift.

When I took upon the debtor side, I find such incomparable articles that I want arithmetic to cast them up: but when I took upon the creditor side, I find little more than blank paper. Addison.

DEBULLITION. n. s. [debullitio, Lat.] A bubbling or seething over. Dict.

DECAMERON. n. s. [decameron, Lat.] Having the top cut off. Dict.

DECADE. n. s. [decia, Gr. deka, Lat.] The sum of ten or a number containing ten.

Men were not only out in the number of some days, the latitude of a few months, but might be wide by whole olympiads, and divers decades of years. Brown's 'Age.'

We make cycles and periods of years; as, decades, centuries, and millenniums, chiefly for the use of computations in history, chronology, and astronomy.

Holden on Time.

All rank'd by ten; whole decades, when they dine,
Must want a Trojan slave to pour the wine. Pope.

DECADENCY. n. s. [decadence, Fr.] Decay: fall. Dict.

DECAGON. n. s. [decagon, Gr.] The ten commandments given by God to Moses.

The commands of God are clearly revealed both in the decalogues and other parts of sacred writ. Hammond.

To DECOUP. v. n. [decapitare, Fr.] To shift the camp; to move off.

DECOMP. ment. n. s. [from decapment.] The act of shifting the camp.

To DECAPIT. v. o. [decapitare, Lat. decanster, Fr.] To pour off gently by inclination.

Take aqua, fortis, and dissolve it in ordinary coin silver, and pour the coloured solution into twelve times as much fair water, and then decant or filter the mixture, that it may be very clear. Boyle.

They attend him daily as their chief,
Decant his wine, and carve his beef. Swift.

DECANTATION. n. s. [decantation, Fr.] The act of decanting or pouring off clear.

DECANTER. n. s. [from decant.] A glass vessel made for pouring off liquor clear from the lees.

To DECAPITATE. v. a. [decapito, Lat.] To beheaded.

To DECAY. v. n. [deceoir, Fr. from de and cordere, Lat.] To lose excellence; to decline from the state of perfection; to be gradually impaired.

The morn of our century,
Three centuries he grows, and three he stays Supreme in state, and in three more decrees.

The garlands fade, the vows are worn away?
So dies her love, and so my hopes decay. Pope.

To DECAY. v. a. To impair; to bring to decay.

Infinitum, that decays the wise, doth ever make Better the fool. Shakespeare.

Cut off a stock of a tree, and lay that which you cut out of to putrefy, to see whether it will decay the rest of the stock. Gildon.

He was of a very small and decreed fortune, and of no good education. Claudian.

Decayed by time and war, they only prove Their former beauty by your former lover. Dryden.

In Spain our springs, like old men's children, be Decay'd and wither'd from their infancy, Dryden.

It is so ordered, that almost every thing which corrupts the soul decays the body. Addison.

DECAY. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Decline from the state of perfection; state of depravation or diminution.

What comes to this great decay may come, Shall be applied. Shakespeare.

She has been a fine lady, and paints and hides Her decay very well. Ben Johnson.

And thou, decay'd, to speak the naked truth,
Through the defects of age, were crimes of youth. Dryden.

By reason of the tenacity of fluids, and attrition of their parts, and the weakness of elasticity in solids, motion is much more apt to be lost than gain. Newton.

Each may feel increases and decrees,
And see now clearer and now darker days. Pope.

To speak the naked truth, to prove our decay. To welcome death, and calmly pass away. Pope.

2. The effects of diminution; the marks of decay.

They think, that whatever is called old must have the decay of time upon it, and truth too were liable to mould and rotteness. Locke.

3. Declension from prosperity.

And if thy brother he wakened poor, and fallen in decay with thee, then shalt thou relieve him. Levit. xix. 35.

I am the very man,
That, from your first of difference and decay,
Have followed your sad steps. Shakespeare. King Lear.

4. The cause of decline.

He that seeketh to be eminent among men, hath a great task; but that is ever good for the publick; but he that plots to be the only figure among citizens, is the decay of a whole age. Bacon.

DECAYER. n. s. [from decay.] That which causes decay.

Your water is a sore decayer of your whosef dead body. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

DECEASE. n. s. [decessus, Lat.] Death; departure from life.

Lands are by human law, in some places, after the owner's decease, divided among all his children; in some, all descendeth to the eldest son. Holder.

To DECEASE. v. n. [deceder, Lat.] To die; to depart from life.

He tells us Arthur is decreed to-night. Shakespeare.

You shall die
Twice now, where others, that mortality
In her fair arms holds, shall but once decease. Chapman.

His latest victories still thickest came,
As, near the centre, on mutual doth increase;
Till he, press'd down by his own weighty name,
Did, like the vestal, under spoils decrees. Dryden.

DECEIT. n. s. [deception, Lat.]
1. Fraud; a cheat; a fallacy; any practice by which falsehood is made to pass for truth.

My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit. Job. xxvii. 4.

2. Stratagem; artifice.

His d'mand
Springs not from Edward's well-mean't honest love, But from deceit, bred by necessity. Shak.

3. [In law.] A subtle wily shift or device; all manner of craft, subtility, guile, fraud, wilness, sleightness, cunning, covin, collusion, practice, and office, used to deceive another man by any means, which hath no other proper or particular name but deceitfulness. Corell.

DECEITFUL. adj. [deceit and full.] Fraudulent; full of deceit.

I grant him bloody,
Lavishious, swarthy, false, deceitful. Shakespeare.

The lovely young Latine once had friends:
And fortune smile'd, deceitful, on her birth. Thomson.

DECEPTIVELY. adv. [from deceitful.] Fraudulently; with deceit.

Exercive of form may be deceitfully dispatched of course. Wotton.

DECEPTIVENESS. n. s. [from deceitful.]
The quality of being fraudulent; tendency to deceive.

The care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. Matthew xxiii. 22.

DECEIVABLE. adj. [from deceivir.]
1. Subject to fraud; exposed to imposition.

Man was not only deceitable in his integrity, but the angels of light in all their clarities. Brown's 'Vulg.' Fr.
DEC

How would thou use me now, blind, and thy Decivible, in most things as a child
Helpless: hence easily convinced and scorn'd.
And peremptorily decided.
2. Subject to produce error; deceitful.
It is good to consider of deformity, not as a sign, which is more deceitful, but as a cause which seldom falsifies the effect.
He that is not always true, but fair promises, which proved deceitful.

Decivability. n. s. [from deceitful.] Liabilities to be deceived, or to deceive. He that has a great patron, has the advantage of his negligence and deceitfulness.

To deceive. v. a. [decipio, Lat.] 1. To cause to mistake; to bring into error; to impose upon.
Some have been deceived in an opinion, that there was a divine right of primogeniture to both estate and power.

2. To delude by stratagem.
3. To cut off from expectation, with before the thing.
The Turkish general, deceived of his expectation, withdrew his fleet twelve miles off.
Knolles.
I do believe'd
The happy day approach'd, nor are my hopes deceived.

4. To mock; to fail.
They raised a feable cry with trembling notes,
but the weak voice deceived their gasping threats.

5. To deprive by fraud or stealth.
Wine is to be forborne in consumptions, for that the spirits of the wine prey on the viscid juice of the body, intercommunicating with the spirits of the body, and so deceive and rob them of their nourishment.
Bacon.
Plant fruit trees in large borders, and set therein in line flowers, but thin and sparingly, lest they deceive the trees.

Deceiver. n. s. [from deceive.] One that leads another into error; a cheat.
Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more;
Never sinner ever.
One foot in sea, and one on shore;
To one thing constant never.
Shakespeare.
As for Perkin's distillation out of France, they historians do not as if they were detected for a counterfeit deceiver.
Bacon.
Those voices, actions, or gestures, which men have not by any compact agreed to make the instruments of conveying their thoughts one to another, are not the proper instruments of deceiving, as so to denominate the person using them to the deceiver.

Deceit. adj. [deceit, decem, n. s.]
1. Becoming; fit; suitable.
Since there must be ornaments both in painting and poetry, if the truth was necessary, they must be at least deceit; that is, in their due place, and
but moderately used.

2. Grave; not guilty.

Come, let us go to the country.
Sweat.

December. n. s. [from decem, Lat.] The last month of the year; but named December, or the tith month, when the
year began in March.
Men are April when they woo, and December
when they wed.
Shakespeare. As you like it.

Decemed. adj. [from decem, Lat.] Ten feet in length.

Decemvirate. n. s. [decemviratus, Lat.]
The dignity and office of the ten governors of Rome, who were appointed

DECE

to rule the commonwealth instead of consults: their authority subsisted only two years. Any body of ten men.

Decency. n. s. [decen, Fr. decet, decency, Lat.]
1. Propriety of form; proper formality;
becoming ceremony: deceicer is seldom used.
Those thousand deceivers, that daily flow
From all her general actions. Milton.
In good works there may be goodness in the general: but deceicer and gracefulness may be only in the particular; in doing good.
Swift.
Were the offices of religion stript of all the external deceivers of worship, they would not make a disc impression on the minds of those who assist at them.

She speaks, behaves, and acts just as she ought;
but never, never reach'd one generous thought;
Virtue she finds too painful an undertaking,
Content to dwell in deceivers for ever.

Pope.

2. Suitableness to character; propriety.
And must I own, she said, my secret smart;
What with more deceivers were in silence kept?

Dryden.
The consideration immediately subsequent to the being of a thing, is what agree's or differ's with that thing; what is suitable or unsuitable to it; and from this springs the notion of deceicer or indelicacy, that which becomes or misbecomes.

South.

3. Modesty; not ribaldy; not obscenity.
Inmodest words admist no admition of deceicer,
For want of deceicer is want of sense.
Reynolds.

Decennial. adj. [from decemnum, Lat.]
What continues for the space of ten years.

Decennival. adj. [decem and no-]
Decennary. n. s. [decem, Lat.] Relating to the number nineteen.

Meton, of old, in the time of the Peloponnesian war, constituted a decennial circle, or of nineteen years; the which we now call the golden number.
Holden.
Seven months are retracted in this whole decennary progress of the eclipses, to reduce the accounts of their motion and place to those of the sun.

Decent. adj. [deceicer, Lat.]

1. Becoming; fit; suitable.
Since there must be ornaments both in painting
and poetry, if the truth was necessary, they must be at least deceit; that is, in their due place, and
but moderately used.

2. Grave; not guilty.

Come, let us go to the country.
Sweat.

December. n. s. [from decem, Lat.] The last month of the year; but named December, or the tith month, when the
year began in March.
Men are April when they woo, and December
when they wed.
Shakespeare. As you like it.

Decemed. adj. [from decem, Lat.] Ten feet in length.

Decemvirate. n. s. [decemviratus, Lat.]
The dignity and office of the ten governors of Rome, who were appointed

DECE

to rule the commonwealth instead of consults: their authority subsisted only two years. Any body of ten men.

Decency. n. s. [decen, Fr. decet, decency, Lat.]
1. Propriety of form; proper formality;
becoming ceremony: deceicer is seldom used.
Those thousand deceivers, that daily flow
From all her general actions. Milton.
In good works there may be goodness in the general: but deceicer and gracefulness may be only in the particular; in doing good.
Swift.
Were the offices of religion stript of all the external deceivers of worship, they would not make a disc impression on the minds of those who assist
at them.

She speaks, behaves, and acts just as she ought;
but never, never reach'd one generous thought;
Virtue she finds too painful an undertaking,
Content to dwell in deceivers for ever.

Pope.

2. Suitableness to character; propriety.
And must I own, she said, my secret smart;
What with more deceivers were in silence kept?

Dryden.
The consideration immediately subsequent to the being of a thing, is what agree's or differ's with that thing; what is suitable or unsuitable to it; and from this springs the notion of deceicer or indelicacy, that which becomes or misbecomes.

South.

3. Modesty; not ribaldy; not obscenity.
Inmodest words admist no admition of deceicer,
For want of deceicer is want of sense.
Reynolds.

Decennial. adj. [from decemnum, Lat.]
What continues for the space of ten years.

Decennival. adj. [decem and no-]
Decennary. n. s. [decem, Lat.] Relating to the number nineteen.

Meton, of old, in the time of the Peloponnesian war, constituted a decennial circle, or of nineteen years; the which we now call the golden number.
Holden.
Seven months are retracted in this whole decennary progress of the eclipses, to reduce the accounts of their motion and place to those of the sun.

Decent. adj. [deceicer, Lat.]

1. Becoming; fit; suitable.
Since there must be ornaments both in painting
and poetry, if the truth was necessary, they must be at least deceit; that is, in their due place, and
but moderately used.

2. Grave; not guilty.

Come, let us go to the country.
Sweat.

December. n. s. [from decem, Lat.] The last month of the year; but named December, or the tith month, when the
year began in March.
Men are April when they woo, and December
when they wed.
Shakespeare. As you like it.

Decemed. adj. [from decem, Lat.] Ten feet in length.

Decemvirate. n. s. [decemviratus, Lat.]
The dignity and office of the ten go-
DECIDUOUS, adj. [deciduous, Lat.] Falling; not perennial; not lasting through the year.

Deciduousness, n.s. [from deciduous.]

Aptness to fall; quality of fading once a year.

Dict.

DECIMAL, adj. [decimus, Lat.] Numbered by ten; multiplied by ten.

In the way we take now to name numbers by millions of millions of millions, it is hard to go beyond eighties, or, at most, four and thirty. Dialect.

To DECIMATE, v. a. [decimus, Lat.] To take; to take the tenth.

DEcimation, n. s. [from decimate.]

1. A tithing; a selection of every tenth by lot or otherwise.

2. A selection by lot of every tenth soldier, in a general mutiny, for punishment.

By decimation and a tithed death, take the destined death. Shake.

A decimation I will strictly make Of all who my Charsius did forsake; And of each legion each centurion shall die. Dryden.

To DECIPHERER. v. a. [decipherer, Fr.]

1. To explain that which is written in ciphertexts: this is the common use.

Zelame, that had the same character in her heart, could easily decipher it. Sister.

Assurance is writ in a private character, not to be read, nor understood, but by the conscience, to which the spirit of God has vocalized to decipher it, of that age. South.

2. To unfold; to unravel; to explain: as, to decipher an ambiguous speech.

3. To write out; to mark down in characters.

Could I give you a lively representation of guilt and horror on this hand, and point out eternal wrath and death eternal vengeance on the other, then might I shew you the condition of a timer bearing himself denied by Christ. South.

Then were laws of necessity invented, that so every particular subject might find his principal pleasure deciphered unto him, in the tables of his laws. Locke.

4. To stamp; to characterise; to mark.

You are both decipher'd.

For villain mark'd and traitor. Shake.

DEcipherer, n. s. [from decipher.] One who explains writings in cipher.

Decision, n. s. [from decide.]

1. Determination of a difference, or of a doubt.

The time approaches, That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe. Shake.

Pleasure and revenge Have ears more deaf than adds to the voice
Of any true decision. Shake.

The number of the undertakers, the worth of some of them, and their zeal to bring the matter to a decision, are sure arguments of the dignity and importance of it. Woodward.

We are in due time, and to God in due time, for the decision of some dispute, which can by no other means be determined. Atterbury.

2. Determination of an event.

Their arms are in the last decision bent.

And fate with all the vast event. Dryden.

3. It is used in Scotland for a narrative, or reports of the proceedings of the court of session there.

Decisive, adj. [from decide.]

1. Having the power of determining any difference; conclusive.

Such a reflection, though it carries nothing perfectly decisive in it, yet creates a mighty confidence in his breast, and strengthens him much in his opinion. Atterbury.

This they are ready to look upon as a determination on their side, and decide of the controversy, as being bent on some virtue. Regius.

2. Having the power of settling any event.

For on that event,

Decide of this bloody day, depends The fate of kingdoms. Philips.

Decisively, adv. [from decisive.]

In a conclusive manner.

Decisiveness, n.s. [from decisive.] The power of argument or evidence to terminate any difference, or settle an event.

Decisory, adj. [from decide.] Able to determine or decide.

To DEcide. v. a. [decide, Dut.]

1. To cover; to overspread.

Ye mists and exhalations, that now rise From hill or steaming lake, dusky or grey,

In honour to the world's great Author, rise! Whether to deck with clouds the unclouded sky, Or wet the thirsty earth with falling showers, Rising or falling, still advance his praise. Milton.

2. To dress; to array.

Sweet ornament! that decks a thing divine, Shake.

Long may'st thou live to wail thy children's loss, And see another, as I see thee now, Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art staid in mice. Shake.

She sets to work millions of spinning worms, That in their green shops weave the smooth-hair'd silk,

To deck her sons. Milton.

3. To adorn; to embellish.

But drieful, deadly black, both leaf and bloom, Fit to adorn the dead, and deck the dreary tomb.

Now the dew with spangles deck'd the ground, A sweeter spot of earth was never found. Dryden.

The god shall to his votaries tell

Each evening, forth, each blushing grace, That deck'd dear Eros's face. Prior.

DEcK. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The floor of a ship.

Her keel plows hell, And deck knocks heaven. Ben Jonson.

We also with second decks, and give more vent thereto than our ordinance, to tryning on our neither overlap. Raleigh.

If any, born and bred under deck, had no other information but what sense affords, he would be of opinion that the ship was as stable as a house. Clavell.

On high-rail's deck the haughty Belemans ride, Beneath whose shade our humble frigates go.

Dryden.

At sun-set to their ship they make return, And more secure on deck till rosy morn.

Dryden's Hind.

2. Pack of cards piled regularly on each other.

Besides gems, many other sorts of stones are regularly figure'd; the amethysts, of parallel threads, as in the pile of velvets; and the selenites, of parallel plates, as in a deck of cards. Gray.

Decider, n. s. [from deck.] A dresser; one that apparatus or adorns; a coverer, as a table-decker.

To DECLAMATION. v. n. [declaim, Lat.] To harangue; to speak to the passions; to rhetoric; to speak set orations.

DECLAMER, n. s. [from declaim.] One who makes speeches with intent to move the passions.

Your salamander is a perpetual declamer against jealousy. Addison.

DECLAMATION. n.s. [declaimatio, Lat.] A discourse addressed to the passions: an harangue; a set speech; a piece of rhetoric.

The cause why declarations prevail so greatly, is, for that men suffer themselves to be declaim'd.

Thon mayst forgive his anger, while thou makest use of the plainness of his declaration. Taylor.

DECLAMATOR, n.s. [Lat.] A declamer; an orator; a rhetorician: seldom used.

Who could I say, he was a generous declamator, who should be courted at his noble seat? Tatur.

DECLAMATORY, adj. [declamatorius, Lat.]

1. Relating to the practice of declaiming; pertaining to declaration; treated in the manner of a rhetorician.

This a while suspended his interment, and became a declaration's theme amongst the religious Haceton.

2. Appealing to the passions.

He has run himself into his own declaration's way, and almost forgotten that he was now setting up for a moral poet. Dryden.

DECLARABLE, adj. [from declare.] Capable of proof.

This is declarable from the best writers. Brown.

DECLARATION, n. s. [from declare.]

1. A proclamation or affirmation; open expression; publication.

His promises are nothing else but declarations, what God will do for the good of men. Hester.

The sight and hearing are certain mental and intellectual perfections of the mind, yet the declaration of them, which alone brings the repute, is subject to a thousand hazards. There are no sure places and full declarations of mercy and love to the sons of men, as are made in the gospel. Tillemont.

2. An explanation of something doubtful.

Obsolete.

3. [in law.] Declaration (declaration) is property of age shewing forth, or laying out, of an action personal in any suit, though it is used sometimes for both personal and real actions. Cowell.

DECLARATIVE, adj. [from declare.]

1. Making declaration; explanatory.

The names of things should be always taken from something observably declarative of their form or nature. Gray.

To this we may add the pr populi, so declarative on the same side. Swift.

DECLARATORIALLY, adv. [from declaratory.] In the form of a declaration; not in a decretory form. Andrews. The civilian, and Francisco de Cordia, have both declaratorily confirmed the same. Brown's Fluig. Err.
To DECLARE, v. a. [declaro, Lat.]
1. To clear; to free from obscurity: not in force.
To declare this a little, we must assume that the surfaces of such bodies are exactly smooth.
2. To make known; to tell evidently and openly.
It hath been declared unto me of you, that there are contentsions among you. 1 Cor. xi. 11.
The sun by certain signs declares, Both when the south projects a stormy day, and when the clearing north will put the clouds away.
Dryden's Virgil.
3. To publish; to proclaim.
Declare his glory among the heathen. 1 Cor. xvi. 24.

To DECLARE, r. n. To make a declaration; to proclaim some resolution or opinion, or favour or opposition: with for or against.
The internal faculties of will and understanding decreeing and declaring against them. Taylor.
God is said not to have himself without witness in the world; there being something fixed in the nature of men, that will be sure to testify and declare for him. South's Sermons.
Like wavering courtiers, for success they wait; And then come smiling, and declare for fate.

DECLARATION, n. s. [from declare.] Discover; declaration; testimony.
Crystal will calmly into electricity; that is, into a power of converting one body into another, or light bodies; and convert the needle freely placed, which is a declaration of very different parts. Brown.

DECLARER, n. s. [from declare.] A proclaimer; one that makes any thing known.

DECLENSION, n. s. [declinatio, Lat.]
1. Trendency from a greater to a less degree of excellence.
A beauty-wasting and distressed widow. Even in the afternoon of her best days, Sextus' pitch and height of all his thoughts, to base declension. Shaks. Rich. Ill.
Take the picture of a man in the greenness and vivacity of his youth, and in the latter date and declension of his drooping years, and you may scarce know it to belong to the same person. South's Sermons.

2. Declension: descent.
We may reasonably allow as much for the declension of the land, from that place to the sea, as for the immediate height of the mountain. Burnet's Theor.

3. Inflection; manner of changing nouns.
Declension is only the variation or change of the termination of a noun, whilst it continues to signify the same thing. Clarke's Latin Grammar.

DECLINABLE, adj. [from decline.] Having various terminations as, a declinable noun.

DECLINATION, n. s. [declinatio, Lat.]
1. Descent; change from a better to a worse state; diminution of vigour; decay.
The queen, hearing of the declaration of a monarchy, took it so ill, as she never after hearken of his suit. Bacon.
Two great reasons: all animadversions have been, that is, their beginning and increase; and two more, that is, their state and declination. Brown's Ang. Err.
Hope waits upon the flow'ry prime; And summer, though it be less gay, Yet is not look'd on as a time Of diminution and decay. Waller.
2. The act of bending down; as, a declination of the head.
3. Variation from rectitude; oblique motion; obliquity.
Supposing there were a declination of atoms, yet it will not effect what they intend; for them they do all decline, and so there will be no more concourse than if they did perpendicularly descend. Ray.
This declination of atoms in their descent, was itself either necessary or voluntary. Bentle.
4. Deviation from moral rectitude.
That a practising creature should disappear and repeat of every obliquity, and violation of the rules of just and honest, this right reason, discounting upon the stock of its own principles, could not but infer.
South's Sermons.
5. Variation from a fixed point. There is no declination of latitude, but variation of the elevation of the pole, notwithstanding what some have asserted. Woodward.
6. [In navigation.] The variation of the needle from the direction to north and south.
7. [In astronomy.] The declination of a star, we call its shortest distance from the equator. Brown.
8. [In grammar.] The declension or inflexion of a noun through its various terminations.
9. Declination of a Plane [in dialling] is an arch of the horizon, comprehended either between the plane and the prime vertical circle, if accounted from the east or west; or else between the meridian and the plane, if accounted from the north or south. Harris.

DECLINATOR. n. s. [from decline.] Declinatory. An instrument in dialling, by which the declination, reduction, and inclination of planes are determined. Chambers.
There are several ways to know the several planes; but the newest is by an instrument called a declinatory, fitted to the variation of your place. Moron.

To DECLINE, v. n. [declino, Lat.]
1. To lean downward, And then with kind embraces, tempting kisses, And with declining head into his bosom, Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd. Shaksp.
2. To deviate; to run into obliquities. Neither shall they speak in a course to decline after many, to wrest judgment. Isaiah xxiii. 2.
3. To shun; to avoid to do any thing.
4. To sink; to be impaired; to decay. Opposed to improvement or exaltation.
Sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should guide or rule the son. Shaksp.
They'll be by th' fire, and presume to know What's done i' th' Capitol; who's like to rise.
Who strives, and who declines. Shaksp.

DECLIVOUS, adj. [declivis, Lat.] Gradually descending; not precipitous; not perpendicularly sinking; the contrary to declivious; moderately steep.

To DECOC'T. v. a. [decocedo, decocutum, Lat.] To prepare by boiling for any use; to digest in hot water.
Sena losteth his windiness by decocet; and stulte or windy spirits are taken off by incursion or evaporation. Bacon.

478
DEC

9. To digest by the help of the stomach. There they do, and doth the food prepare; there she distributes it to every vein; she also expels what she mightily spare. Dan.

3. To boil, as to draw the strength or virtue of any thing.

The larger malt or herbs are decocted in liquor, the clearer it is. Bacon.

4. To boil up to a consistence; to strengthen or invigorate by boiling: this is no proper use.

Can soda water, their barley broth, Deco'rt their cold bowels to such valiant heat! Shak.

DECQCTIBLE. adj. [from decoct.] That which may be boiled, or prepared by boiling.

Diet.

DECQCTION. n. s. [decoc.tum, Lat.]

The act of boiling any thing, to extract its virtues.

In infusion the longer it is, the greater is the part of the gross body that goeth into the liquor; but in decoction, though more goeth forth, yet it either purgeth at the top, or setteth at the bottom. Bacon.

The linearments of a white lily will remain after the strongest decoction. Arbuthnot.

2. A preparation made by boiling in water.

They distil their husbands' land
In decoctions; and are named
With their empires, in their chamber.
Lying for the spirit of amber. Ben Jonson.

If the plant be boiled in water, the strained liquor is called the decoction of the plant. Arbuthnot.

Deco'tion n. s. [from decoct.] A substance drawn by decoction.

DECQCTATION. n. s. [decoctatio, Lat.]

The act of heating.

He, by a decoction of all hope, annihilates his mercy; this, by an immobility thereof, destroys his justice. Dryden.

DECOMPOSITE. adj. [decompositus, Lat.]

Compos'd a second time; compound'd with things already compound'd.

Decomposes of three metals, or more, are too long to inquire of, except there be some compositions of them already observed. Bacon.

DECOMPOSITION. n. s. [decomposition, Lat.]

The act of compound'ing things already compound'ed.

We consider what happens in the compositions and decompositions of saline particles. Boyle.

To DECOMPOUND. v. a. [decompose, Lat.]

1. To compose of things already compound'ed; to compound a second time; to form by a second composition.

Nature herself doth in the bowels of the earth make decomposed bodies, as we see in vitriol, calomel, and even in sulphur itself. Boyle.

When a word stands for a very complex idea, that is compound'ed and decomposed, it is not easy for men to form and retain that idea anymore. Locke.

If the violet, blue, and green be intercepted, the remaining yellow, orange, and red will compound upon the paper an orange; and then, if the intercepted colours be let pass, they will fall upon this compound orange, and, together with it, decomposed a second time. Newton.

2. To resolve a compound into simple parts.

This is a sense that has of late crept irre'gularly into chymical books.

DECOMPOnD. adj. [from the verb.]

Composed of things or words already compound'ed; compound'd a second time.

The pretended salts and sulphur are so far from being elementary parts extracted out of the body of mercury, that they are rather, to borrow a term of the grammarians, decomposed bodies, made up of the whole metal and the menstruum, or other additions employed to distinguish it. Boyle.

No body should admire any compound or compound'd of the substantial verbs. Arbuthnot and Pope.

DECORAMENT. n. s. [from decorate.] Ornament; embellishment.

Diet.

To DECORATE. v. a. [decoro, Lat.] To adorn; to embellish; to beautify.

DECORATION. n. s. [from decorate.] Ornament; embellishment; added beauty.

The ensigns of virtues contrive the ornament of figures; such as the decorations belonging to the liberal arts. Dryden.

This helm and heavy buckler I can spare, As only decorations of the war: So Mars is arm'd for glory, not for need. Dryden.

DECORATOR. n. s. [from decorate.] An adorer; an embellisher.

DECOROUS. adj. [decorus, Lat.] Decent; suitable to a character; becoming; proper; becoming; seemly.

It is not so decorous, in respect of God, that he should immediately do all the meanest and triflingest things himself, without any inferior or subordinate minister. Bay.

To DECORATE. v. a. [decoro, Lat.] To dress the bark or husk; to husk; to peel; to strip.

Take great barley, dried and decorat'd, after it is well washed, and boil it in water. Arbuthnot.

DECORATION. n. s. [from decorat.] The act of stripping the bark or husk.

DECORUM. n. s. [decorum, Lat.]

Decency; behaviour contrary to licentiousness; contrary to liberty; seemliness.

If your master would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him that majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom. Shaks.

I am far from suspecting simplicity, which is bold to trespass in points of decorum. Wren.

Beyond the fix'd and settled rules
Of vice and virtue in the schools,
The better sort shall set before 'em
A grace, a manner, a decorum. Prior.

Gentlemen of the army should be, at least, obliged to external decorum; a pedagogic life and character should not be a mean of advancement. Swift.

He kept with princes the decorum,
Yet never stood in awe before 'em. Swift.

To DECOY. v. a. [from decoy, Dut. a cage.]

To lure into a cage; to entrap; to draw into a snare.

A fowler had taken a partridge, who offered to decoy her companions into the snare. L'Espr. Decoy'd by the fair, black eye,
Now lost, and now renew'd, he sinks absent,
Rider and horse. Thomson.

Decoy. n. s. [from the verb.]

Allurement to mischief; temptation.

The Devil could never have had such numbers, had he not used some decoy to ensnare others. Government of the Tongue.

These exuberant productions of the earth became a continual decoy and snare to ensnare them. Addison.

An old dramdrinker is the Devil's decoy. Berkeley.

Decoy'duck. n. s. A duck that lures others.

There is a sort of ducks, called decoy-ducks, that will bring whole flocks of fowl to their retirements, where are conveniences made for catching them. Mortimer.

To DECREASE. v. n. [decresco, Lat.]

To grow less; to be diminished.

From the moon is the sign of feasts, a light that decreases in her perfection. Plin. lxi. 7.

Unto forty years, as they said, the heart annually decreases the weights of our limbs, after which, in the same proportion, it decreases. Brown's Fugio. Err.

When the sun comes to his tropic, they increase and decrease but a very little for a great while together. Newton.

To DECREASE. v. a. To make less; to diminish.

He did dishonourable deeds.
These articles, which did our spirits create. Don. Nor cherish'd they relations poor, That might decrease their present store. Prior. How increases the thickness of fætiduous liquors, as of all, balsams, and honey; and thereby decreases their resistance. Newton.

DECREASE. n. s. [from the verb]

1. The state of growing less; decay.

By weaking toll and hoary age decrees, See the decrees, and hasten to thy tomb. Prior.

2. The main; the time; the visible face of the moon grows less.

See in what time the seeds, set in the increase of the moon, come to a certain height, and begin to decrease from those that are in the decrease of the moon. Bacon.

To DECREASE. v. n. [decrescent, Lat.]

To make an edict; to appoint by edict; to establish by law; to determine; to resolve.

They shall see the end of the wise, and shall not understand what God in his counsel hath decreed of him. Prov. 1.

Father eternal; thine is to decrees; Mine, both in heaven and earth, to do thy will. Milton.

Had heaven decreed that I should live enjoy'd, Heaven had decreed to save unhappy Troy. Dryd.

To DECREASE. v. a. To diminish or assign by a decree.

Thus shalt also declare a thing, and it shall be established. Job.

The king their father, On just and weighty reasons, has decreed His sequel to the younger.

DECREASE. n. s. [decrescent, Lat.]

1. An edict; a law.

If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice. Shak.

There went one from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be brought to sub. le. t. I. Are we condemned by fate's unjust decree.

No more our houses and our homes to see? Dryd. The supreme Being is sovereign good; he rewards the just, and punishes the unjust; and the folly of man, and the decrees of heaven, is the cause of human calamity. Brow.

2. An established rule.

When he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lighting of the thunder. Job xcviii. 5.

3. A determination of a suit, or litigated cause.

4. [In canon law.] An ordinance which is enacted by the pope himself, by and with the aid of his cardinals in council assembled, without leg. confirmed by any one thereon. Ashl. C. Lexian.

DECREMENT. n. s. [decrementum, Lat.]

Decrease; the state of growing less; the quantity lost by decreasing.

Upon the tropic, and first exception from our solstices, we are scarce sensible of declination; but inclining farther, our decrement increase till, and in our last days, that we are not as conscious of our graves. Brow. Ful. Ewes.

Rocks, mountains, and the other elevations of the earth, have a continual decrement, and grow lower and lower. Win. 479.
To DECORATE. v. a. [decorare, Lat.] To disgrace; to bring a reproach upon.

Dict.

DEDICATION. n. s. [from dedication.] The act of dedicating; dedication. Dict.

DEDICATORY. adj. [de dicere, Lat.] Composing a dedication; complimentary; adulatory.

DEDICATORY. adj. [de dicere, Lat.] Composing a dedication; complimentary; adulatory.

DEDICATORY. adj. [de dicere, Lat.] Composing a dedication; complimentary; adulatory.

DEDICATORY. adj. [de dicere, Lat.] Composing a dedication; complimentary; adulatory.
DED

DEED. n. s. [dedicio, Lat.] The act of yielding up any thing; surrender. It was not a complete conquest, but rather a dedicio upon terms and capitulations agreed to between the conqueror and the conquered. Locke.

To DEDUCE. v. a. [deducen, Lat.]
1. To draw in a regular connected series, from one time or one event to another. I will deduce from his character, through the deep and subtle waves of state and court, till he was swallowed in the gulf of faction. Wotton Buckin. From the first note the hollow cuckoo sings, the symphony of spring. Thomson.

DEDICATE. [from deduce]
The thing deduced; the collection of reason; consequential proposition.

Praise and prayer are his due worship, and the rest of those dedicements which I am capable of the remote effects of reflection. Dryden.

DEDUCIBLE. adj. [from deduce.] Collectible by reason; consequential; discoverable from principles laid down.
The condition, although deducible from many grounds, yet shall we evidence it but from few. Brown's Vulg. Err. So far, therefore, as conscience reports any thing agreeable to or deducible from these, it is to be hearkened to. South.

All properties of a triangle depend on, and are deducible from, the complex idea of three lines, including a space. Locke.

DEDUCTIVE. adj. [from deduce.] Performing the act of deduction. Dict.

To DEDUCT. v. a. [deduco, Lat.]
1. To subtract; to take away; to cut off; to deduct.
We deduct from the computation of our years that part of our time which is spent in insecurity of infancy. Nover. To separate; to disconnect; to divide. Now not in use. Having got, in his deducted sight, some sparks remaining of that heavenly fire. Spenser.

DEDUCTION. n. s. [deductio, Lat.]
1. Consequential collection; consequence; proposition drawn from principles premised.

Out of scripture such duties may be deduced, by some kind of consequence; as by long circuit of deduction it may be that all true, out of any truth, may be concluded. Set before you the matter of God, with such deductions from it as our Saviour hath drawn, or on our own side of the question, and mark. Homer.

That by diversity of notions we should spell out things not resembled by them, we must attribute to some secret deduction: but what this deduction should be, or by what means this knowledge is advanced, is as dark as ignorance. Glanville.

You have laid the experiments together in such a way, that the deduction from them, as I have not hitherto met with. Boyle.

All cross and distasteful honours are either expressed, or by clear consequence and deduction, forbidden in the New Testament. Tilton.

A reflection so obvious, that natural instinct seems to have suggested it even to those who never much meditated on it, Rogers.

That which is deduced; deduction. Bring then these blessings to a strict account; make fair deductions; see to what they amount. Pope.

DEDUCTIVE. adj. [from deduct.] Deducible; that which is or may be deduced from a general to a particular, and from the universal to the particular. All knowledge of causes is deductive; for we know none by simple intuition, but through the mediation of their effects. Glanville.

DEDUCTIVELY. adv. [from deductive.] Consequentially; by regular deduction; by a regular train of reasoning.

There is scarce a popular error passing in our days, which is not either directly expressed, or deductively contained, in this work. DEED. n. s. [deed, Sax. deed, Dut.]

1. Action, whether good or bad; thing done.
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed, The place is dignified by th' doer's deed. Shak. The monster nought replied; for words were vain. And deeds could only deeds unjust maintain. Dryd. The same had not consented to the counsel and deed. Luke. We are not scandalized from the expectation of reward for our charitable deeds. Shaftesbury's Sermon.

2. Explicit; performed.
I, on the other side, had no ambition to commend my deeds; The deeds themselves, thou' mate, spoke loud for Milton. Thousands were there, in darker flame that dwell, Whose deeds some noblest poem shall adorn. Dryd.

3. Power of action; agency.
To be with will and deed created free. Milton.

4. Act declaratory of an opinion. They desire, with strange absurdity, that to the same senate it should belong to give full judgment in matter of excommunication, and to absolve whom it pleased them, contrary to their own former deeds and courts. Hooker.

5. Written evidence of any legal act. The solicitor gave an evidence for a deed, which was impeached to be fraudulent. Bacon. He wrote them his deed upon the sand, and the deeds by which he held his estate upon the face of a river. South.

6. Fact; reality; the contrary to fiction; whence the word indeed.
O that, as oft I have at Athens seen The stage arise, and the big clouds descend; So now in very deed I might behold The pompous earth, and all you marble rock; Meet like the hands of Jove. Lee's Oedipus.

DEEDLESS. adj. [from deed.] Unactive; without action; without exploit.
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue. Shak. Instant, he cried, your female discarded end.

Ye deedless boilers! and the song attend. Pope.

To DEEM. v. n. part. deempt, or deemed. [demon, Goth. doemen, Dut. seeman, Sax.]
1. To judge; to conclude upon consideration; to think; to opine; to determine.
Thus here a famous golden apple grew, For which th' Idaean ladies disagreed, Till partial Paris deempt it Venus' due. Spenser.

So natural is the union of religion with justice, that we may boldly deem there is neither, where both are not. Hooker.

DEE. n. [deep, Dut. dee.]

1. A girl, lady'ld familiar to Anna Dames, Milton. These blessings in the deep and desert. Shak. For never can I deem him less than god. Dryd. Nature, distrustful. Is deem'd vindicative to have changed be. Towne.

2. To estimate; to make estimate of: this sense is now disused.
Do me not to dy.
Ne deem thy form by Fortune's doom unjust,
That hath, mangle her spite, thus low me laid in dust.
But they that skill not of so heavenly matter,
All that they know not, envy, or adore.
Rather than envy, let them wonder at her,
But not to deem of her desert aspiring. Speer.

DEEMSTER. n. s. [from deem.] A judge; a word yet in use in Jersey and the Isle of Man.

DEEP. adj. [deep, Sax.

1. Having length downwards; descending far; profound; opposed to shallow.
All trees in high and sandy grounds are to be set deep, and in watery grounds more shallow. Bacon. The gaping gulf how to the centre lies, And twice as deep as earth is distant from the skies. Dryd.

2. Low in situation; not high.
3. Measured from the surface downward.
Mr. Halley, in diving deep into the sea in a diving vessel, found, in a clear sun-shine day, that when he was sunk many fathoms deep into the water, the upper part of his hand, on which the sun shone directly, appeared of a red colour. Newton.

4. Entering far; piercing a great way. This avance strikes deeper, grows with more pernicious root. Shak.

For, even in that season of year, the ways in that vale were very deep. Dryd.

Then hast not strength such labours to sustain: Drink yon elevator, my boy! drink deep, and quench thy brain. Shak.

5. Far from the outer part.
So the false spider, when her nets are spread, Dep ambush'd in her silent den does lie. Dryd.

6. Not superficial; not obvious.
If the matter be knotty, and the sense lies deep, the mind must stop and buckle to it, and stick upon it with labour and thought, and close contemplation. Locke.

7. Sagacious; penetrating; having the power to enter far into a subject.
Who hath not heard it spoken: How deep do ye were within the books of heav'n? Shak.

The spirit of deep phrenophoye she hath. Shak. He's meditating with two deep divers: Shak.

He in my ear Vented much policy and projects deep, Of armies, of aids, battles, and leagues, Plausible to the world, to use worth sought. Milton. I do not discover the helps which this great man of deep thought mentions. Locke.

8. Full of contrivance; politic; insidious.
When I have most need to employ a friend, Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile, he be to me. Shak. Rich. III.

9. Grave; solemn.
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee, But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds, Yet execute thy wrath upon my soul. Shak. R. Ill.

That serious Phœbus was on Findus heard
With deeper silence, or with more regard. Dryd.

10. Dark-coloured.
3 q 491
DEE

With deeper brown the grove was overspread.
Dryden.

11. Having a great degree of stillness, or swooning, or sadness.
And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam.
Genesis, ii. 21.

12. Depressed; sunk; metaphorically low.
Their deep poverty assuaged into the riches of their liberality.
2 Corinthians, viii. 2.

The sounds made by buckets in a well, are de-epher and fuller than if the like percussion were made in the open air.
Bacon.

DEEP. n.s. [from the adjective.]
1. The sea; the main; the abyss of waters;
the ocean.
Yet we did lift up our hearts and voices to God above, who showed them wonders in the deep. Bac.

2. The deep of night, or night.
The deep of night is crept upon our talk.
Shak.

DEEP-THROATED. adj. [deep mouthed and mouthed.]
Attracts the hapless youth through storms and thistles, alone in deep of night.
Philips.

To DEEPEN v. a. [from deep.]
1. To make deep; to sink far below the surface.
The city of Rome would receive a great advantage from the undertaking, as it would raise the banks and deepen the bed of the Tiber.
Addison.

2. To darken; to cloud; to make dark.
You must keep your hands colours so, that the epici-ment may be the brightest.
Peacham.

3. To make sad or gloomy. See Deep. adj.
Her gloomy presence saddens all the scene,
Shaded with tears, and darkens every green.
Deepens the murrates of the falling floods,
And breathing a browner horror on the woods.
Pope.

DEEP-MOUTHED. adj. [deep mouthed and
mouthed.]
Having a hoarse and loud voice.
Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds;
And couple Clowdor with the deep-mouth'd Droch.
Shakes.

Behold the English bench
Pales in the flood with men, with wives and boys, Whose shouts and claps outvoice that deep-mouth'd sea.
Shakes.

Then tools for beasts, and line for birds were found,
And deep-mouth'd dogs did forest walks surround.
Shakes.

Hills, dales, and forests far behind remaining,
While the warm scent draws on the deep-mouth'd train.
Gay.

DEEP-MUSING. adj. [deep and muse.]
Contemplative; lost in thought.
But he deep-musing o'er the mountains stray'd,
Through many thickets of the woodland shade.
Pope.

DEEPLY. adv. [from deep.]
1. To great depth; far below the surface.
Fear is a passion that is most deeply rooted in our nature, and flows immediately from the prin ciple of self-preservation.
Tillotson.

Those impressions were made when the brain was more susceptible of them; they have been deeply engraven at the proper season, and therefore they remain.
Taints.

2. With great study or sagacity; not super ficially; not carelessly; profoundly.
Sorrowfully; solemnly; with a great degree of seriousness or sadness.
He sighed deeply in his spirit.
Mark, viii. 12.

Knock deep, deep down; he's in a house, not in boudoir-house, that he dares not go home.
Don.

Upon the deck our careful gondolier stood,
And deeply mus'd on the succeeding day.
Dryd.

4. With a tendency to darkness of colour.
Having taken of the deeply red juice of back thorn berries, let it drop upon white paper.
Boyle.

5. In a high degree.
To keep his promise with him, he had deeply offended both his nobles and people.
Bacon's Henry VII.

DEEPNESS. n.s. [from deep.]
Enterance far below the surface, profundity;
depth.

Cautiously set forward with great skill, by reason of the depthness of the way, and heaviness of the great ordain
Knolles.

Some fell upon stony places, and they withered, because they had no depth of earth. Mat. 13.

DEER. n.s. [decap. Sixx. thier, Teutonick;
Gr.]
That class of animals which is hunted for venison, containing many subordinate species; as the stag or red deer, the buck or fallow deer, the roebuck and others.

You have beaten my men, killed my deer,
and broken the deere.
Shak.

The pales that held my lovely deer.
Waller.

To DEFACE. v. a. [deface, Fr.]
To destroy; to raze; to ruin; to disfigure.
Give me leave to speak as earnestly in truly commending it, as you have done in unjustly and unkindly designing and slandering it.
Whiggit.

Fated this marriage.
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all.
Shakes.

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond.
Shak.

Where statues, feces, columns broken lie.
Deface.

And, though defac'd, the wonder of the eye.
Dryd.

One nobler wretch can only rise,
To be whose fury shall deface.
Steet's.

The stock's image in this piece.
Prior.

DEFACEMENT. n.s. [from deface.]
Violation; injury; misuse; abolition; destruction.
But what is this image, and how is it defaced?
The poor men of Lyons will tell you, that the image of God is purity, and the defacements.
Bacon.

DEFACER. n.s. [from deface.] De stroyer; abuser; violator.
That foul defacer of God's holy work
Oh wond moyi looser, to chnce to us our greats.
Shakes.

DEFALCATION. n.s. [defalcation, Fr.]
Failure; miscarriage; a word not in use.
The authors were the offenders of that unhappy defalcase.
Glosst.

To DEFALCATE. v. a. [from falx, falcis a sickle; defalquer, Fr.]
To cut off; to lop; to take away part of a pension or salary. It is generally used of money.

DEFALCATION, n.s. [defalcation.]
Disquisition; abatement; exclusion of any part of a customary allowance.
The tea-table is set forth with its customary bill of fare, and without any defalcation.
Addison.

To DEFALK. v. a. [See DEFALCATE.]
To cut off; to lop away.
What defalck we from some insipid sin, is but to make some other more gawle.
Decoy of Petty.

DEFAMATION. n.s. [from defame.] The act of defaming or bringing infamy upon another; calumny; reproach; censure; defraction.

Defamation is the uttering of contumelious language and injurious and false assertions to the reputation of the party; and this extends to writing, as by defamatory libels; and to deeds, as reproachful postures, signs, and gestures.
Ayliffe.

DEFAMATION. n.s. [from defame.] Calumniatory; tending to destroy; unjustly censorious; libellous, falsely satirical.
The most scurrilous sin is the spreading of defama tory reports.
Augustus, conscious to himself of many crimes, made an edict against lampoons and satires, and
Dryden.

To DEFAME. v. a. [de and fauna, Lat.]
To make infamous; to censure falsely in public; to deprive of honour; to dishonour by reports; to libel; to caluminate; to destroy reputation by either acts or words.
I heard the defaming of many.
Jer. xx. 10.

They live as if they professed Christianity neer ly in spite, to defame it.
Dryd.

My guilt thy growing virtues did defame.
Shak.

My blackness blotted thy unblemish'd D'amour.
Dryd.

DEFAME. n.s. [from the verb.] Dis grace; dishonour: not in use.
Many doughty knights he in his days
Held done to death.
Shak.

And hung their conquer'd arms for more defame.
On gallow trees.
Spicer.

DEFAMER. n.s. [from defame.] One that injures the reputation of another; a defractor; a calumniator.
It may be a useful trial of the patience of the defamed, yet the defamer has not the less crime.
Government of the Tongue.

To DEFATIGATE. v. a. [defatigue,
Lat.]
To weary; to tire.
The power of these men's industries, never de fatigated, hath been great.
Dr. Maine.

DEFATIGATIV. n.s. [defatigato, Lat.]
Wearyness, fatigue.

DEFAULT. n.s. [default, Fr.]
1. Omission of that which we ought to do; neglect.
2. Forensic; failure; fault.
Sedition tumbled into England more by the default of governors than the people's. Hargard.

We, that know what 'tis to fast and pray,
Are peculiar for your defaulc today.
Shakes.

Let me not rashly call in doubt
Divine prediction: what if all foretold
Had been fulfilled, but the more raise own default.
Shak.

Whoam I to complain of but myself? Milt.
Partial judges we are of our own excellencies, and other men's defaults.
Swift.

3. Defect; want.
In default of the King's pay, the forces were laid upon the subject.
Desta.

Cookes could make artificial birds and fishes, in default of the real ones.
Arabian on Coins.

4. In law. Non-appearance in court at a day assigned.
Cottell.

To DEFault. v. a. [from the noun.]
To fail in performing any contract or stipulation; to forfeit by breaking a contract.

DEFaulTER. n.s. [from the verb.] One that makes default.

DEFASANCE. n.s. [defasance, Fr.]
1. The act of amnulling or abrogating any contract or stipulation.
2. A condition annexed to an act; as to an obligation, a recognition, or statute, which performed by the oblige, or the cognize, the act is disabled and made void, as if it had never been done. Council.

482

3. The writing in which a defeasance is contained.

4. A defeat; conquest; the act of conquering; the state of being conquered.

Obloque.
The oblige, or the cognize, the act is disabled and made void, as if it had never been done. Council.

4. A defeat; conquest; the act of conquering; the state of being conquered.

Obloque.
The oblige, or the cognize, the act is disabled and made void, as if it had never been done. Council.

2. Act of destruction; deprivation.

A king, upon whose life

A dumb animal was done.

Defeat.

To DEFEAT. A. [from the noun.]

1. To overthrow; to undo.

Defeat thy favour with unwrapt heard. Shak.

To DEFEAT. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To overthrow; to undo.

Defeat thy favour with unwrapt heard. Shak.

Defeat his power, many days, Giff. Who were not out of her grace. Dryden.

Defeat her beauty, and all his designs, and disappoint all his hopes. Tillotson.

2. To frustrate.

To his accusers

He pleaded still not guilty, and alleged

Many sharp reasons to defeat the law. Shak.

Defeat his power, many days, Giff. Who were not out of her grace. Dryden.

Defeat her beauty, and all his designs, and disappoint all his hopes. Tillotson.

3. To abolish; to undo; to change.

Defeat. n. s. [from de and fixture.]

Change of feature; alteration of countenance.

Defeat. n. s. [from de and fixture.]

Change of feature; alteration of countenance.

I practised a way to defeat the dark and mody oil of amber. Boyle.

Defeat. n. s. [from de and fixture.]

Change of feature; alteration of countenance.

I practised a way to defeat the dark and mody oil of amber. Boyle.

I practised a way to defeat the dark and mody oil of amber. Boyle.

Provide a brazen tube

Indext: self-taught and voluntary tiles

The defecator liquor, through the vent

Ascenting; then, by downward tract convey'd

Sprouts into subject vessels very clear. Philip.

2. To purify from any extraneous or noxious mixture; to clear; to brighten.

We defeat the notion from materiality, and abstract quantity, place, and all kind of corporeity from it. Glimmire.

Defecator. adj. [from the verb.]

Purged from lees or fowlness.

We are puzzled with contradictions, which are no insurmountable to defeat faculties. Glimmire.

This liquor was very defective, and of a pleasing golden colour. Boyle.

Defecation. n. s. [defecatio, Lat.]

Purification; the act of clearing or purifying.

The spleen and liver are obstructed in their offices of defecation, whence viscous and digresstish blood. Harvey.

Defec. n. s. [defecus, Lat.]

1. Want; absence of something necessary; insufficiency; the fault opposed to superfluity.

Errors have been corrected, and defects supplied. Dryden.

Had this strange energy been less. Defect had been as fatal as excess. Blackmore.

2. Failing; imperfection.

Of such been seen.

Our mean secures us, and our mere defects Prove our commodities. Shakew.

You praise yourself.

By laying defect in yourself, I mean, Shakew. Trust not yourself; but, your defects to know, Make use of every friend and every foe. Pope.

8. A natural imperfection; a blemish; a failure, without direct implication of anything too little.

Men, through some defect in the organs, want words, yet fail not to express their universal ideas by signs. Locke.

To DEFECT. v. n. [from the noun.]

To be defective; to fail short of; to fail.

Thereat instructed tyants do defect.

They invaded Ireland, and were defeated by the lord Montjoy. Bacon.

Defectibility. n. s. [from defectible.]

The state of failing; deficiency; imperfection.

The perfection and sufficiency of Scripture has been shown, as also the defectibility of that particular tradition. Lord Digby to Sir Ken. Digby. Herat.

The intrusion of secret defects upon the constitution of the union of the parts of things corporal. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

Defecible. adj. [from defect.]

Imperfect; deficient; wanting.

The extraordinary persons, thus highly favoured, were for a great part of their lives in a defectible condition. Holf.

Defection. n. s. [defection, Lat.]

1. Want; failure.

This defect and failing away from God was first found in angels, and afterwards in men. Milton.

Upon the intrusions of secret defects upon the constitution of the union of the parts of things corporal. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

2. A falling away; apostasy.

This defect and failing away from God was first found in angels, and afterwards in men. Milton.

Death, by which we lose the privilege of eternal life, Holf.

If we fall away after tasting of the good word of God, how criminal must such a defection be? Atterbury.

There is more evil owing to our original defection from God, and the foolish and evil dispositions that are found in fallen man. Holf.

3. An abandoning of a king, or state; revolt.

He was diverted and drawn from hence by the general defection of the whole realm. Darius.

Neither can this be meant of evil governors, or tyrants, or of some perverseness and defection in the very nation itself. Bacon.

Defective. adj. [from defectus, Lat.]

1. Wanting the just quantity.

Nor will polished amber, although it send forth a gross and corporeal exhalation, be found a time defective upon the exact point scales. Brown's Vap. Dry.

2. Full of defects; imperfect; not sufficient; not adequate to the purpose.

It subjects them to all the diseases depending upon a defective projectile motion of the blood. Archebath. Than Alamein. Lord Digby.

It will very little help to cure my ignorance, that this is the best of four or five hypotheses proposed, which are all defective and inexact. Lord Digby.

If it renders one accomplishment, it generally leaves us defective in another. Addison.

DEFECD. n. s. [defect, Lat.]

3. Faulty; vicious; blamable.

Our tragedy writers have been notoriously defective in giving proper sentiments to the persons they introduce. Addison.

Defective or deficient Nouns. [In grammar.]

Indecisive or defective Nouns, or such as appear to want a number, or some particular case.

Defective or defective Nouns. [In grammar.]

Want; the state of being imperfect; faultiness.

The lowess often opens the building in breadth, or the defections of some members makes any single part appear in perfection. Addison.

Defence. n. s. [defension, Lat.]

1. Guard; protection; security.

Reboobam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for defence in Judah. 2 Chronicles, ii. 5.

The Lord is your protection and strong stay, a defence from heat, and a cover from the sun. Deuter. xxxii. 16.

Be thou my strong rock for an house of defence to save me. Psal. xxi. 2.

Against all this there seems to be no defence, but that of supporting one established form of doctrine and discipline. Say.

2. Vindication; justification; apology.

Alexander beckoned with his hand, and would have made his defence into the people. Xen. v. 3.

The youthful prince with a deep reply, and made this bold defence.

Dracon.

3. Prohibition: this is a sense merely French.

Severe defences may be made against wearing any linen under a certain breadth. Temple.

4. Resistance.

5. [In law.] The defendant's reply after declaration produced.

6. In fortification. The part that flanks another work.

To DEFEENCE. v. a. [defensus, Lat.] To defend by fortification; not in use.

The city itself being strongly fortified, Three sides by six it well defend'd has. Fairfax.

Defenceless. adj. [from defence.]

2. Naked; unarmed; ungirded; not provided with defence; unprepared.

Captain or colonel, or knight in arms, whose chargers on these defences do no way obstruct, Guard them, and him within protect from harms. Milton.

My sister is not so defenceless left As you imagine: she has a hidden strength Which you remember not. Milton.

Ah me! that fear Comes thundering back with dreadful revelation On my defenceless head. Milton.

On a three disarmed, Defenceless, and submitted to my rage, A base revenge is vengeance on myself. Dryden.

Impotent; unable to make resistance. Milton.

Their strength against a weak defence less toy? Addi. sion.

To DEFEND. n. a. [defendo, Lat. defendre, Fr.]

1. To stand in defence of; to protect; to support.

There arose, to defend Israel, Tola the son of Penuel. Judges.

Deliver me from mine enemies, O my God: defend me from them that rise up against me. Psal. lxxi. 1.

Heaven defend your souls, that you think I will your serics and great business scant. Shak.

2. To vindicate; to uphold; to assert; to maintain.
The queen on the throne, by God’s assistance, is able to defend herself against all her majesty’s enemies and allies put together. Swift.

3. To fortify; to secure. And here’s an access a gloomy grove defends, And here th’immovable lake extends. Dryden. A village near it was defended by the river. Clarendon.

4. To prohibit; to forbid. [defender, Fr.] Where can you say, in any manner, age, That ever God defended marriage? Chaucer. O son! like one of us is become, To keep his house good and evil, since his taste. The use of wine is little practised, and in some places defended by customs or laws. Temple.

5. To give defence, or cause, against those that attack it. Let me be foremost to defend the throne, And guard my father’s glory and my own. Pope. So have I seen two rival wars contend. One briskly charge, one gravely defend. Smith.

DEFENDANT. adj. [from defend.] That may be defended.

DEFENDANT. adj. [from defendo, Lat.] Defensive; fit for defence. Line and new repair our towns of war. With men of courage, and with means defendant. South.

DEFENDANT. n.s. [from the adjective.]

1. He that defends against assailants. Those high towers, out of which the Romans might more conveniently fight with the assailants on the wall, those also were broken by engines of war. Wilson’s Math. Magic. The person accused or sued. This is the day appointed for the combat. And ready are th’ appellant and defendant. Shak. Plainfud dog, and bear defendant. “Hudibras.”

DEFENDR. n.s. [defensor, Lat.] One that defends; a champion. Banish your defenders, till at length Your ignorance deliver you. As much as there were to some nation That won you without blows. Shak. Do thou not mourn our powers employ’d in vain, And the defenders of our city slain! Dryden.

2. An assister; a vindicator. Undoubtedly there is no way so effectual to betray the truth, as to procure it a weak defender. South.

3. [In law.] An advocate; one that defends another in a court of justice.

DEFENSIVE. n.s. [from defens.] 1. Guard; defence. A very unsile defensibility it is against the fury of the lion, and surely no better than virginity, or blood royal, which Pinty plucks in earth-bred. Brown’s Life. Err. Brown’s Life of Err. If the bishop has no other defensibility but excommunication, no other power but that of the keys, he may surrender up his pastoral staff. South.

2. [In surgery.] A balsam, plaster, or the like, used to secure a wound from outward violence.

DEFENSIBLE. adj. [from defend.] 1. That may be defended. A field, Which nothing but the sound of Hotspur’s name Did seem to make defensible. Shak. They must make themselves defensible both against the natives and against strangers. Bacon. Having often heard Venus represented as one of the most defensible cities in the world, I infer from what I have just mentioned of its strength constests. Addit.

2. Justifiable; right; capable of vindication. I conceive it very defensible to dismiss an adversary, and disable him from doing mischief. Coler.

DEFENSIVE. adj. [defensif, Fr. from defendans, Lat.] 1. That serves to defend; proper for defence; not offensive. He would not be persuaded by danger to offer any offence, or to stand upon the best defensive guard he could. Sidney. My unpreparedness for war testifies for me that I am set at defiance. King Charles. Defensive arms lay by, as useless here. Where many balls the neighbouring rocks do shatter. Waller.

2. In a state or posture of defence. What stood, recol’d, Defensive sense, or with pale fear surpris’d. Milton. Fled ignis pericu, or cause, against those that attack it. To DÉFEND. n.s. [from the adjective.]

1. Safeguard. Wars preventive, upon just fears, are true defences, as well as on actual invasions. Bacon.

2. State of defence. His majesty, not at all dismayed, resolved to stand upon the defensive only. Clarendon.

DEFENSIVELY. adv. [from defensive.] In a defensive manner.

DEFEN. part. pass. from. [defensive.]

Defended. Obsolete. Stout men of England, not with their grace of war, but with their grace of peace, like Troy’s old town defended with Ilion’s tower. Fairfax.

1. To put off; to delay to act. He will not defer. To vindicate the glory of his name Against all competition, nor will long Endure it. Milton. None of yourself betimes to the love and practice of good deeds; for the longer thou dost to be acquainted with them, the less every day thou wilt find thyself disposed to them. Attrib.

2. To pay deference or regard to another’s opinion. To DÉFER, n.s. [from differo, Lat.]

1. To withhold; to delay. Defy the pres’re’d bourn the goddess cries. Pope. Neither is this a matter to be deferred till a more convenient time of peace and leisure. Swift.

2. To refer to; to leave to another’s judgment and determination. The commissioners deferred the matter unto the earl of Northumberland, who was the principal man of authority in those parts. Bacon.

DEFERENCE. n.s. [deference, Fr.] 1. Regard; respect. Virgil could have excelled Varus in tragedy, and Horace in poetical poetry, but out of deference to his friends he attempted neither. Dryden. He may be commanded that he is in an error, by observing those persons, for whose wisdom and goodness he has the greatest deference, to be of a contrary sentiment. Swift.

2. Complaisance; condescension. A natural roughness makes a man uncompliant to others; so that he has no deference for their inclinations, temper, or conditions. Locke.

3. Submission. Most of our fellow subjects are guided either by the prejudice of education, or by a deference to the judgment of those who, perhaps, in their own levets, dispute the opinions which they industriously spread among the multitude. Addit.

DÉFÉRENCE. adj. [from deferens, of deferro, Lat.] That carries up and down. The figures of pipes or concaves, through which sounds pass, are particularly bodies of sound in conformance to the variety and alteration of the sound. Bacon.

DÉFÉRENCE. n.s. [from the adjective.] That which carries; that which conveys. It is certain, however, it crosses the received opinion, that sounds may be created without air, though air be the most favourable vessel of sound. Bosc. DÉFÉRENCE. n.s. [in surgery.] Certain vessels in the human body, appointed for the conveyance of humours from one place to another. Chambers.

DEFIANCE. n.s. [from defie, Fr.] 1. A challenge; an invitation to fight. The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar’d, Which, as he breath’d defiance to my ears, He swang about his head. Shak. A war without a just defiance made. Dryden.

2. A challenge to make any impeachment good reason. Defy a man, if you can.

3. Expression of abhorrence or contempt. The Naxian heresy was very apt to attract well meaning souls, who, seeing it base such express defiance to apostacy, could not suspect that it was itself any defention from the faith. Decay of Piety. Nobody will so openly bid defiance to common sense, as to affirm visible and direct contradications. Locke.

DEFICIENCY, n.s. [from deficio, Lat.] 1. Want; something less than is necessary. What is to be considered in this case, is chiefly, whether there be a sufficient fulness or deficiency of blood, for different methods are to be taken. Arithmet on Diet.

There is no burden laid upon our posterior, nor any deficiency to he hereafter made up by ourselves, which has been our case in so many other subjects. Adamson.

2. Defect; failing; imperfection. Scaliger, finding a defect in the reason of Aristotle, introduced one of no less deficiency himself. Bacon’s Life. Err. Thou in thyself art perfect, and in thee Is no deficiency found. Milton. We are, in our own natures, too great evidence of intellectual deficiences, and deplorable confessions of human ignorance. Glanville. What great deficiency is it, if we come short of others? Watton. The characters of comedy and tragedy are never to be made perfect, but always to be drawn with some specks of frailty and deficiences, such as they have been described to us in history. Dryden.

DEFICIENT. adj. [deficient, from defici, Lat.] Failing; wanting; defective; imperfect. O woman! best of all things as the will Of God ordain’d them: his creating hand Nothing imperfect or deficient left. Milton. Figures are either simple or mixed: the simple are either circular or angular; and of circular, either complete, as circles, or deficient, as ovals. Wotton. Neither Virgil nor Homer were deficient in any of the former beauties. Dryden. Several thoughts of the mind, for which we have either none, or very deficient names, are diligently to be studied. Locke.

DEFICIENT Numbers, [in arithmetick] are those numbers, whose parts, added together, make less than the integer whose parts they are. Dryer. n.s. [from defic, Fr.] A challenger; a contemner; one that dares and defies. Is it not then high time that the laws should provide, by the most prudent and effectual means, to curb those bold and insolent defiers of Heaven? Tillotson.

1. To make foul or impure; to make nasty or filthy; to dirty.
DEF

There is a thing, Harry, known to many in our land by the name of pitch; this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile. So speaks he, partly reckoning among the greatest polluters of this age, though his character may be defiled by mean and dirty hands.

2. To pollute; to make legally or ritually impure.

The pitch dieh of itself shall not eat, to defile himself therewith. Lee. xxxi. 8.

Neither shall he defile himself for his father.

Lev. xi. 11.

3. To corrupt chastity; to violate.

Every object of offence reviled; the husband murdered, and the wife defiled.

4. To taint; to corrupt; to vitiate; to make guilty.

Forfeitiveness of good turns, defining of souls, adultery, and shameless uncleanness.

And if they defile themselves with impurities. Stillingfleet.

Let not any instance of sin defile your requests. Wake.

To DEFILE. n. v. [defiler, Fr.] To march; to go off file by file.

DEFILE. n. s. [defiler, Fr. from file a line of soldiers, which is derived from flum a thread.] A narrow passage; a long narrow pass; a lane.

There is in Oxford a narrow defile, to use the military term, where the puritans used to encounter.

Addison.

DEFILEMENT. n. s. [from defile.] The state of being defiled; the act of defiling; nastiness; pollution; corruption; defacement.

Lost, by unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk.

Let's in defilement to the inward parts. Milton.

The unchaste see provoked to see their vice exposed, and the clause cannot take rise into such fifth without danger of defilement. Spectator.

DEFILER. n. s. [from defile.] One that defiles; a corrupter; a violater.

At the last tremendous day, I shall hold forth in my arms my much wounded child, and call aloud for vengeance on her defiler. Addison.

DEFINABLE. adj. [from define.] 1. That which may be defined; capable of definition.

The Supreme Nature we cannot otherwise define, than by saying it is infinite; as if infinite were definable, or ininity a subject for our narrow understanding.

Dryden.

2. That which may be ascertained.

Concerning the time of the end of the world, the question is, whether that time be definable or no. Bunyan's Theor. Of the Definition. v. a. [definatio, Lat. definere, Fr.] 1. To give the definition; to explain a thing by its qualities and circumstances.

Whose loss can't then mean, that dost so well their miseries define? Sidney.

Though defining be thought the proper way to make known the proper signification, yet there are some words that will not be defined. Locke.

To DEFINE. v. n. To determine; to decide; to decree.

The unjust judge is the capital remover of landmarks, when he define units of lands and properties. Bacon.

DEFINER. n. s. [from define.] One that explains; one that describes a thing by its qualities.

Your God, therefore, is found incomprehensible and infinite.

But is he there to be searched out? no: Let your imperfect definition show,

That nothing you, the weak definer, know, Prior.

DEFINITE. adj. [from definitus, Lat.] 1. Certain; limitedly.

Neither to your harbor divers times he required, and here, by your means, bad the sight of the goddess, who in a definite compass can set forth infinite beauty.

Sidney.

2. Exact; precise.

Idiots, in this case of favour, would be wisely definite.

Shakspere.

In a charge of adultery, the accuser ought to set forth, in the accusatory libel, or inquisition, which succeeds in the place of accusation, some certain and definite time.

Adolphus's Parergon.

DEFINITION. n. s. [from the adjective.] Thing explained or defined.

Special bastardy is nothing else but the definition of the general; and the general, again, is nothing else but the special.

Idiots.

DEFINITENESS. n. s. [from definite.] Certainty; limitedness. Dict.

DEFINITION. n. s. [from definitio, Lat. definition, Fr.] 1. A short description of a thing by its properties.

I drew my definition of poetical wit from my particular conceit; for propriety of thoughts and words is only to be found in him.

Dryden.

2. Decision; determination.

3. Distinction. In logic. The explication of the essence of a thing by its kind and difference.

What is man? Not a reasonable animal merely; for that is not an adequate and distinguishing definition.

Beauclerk.

DEFINITIVE. adj. [definitus, Lat.] Determinate; positive; express.

Other authors write often dubiously, even in matters wherein is expected a strict and definite truth.

I make haste to the casting and compounding of the whole work, to being indeed the very definite sum of this art, to distribute usefully and gracefully a well chosen topic. Wetten.

DEFINITELY. adv. [from definite.] Positively; decisively; expressly.

Definitely thus I answer you:

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert:

Unmeritable, shuns your high request. Shakspere.

Believing, as it were, that the body of Christ may be in many places at once, locally and visibly; therefore we say, and hold, that the same body may be incasually and definitively in many places at once.

Hall.

That Methusalem was the longest lived of all the children of Adam, we need not grant; nor is it definitively set down by Moses. Brown's Fag. Err.

DEFINITIVENESS. n. s. [from definite.] Decisiveness.

DEFLAGRABILIT Y. n. s. [from deflagro, Lat.] Combustibility; the quality of taking fire, and burning totally away.

We have spent more time than the opinion of the ready deflagrability, of fire, so speak; of sulphur, as it did permit us to imagine.

Boyle.

DEFLAGRABLE. adj. [from deflagro, Lat.] Having the quality of wasting away wholly in fire, without any remains.

Our chemical oils, supposing that they were exactly pure, yet they would be, as the best spirit is, but the more inflammable and deflagrable.

Boyle.

DEFLAGRATION. n. s. [deflagratio, Lat.] A term frequently made use of in chemistry, for setting fire to several things in their preparation; as in making Alkalis with fire, with saltpetre, and many others.

Quinney.

The true reason why paper is not burned by the flames that plays upon it, seems to be that the a quo spirit of the spirit of wine, being imbied by the paper, keeps itself so moist, that the flame of the inflammable parts of the same spirit cannot fasten on it; and therefore, when the deflagration is over, you shall always find the paper moist.

Boyle.

To DEFLECT. v. n. [deflecto, Lat.] To turn aside; to deviate from a true course or right line.

At some parts of the Arses the needle deflecteth not, but both in the true meridians; on the other side of the Arses, and this side of the equator, the north point of the needle wheeleth to the west.

Brown's * flag. Err.

For, did not some from a straight course deflect, they could not meet, they could no world meet.

Blarbour.

DEFLECTION. n. s. [from deflecto, Lat.] 1. Deviation; the act of turning aside.

Noodles incline to the south on the other side of the equator: and at the very line, or middle circle, stand without deviation. Brown's * flag. Err.

A turning aside, or out of the way.

DICT.

DEFLORATION. n. s. [defloration, Fr. from defloratus, Lat.] The departure of a ship from its true course.

DEFLOUXUR. n. s. [from deflavo, Lat.] A bending down; a turning aside, or out of the way.

DICT.

DEFLOUR. n. s. [from deflour, Fr.] 1. To ravish; to take away a woman's virginity.

As is the last of an anchor to draw a virgin, so he that executeth judgment with his penile.

Errius, xvi. 8.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely maun, And let my spunkless slaves this trudle definer. Shak.

2. To take away the beauty and grace of any thing.

How on a sudden last.

Defac'd, defiler'd, and now to death devote! Lift.

If he died young, he died innocently, and before the sweetness of his soul was deflowered and ravished from him by the flames and furies of a wrong age.

Taylor.

DEFLOURER. n. s. [from deflour, Fr.] A ravisher; one that takes away virginity.

I have often wondered, that those defilers of innocence, though dead to all the sentiments of virtue and honour, are not restrained by humanity.

Addison.

DEFLS. adj. [deflau, Lat.] 1. That flows down.

2. That falls off.

DEFLU'X. n. s. [defluos, Lat.] Downward flow.

Both bodies are clammy, and bridle the defler of humours, without penning them in too much.

Bacon.

DEFLUXION. n. s. [defluosio, Lat.] The flow of humours downwards.

We see that taking cold moveth loosness, by contraction of the skin and outward parts; and both cold likewise cause rhums and defluxions from the head. Bacon.
DE

DEFLY.  a.  [from deffy.]  Dextcrously ; skillfully.  Obsolete.  Properly deftly.

Lo, how finely the grace can it foot

Rightly the enchantment;

They damn'd defly, and singen sole,

In their meritment.  Spenser.

DEFERATION.  n.  [from deferus, Lat.]  Until four hundred and ninety, act of making filthy; pollution.  This is no English word; at least, to make it English, it should be written defraation.

What native unquashable beauty must be impressed and instilled through the whole, the defraction of so many parts by a host present, and a worse editor, could not hinder from shining forth.

Beatty.

DEFORECMENT.  n.  [from force.]  A withholding of lands and tenements by force from the right owner.

To DEFORM.  v.  a.  [deformo, Lat.]  To disgrace, to make ugly; to spoil the form of any thing.

1. To disagrue: to make ugly; to spoil the form of any thing.

I that am curtail'd of all fair proportion, Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,

Def'm'd, unfish'd, in servile fear, before my fate,

Into this breathing world, scarce half m'de up.

Shakespeare.

Wintry blasts

Def'rm the dear delights.

Thomson.

2. To dishonour: to make ungraceful.

Old men with dust deform'd their hoary hair.

Dryden.

DEFORM.  adj.  [deformis, Lat.]  Ugly; disfigured; of an irregular form.

I did proclaim,

That whom cool'd that most monster deform,

Should have mine only daughter to his dame.

Spenser.

So spake the grieved terror; and in shape,

So speaking and so threat'ning, grew tenfold

More dreadful and deform'd.

Milton.

Right so deform what heart of rock could bring

Dry-eyed beheld?

Milton.

DEFORMATION.  n.  [deformatio, Lat.]  A defacing; a disfiguring.

DEFORMED.  participial adj.  Ugly; wanting natural beauty.

DEFORMEDLY.  adv.  [from deform'd.]  In an ugly manner.

DEFORMEDNESS.  n.  [from deform'd.]  Ugliness; a disagreeable form.

DEFORMITY.  n.  [deformitas, Lat.]  Ugliness; ill-favouredness.

1. Ugliness; ill-favouredness.

In this week piping time of peace,

Have no delight to pass away the time,

Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,

And disdain on mine own deformity.  Shakespeare.

Professional deformity seems not in the film.

So hord as in woman.  Shakespeare.

Where's deformity to mock my body,

To shape my legs of an unequal size,

To disproportion me in every part.  Shakespeare.

Why should not man,

Retention still divide similitude.

In part, from such deformities be free,

And for his Maker's image sake, exempt?  Milton.

2. Ridiculousness; the quality of something worthy to be laughed at, or centured.

In comedy there is somewhat more of the worse likeness to be taken, because it is often to produce laughter, which is occasioned by the sight of some deformity.  Dryden.

3 Irregularity; inordinateness.

No glory is more to be envied than that of deforming either church or state, when deformities are such, that the persellation and novelty are not like to exceed the benefit of deforming.  K. Charles.

DE

DEFOR'SOR.  n.  [from forcer, Fr.]  One that overcomes and casteth out by force.

A law term.

Blunted

To DEFRAUD.  v.  a.  [defraud, Lat.]  To rob or deprive by a wile or trick; to cheat; to enune; to deceive; to beguile: with of before the thing taken by fraud.

That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.  1 Thes. vi. 6.

My son, defraud not the poor of his living and make not the needy even to lie waste.  Eccl. xiv. 1.

Churches seem injur'd and defrauded of their rights, when places, not sanctified as they are, are preserved in uncandidly in that presence and honour.

Hooker.

There they, who brothers better claim disown,

Exel their parents, and spencer's nation of Ireland;

Defraud their clients, and, to sure end,

Sit brooding on unprofitable cold,

But no he send'd devil's heavy charms,

And of my valour's prize defraud my men.  Pope.

There is a portion of our lives which every wise man may justly reserve for his own particular use, without defrauding his country.

Dryden.

DEFRAUDATION.  n.  [defraudato, Lat.]  Privation by fraud.

Their impostures are worse than any other, de- luding not only into positives, but also into the irreplicable deceit of death.  Work's Fug. Err.

DEFRAUDER.  n.  [from defraud.]  A deceiver; one that cheats.

The profligate in morals grow severe,

Boisterous, and every youth Blackmore.

To DEFRAVY.  v.  a.  [defraver, Fr.]  To bear the charges of; to discharge expenses.

He would, out of his own revenue, defray the charges belonging to the sacrifices.  2 Mac. ix. 16.

It is easy to lay a charge upon any prominence or honour.

How to foresee how the same may be anwered and defrauded, is the chief part of good advice.

It is long since any stranger arrived in this part, and therefore take ye no care; the state will defray you all the time you stay; neither shall you stay one day the less for that.

DEFRAVER.  n.  [from defray.]  One that discharges expenses.

DEFRAVMENT.  n.  [from defray.]  The payment of expenses.

DEFT.  adj.  [morse, Sax.]  Obsolete.

1. Next; handsome; spruce.

2. Proper; fitting.

You go not the way to examine: you must call the watch that are their accusers.

Yea, merry, that's the deffest way.  Shakespeare.

3. Ready; dexterous.

Load lots of laughter with'd the guests, to see

The lording god so deft at his new ministry.  Dryden.

The wanton call may skip with many a bound.

And my car, Tray, play deft feats around.  Gay.

DEF'TLY.  adv.  [from def't.]  Obsolete.

1. Neatly; dexterously.

Come, high or low,

Thyself and office def'tly show.  Shak. Macbeth.

2. In a skillful manner.

Young Celast ERT, child of peculiar merit.

Well could dance, and def'tly time the reed.  Gay.

DEFU'NC'T.  adj.  [defunctus, Lat.]  Dead; deceased.

I therefore beg it not

To please the itch of my appetite;

Nor to comply with heat, the young affects;

In me defunct, and proper satisfaction.  Shakespeare.

Here cut up,

The souls of defunct bodies, fly.  Hudibras.

DEFU'NC'T.  n.  s.  [from the adjective.]  One that is deceased; a dead man or woman.

DE

NATURE doth afford to make his couch

With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.  Shak.

In many cases, the sufferers are able to report the opinion of the physician who was with the patient, as they receive them from the friends of the defunct.

Gratun.

DEIFICATION.  n.  s.  [from defeunt.]  Death.

Nor did the French possess the Salique land until four hundred and twenty years after defuination of king Pharamond.  Shak.

To DEFY v. a.  [deffer, Fr. from de fide decedere, or some like phrase, to fall from allegiance to rebellion, contempt, or insult.]

1. To call to combat; to challenge.

I once again

Defy thee to the trial of mortal fight.  Milton.

Where seek retreat, now innocence is safe

In that guard, I durst even hell defy;

Without it, terrible now when heaven's high.  Dryden.

Agis, the Lycian, stepping forth with pride,

To right fight the boldest foe defined.  Dryden.

2. To treat with contempt; to slight.

As many fools that stand in better place,

Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksey word

Might make the matter.  Shak.

DEFY.  n.  s.  [from the verb.]  A challenge; an invitation to fight: this is now hardly used.

At this the challenger, with fierce defy,

His trumpet sounds; the challenge'd makes reply:

With eling Runner rings the 9d.id, resounds the valiant sky.  Dryden.

DEFY'ER.  n.  s.  [from defy.]  A challenger; one that invites to fight: more properly defier.

God may revenge the affronts put upon them by such impudent defiers of both, as neither believe a God, nor ought to be believed by man.  Swift.

DEGENERACY.  n.  s.  [from degeneratio, Lat.]  1. A departure from the virtue of our ancestors.

2. A desertion of that which is good.

'Tis true, we have contracted a great deal of weakness and impotency by one wilful degeneracy from goodness; but that grace, which the gospel offers to us for our assistance, is sufficient for us.  Tillotson.

The ruin of a state is generally preceded by a universal degeneracy of manners and contempt of religion, which is entirely our case at present.  Swift.

3. Meaness.  There is a kind of sluggish resignation, as well as poorness and degeneracy of spirit, in a state of slavery.  Addison.

To DEGENERATE v.  n.  [degenerare, Lat. degenerer, Fr. degenerer, Span.]  1. To fall from the virtue of ancestors.

2. To fall from more noble to a base state.

When wit transgresseth decency, it degenerates into insolence and impolicy.  Tillotson.

3. To fall from its kind; to grow wild or base.

Most of those fruits that use to be grafted, if they be set of kernels or stones, degenerate. Bacon.

DEGENERATE.  adj.  [from the verb.]  1. Unlike his ancestors: fallen from the virtue and merit of his ancestors.

They are like enough to fight against me under Piercy's pay;

To dog his heels, and curt'sy at his frowns,

To show how much they at degerate.  Shakespeare.

Yet the hast greater came to be Ashamed of them, than they of thee.

406
DEG
Degenerate from their ancient breed, Since first the click of sword allow’d then food. Swift.

1. Unworthy; base; departing from its kind or nature. So all shall turn degenerate, all deprav’d; justice and temperance, truth and faith, are to us but words, there is no commonly done person or other. Locke.

DEGENERATE. n.s. [from degenerate.] Degeneracy, a being grown wild, or out of kind.

DEGENERATION. n.s. [from degenerate.] 1. A deviation from the virtue of one’s ancestors. 2. A falling from a more excellent state to one of less worth. 3. The thing changed from its primitive state. In plants, these transplantations are obvious; as that of barley into oats, of wheat into darnell; and those grains which generally arise among corn, as cockle, arsane, and other degenerate species. Brown’s Talgar Errors.

DEGENEROUS. adj. [from degener, Lat.] 1. Degenerated; fallen from the virtue and merit of ancestors. 2. Vile; base; infamous; unworthy. Let not the tamatious violence of some men’s inordinate demands ever betray me to that degeneracy and unanny slavery, which should make me strengthen them by my consent. K. Charles. Shame, instead of pity, restrains them from many base and degenerate practices. South. Degenerate passion, and for man too base, it seats its empire in the female race; there rages; and, to make its blow secure, puts fa’it’y on, until the aim be sure. Dryden.

DEGENEROUSLY. adv. [from degenerous.] In a degenerate manner; base; meanly.

How wounding a spectacle is it to see heroes, like Herculee at the distil, thus degenerously employed! 2. Decoy of Piety.

DEGULITUATION. n.s. [deglutition, Fr. from deglutio, Lat.] The act or power of swallowing. When the deglutition is totally abolished, the patient may be nourished by elysiers. [Arthritus on Diet.

DEGURATI0N. n.s. [degradation, Fr.] 1. A deprivation of dignity; submission from office. The word degradation is commonly used to denote a deprivation and removing of a man from his degree. Asfylle.

2. Degeneracy; baseness. So deplorable is the degradation of our nature, that whereas before we bore the image of God, we now retain only the image of sin. South.

3. Diminution, with respect to strength, efficacy, or value. 4. In painting.] A term made use of to express the lessening and rendering confused the appearance of distant objects in a landscape, so as they may appear there as they would do to an eye placed at that distance from them. Dict.

To DEGRADE. v.t. [degrader, Fr.] 1. To put one from his degree; to deprive him of his office, dignity, or title.

DEJ
He should
Be quite degraded, like a hogshead swain
That dunn presseth to boast of gentle blood. Shak.

2. To lessen; to diminish the value of.

No shall thus, by descending to assume
Man’s nature, less in his own. Milton. All higher knowledge in her presence fails. Degraded. Milton.

3. To reduce from a higher to a lower state, with respect to qualities as, gold is degraded into silver.

DEGRADATION. n.s. [from degradatus, of degrade, Lat.] The act of making Dict.

DEGREE. n.s. [degre, Fr. from gradus, Lat.] 1. Quality; rank; station; place of dignity. It was my fortune, common to that age, To love a lady fair, of great degree. The which was born of noble parentage, And set in highest seat of dignity. Spenser. 2. A measure will be derived, the endowment of that degree, which teacheth inferior degrees and orders in the church of God. Shakespeare. Sundry men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a yoke: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter than vanity. Psalm xxxi. 9. Well then, Covelline is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale. Shakespeare. Degree being vizarded, Th’ unworthingest shews as fairly in the mask Shak. This noble youth to matchness Idol a diane Of high degrees, Honoria was her name. Dryden. Farmers in degree; He a good husband, a good housewife she. Dryden. But is no rank, no station, no degree, From this contagious taint of sorrow free! Prior. The comparative state and condition in which a thing is.

3. The book of Wisdom noteth degrees of idolatry, making that of worshipping petty and vile idols more gross than simply the worshipping of the creature. Bacon. There were degrees in infinite, And Heav’n itself had rather want perfection Than punish to excess. Dryden. Admits of no degrees; but must be still Sublimely good, or despicably ill. Pope.

4. A step or preparation to anything. Her first degree of her vanity, by setting forth her vanities, truly in nature to be not mislaid, but so much advanced to the eye, as to be abased to the judgment, for art. Which sight the knowledge of myself might bring. Which to true wisdom is the first degree. Prior.

6. Orders or classes. The several degrees of angels may probably have larger views, and be endowed with capacities able to set before them, to one picture, all their past knowledge at once. Locke.

7. Measure; proportion. If all the parts are truly heard as loud as one another, they will still you to that degree, that you will fancy your ears were torn in pieces. Dryden.

8. In arithmetic.] A degree consists of three figures, viz. of three places, containing tens, units, and hundreds; so three hundred and sixty-five is a degree. Cocker’s Arithmetic.

9. The division of the lines upon several sorts of mathematical instruments. The second, third, and fourth degrees of heat are more easily distinguished than the first; every one is both a preparative and a step to the next. South.

By DEGREES. adv. Gradually; by little and little.

Their bodies are exercised in all abilities both of doing and suffering, and their natures appointed by degrees with danger. South. Doth not this external medium, in passing out of water, glass, crystal, and other compact and dense bodies, into empty spaces, grow denser and denser by degrees? Newton. Exceeding in triumph now swell the bold images, In broken air, trembling, the wild music floats; Till by degrees tense and small, The strains decay, And melt away.

A dying dying fall.

A person who is addicted to play or gaming, though he took but little delight in it at first, by degrees contracts a strong inclination towards it. Pope, No. 47.

DEGUSTATION. n.s. [degustatio, Lat.] A tasting.

To DEHORT, v.t. [dehorter, Lat.] To dissuade; to advise to the contrary. One severally dehorted all his followers from prostituting mathematical principles unto common amusement or practice. The apostles vehemently dehort us from unbelief. Ward.

DEHORATION. n.s. [from dehorter, Lat.] Dissuasion; a counselling to the contrary; advice against something. The author of this essay, like the rest of the apostles, do every where vehemently and earnestly dehort from unbelief: did they never read the word of God? Prior.

DEHORATORY. adj. [from dehorter, Lat.] Belonging to dissuasion.

DEHORTER. n.s. [from dehorter.] A dissuader; an adviser to the contrary.

DEICIDE. n.s. [from deus and eado, Lat.] The murder of God; the act of killing God. It is only used in speaking of the death of our blessed Saviour. Explaining how Perfect a suffer’d pain, Almighty’ed innocence, and Eternal died: How by her patient victor Death was slain, And earth profaned, yet bless’d with divine. Prior.

To DEJECT. v.a. [dejdicere, Lat.] 1. To cast down; to afflic; to grieve; to depress; to sink; to discourage; to crush.

Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me. I deject, or dejected; ignorance itself is a plummet ever me; use me as you will. Shak. The lowest, most dejected thing of fortune, Stood still in expectation: live not in fear! Shak. Nor think to deject my heavy mind! All that I read is leaving you behind! Pope.

2. To change the form with grief; to make to look sad.

Dress her beheld, in form divine, A ginkle youth in glittering armure shine, With great Marcellus keeping equal pace.

But gloomy were his eyes, dejected was his face. Dryden.
DEI

DEJECT. adj. [dejectus, Lat.] Cast down; afflicted; low-spirited.

DEJECTIBILITY. n.s. [from deject. & -ibility.] The state of being cast down; a lowliness of spirit.

DEJECUTNESS. n.s. [from deject.]

1. Lowliness of spirits; melancholy; depression of mind.

2. Weakness; inability. The effects of an alkalectotic state, in any great degree, are thirst and a dejection of appetite, which painful things occasion more than any other.

3. In medicine. Going to stool. The liver should separately separate the choler from the blood, and empty it into the intestines; and you should not force it, but provoke dejection, but also to alternately the clyster.

DEJECUR. n.s. [from deject.] The excrement.

A disease opposite to splentude is too great fluidity, the symptoms of which are excess of animal secretion; as of perspiration, sweat, urine, liquid dejectures, leanness, weakness, and thirst.

DEJERATION. n.s. [from dejer, Lat.] A taking of a solemn oath.

DEIFICATION. n.s. [deification, Fr.] The act of deifying, or making a god.

DEIFORM. adj. [from deus & forma, Lat.] Of a godlike form.

To DEIFY. v.a. [deifier, Fr. from deus & fons, Lat.] 1. To make a god of; to adore as god; to transfer into the number of the divinities.

2. To praise excessively; to extol one as if he were a god.

3. To descend now lower, and relate.

DEJECTION. n.s. [from deject, Lat.] To vouchsafe; to think worthy.

DEJEST. v.a. To grant; to permit; to allow.

DELAIRE. v.a. To carry; to convey.

DELACTION. n.s. [from delacro, Lat.] A tearing in pieces.

DELACRIFICATION. n.s. [delacrification, Lat.] A falling down of the humours; the waterishness of the eyes, or a weeping much.

DELACRATION. n.s. [delactatio, Lat.] A weaning from the breast.

DELAIS. adj. [from delapsus, Lat.] With physiological. Bearing or falling down. It is used in speaking of the womb, and the like.

DETALE. v.a. [from delatus, Lat.]

1. To carry; to convey.

DELFEN. n.s. [deft, Fr. from dtiene, Lat.]

Try exactly the time wherein sound is delayed.

DELFY. v.a. [from delay, Fr.]

1. To defer; to put off.

2. To hinder; to frustrate; to keep suspended.

3. To detain, stop, or retard the course of.

DELCAY. v.a. [from delo, Lat.]

To DELAY. v.a. [from delay, Fr.]

1. To detain; to stop; to put off.

2. To hinder; to frustrate; to keep suspended.

3. To detain, stop, or retard the course of.

DELEcriable. adj. [delectabilis, Lat.] Pleasing; delightful.

Ev'ning now approach'd: For we have also our ev'ning, and our morn; Our ours for change delectable, not need.

He brought thee into this delicious grove, This garden, planted with the trees of God; Delectable both to behold and taste.

Some of his attributes, and the manifestations thereof, are not only highly delectable to the intellective faculty, but are satisfactory and easily conceivable by us, because apparent in his works; as his goodness, beneficence, wisdom, and power.

Hair.
D E L

The apple's outward form,

Deckable, the witless swain beguiles;

Till that with written mouth, and spattering

He tastes the bitter morsel.

Philips.

DELECTABLENESS. n.s. [from deckable] Delightfulness; pleasantness.

DELECTABLY. adv. Delightfully; pleasantly.

DELECTATION. n.s. [delectatio, Lat.] Pleasure; delight.

Out beat the tears for joy and delectation.

Sir T. More.

To DELEGATE. v.a. [delege, Lat.]

1. To send away.

2. To send upon an embassy.

3. To entrust; to commit to another's power and jurisdiction.

As God hath imparted his authority in several parts upon several estates of men, as princes, parents, spiritual guides; so he hath also delegated and committed part of his care and providence unto them.

Taylor.

As God is the universal monarch, so we have all the relation of fellow-subjects to him; and can pretend to further jurisdiction over each other, than what he has delegated to us. Deency of Piety.

Why does he make the correspondent moon, And fill her willing lamp with liquid light? Commenting love, with delegated pow'rs,

To beautify the world, and bless the night? Prior.

4. To appoint judges to hear and determine a particular cause.

DELEGATE. n.s. [delegatus, Lat.] A deputy; a commissioner; a vicar; any one that is sent to act for, or represent another.

If after her

Any shall live, which dare true good prefer, Every such person is her delegate, To accomplish that which should have been done.

Done.

They must be severe exactors of accounts from their deputies and ministers of justice. Taylor.

Let the young Austrian then her terrors bear, Great as he is, her delegate in war.

Prior.

Elect by Jove, his delegate of sway.

With joyous proph'ry the summons I obey. Pope.

DELEGATE. adj. [delegatus, Lat.] Deputed; sent to act for, or represent another.

Princes in judgment, and their delegate judges, must judge the causes of all persons impartially.

Del anglers [Court of.] A court where in all causes of appeal, by way of devo erion from either of the archbishops, are decided.

Ayliffe's Parergon.

DELEGATION. n.s. [delegatio, Lat.]

1. A sending away.

2. A putting in commission.

3. The assignment of a debt to another.

DELENTIFICAL. adj. [delenificus, Lat.] Having virtue to assuage or ease pain.

Dict.

To DELETE. v.a. [deleto, Lat.] To blot out.

Dict.

DELETEROUS. adj. [deleterus, Lat.] Deadly; destructive; of a poisonous quality.

Many things, neither deleterious by substance or quality, are yet destructive by figure, or some occasional activity.

Brown.

DELETERY. adj. [deletery, Lat.] Destructive; deadly; poisonous.

Not doctor epidemick,

Though sto'd with deletery medicines,

Vol. I.

DE L

Which whenever took is dead since,

Ever sent so vast a colony

To both the under worlds as he.

Hudibras.

DELETION. n.s. [deleto, Lat.]

1. Act of razing or blotting out.

2. A destruction.

Indeed, if there be a total deletion of every person of the opposing party or country, then the victory is complete, because none remains to call it in quittance.

Delit. n.s. [from delaps, Sax. to del. dig.]

1. A mine; a quarry; a pit dug.

Yet could not such mines, without great pains and charges, if at all, be wrought; the dead would be so thrown with waters, that no gins or machines could suffice to lay and keep them dry.

Ring in the Creation.

2. Earthen ware; counterfeit China ware, made at Delit.

Thus better honour for a piece of delit.

No, not for China's wide domain.

Smart.

DELIBRATION. n.s. [delibratio, Lat.] An essay; a taste.

To DELIBERATE. v.n. [delibero, Lat.]

To think, in order to choose; to hesitate.

A cautious wine, reflecting cause,

Which freely moves and acts by reason's laws;

That can deliberate means, elect, and find

Their due connection with the end desired.

Blackmore.

When love once pleads admission to our hearts,

In spite of all their virility we can bear,

The woman that deliberates is lost.

Adon.]n.

DELIBERATIVE. adj. [deliberative, Lat.]

1. Circumspect; wary; advised; discreet.

Most Grave-belly was deliberate,

Not rash like his successors.

Shak. Coriolanus.

2. Slow; tedious; not sudden; gradual.

Commonly it is for virtues considerations, that wisdom so far prevails with men as to make them desire to take deliberately death, against the stream of the universal inclination. Hobber.

Echoes are some more sudden, and chop again as soon as the voice is delivered; others are more deliberate, that is, give more space between the voice and the echo, which is caused by the local nearness or distance.

Deliberately. adj. [from deliberate.]

1. Circumspectly; advisedly; warily.

He judges to a hair of little induences; knows better than any man what is not to be wanted, and never hazards himself so far as to fall, but plods on deliberately: and, as a grave man ought, is sure to put his staff before him.

Dryden.

2. Slowly; gradually.

DELIBERATION. n.s. [deliberatio, Lat.]

The act of deliberating: thought in order to choose.

If mankind had no power to avoid ill or choose good by free deliberation, it should never be guilty of anything that was done.

Hammond's Fundamentals.

Pertaining to deliberation; apt to consider.

DELIBERATIVE. adj. [deliberativus, Lat.] Pertaining to deliberation; apt to consider.

DELIBERATIVE. n.s. [from the adjective.]

The discourse in which a question is deliberated.

In deliberations, the point is, what is evil; and, of good, what is greater; and of evil, what is less.

Bacon.

DELICACY. n.s. [delicassae, Fr. of delicate, Lat.]}

1. Daintiness; pleasantness to the taste.

On voluptuous thoughts intent,

What choice to choose for delicacy best.

Milton.

2. Nicety in the choice of food.

These delicacies

1 mean of taste, sight, smell, herbs, fruits, and flowers,

Walks, and the melody of birds.

Milton.

3. Softness; elegant or feminine beauty.

A man of poorly present, in whom smiling made not away delicacy, nor beauty fierceness.

Selden.

4. Nicety; minute accuracy.

To Dyck has even excelled him in the delicacy of his colouring, and in his cabinet pieces.

Dyck.

5. You may see into the spirits of them all, and form your own from these general notions and delicacy of thought and happy words.

Felon.

6. Neatness; elegance of dress.

7. Politeness of manners; contrary to grossness.

8. Indulgence; gentle treatment.

Persons born of familiar and rich, derive a weakness of constitution from the ease and luxury of their ancestors, and the delicacy of their own education.

Temple.

9. Tenderness; scrupulosity.

Persons promoting for the interest of his country, must conquer all that tenderness and delicacy, which may make him afraid of being handled.

Addison.

10. Weakness of constitution.

11. Smallness; tenuity.

DELCIATE. adj. [delicat, Fr.]

1. Nice; pleasing to the taste; of an agreeable flavour.

The choosing of a delicate before a more ordinary dish, is to be done as other human actions and which there are no degrees and precise natural limits described.

Taylor.

2. Dainty; desires of curious meats.

3. Choice; select; excellent.

4. Pleading to the senses.

5. Fine; not coarse; consisting of small parts.

As much blood passeth through the lungs as through all the body; the circulation is quicker, and heat greater, and their texture is extremely delicate.

Arbitrator am Anim.

6. Of polite manners; not gross, or coarse.

7. Soft; effeminate; unable to bear hardships.

Witnesse this army, of such mass and charge. Led by a delicate and tender prince.

Shak.

Tender and delicate persons must needs be of angry, they have so many things to trouble them, which more robust nature have little sense of.

Bacon.

8. Pure; clear.

Where they most breed and haunt, I have observed the air is delicate.

Shak.

DELCIATELY, adv. [from delicate.]

1. Beautifully; with soft elegance.

That which will distinguish his style from all other poets, is the elegance of his words, and the numerousness of his verse: there is nothing so delicately turned in all the Roman language.

Dyck.

2. Finely; not coarsely.

3. Dainty; not delicately, or nicely; that is, be not troublesome to thyself or others in the choice of thy meats, or the delicacy of thy sauces.

Taylor.
4. Chosely.
5. Politely.

Delicateness. n. s. [from delicate.]
The state of being delicate; tenderness; softness; inefficacy.
The delicate woman among you would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground, for fear of dirt. Deut. xxvi. 30.

Delicates. n. s. [from delicate.] Niceties; rarities; that which is choice and dainty.
The shepherd's honeyed cards, his cold thin drink out of his leather bottle, all which secure and sweetly, he enjoys. Are far beyond a prince's delicacies. Sheksp.

Delicacy. n. s. [from delicate.] Sweetness; pleasantness; delightfulness; a thing delightful; agreeable; charming; grateful to the sense or mind. It is highly probable, that upon Adam's disobedience Almighty God chased him out of Paradise, and left him in the fairest and most delicious part of the earth, into some other the more barren and unpleasant. Watts. In his last hours his easy wit displayed. Like the rich fruit he sings, delightful in decay. Smith. Still on that breast cramp'd let me lie. Still drink delightful poison from thy eye. Pope.

Deliciously. adv. [from delicious.] Sweetly; pleasantly; delightfully.
How much she hath chastized herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her. Cowper. Delicacy.

Deliciousness. n. s. [from delicious.] Delight; plea-ure; joy. The sweetest honey Is hadsome in its own deliciousness. And the most delicious cake, and apple. Shak. Let no man judge of himself, or of the blessing, and efficacy of the sacrament itself, by any sensible relish, by the gust and deliciousness, which sometimes perceives, and at other times doth not perceive. Taylor.

Deligation. n. s. [deligetio, Lat.] A binding up in chirurgery.
The third intention is deligation, or retaining the parts so joined together. Sir W. com. Surgery.

Delight. n. s. [delicio, fr. delicor] To content; to satisfy; to afford pleasure.
The prisoner delighting their conceits with confirming their knowledge, seeing wherein the seaspieldiscipline differed from the land service, had pleasing entertainment. Sidney.

Delightfully. adv. Pleasantly; charmingly; with delight. Delightfully, increase and multiply; Now death to hear! Milton.

Delightfulness. n. s. [from delight.] Pleasure; comfort; satisfaction. But our desires toxical extension.

Delightsome. adj. [from delight.] Pleasant; delightful.
The words themselves being so ancient, the knitting of them so short and intricate, and the whole periods and compass of his speech so delightful for the roundness, and so grave for the strangeness. Spenser.

Delightsomely. adv. [from delightsome.] Pleasantly; in a delightful manner.

Delightsomeness. n. s. [from delightsome.] Pleasomeness; delightfulness.

To Delinate. v. a. [delinatio, Lat.] To make the first draught of a thing; to design; to sketch.

To Deliver. v. a. [deliver, Fr.] To

- please; to content; to satisfy; to afford pleasure.
- The prisoner delighting their conceits with confirming their knowledge, seeing wherein the seaspieldiscipline differed from the land service, had pleasing entertainment. Sidney.
- Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Ps. xxxvii. 4.
- For insects, whereof both bees, delighted with flowers, and their sweetnees; other bees becom'd delighted with other kinds of viands. Lech.
- He heard, he took, and pouring down his throat, Delighted, soul'd the large luxurious draught. Pope.

To Delit. v. n. To have delight or pleasure in. It is followed by in. Dolt my lord, the king, delight in this thing? 2 Sam. xxi.

Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in his commandments. Ps. cxlv. 1.

Delight'd. Delighted, incense, and multiply; Now death to hear! Milton.

Delight'st. Delighteth, and multiply; Now death to hear! Milton.

Delighteth.

- The words themselves being so ancient, the knitting of them so short and intricate, and the whole periods and compass of his speech so delightful for the roundness, and so grave for the strangeness. Spenser.
- God hath furnished every one with the same means of exciting hunger and thirst for a light, and on the same means. Grew. Delightsomely.
- The licentia pictoria is very large: with the same reason they may delineate old Nester like Adonis II calbs with Helen's face, and Timon with Absalom's head. Brown.
- To delineate the region in which God first planted his delightful garden. Raleigh.
- I have not here time to delineate to you the glories of God's heavenly kingdom: nor, indeed, could I, lik as I had, what the happiness of that place and portion is. Wake.

Delineation. n. s. [delinacito, Lat.] The first draught of a thing.

In the orthographical schemes, there should be a true delineation, and the just dimensions.

---

Deli'niment. n. s. [delinimentum, Lat.] A mitigating, or assuaging. Diet.

Deli'nquency. n. s. [delinquentiua, Lat.] A fault; a failure in duty; a misdeed. They never punish the greatest and most intolerable delinquency of the tenants, and their ex-

- Thy years determine like the age of man, That thou should'st my delinquencies enquire, And with variety of tortures to molest. Sonnets's Paraphrase of Job. A delinquent ought to be cited in the place or jurisdiction where the delinquency was committed by him. Delinquents. Deli'nquent. n. s. [delinquens, Lat.] An offender; one that has committed a crime or fault. Such an egregious state, That sooner will accuse the magistrate Than the delinquent; and will rather give The treason is hot acted, than believe. Ben Jonson. All raised, not by war, or any other disaster, but by justice and sentence, as delinquents and criminals. town. He had, upon frivolous surmises, been sent for as a delinquent, and been brought upon his knees, Dryden.

To Deli'nitate. v. n. [deliqueo, Lat.] To melt; to be dissolved. It will be resolved and liquefied very analogous to that which the chemists make of salt of tartar, left in moist cellars to delinate. Boyle.

Sedan as sedation as we see made by the mixture of some chemical liquids, as oil of vitriol and deliquated salt of tartar. Cudworth.

Deli'nation. n. s. [delinatio, Lat.] A melting; a dissolving. Deliquium. n.s. [Lat. A chemical term.] A distillation by dissolving any calcined matter, by hanging it up in moist cellars, into a lustrous humour. Diet.

Deli'rmant. n.s. [delirancum, Lat.] A doting or foolish fancy. Diet.

To Deli'mate. v. n. [deliri, Lat.] To

- To date; to rave; to talk or act idly. Diet.

Deli'ration. n. s. [deliratio, Lat.] Do-

- tage; folly; madness. Diet.

Deli'rious. adj. [delirius, Lat.] Light-

- headed; raving; doting.

- The people about him said he had been for some hours delirious; but when I saw him he had his understanding as well as ever I knew. Swift.

- On bed

- Delirious fugg, sleep from his pillow flies. Theos.

Deli'rium. n. s. [delirium, Lat.] Alienation of mind; dotage. Too great acuity and promptness in answering, especially in persons naturally of another temper, is a sign of an approaching delirium; and in a feverish delirium there is a small inflammation of the brain. Arbuthnot on Diet.

Deli'tigation. n. s. [delitigio, Lat.] A striving; a chiding; a contending.

To Deliver. v. a. [ deliver, Fr.] To

- set free; to release;

- Thus she the captive did deliver;

- The captive thus gave up his quiver. Prior.

- To save; to rescue.

- Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man. Psalm cvii. 2.

- I was like to be apprehended for the witch of BRANDFORD, but that my admirable dexterity of wit, counterfeiting the action of an old woman, deluded not. Shak.
DEL.

3. To surrender; to put into one's hands; to resign; to give up; to yield.

To any one thou shalt deliver him the pledge again with the money gone down. 1 Sam. xxiv. 12.

And David said to him, must thou bring me down to this company? And he said, Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt not kill them that deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company. 1 Sam. xxiv. 13.

They that are not thy commandments, wherefore thou hast delivered us for a spoil, and unto captivity. 'Tob. iii. 4.

4. To give; to offer; to present.

Now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house. 2 Kings. viii. 8.

Thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner, when thou wast his butler. Gen. xli. 11.

It was no wonder that, who at such a time could be corrupted to frame and deliver such a petition, would not be reformed by such an answer. 1 Pet. iv. 18.

5. To cast away; to throw off.

Charm'd with that virtuous draught, th' exalted mind
All sense of what delvers to the wind. Pope.

6. To disburden a woman of a child.

On her fright and fears,
She is something before her time deliver'd. Dryden.

Tolly was long ere he could be deliver'd of a few ver's, and those poor ones too. Peacham.

7. To speak; to tell; to relate; to utter; to pronounce.

A midnight-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, counsellor's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged eyes play truant at his tale. Shak.

Tell me your highness' pleasure,
What from your grace I shall deliver to him. Shak.

I knew a clergyman who appeared to deliver his sermon without looking into his notes. Swift.

8. To exert in motion. Not in use.

Proces seems so to overrun his age in strength,
That Musidorus could not perform any action on horse or foot more strongly, or deliver that strength more nimly. Sidney.

To DELIVER over. v. a.

1. To put into another's hands; to leave to the discretion of another.

Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies; for false witnesses rise up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty. Ps. cxxvii. 2.

The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping enough, I warrant her. Shak.

2. To give from hand to hand; to transmit.

If the true account may be expected by future ages from the present, your lordship will be delivered over to posticity in a fairer character than I have given. Dryden.

To DELIVER up. v. a.

To surrender; to give up.

He that spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not, with him also, freely give us all things? Rom. viii. 32.

Are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words? Shak.

Happy having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hand of justice. Shak.

DELIVERANCE. n.s. [deliverance, Fr.]

1. The act of freeing from captivity, slavery, or any oppression; rescue.

He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bound. Luke, iv. 18.

2. The act of delivering a thing to another; now commonly called delivery.

Religious deliverance more. Shak.

People have a superstitious belief, that in the labour of women it helpeth to the easy delivery. Bacon.

3. The act of bringing children.

Rejoice deliverance more. Shak.

People have a superstitious belief, that in the labour of women it helpeth to the easy delivery. Bacon.

4. The act of speaking; utterance; pronouncement; now commonly called delivery.

If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light delivery, I have spoken.

With that in one her, her years profession,
Wisdom and constancy, hath amazed me more
Than I judge blame much upon her. Shak.

All's well that ends well. Dryden.

DELIVERER. n. s. [from deliver.]

1. A savior; a rescuer; a preserver; a releaser.

It doth not only set forth the consent of all nations and ages, in the approbation of the extinguishing and delivering of giants, monsters, and foreign tyrants, not only as lawful, but as meritorious even of divine honour; and this, although the deliverer came from the one end of the world unto the other.

By that seed
Is meant thy great Deliverer, who shall bruise
The serpent's head. Milton.

Andrew Doris has a statue erected to him at the entrance of the doge's palace, with the glorious title of deliverer of the commonwealth. Addison.

To DELIVER. v. a. [delu'd, Lat.]

1. To beguile; to cheat; to deceive; to impose on.

O, give me leave, I have delivered you; I swear.

Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke. Shak.

Let not the Trojans, with a frigid presence
Of proper peace, deliver the Laius prince. Dryden.

2. To discompose; to frustrate.

DELIVERER. n. s. [from deliver.]

A beguiler; a deceiver; an impostor; a cheat; a false pretender.

Say, however, say, all fair deliver speak;
Answer me this, ere yet my heart does break.

Granville.

And thus the sweet deliverers tune their song. Dryden.

To DELIVER. v. a. [delu'p, Sax. delu'en, Dut. perhaps from del'ta, a hog.]

2. To fathom; to sift; to sound one's opinion. Figuratively.

What's his name and birth?
I cannot deliver him to the root: his father
Was call'd d'eluicius. Shak.

DELIVER. n. s. [from the verb.]

A ditch; a pit; a pibul; a den; a cave.

He by by by
By his feeble feet direct to the ery;
Which to that slavey deliver him brought at last,
Where Mannon erast did run his treasure.

Spenser.

Such a light and merry dance
Saw you never yet in France;
And by leaden, for the nonce,
That turn round like grindle-stones,
Which they dig out by the dozen.

For their bairns bread, wives, and selves.

Ben Jonson.

491
DELM.

DELF of Coals. A certain quantity of coals dug in the mine or pit. Dict.

DELIVER. n. s. [from deler.] A digger; one that opens the ground with a spade. DELUGE. n. s. [deluge, Fr. from delou-

1. A general inundation; laying entirely under water. The apostle doth plainly intimate, that the old world was subject to perish by a deluge, as this is subject to perish by conflagration. Barnet's Theor.

2. An overflowing of the natural bounds of a river. Bat if with bays and dams they strive to force His channel to a new or narrow course. No longer then within his banks he dwells, First to a torrent, then to a deluge, swells. Deham.

3. Any sudden and irresistible calamity. To DELUGE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To drown; to lay totally under water. The restless flood the land would overflow, By which the deb'g'd earth would useless grow. Blackmore.

Still the battering waves rush in Impalpable, till deb'g'd by the foam. The ship sinks, found'ring in the vast abyss. Phillips.

2. To overwhelm; to cause to sink under the weight of any calamity. At length corruption, like a general flood, Shall deluge all. Pope.

DELUSION. n. s. [delusion, Lat.] 1. The act of deluding; a cheat; guile; deceit; treachery; fraud; collusion; falsehood.

2. The state of one deluded.

3. A false representation; illusion; error; a chimerical thought. Who therefore seeks in these True wisdom, finds her not, or by delusion. Milton.

I waking, view'd with grief the rising sun, And fondly mourn'd the dear delusion gone. Prior.

DELU'SIVE. adj. [from delusus, Lat.] Apt to deceive; beguiling; imposing on. When, for'd with passion, we attack the fair, Delusive sights and bittles vows we bear. Prior.

The happy whimsey you pursue, Threaten not length believe it true; Caugh't by your own delusive art, You fancy first, and then assert. Prior.

While the base and provoking multitude were listening to delusive election, those of a more erect aspect and exalted spirit separated themselves from the rest. Tatler, No. 81.

Pheonomena so delusory that it is very hard to escape imposition and mistake. Westward.

DELU'SORY. adj. [from delusus, Lat.] Apt to deceive. This confidence is founded on no better foundation than a delusive principle. Gentle.

DEMAGOGUE. n. s. [demagogue, Gr.] A ringleader of the rabble; a popular and factional orator. Who were the chief demagogues and patrons of tumults, to spread for them, to fatter and embnder them. Kine.

A plausible, insidious word, in the mouth of an expert demagogue, is a dangerous and deceitful weapon. South.

Demagogus and Cicero, though each of them a leader, or, as the Greeks called it, a demagogue, in a popular state, yet seem to differ in their practice. Swift.

DEMAIN. n. s. [domain, Fr.]

DEM'AN. n. s. [domain, Fr.]

DEM'AN. n. s. [domain, Fr.]

1. That land which a man holds originally of himself, called dominium by the civilians, and opposed to feodum or fee, which signifies those that are held of a superior lord. It is sometimes used also for a distinction between those lands that the lord of the manor has in his own hands, or in the hands of his lessee, demised or let upon a rent for a term of years or life, and such other lands appertaining to the said manor as belong to free or copyholders. Phillips.

2. Estate in land.

Having now provided A gentleman of noble parentage, Of fair demeanour, youthful, and nobly allied. Shek. That cardium indeed had a royal jurisdiction and seigniory, though of the lands of that county in deme'ne' and necessitated for the most part by the ancient inheritors. Blackmore.

3. Land adjoining to the mansion; kept in the lords own hand. Those acts for planting forest trees have hither-to been wholly ineffectual, except about the demesnes of a few gentlemen; and even there, in general, very uselessly made. Swift.

To DEMAND. v. a. [demand, Fr.]

1. To claim; to ask for with authority. The pound of rice which I demand of him, is dearly bought; 'tis mine, and I will have it. Shaks.

2. To question; to interrogate.

And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered? 2 Sam. xi. 7.

If any friend of Caesar's demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Shaks.

Young one, Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems, To crave the crave for demanded. Shaks.

The oracle of Apollo being demanded, when the war and misery of Greece should be an end, replied, When they would double the altar in Delos, which was a cubick form. Herod. of Grecy, Geography.

3. [In law.] To prosecute in a real action.

DEMAND. n. s. [demande, Fr.]

1. A claim; a challenging; the asking of any thing with authority. This matter is by the decree of the watchmen, and the demand by the word of the holy ones. Dan. iv. 17.

Giving vent, gives life and strength, to our appetites; and he, that has the confidence to turn his wishes into demands, will be but a little way from thinking he ought to obtain them. Locke.

2. A question; an interrogation.

3. The calling for a thing in order to purchase it. My bookseller tells me, the demand for those papers increases daily. Addison.

4. [In law.] The asking of what is due. It hath also a proper signification distinguished from plaint; for all civil actions are pursued either by demands or plaints, and the pursued is called demandant or plaintiff. There are two manners of demands, the one of deed, the other in law; in deed, as in every procive, there is express demand; in law, as every entry in land distress for rent, taking or seizing of goods, and such like acts, which may be done without any words, are demands in law. Blount.

DEMANDABLE. adj. [from demand.] That may be demanded; requested; asked for. All sums demandable, for license of alienation to be made of lands helden in chief, have been stayed in the way to the hampar. Bacon.

DEMANDANT. n. s. [from demand.

1. He who is actor or plaintiff in a real action, because he demandeth lands. Coke.

2. A plaintiff; one that demands redress. One of the witnesses deposeth, that dining on a Sunday with the demandant, whose wife had sat behind the squire's lady at church, she the said woman dropped some expressions, as if she thought her husband ought to be knighted. Spectat.

DEMANDER. n. s. [demandeur, Fr.]

1. One that requires a thing with authority.

2. One that asks a question.

3. One that asks for a thing in order to purchase it.

They grow very fast and fat, which also better their taste, and delivereth to them the demands ready use at all seasons. Carew.

A demand; one that demands a debt. Coke.

DEMAN'TY. n. s. [from demanter, Fr.] A mien; presence; carriage; demeanour; deportment.

At his feet, with sorrowful demands. And bloody line, an armed corse did lie. Spenser.

To DEMAN'TY. v. a. [from demander, Fr.]

1. To behave; to carry one's self. Those plain and legible lines of duty requiring us to demand ourselves to God humbly and devoutly, to our governors obediently, and to our neighbours justly, and to ourselves soberly and temperately. South.

A man cannot doubt but that there is a God; and that, according as he demandeth himself towards him, he will make him happy or miserable for ever. Tillotson.

Stephan had long perplex'd his brains, How with such high a nymphet he might Deman'nt him the wedding-night. Swift.

2. To lessen; to debase; to undervalue.

Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad; Else he would never so demand himself. Shaks.

DEMAN'ER, n. s. [demanter, Fr.] Carriage; behaviour; deportment.

Of so inappos'table a pride he was, that where his deeds might well stir envy, his demandor did rather breed disdain. Sidney.

Angels best know him when we are most like unto them in all parts of decent demeanours. Hooker.

His gestures fierce He mark'd, and mad demeanour, then alone. As he supp'red, all observ'd, unseen. Milton.

Thus Eve, with sad demeanour mew'd. Thus mew'd, with sad demeanour, will I mew'd. Milton.
DEM

what makes one worthy of blame or punishment.

They should not be able once to sit, or to murmur, but it should be known, and they shortened according to their demerits.

Shakespeare.

To DEMERIT, v. a. [demerit, fr. Latin.] To praise or to be against the custom of the family.

Temple.

2. Anciendly the same with merit; desert.

I fetch any life and being from men of royal sieve; and my demerits may speak, unbottoming, to as proud a fortune as this that I have reach’d.

Shakespeare.

To DEMERIT. v. a. [demerit, fr. Latin.] To deserve blame or punishment.

Demerced. adj. [from demerces, of demerces, Lat.] Plagued; drowned. Dict.

DEMERSION. n. s. [demersio, Lat.]

1. A drowning.

[In chemistry.] The putting any medicinal in a dissolving liquor. Dict.

DEMISE. See DEMAIN.

DEMI, inseparable particle. [demi, Fr. diminuum, Lat.] Half; one of two equal parts. This word is only used in composition, as demised; that is, half human, half divine.

DEMI-CANNON. n. s. [demi and cannon.]

DEMI-CANNON Lowest. A great gun that carries a ball of thirty pounds weight and six inches diameter. The diameter of the bore is six inches two eighth parts.

Dict.

DEMI-CANNON Ordinary. A great gun six inches four eightths diameter in the bore, twelve foot long. It carries a shot six inches one sixth diameter, and thirty-two pounds weight.

Dict.

DEMI-CANNON of the Greatest Size. A gun six inches and six eighth parts diameter in the bore, twelve foot long. It carries a ball of six inches five eightths diameter, and thirty-two pounds weight.

Dict.

What! this a sleeve, 'tis like a demi-cannon.

Shakespeare.

Ten engines, that shall be of equal force either to a cannon, a demi-cannon, culverin or demi-culverin, may be framed at the same price that one of these will amount to.

Wilkins.

DEMI-CULVERIN. n. s. [demi and culverin.]

DEMI-CULVERIN of the lowest Size. A gun four inches two eighths diameter in the bore, and ten foot long. It carries a ball four inches diameter, and nine pounds weight.

Dict.

DEMI-CULVERIN Ordinary. A gun four inches four eighth diameter in the bore, ten foot long. It carries a ball four inches two eighth diameter, and ten pounds eleven ounces weight.

DEMI-CULVERIN, elder Sort. A gun four inches and six eighteens diameter in the bore, ten foot one third in length. It carries a ball four inches four eighth parts diameter, and twelve pounds eleven ounces weight. Military Dict.

They contain a perpetual volley of demi-culverin.

Raleigh.

DEM

The army left two demi-culverins, and two other good guns. Clarenceus.

DEMI-DEVIL. [demi and devil.] Partaking of infernal nature; half a devil.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil? Why he hath thus ensnared my soul and body? Shakespeare.

DEMI-GOD. n. s. [demi and god.] Partaking of divine nature; half a god; an hero produced by the cohabitation of divinities with mortals.

He took his leave of them, whose eyes had him forsworn with tears, making temples to him as to a demi-god.

Shakespeare.

DEMI-LANCE. n. s. [demi and lance.] A light lance; a short spear; a half-pike.

On their steel'd heads they'd their demi-lances wore.

Shakespeare.

Light demi-lances from after they throw.

Dymon.

DEMI-MAN. n. s. [demi and man.] Half a man: a term of reproach.

We must adventure this battle, lest we perish by the enterprise of this lurking demi-man.

Knolles.

DEMI-WOLF. n. s. [demi and wolf.] Half a wolf; a mongrel dog between a dog and wolf; lyciscus.

Spaniels, curs, shoueghs, water-rggs, and demi-nders, are 'cleped All by the name of dogs.

Shakespeare.

DINISE. n. s. [demestile, demise, demise, French.] Death; deceased. It is seldom used but in formal and ceremonious language.

About a month before the demise of queen Anne, the author retired.

To DEMISE. v. a. [demis, demise, Fr.]

To grant at one's death; to grant by will; to bequeath.

Your executors shall not have power to demise my funds to be purchased.

Swift's Last Will.

DEMISSION. n. s. [demissio, Lat.] Degradation; diminution of dignity; depression.

Inexecrable vigour is worse than a base demis-sion of sovereign authority.

L'Estrange.

To DEMITT. v. a. [demitto, Lat.] To depress; to hang down; to let fall. Dict.

When they are in their pride, that is, advancing their train, if they decline their neck to the ground, they presently demit and fall the same.

Brown's Fuller Ericsus.

DEOCRACY. n. s. [use in the three forms of government; that in which the sovereign power is neither lodged in one man, nor in the nobles, but in the collective body of the people.

While many of the servants, by industry and virtue, arise at riches and esteem, then the nature of the government inclines to a democracy. Temple.

The majority, having the whole power of the community, may employ all that power in making laws and executing their demi-devil's works by these laws; and there the form of the government is a perfect democracy. Locke.

DEOCRACIAI. adj. [from democracia.]

Pertaining to a popular government; popular.

They are still within the line of vulgarity, and are democratical enemies to truth. Brown'sFullscreen. Fr.

As the government of England has a mixture of democratical in it, so the right is partly in the people. Arisotle.

To DEMOLISH. v. a. [demoltir, Fr. demoltir, Lat.] To throw down buildings; to rage; to destroy.

I expected the fabric of my book would long since have been demolished, and laid even with the ground.

Temple.

DEMOLISHER. n. s. [from demolish.] One that throws down buildings; a destroyer; a layer waste.

DEMOLITION. n. s. [from demolish.] The act of overthrowing or demolishing buildings; de-struction.

Two gentlemen should have the direction in the demolition of Dunster.

Milton.

DEMOM. n. s. [deamon, Lat.]

A spirit; generally an evil spirit; a devil.

I felt him strike, and now I see him fly.

'Curs'd deamon!' for ever broken lie.

These false shafts, by which I ward my head! Prior.

DEMONICAL. adj. [from demon.]

1. Belonging to the devil; devilish.

He, all unarm'd,

Shall close thee with the terror of his voice

To demolish his destruction from thee.

Milton.

2. Influenced by the devil; produced by diabolical possession.

Demoniac phreny, meeting indeclined.

Milton.

DEMONIACK. n. s. [from the adjective.] One possessed by the devil; one whose mind is disturbed and agitated by the power of wicked and unclean spirits.

These larticles and demonical that were stored to their right mind, were such as sung after them, and believed in him.

Bunyan.

DEMONIAN. adj. [from demon.] Devilish; of the nature of devils.

Demons' spirits now, from the element Each of his reign allotted, richer call'd

Powers of fire, air, water.

DEMONOCRACY. n. s. [from democracy and democracy.]

The power of the devil.

Dict.

DEMONOLATHY. n. s. [from demon and lathe.]

The worship of the devil.

Dict.

DEMONOLOGY. n. s. [from demon and logia.]

Discourse of the nature of devils. This king James intitled his book concerning witches.

DEMONSTRABLE. adj. [from demonstrabili and demonstrali.]

That which may be proved beyond doubt or contradiction; that which may be made not only probable but evident.

The grand articles of our belief are as demonstrable as geometry.

Gianavo.

DEMONSTRABLY, adv. [from demonstrable.]

In such a manner as admits of certain proof; evidently; beyond possibility of contradiction.

We should have compelled his ministers to execute the law, in cases that demonstrably concerned the public peace. Clarendon.

To DEMONSTRATE. v. a. [demonstro, Lat.] To prove with the highest degree of certainty; to prove in such a manner as reduces the contrary position to evident absurdity.

We cannot demonstrate these things so as to show that the contrary often involves a contradiction.

Temple.

403
DEMONSTRATION. n.s. [demonstratio, Lat.].
1. The highest degree of deducible or argumental evidence; the strongest degree of proof; such proof as not only evinces the position proved to be true, but shows the contrary position to be absurd and impossible.

DEMONSTRATIVE. adj. [demonstrativus, Lat.].
1. Having the power of demonstration; invariable, conclusive; certain.

DEMONSTRA'TIVELY. adv. [from demonstrativus].
1. With evidence not to be opposed or doubted.

DEMONSTRATOR. n.s. [from demonstrativus].
1. One that proves; one that teaches; one that demonstrates.

DEMONSTRATORY. adj. [from demonstrativus].
Having the tendency to demonstrate.

DEMUM. L. [from demonstra'tio].
1. To delay a process in law by doubts and objections. See DEMURRER.

DEMONSTRATIONS. n.s. [from demonstratio].
1. Modesty; sobriety; gravity of aspect.
2. Affected modesty; pretended gravity.
DEN

The deed of landling, and basty warning us away, troubled us much.

Ded.

To DENIGRATE. v. a. [denigro, Lat.]

To belittle; to make black.

By suffering some impression from fire, bodies are casually or artificially denigratd in their natural complexion; thus are charcoal made black by an infection of their own sweat. Brown's Verg.

DENIZ. n. s. [from d'izir.] The act of infranchising, or making free.

That the mere Irish were reputed aliens, appears by the charter of Magna Charta, which in all ages were purchased by them. Davies.

DENIZEN. n. s. [from dinavda, a man.

DENISON. n. man of the city; or dinezud, a free citizen, of the Welsh.

A freeman; one infranchised.

Denzir is a British law term, which the Saxons and Angles found here and retained. Davies.

Thus th' Almighty Sire began: ye gods,

Natives, or denizens, of blast alohs,

From whence these nations derive.

Drogo.

A great many plants will hardly, with nursing, be made to produce their seed out of their native soil; but of the dozen or so for all people grow to and seed as a free denizen of the world.

He innocently straight his denizens of air;

The lucid squadrons round the sails repair. Pope.

To DENIZEN. r. a. [from the noun.] To infranchise; to make free.

Dide, lust, covetize, being several

To these things, if they be all; Mangled thus, their issue is inestimable.

The sense is denizens of, virtue is barbarous. Donne.

DENOMINABLE. adj. [denomino, Lat.]

That may be named or denoted.

An inflammation consists of a suppulsive swelling, or else is denominable from other humors, according to the predominancy of melancholy, phlegm, or choler. Brown's Fufuer Errors.

DEN

To DENOMINATE, v. a. [denomo, Lat.]

To name; to give a name to.

The contemplative purport of persevering not being of every one understood, they have been constrained as though they had superstitiously meant other than what they were denominated of angels and saints, should serve for the worship of those glorious creatures, or else those glorious creatures, devotion, protection, and prayer, of such places. Hooker.

Predication is destructive to all that is established among men, to all that is most proper to human nature, to the two faculties that denominate us men, understanding and will; for what use can we have of our understandings, if we cannot do anything upon them? And, if we act not voluntarily, what exercise have we of our wills?

The name given to a thing which commonly marks some principal quality of it.

But is there any token, denomination, or monument of the Gals yet remaining in Ireland, as there is of the Scythians? Speaker's State of Ireland.

The liking or disliking of the people gives the play the denomination of good or bad; but does not limit of construction is such. Drogo.

Philosophers, though the idea of the learned part of the heathen world, has divided it into many sects and denominations; as Jews, Persians, Peripatetics, Epicures, and the like. South.

All men are sinners: the most righteous among us must confess ourselves to come under that denomination.

DENOMINATIVE, adj. [from denominate.]

The least denominate part of time is a minute, the greatest integer being a year. Coke's Drach.

DENOMINATOR. r. s. [from denominate.]

The giver of a name; the person or thing that causes an appellation.

Both the seas of one name should have one common denominator. Brown's Verg. Err.

DENOMINATOR of a Fraction, is the number below the line, shewing the nature and quality of the parts, which any integer is supposed to be divided into; thus in 9, the denominator shews you, that the integer is supposed to be divided into 8 parts, or half quarters; and the numerator 6 shews, that you take 6 of such parts, i.e. three quarters of the whole.

When a single broken number or fraction hath for its denominator a number consisting of an unit, in the first place towards the left hand, and nothing but exponents from the unit towards the right hand, it is then more aptly and rightly called a decimal fraction. Coke's Arithmeticks.

Denominator of any proportion, is the quotient arising from the division of the antecedent by the consequent; thus 6 is the denominator of the proportion that 60 hath to 6, because 60:6, which is also called the exponent of the proportion, or ratio. Harris.

To DENOTE. r. a. [deno, Lat.] Tomark; to be a sign of; to betoken; to shew by signs; as, a quick pulse denotes a fever.

To DENOUNCE. v. a. [denuncio, Lat. denoncer, Fr.]

To threaten by proclamation.

I denounced unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish.

DENT.

To DENOUNCEN. n. s. [from denounce.]

The act of denouncing.

To DENOUNCENgry.

To threaten by some outward sign or expression.

To threaten with a loud voice, and his look denouned (is)

Desertive and dangerous. To less than gods.

Tories.

To denounce while the rolling waves from fat like herds, first denounce the witty war Dept.

Denunciation. n. s. [from denounce.]

The act of proclaiming any menace; the proclamation of intended evil; denunciation.

False is the reply of Cain upon the denunciation of his curse, My iniquity is greater than can be forgiven.

Brown.

To DENOUNCR. r. s. [from denoun.] One that declares some menace.

Here comes the sad denouncer of my fate.

To tell the mournful knoll of separation. Dryd.

DENSE. adj. [densus, Lat.] Close; compact; approaching to solidity; having small interstices between the constituent particles.

The cause of cold is the density of the body; for all dense bodies are colder than most other bodies, as metals, stone, glass, and they are longer in warming than softer bodies. Bacon.

In the air the higher you go, the less it is compressed, and consequently the less dense it is; and the upper part is exceedingly thinner than the lower part which we breathe. Locke.

To DENSIRE. r. a. A barbarous term of husbandry.

Burning of land, or burning, is commonly called denising, that is, Denomining or Demishing, because most used or first invented there. Martine.

DENSIY. n. s. [densitas, Lat.] Closeness; compactness; close adhesion, or near approach, of parts.

When the denser of metals, gold, if foliated, is transparent, and all metals become transparent if dissolved in men-tramous, or vitrified, the opacity of a white metals ariseth not from their density alone. Araco.

The air within the vessels being of a less density, the outward air would press their sides together; and, being of a greater density, would expand them, so as to endanger the life of the animal. Arbacl. on Aliments.

DENTAL. adj. [dentalis, Lat.]

1. Belonging or relating to the teeth.

2. [in grammar.] Pronounced principally by the agency of the teeth.

The Hebrews have assigned which letters are labial, which dental, and which gutural. Bacon.

Dental consonants are easy, therefore let them be hard; first the labial, second the lingual.

Dental. n. s. A small shell-fish.

Small black and shining pieces 8 em. by the shaper, to have been formed in the shell of a dental.

Dental. n. s. [Ital.] Modilions.

The mountings, or denilias, make a noble show by graceful proportions. Iamb. on Numbers.

Denticulation, n. s. [denticulatus, Lat.]

The state of being set with small teeth, or prominences resembling teeth, like those of a saw.
To DENUNCIATE. n. s. [denunciatio, Lat.] 1. The act of denouncing; the proclamation of a threat; a public menace. 2. In a denunciation or indictment of a war, the war is not confined to the place of the quarrel, but is left in the air. Christ tells the Jews, that, if they believe not, they shall die in their sins; did they never read these denunciations? — Dryden.

To DEOBRUCT. v. a. [deobstructo, Lat.] To clear from impediments; to free from such things as hinder a passage. They are singularly good words, useful for deobstructing the pores of the body. — Bacon.

DEODAND. n. s. [Deo dandum, Lat.] A thing given or forfeited to God for the pacifying his wrath, in case of any misfortune, by which any Christian comes into any reasonable creature: as, if a horse should strike his keeper, and so kill him; or a man, in driving a cart, and endeavouring to rectify a fault made in it, should fall so as the cart-wheel under him, should press him to death; if one should be killing a tree, and giving warning to company by, when the tree was near falling, to look to themselves, and any of them should nevertheless be slain by the fall of the tree; in these cases the horse, the cart wheel, and cart and horses, and the tree, are to be given to God; that is, sold and distributed to the poor, for an expiation of this dreadful event, though occasioned by unreasonable, senseless, and dead creatures: and though this be given to God, yet it is forfeited to the king by law, as executor in this case, to see the price of these distributed to the poor. — Dryden.

DEOPLIATE. v. a. [de et oppido, Lat.] To deobstruct; to clear a passage; to free from obstructions.

DEOPPLOPIATION. n. s. [deoppellation.] The act of clearing obstructions; the removal of whatever obstructs the vital passages. Though the grosser parts be excluded away, yet are the invisible parts extracted, whereby it comes effectual in... — Dryden.

DEOSULATION. n. s. [desolatio, Lat.] The act of kissing. We have an enumeration of the several acts of worship required to be performed in images, viz., processions, genuflections, and devotions. — Dryden.

DEPAINT. v. a. [depeint, Fr.] To picture; to describe by colours; to paint; to show by a painted resemblance. He did unwilling worship to the saint that on his shield depeinted he did see. — Dryden.

2. To describe. Such a singulis good wound! I depeint in roundelays, or sonnet quatrains. — Gay.

To DEPAINT. v. n. [depaint, Fr.] 1. To go away from a place : from before the thing left.

DEPART. v. a. [departir, Fr. partir, Lat.] To depart; to quit; to leave; to retire from. You've had dispatch in private by the consul; You are will'd by him this evening. — Dryden.

DEPART. v. s. [departir, Fr. partir, Lat.] To divide; to separate: a chemical term.

DEPARTEMENT. n. s. [departir, Fr.] 1. The act of going away: now departure. I had in charge, at my depart from France, to marry princess Margaret. — Shaftesbury.

2. DEPARTEMENT. n. s. [departir, Fr. partir, Lat.] One that refines metals by separation.

DEPARTEMENT. n. s. [departir, Fr.] Separate allotment; province or business assigned to a particular person; a French term.

The Roman fleets, during their command at sea, had their several stations and departments: the most considerable was the Alexandrian fleet, and the second was the African. — Dryden.

DEPART. v. s. [departir, Fr.] 1. A going away. For thee, fellow, Who needs must know her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll force it from thee. — Dryden.

2. DEPART. v. a. [departir, Fr.] What besides Of sorrow, and dejection, and despair, Our futility can stain, thy deings bring; — Milton. Departure from this happy place.

DEPART. v. s. [departir, Fr.] The people departed away, Susannah went into her garden. — Susann, viii.
They were seen not only all the while our Saviour was upon earth, but also after his departure out of this world.

2. Death; decease; the act of leaving the present state of existence. He resolved no more to depend upon the one, or to provoke the other.

3. A forsaking; an abandoning; with from. To depend upon his advice or upon the aid of his knowledge of his son's miscarriage. Sidney.

DEP. n. s. [from depend.]

1. The state of hanging down from a supporter.

2. Something hanging upon another.

3. Concatenation; connexion; relation of one thing to another.

4. State of being at the disposal or under the sovereignty of another: with upon.

5. The things or persons of which any man has the dominion or disposal.

6. Accident; that of which the existence presupposes the existence of something else.

7. STATE OF DEPENDENCY.

2. State of being subordinate, or subject in some degree to the discretion of another; the contrary to sovereignty.

Let me report to him Your sweet dependency, and you shall find some good reason that it will not be for the kind of kindness. Where he for grace is knelt to. Shakes.

At their setting out they must have their commission, or letters patent, from the king, that so they may acknowledge their dependency upon the crown of England. Bacon.

3. That which is not principal; that which is subordinate.

We speak of the sublunary world, this earth, and its dependencies, which rose out of a chaos about six thousand years ago. Burnet's Theory.

4. Concatenation; connexion; rise of consequents from premises.

Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense; Such a dependency of thing on thing. As i' heard in madness. Shakes.

5. Relation of any thing to another, as of an effect to its cause.

I took pleasure to trace out the cause of effects, and the dependence of one thing upon another in the visible creation. Burnet's Theory.

6. Trust; reliance; confidence.

The expectation of the performance of our desire, is the call dependency upon him for help and assistance. Stillingfleet.

DEPENDENT. adj. [dependens, Lat. This, as many other words of like termination are written with end or ent, as they are supposed to flow from the Latin or French]

Hanging down. In the time of Charles the Great, and long time, the whole furs in the tails were dependent; but now that fashion is left, and the spots only worn, without the tails.

DEPENDENT, n. s. [from dependens, Lat.]

One subordinate, one at the discretion or disposal of another.

We are indifferent, defenceless beings; the creatures of his power, and the dependents of his providence. Rogers.

DEPENDER. n. s. [from depend.]

A dependent; one that reposes on the kindness or power of another.

What shall thou expect. To be depend on a thing that leans? Shakes.

DEPEDITION. n. s. [from deperditus, Lat. Loss; destruction. It may be up to the deficiency of gold in the nominalisation of weight, or determination of any ponderous particle. Brown.

DEPHLEGURATION. n. s. [from dephlegm.]

An operation which takes away from the phlegm any spirituous fluid by expectated distillation, till it is at length left all behind.

In divers cases it is not enough to separate the aqueous parts by dephlegmation; for some liquors contain also an unsuspected quality of salt or cucullate, of somewhat an earthy nature, which, being associated with the saline ones, do clog and blunt them, and thereby weaken their activity.

To DEPHLEG. v. a. [dephlegmo, To DEPHLEGMEATE. v. a. lat. ]

To clear from phlegm, or aqueous insipid matter.

We have sometimes taken spirit of salt, and carefully dephlegmed it. Dryg.

DEPHLEGME. n. s. [from dephlegm.]

The quality of being freed from phlegm or aqueous matter.

The proportion betwixt the coldine solution and the spirit of wine, depends so much upon the strength of the former liquor, and the dephlegmed.
DEP

1. To depose, v. a. [depono, deplatum, Lat.] To lay down as a pledge or security.
2. To risk upon the success of an adventure. On this I would depone As much, as any cause I’ve known. Hudibras.

DEPONENT. n. s. [from depono, Lat.] One that deposeth his testimony in a court of justice; an evidence; a witness.

2. [In grammar] Such verbs as have no active voice are called deponents, and generally signify action only; as, factor I confess. Clarke’s Latin Grammar.

DEPOPULATION. v. a. [depopular, Lat.] To depopute a city to lay waste; to destroy inhabited houses. Where is this viper? That would depopulate the city, and Be non man him self? Shak. He turned his arms upon unarmed and unprotected people, to spoil only and depopulate, contrary to the laws both of war and peace. Bacon’s Henry VII. A land extinguished to the last remains, Depopulated towns and driven plains. Dryden. In vain death, in different shapes, Depopulates the nations, thousands fall His victims. Philips.

DEPOPULATOR. n. s. [from depopulate.] A depopulation, a destroyer of mankind; a waster of inhabited countries. To DEPOT, n. a. [depositor, Fr.] To carry; to demean; to behave; it is used only with the reciprocal pronoun. Let an ambassador deposit himself in the most grateful manner before a prince. Pope.

DEPORT. n. s. [from the verb.] Deemac- nour; grace of attitude; behaviour; deportment. She Delta’s self In gait surpass’d, and goddess-like deport. Milton. Of middle age one rising, eminent In wise deport, speak much of right and wrong. Milton.

DEPORTATION. n. s. [deportatio, Lat.] 1. Transportation; exile into a remote part of the dominion, with prohibition to change the place of residence. 2. Exile in general. An abjuration, which is a deportation for ever into a foreign land, was anciently used as a civil death. Addison.

DEPARTMENT. n. s. [from deportment, Fr.] 1. Conduct; management; manner of acting. I will but sweep the way with a few notes touching the duke’s own department in that island. Shakes.
2. Deemacnour; behaviour. The coldness of his temper, and the gravity of his deportment, carried him safe through many difficulties, and he lived and died in a great station. Swift.

To DEPOSE. v. a. [depono, Lat.] 1. To lay down; to lodge; to fall. Its shores are neither advanced one jot farther into the sea, nor its surface raised by additional mud deposited upon it by the yearly inundations of the Nile.
2. To degrade from a throne or high station. First, of the king; what shall of him become? The duke yet lives; that Henry shall depone. Shak. May your sick fame still languish till it die? Then, as the greatest curse that I can give, Unplow’d be his land, and after live. Dryden. Depopulate, and captive princes, might have preceded him. Trolle.
3. To take away; to divest; to strip of: not in use. You may my glory and my state depone, But not my griefs; still am I king of those. Shak.
4. To give testimony; to attest. ‘Twas he that made you to depone; Your oath, my Lord, is vain and frivolous. Shak. It was need for him that dwelt in Southwark, or Tithi-street, to depone the yearly rent or valuation of lands lying in the north, or other remote part of the realm. Bacon.
5. To examine any one on his oath. Not now in use. According to our law, Depose him in the justice of his case. Shak.

To DEPOSE. n. a. To hear witness. Love straight stood up and depose, a lyre could not come from the mouth of Zelman. Sidney.

DEPOSITORY. n. s. [depositorius, L.] One with whom any thing is lodged in trust.

I gave you all.—Made you my guardian, my depositaries; But kept a reservation, to be follow’d With such a number. Shak.

To DEPOSIT. v. a. [depositum, L.] 1. To lay up; to lodge in any place. The eagle got leave here to deposit her eggs. L’Estrange.
2. To lay up as a pledge, or security. Dryden wants a poor square foot of stone, to shew where the ashes of one of the greatest poets on earth are deposited. Dryden.
3. To place at interest. When vessels were open, and the insects had free access to the aliment within them, Redi diligently observed, that no other species were produced, but of such as he saw go in and feed, and deposit their eggs there, which they would readily do in all other subjects. Bentley.
4. To lay aside. The difficulty will be to persuade the depositing of those hands, which have, by what fascination, so endeared themselves, Decay of Petr.

DEPOSITARY. n. s. [depositorius, L.] 1. Any thing committed to the trust and care of another. God commands us to return, as to him, to the poor, his gifts, out of mere duty and thankfulness; not to deposit them with him, in hopes of merit ing by them. Spratt.
2. A pledge; a pawn; a thing given as a security.
3. The state of a thing pawned or pledged. They had since Marseilles, and fairly left it; they had the other day the Valtolone, and now they put it in deposit. Bacon.

DEPOSITION. n. s. [from depositio, L.] 1. The act of giving publick testimony. If you will examine the veracity of the fathers by those circumstances usually considered in depositions, you will find them strong on their side. Sir W. Digby.
2. A witness is obliged to swear, otherwise his deposition is not valid. Addison’s Periogon.
D E P R A V I T Y.

The act of making any thing bad; the act of corrupting; corruption. The three forms of government have their several perfections, and are subject to their several deprivations; however, few states are ruined by defect in their institutions, but generally by corruption of manners. Hence.

DEPRAVATION. n. s. [depratio, Lat.] 1. The act of making anything bad; the act of corrupting; corruption.

2. The state of being made bad; degeneracy; depravity.

DEPRECIATION. n. s. [depreciare, Lat.] 1. To deprecate; to suppress; to discourage.

DEPREHEND. v. a. [deprehendo, Lat.] 1. To bring a thing down to a lower price.

DEPREHENSION. n. s. [depræhensio, Lat.] 1. A catching or taking unawares.

DEPRESSION. n. s. [depreçio, Lat.] 1. The act of pressing down.

DEPRESS. v. a. [deprimo, Lat.] 1. To press or thrust down.

DEPRESSOR. n. s. [depressor, Lat.] 1. He that keeps down, or presses down; or, presses down by the force of his body.

DEPRIVATION. n. s. [depratio, Lat.] 1. The taking away of something; the deprivation of anything; the loss of any thing.

DEPRIVE. v. a. [deprivi, a. deprir, Lat.] 1. To take away; to deprive; to rob; to pillage; to spoil; to devour.

DEPRIVATION. n. s. [depratio, Lat.] 1. Deprivation of any thing; the state of being deprived of any thing.

DEPRIVATION. n. s. [depreçio, Lat.] 1. The act of pressing down.
DEP

DEPRIMENT. adj. [from deprimens, of deprimo, Lat.] An epithet applied to one of the straight muscles that move the globe or ball of the eye, its use being to pull it downwards.

The exquisite equilibration of all opposite and antagonistic muscles is effected partly by the relative postures of the body and the eye, which is the case of the attendant and depriment muscles. Derham.

DEPRIVATION. n. s. [from de and privatio, Lat.]
1. The act of depriving, or taking away from.
2. The state of losing.

Fools whose end is destruction, and eternal depriving of being. Beattie.

DEPRIVATION [in law] is when a clergyman, as a bishop, a parson, vicar or prebend, is deprived, or deposed from his preferment, for any matter in fact or law. Phillips.

To DEPRIVE. v. a. [from de and privatio, Lat.]
1. To bereave one of a thing; to take it away from him; with of.
   God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her understanding. Job, xxxix., 17.
   He lamented the loss of an excellent servant, and the horrid manner in which he had been deprived of him. Clarendon.
   Now wretched Octavius, deprived of sight,Led a long death in everlasting night. Penc.
2. To hinder; to debar from: Milton uses it without of.
   From his face I shall be hid, deprived of his blessed countenance. Milton.
   Those who have sat at the ungodly table of the imperfect shall be 'unhappy crew. Deprived of sepulchres and funereal due. Dryden.
3. To release; to free from.
   Most happy he, Whose least delight sufficeth to deprive Remembrance of all pains which his oppress. Spens.
4. To put out of an office.
   A minister, deprived for inconstancy, said, that if they deprived him, it should cost an hundred men's lives. Bacon.

DEPTH. n. s. [from deep, of deep, Dut.]
1. Depthness; the measure of any thing from the surface downwards.
   As for men, they had buildings in many places higher than the depth of the water. Isaiah, viii., 17.
   We have large and deep coves of several depths; the deepest are sunk six hundred fathoms. Bacon.
   The posterity of the earth, which to the depth of futurity descends. Dryd.
   For the in nature, depth and height are equally held infinite. In poetry the height we know, 'Tis only infinite below. Swift.
2. Deep place; not a shoal.
   The false odour skin or the cover'd land. And scene with disembled depths betray. Dryd.
3. The abyss; a gulph of infinite profundity.
   When he prepared the heavens I was there, when he set a compass upon the face of the depth. Prov. viii., 23.
4. The middle or height of a season.
   And in the depth of winter, in the night, You plough the rigging seas to coasts unknown. Debraun.
   The earl of Newcastle, in the depth of winter, rescued the city of York from the rebels. Clarendon.
5. Obscurity.
   There are greater depths and obscurities in an elaborate and well-written piece of nonsense, than in the most abstruse tract of school divinity. Addison's Whig Examiner.

DEPTH of a Squadron or Battalion, is the number of men in the file. Military Dict.
DER E

DERELICTION. n. s. [dereliction, Lat.]
1. The act of forsaking or leaving; abandonment.
2. The state of being forsaken.

There is no other thing to be looked for, but the effects of the most disgraceful destruction of grace, dereliction in this world, and in the world to come confusion. Hooker.

DERELICTS. n. s. pl. [In law.] Goods willfully thrown away, or relinquished, by one to the other. Dict.

To DERIDE. v. a. [derideo, Lat.] To laugh at; to mock; to turn to ridicule; to scorn.

Before such presence to offend with any of the least unseemliness, we would be sure as might be as much as what we do do.

What shall be the portion of those who have derided God's word, and made a mock of every thing that is sacred and religious? [Prov. 20:6.] These sons, ye gods, who with 'fliggious pride insult my darkness, and my ground deride. Pope.

Some say, that making Newton for his faculties, deride him for his religion. Berkeley.

DERIDER. n. s. [from the verb]
1. A mocker; a scoffler.

Upon the wilful violation of oaths, execrable blasphemy, and insults offered by deriders of religion, fearful tokens of divine revenge have been known to follow. Hooker.

2. A droll; a buffoon.

DERISION. n. s. [derision, Lat.]
1. The act of deriding or laughing at.

Are we grieved with the scorn and derision of the profane? Thus was the blessed Jesus despised and rejected of men. Rogers.

Vanity is the natural weakness of an ambitious man, which exposes him to the secret scorn and derision of those he converses with. Addison.

2. Contempt; scorn; a laughing-stock.

I am in derision; even every one mocketh me. Jer. xx. 7.

Then makest thou a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us.

Thy foes derision, captive, poor, and blind. Is. xxxiv. 10.

Into a derision. Milton.

DERISIVE. adj. [from deride.] Mocking; scoffing.

O'er all the dome they gruff, they feast;

Deride taunts were spread from guest to guest,

And every one addressed his mate address'd. Pope.

DERISORY. adj. [derisory, Lat.] Mocking; ridiculing.

DERIVABLE. adj. [from derive.] Attainable by right of descent or derivation.

God has declared this the eternal rule and standard of all honour derivable upon me, that those who honour him shall be honoured by him. South.

DERIVATION. n. s. [derivatio, Lat.]
1. A draining of water; a turning of its course.

When the waters began to swell, it would every day discharge itself by any descents or declivities of the ground; and these issues and derivations being once made, and supplied with new waters pushing on, they would continue their course till they arrived at the sea, just as other rivers do. Burnet.

2. [In grammar.] The tracing of a word from its original.

Your lordship here seems to dislike my taking notice that the derivatio of the word Substance favours the idea we have of it; and your lordship tells me, that if a little weight is to be given to it, it is a bare grammatical etymology. Locke.

3. The transmission of any thing from its source.

As touching traditional communication, and tradition of those truths that I call consensual and engraved, I do not doubt but many of those truths have had the help of that derivation. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

4. [In medic.] The drawing of a humour from one part of the body to another.

Derivation differs from revolution only in the measure of the distance, and the force of the medicines used: if we draw it to some very remote; or, it may be, contrary part, we call that revolution; if only to some neighbouring place, and by gentle means, we call it derivation. Il. seen.

5. The thing deduced or derived: not used.

Most of them are the genuine derivations; these hypothesis they claim to. Guizot.

DERIVATIVE. adj. [derivatives, Lat.]
Derived or taken from another.

As it is a derivative perfection, so it is a distinct kind of perfection from that which is in God. Hale.

DERIVATIVE. n. s. [from the adjective]
The thing or word derived or taken from another.

For honour, 'Tis a derivative from thee to mine,

And only that I stand for. Shaksp. The word Homestos originally and strictly signifies no more than creditable, and is but a derivative from Honor, which signifies credit or honour. South.

DERIVATIVELY. adv. [from derivatic]
In a derivative manner.

To DERIVE. v. a. [deriver, Fr. from derive, Lat.]
1. To turn the course of water from its channel.

Company lessens the shame of vice by sharing it, and abuts the torrent of a common odium by deriving it into many channels. South.

2. To deduce; as from a root, from a cause, from a principal.

They endeavour to derive the varieties of colours from the various proportion of the direct or oblique rays, or from the circular motion or motion about their own centre. Boyle.

Men derive their ideas of duration from their reflection on the train of ideas they observe to succeed one another in their own understandings. Locke.

3. To communicate to another, as from the origin and source.

Christ having Adam's nature as we have, but corrupt, imputed not nature, but corruption, and that immediately from his own person, unto all that belong unto him. Hooker.

4. To receive by transmission.

This property seems rather to have been derived from the projecting soldiers. Dryden of Piety.

'Tis the ease of these wretches, who, I am sure, could derive no sanctity to them from their own persons; yet upon this account, that they had been consecrated by the offering incense in them, by God's special command, sequestered from all common use. South.

5. To communicate to by descent of blood.

Besides the rightfulness of parts, no excellence in the position of mind is derived to your loutship from the parents of the two generations, to whom I have the honour to be known. Felton.

To derive a new name or title gradually from one place to another.

The streams of the publick justice were derived into every part of the kingdom. Daver.
DE S

The wisest princes need not think it any diminution to their greatness, or derogation to their sufficiency, to rely upon counsel. Bacon.

I was much given to derogation to Virgili, neither do I contradict any thing which I have formerly said in his just praise. Dryden.

None of those patriots will think it a derogation from their merit to have it said, that they received many lights and advantages from their intimacy with my lord Somers. Addison.

DEROGATIVE. adj. [derogatius, Lat.]

Derogating; lessening the honour of: not in use.

That spirit is corporeal, seems to me a conceit derogatory to himself; and such as he should rather labour to overthrow; yet thereby he establisheth the doctrine of instants, amulets, and charms. Brown's Fug. Errors.

DEROGATORILY, adv. [from derogatory.] In a daring manner. Diet.

DEROGATORINESS. n.s. [from derogatory.]

The act of derogating. Diet.

DEROGATORY. adj. [derogatarius, Lat.]

Detructions; that lessens the honour of: dishonourable. Brown.

They live and die in their absurdities, passing their days in perverted apprehensions and conclusions of the world, derogatory unto God, and wise and good dominion of the creation. Brown.

These deputed beings are derogatory from the wisdom and power of the Author of Nature, who doubtless can govern this machine he could create, by more direct and easy methods than employing these subservient divinities. Chalmers.

DERIVS. n.s. [de-reis, Fr.] A Turkish priest, or monk.

Esch, the name of one who Christ vouchsafed to teach, whose deires dure an impostor preaching. Suidas. The deires at first made some scruple of violating his promise to the dying bishops; but told him, at last, that he could conceal nothing from so excellent a prince. Spectator.

DESCANT. n.s. [discento, Ital.]

1. A song or tune composed in parts.

Nay, now you are too fat.

And mar the concord with too harsh a descant. Shakesp.

The wakeful nightingale.

All night long her amorous descant sung. Milton.

2. A discourse; a disputation; a disquisition brachiated out into several divisions or heads. It is commonly used as a word of censure or contempt.

Look you get a prayer-book in your hand.

And take this to derogation to the churchman, good my lord; For on that ground I'll build a holy descant. Shakesp.

Kindness would supplant our usual repinings, and severe descants upon our brethren.

Goverment of Tongue.

To DESCANT. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To sing in parts.

2. To discourse at large; to make speeches: in a sense of censure or contempt.

Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,

Have no delight to pass away the time,

Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,

And descant on mine own deformity. Shakesp. Richard III.

Com'st thou for this, vain boaster, to survey me.

To descant on my strength, and give thy verdict? Milton.

A virtuous man should be pleased to please people despising upon his actions, because when they are despised they are examined, and examined, they turn to his honour.

To DESCEND. v. n. [descendo, Lat.]

1. To go downwards; to come from a higher place to a lower; to fall; to sink.

The rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock. Matthew, vii. 25.

The brook that descended out of the mount. Deuteronomy, vi. 21.

He cleat his head with one descending blow. Dryden.

Foul with stains.

Of gushing torrent and descending rains. Addison.

O goddess! who, descending from the skies, Vouchsafed thy presence to my worshiping eyes. Pope.

2. To come down, in a popular sense, implying only an arrival at one place from another.

He shall descend into battle, and perish. 1 Samuel, xxv. 10.

3. To come suddenly or violently; to fall upon as from an eminence.

He shall descend into the sea.

His wish'd return with happy powers befriend;

And on the suitors let thy wrath descend.

Pope.

4. To go down: in a figurative sense.

He, with honest meditations fed,

Into himself descended. Milton.

5. To make an invasion.

The goddess gives th' alarm; and soon is known.

The Grecian fleet descending on the town.

Dryden.

A foreign son upon the shore descends,

Whose martial fame from pole to pole extends. Dryden.

6. To proceed as from an original; to be derived from.

Dispair descends from a mean original; the offspring of fear, impiety, and injustice.

Collar against Despair.

Collier against Despair.

Will you younger brother to my sonnet, and descend from the ancient family of the Wilmottes? Addison.

7. To fall in order of inheritance to a successor.

Should we allow that all the property, all the estate of the father ought to descend to the eldest son; yet the father's natural dominion, the paternal power, cannot descend unto him by inheritor.

Leckie.

The inheritance of both rule over men, and property in things, sprung from the same original, and were to descend by the same rules. Leckie.

Our author provides for the descending and conveyance down of Adam's monarchical power to posterity, by the inheritance of his heir, succeeding to his father's authority. Leckie.

8. To extend a discourse from general to particular considerations.

Congregations discerned the small record that was among themselves, when they descended to particulars. Decay of Poetry, To DESCEND. v. a. To walk downward upon any place.

He ended, and they both descended the hill.

Descended Adam to the bow'r, where Eve lay sleeping. Milton.

In all our journey through the Alps, as well when we climbed at as when we descended them, we had still a river running along with the road. Addison.

In the midst of this plain stands a high hill, so very steep, that there would be no mounting or descending it, were not made use of a horse commanded earth. Addison.

DESCENDING. n.s. [descendent, Lat.].

The offspring of an ancestor; he that is in the line of generation, at whatever distance.

The descendants of Neptune were planted there. Bacon.

O, true descendant of a patriot line,

Vouchsafe this picture of thy soul to see. Dryden.

He revealed his own will, and their duty, in a more ample manner than it had been declared to any of my descendants before them. Atterbury.

DESCENDENT. adj. [descendens, Lat.]

It seems to be established, that the substantive should derive the termination from the French, and the adjective from the Latin.

1. Falling; sinking; coming down; descending.

There is a regress of the sap in plants from a leaf to downwards; and this descending juice is that which principally nourishes both fruit and plant.

Hay on the Creation.

2. Proceeding from another, as an original or ancestor.

More than mortal grace.

Speaks thee descendant of eternal race. Pope.

DESCENDIBLE. adj. [from descend.] 1. Such as may be descended; such as may admit of a passage downwards.

2. Transmissible by inheritance.

According to the customs of other countries, whose honorary fees were descendible to the eldest, and not to all the males. Hale's Common Law of England.

DESCENSION. n.s. [descensio, Lat.]

1. The act of going downwards, falling, or sinking; descent.

2. A declension; a degradation.

From a god to a bull! a heavy descension.

It was Lover's case. From a Prince to a prentice! a low transformation: that shall be mine. Shakesp.

3. [In astronomy.] Right descension is the arch of the equator, which descends with the sign or star below the horizon of a direct sphere.

Oblique descension is the arch of the equator, which descends with the sign below the horizon of an oblique sphere. Ozanam.

DESCENSIONAL. adj. [from descension.]

Relating to descends.

DESCENT. n.s. [descentus, Lat. descenzte, Fr.]

1. The act of passing from a higher to a lower place.

Or descending from a mountain rent.

Tend to the earth with such a swift descent? Blackmore.

2. Progress downwards.

Observing such gradual and gentle descents downwards, in those parts of the creation that are beneath men, the rule of analogy may make it probable, that it is so also in things above. Locke.

3. Obliquity; inclination.

The heads and sources of rivers flow upon a descent, or an inclining plane, without which they could not flow at all. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

4. Lowest place.

From th' extremest upward of thy head To the descent and dust below thy feet. Shakesp.

5. Fall from a higher state; degradation.

O true descant, that I, who erst contended With gods to sit at the highest, and now constrain'd Into a beast, and mix with beastly slime.

This essence to incantate and imbibe. Milton.

6. Invasion; hostile entrance into a kingdom, or in subversion to the height of ships.

At the first descant on shore, he was not immersed with a wooden vessel, but he did content himself with a long-boat. Wotton.

The duke was cleared himself, and made that unfortunate descent upon the Isle of Rhee, which was attended with a miserable retreat, in which the flower of the army was lost. Clarendon.
2. The sentence or passage in which anything is described.
A poet must refer all tedious and unnecessary descriptions: a thing so written is too heavy, and an ornament than a burthen.

3. A lex definition.
The sort of definition, which is made up of a collection of the most remarkable parts of things, is called an imperfect definition, or a description; whereas the definition is called perfect, when it gives the essential difference, added to general nature or genus. Watts.

4. The qualities expressed in a description.
I'll pay six thousand, and defend the bond, Before a friend of this description Shall lose a hair. Shakes. Merchant of Venice.

To DESCRIVE. v. a. [describer, Fr.]
1. To give notice of any thing suddenly discovered: as, the scout descried the enemy, or gave notice of their approach. This sense is now obsolete, but gave occasion to those which are now in use.
2. To spy out; to examine at a distance.
And the house of Joseph sent to desery Bethel. Judges, i. 53.

Edmund, I think, is gone to descrie the strength of th'enemy. Shakes.
Our ambassadors, to their great charges, set forth to descrie the seas. Abbot.

3. To detect; to find out any thing concealed.
Of the king they got a sight after dinner in a gallery, and the queen was descried, as she passed by the tapestry. Roll. Ely. and now their way to earth they had descried, To Paradise first tending. Milton.

Although the motion of light be not descried, no argument can be drawn from thence to prove that light is not a body. Digby.

Th' spirit of deep prophecy she hath; What's past and what's to come she can descrie. Shak.

That planet would, unto our eyes, descriing only that part wherein the light falls, appear to be horned, as the moon seems. Rol.

And now their way to earth they had descried, To Paradise first tending. Shakes.

4. To discover; to perceive by the eye, to see any thing distant or obscure.
Thus dight, into the court he took his way; Both through the guard, which never him descried, And through the watchmen, who never spied. Shak. Falstaff.

Describing: a word which in its most beautiful and vivid significations of the thing he describes. Watts.

Watts.

3. To describe into proper heads or divisions.
Men passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book. Jos. xviii. 9.

4. To define in a lax manner by the promiscuous mention of qualities general and peculiar. See Description.

DESCRIPTION. n. s. [from describe.] He that describes, or describes.

From a plantation and colony, an island near Spain was by the Greek describ'd named Extrosa. Brown.

Describ'd. n. s. [from the verb.] A describer; a detector.

By the glimpses describ'd shall not miss
To taste the nectar of a kiss. Shakes.

DESCRIPTION. n. s. [descrip'tio, Lat.] 1. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.
DES

Tho, false guardian of a change too good. The blood of thy brother's blood. Pope.

DESiRT., n. s. [from desert.]
1. The act of forsaking or abandoning a cause or post. Every compliance that we are persuaded by one, it is contradiction to the commands of the other. This is a sin, and necessarily involves us in a description of the other. Rogers
2. [In theology.] Spiritual disdiness; a sense of the dejection of God; an opinion that grace is withdrawn. Christ bears and sympathizes with the spiritual agony of the soul under desertion, or the pleasures of some stingifying affliction. South.

DESiRTLESS. adj. [from desert.] Without merit; without claim to favour or reward.
She said she lov'd,
Loud me deserters, who with shame confess
Another flame had seiz'd upon my breast. Dryd.

To DESERVE. v. a. [deserue, Fr.] To be worthy of either good or ill. Those they honoured, as having power to work or cease, as men desired of them. Hooper.
Some of us love you well; and even those some Eury your great desertings, and good name.
Skiep.
All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes The wages of their desertings. Shakesp.
What he deserves of you and I know. Shaks.
Yet well, if here would end The misery: I desir'd it, and would bear My own desertings. Milton.
A mother cannot give him death: though he Deserves it, he deserts it from me. Dryden.
Since my Orazia's death I have not seen A beauty so deserving to be queen. Dryden.

To DESERVE. v. n. To be worthy of reward. According to the rule of natural justice, one man may merit and deserve another. South. Courts are the places where best manners flourish, Where the deserving ought to rise. Otho.
He had been a person of great desertings from the republic, was an admirable speaker, and very popular. Swift.

DESERVEDLY. adv. [from deserve.] Worthily; according to desert, whether of good or ill. For him I was not sent, nor yet to free That people victor once, now vile and base, Deservedly waste vassals. Milton.
A square desert sets himself off from the affectations of that community which he endeavours to subvert. Addison.

DESERVER. n. s. [from deserve.] A man who merits rewards. It is used, I think, only in a good sense. Their love is never link'd to the deserver, Till his deserts are past'd. Shakesp.
Heavy, with some high minds, is an over-weight of obligation; or otherwise great deserters do, perchance, grow intolerable presurers. Wotton.
Emulation will never be wanting amongst poets, when particular rewards and prizes are proposed to the best deserters. Dryden.

DESERTICANTS. n. s. [from desiccate.] Applications that dry up the flow of soroës; driers. This beginning, may be prevented by deserticants, and wasted. Worsam.

To DESICCATE. v. a. [desico, Lat.] 1. To dry up; to exhaust of moisture. In bodies desiccated by heat or rage, when the native spirit of life goes forth, and the moisture with it, the air with time geteth into the pores. Bacon.
Seminal fermentes were elevated from the sea, or some desiccated places thereof, by the heat of the sun. Holc.
2. To exhale moisture.

DES. Where there is moisture enough, or superfluous, the vine helpest to digest and dehydrate the nutrient. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

DESICCATET. n. s. [from desiccate.]
The act of making dry; the state of being dried.
If the spiritus cut off the body, there followeth desiccation, induration, and consumptio. Bacon.

DESICCATIVE. adj. [from desiccate.] That which has the power of drying.
To DESICERATE. v. a. [desidero, Lat.] To want; to miss; to desire in absence. A word scarcely used.

DESIDERATE. adj. [desidero, Lat.] Desicient; idle; lazy; hasty. Dic.

To DESIGN. v. a. [designo, Lat. desinere,] Fr.
1. To purpose; to intend any thing.
2. To form or order with a particular purpose; with for. The acts of religious worship were purposely designed for the acknowledgment of a Being, whom the most excellent creatures are bound to adore as well as we. You are not for obscurity design'd, But, like the sun, most cheer all human kind. Dryden.
3. To devote intentionally; with to. One of those places was design'd for the old man to his son. Clarendon.
He was born to the inheritance of a splendid fortune; he was design'd to the study of the law. Dryden.

To plan; to project; to form in idea. We are to observe whether the picture or outlines be well drawn, or, as more elegant artists turn it, well design'd; then, whether it be well coloured; and the two general heads. Wotton.
Thus while they speed their pace, the prince designs The new elect seat, and draws the lines. Dryden.
5. To mark out by particular tokens: little used. 'Tis not enough to make a man a subject, to convince him that there is regal power in the world; but there must be ways of designing and knowing the person to whom this regal power of right belongs. Locke.

DESIGN. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. An intention; a purpose.
2. A scheme; a plan of action. Is he a prudent man, or his temporal estate, that lays designs only for a day, without any prospect to the remaining part of his life? Tillotson.
3. A scheme formed to the detriment of another. A sedate settled design upon another man's life, put him in a state of war with him against whom he has declared such an intention. Locke.
4. The idea which an artist endeavours to execute or express. I doubt not but in the designs of several Greek medals one may often see the hand of an Apelles or Protogenes. Addison.

DESIGNABLE. adj. [designo, Lat.] Distinguishable; capable of being particularly marked out.

DES. The power of all natural agents is limited: the more we must be cautious to observe these proportions, and cannot pass over these infinite designable degrees in an instant. Digby.

DESIGNATION. n. s. [designatio, Lat.]
1. The act of pointing or marking out by some particular token.
This is a plan of the Duke of Marlborough: one kind of stuff used to fasten bands is called narce, and every body knows that narce is a name for a town. Sury.
2. Appointment; direction. William the Conqueror for the use that claim in the beginning, but mixed it with a titular pretence, granted upon the will and designation of Edward the Confessor. Bacon.

DESIGNEDLY. adv. [from design.] Purposely; intentionally; by design or purpose; not ignorantly; not inadvertently; not fortuitously.
Uses made things; that is to say, some things were made designably, and on purpose, for such an use as they serve to. May on the Creation. The next thing sometimes designably to put children in pain; but care must be taken that this be done when the child is in good humour. Locke.

DESIGNER. n. s. [from design.]
1. One that designs, intends, or purposes; a purposer.
2. A plotter; a contriver; one that lays schemes.
It has therefore always been both the rule and practice for such designers to suborn the publick interest, to countenance and cover their private. Decay of Party.

3. One that forms the idea of any thing in painting or sculpture.
There is a great affinity between designing and poetry; for the Latin poets, and the designers of the Roman medals, lived near one another, and were bred up to the same relish for wit and fancy. Addison.

DESIGNING. participial adj. [from design.] Insidious; treacherous; deceitful; fraudulently artful. They would show me poor, indelicate, and compell'd, Designing mercy, and I know not. You would not wish to think I could be bought. Southern.

DESIGNLESS. adj. [from designless.] Without intention; without design; unknown; inadvertent.

DESIGNLESSLY. adv. [from designless.] Without intention; ignorantly; inadvertently.
In this great concert of his whole creation, the designlessly contriving voices are as differing as the conditions of the respective singers. Boyle.

DESIGNMENT. n. s. [from design.]
1. A purpose and intent.
The sanctity of the Christian religion excludes fraud and falsehood from the designments and aims of its first promulgators. Decay of Pitye.
'Tis a greater credit to know the ways of captivating power must be thought, and her subservie our purposes and designments, than to have learned all theintrigues of policy. Glinsite.

2. A scheme of hostility.
News, lords: our wars are done.
The desperate temper hath so bend the Turks', That their designments halt. Shakesp.
Shakesp. She received advice both of the king's desperate estate, and of the duke's designments against her. Hayw.
DES

The good Ankara, whose paternal care
Felix's absence could no longer bear,
Deseret Ainherit in the ship's haste,
To give a glad relation of the past.
Dryden.

1. To send out of the world; to put to death.

Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despise
His knitted life.
Shakesp.

And the company shall stone them with stones,
And despise with their swords.
Ezek. xxiii. 47.

In combatt, but two of you will fall;
And we resolve we will despair you all.
Dryden.

Shake
me quickly, I may death for so;
I shall grow tender che, and wish it live.
Dryden.

3. To perform a business quickly; as, I despised my affairs, and ran hither.

Therefore commanded he his chariot-man to drive without ceasing, and to despise the journey;
the judgment of God now following him.
No sooner is one action despatch'd, which, by such a determination as the will, we are set upon, but another uneasiness is ready to set us on work.
Locke.

4. To conclude an affair with another.
What are the brothers parted?
They have despatch'd him with Pumpee; he is gone.
Shakesp.

DESPATCH. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Hasty execution; speedily performance.
Affected despatch is one of the most dangerous things to business that can be.
Bacon.

It's well you could, and your inward motions watch,
Fellows; despatch them in the right; the wiles for despatch;
Then to a woman's meaning would you look,
And read her backward.

Grinnell.
The despatch of a good office is very often as beneficial to the solicitor as the good office itself.

2. Conduct; management. Obsolete.
You shall put
This night great business into my despatch,
Which shall, to all our nights and days to come,
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdion.

3. Express; hasty messenger or message:
as despatches were sent away.

DESPATCHFUL. adj. [from despatch.]
Bent on haste; intent on speedy execution of business.

So saying, with despatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent.
Milton.

All the rest was despatch'd their sweet smile to lead
A well bell fooled from the grassy mead.
 Pope.

DESPERATE. adj. [despærátus, Lat.]

1. Without hope.
Since his exile she hath despar'd me most;
Forsaken my company, and fail'd me at
That I am desparate of obtaining her.
Shakesp.

2. Without care of safety; rash; precipi-tious; fearless of danger.

Can you think, my lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel,
Or a known friend 'gainst his height's pleasure.'
Shakesp.

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,
And live a subject?
Shakesp.

He who goes on without any care or thought of reforming, such an one we vulgarly call a desperate person, and that sure is a most damning sin.
 Hammond.

3. Irretrievable; unsurmountable; irre-coverable.
These debts may well be called desperate ones;
for a mad man owes them.
Shakesp.

In a part of Asia, the sick, when their case comes to desperate, are carried out and laid on the earth, before they are dead, and left there.
Locke.

I am a man of desperate fortunes, that is, a man whose friends are dead; for I never alined at any other fortune than in friends.
Pope to Swift.

Desp. CONSCIENCE. '666.

4. Mad; hot-brained; furious.
Were it not the part of a desperate physician to wish his friend dead, rather than to apply the best endeavours of his skill for his recovery?
Spenser's Shepherd of Ireland.

5. It is sometimes used in a sense nearly ludicrous, and only marks any bad quality predominating in a high degree.

Concluding all more desperate sorts and fools,
That durst dealt with their lives.
Pope.

DESPERATELY. adv. [from despare.]

1. Furiously; madly; without attention to safety or danger.
Your eldest daughters have foredoom'd themselves
And desparchedly are dead.
Shakesp.

There might be somewhat in it, that he would not have done, or desired undone, when he broke forth as desparately as he had before done un Civily.
Brown's Fag. Err.

2. In a great degree; violently; this sense is ludicrous.
She felt desparately in love with him, and took a voyage into Sicily in pursuit of him.
Addison.

DESPERATION. n. s. [from despare.]

Hopelessness; despair;

Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.
Shakesp.

As long as we are guilty of any past sin,
and have no promise of remission, whatever our future are, this desparation of success all our industry, and we sin on because we have sinned.
Hammond.

DESPICABLE. adj. [despîcâ bilis, Lat.]

Contemptible; vile; mean; sordid; worthless. It is applied equally to persons or things.

Our case were miserable, if that wherewith we most endear to please God were in his sight so vile and despicable as men's disdainful speech would make it.
Hooker.

Bow'd down in battle, sunk before the spears
Of despicable forces.
Milton.

All the earth I gave thee to possess and rule,
No despicable gift.
Milton.

Not less even in this despicable here.
Than when we brick with a fright,
And freeze your hearts beneath your toil zone.
Dryden.

All the quiet that could be expected from such a reign;
must be the result of absolute power on the one hand, and a despicable slavery on the other.
Addison.

When men of rank and figure pass away their lives in criminal pursuits and practices, they render themselves more vile and despicable than any ignomious man can be, whatever low station his fortune and birth have placed him in.
Addison.

We consider the great disproportion between the infinity of the reward and the despicable of our service.

Despair of any.

DESPICABLY. adv. [from despicable.]

Meanness; vilence; worthless-ness.

Despitely.

Despair.

DESPITE. n. s. [spîl.t. Dut. dépîr, Fr.]

1. Malice; anger; malignity; malicious-ness; spleen; hatred.

Then wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!
Shakesp.

With men these considerations are usually the causes of despite, disdain, or averion from others;
but with God they pass for reasons of our greater tendencys towards others.
Spratt.

2. Defiance; unbridled opposition.
The life thou gavest first, was lost for done;
Till with thy warlike sword despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.
Milton.

My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
Despite of death, that lives upon my grave,
To dark dominion's use thou shalt not have.
Shak.

Know I will serve the fair in thy despite.
Dryd.

I have not quitted yet a victors right;
I'll make you happy in your own despite.
Dryden.

Say, would the tender creature, in despite
Of heat by day, and chilling dews by night,
Her life maintain.
Blackmore.

Then, with rebel insolence, didst dare
To own and to protect that hoary ruffian;
And, in despite of thy father's justice,
To stir the factious rabble up to arms.
Rone.

3. Act of malice; act of opposition.

His punishment, eternal misery,
It would be all his solace and revenge.
As a despit done against the Most High,
There once to gain companion of his woe.
Milton.

To DESPISE. v. a. [from the noun.]
To vex; to offend; to disappoint; to give unaeasiness.

Saturn, with his wife Rea, fled by night; set-ing the town on fire, to despite Bacchus.
Raleigh.

DESPITFUL. adj. [despite and ful.] Malicious; full of spleen; full of hate; malignant; mischievous: used both of persons and things.

I, his despitful lord, sent him forth
From courtly friends with vaporous foes to live,
Where death and danger dog the heels of worth.
Shakesp.

Preserve us from the hands of our despitful and deadly enemies.

Mean while the heinous and despitful act
Of Satan, done in Paradise, was known in heav'n.
Milton.

506
DESPITEFULNESS. n. s. [from despiteful.] Malice; hatred; malignity.
Let us examine him with despitefulness and ture,
We know his meekness, and prove his patience.
Wint. ii. 19.
DESPITEOUS, adj. [from despite.] Malicious; furious. A word now out of use.
The knight of the red-cross, when he spied
Sparking so hot with rage despitious,
Can fairly touch his spear.
Fairy Queen.

DESPITEously, adv. [from despitezous.]
In a furious manner: not in use.
The mortal steel despitiously entail'd
Deep in their flesh, quite thro' the iron walls,
That a large purple stream adown their ghastly falls.

To DESPOIL, r. a. [despolio, Lat.]
1. To rob; to deprive: with of, Despoiled of warlike arms, and known shield.
To DESPOISE, v. a. [despoio, Lat.]
You are nobly born,
Despised of your honour in your life.
Shaksp. He waited not, nor was he patient,
To intercept thy way, or send thee back.
Despoil'd of honour, of faith, of bliss.
Milton. He, pale as death, and pale as the sun,
Into the sun's apartment takes his way.
Dryd. Even thy own aid,
Engage, with regimen moral prest,
Awake: this day was honour's gain'd
Despoil'd him, if thy succour opportune
Defends not the sad hour.
Philips.

2. To divest by any accident. These former stores, despoil'd of their shells,
And exposed upon the surface of the ground,
In time moulder.
Woodard.

3. Simply to strip: not in use.
A ground cap despoil'd
Of pleasant arms, and laid in easy bed.
Spens. DESPOLIATION. n. s. [From despolio, Lat.] The act of despoiling or stripping.

To DESPOND, r. a. [despondare, Lat.]
1. To despair: to lose hope; to become hopeless or desperate.
For the end of any labour in his calling,
And not to despond for any miscarriages or disappointments that were not in his own power to prevent.
There is no surer remedy for superstitions and desponding weakness, than first to govern ourselves by the best improvement of that reason which providence has given us for a guide; and then, when we have done our own parts, to commit all cheerfully for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven, with trust and resignation.
L'Estrange.
Physick is their bane:
The learned beesces in despair depart.
And shake their heads, despounding of their store.
Dryden.
Others despise their own minds, despond at the first difficulties, conclude, that making any progress in knowledge, farther than serves their ordinary business, is above their capacities.
Leete.

2. [In theology.] To lose hope of the divine mercy.
He considers what is the natural tendency of such a virtue, or such a vice: he is well apprised that the representations of sense of these things may convince the understanding, some may terrify the conscience, some may allure the sinful, and some may hold the depraved mind.

DESPONDENCY. n. s. [From despondent.] Despair; hopelessness; desperation.

DESPONDENT. adj. [desponsens, Lat.] Despairing; hopeless; without hope.

There is a great variety of apprehensions and fancies of men, in the destination and application of various matters.
Hab. 2.

To DESTINE, r. a. [destino, Lat.]
1. To doom; to devote; to appoint unalterably to any state or condition. Wherefore cease we then? Say they who counsel war: we are destitute, scattered, and destitute, whatever doing, what can we suffer more? Milton.
All after flame; before each altar lies,
Dread'd in his pious, the destin'd sacrifice.
Dryden.

2. To appoint to any use or purpose.
To fast blood strays into the immediately subordinate vessels, which are destin'd to carry humors secreted from the blood.

To devolve, to doom to punishment or misery: used absolutely.
May heaven around this destin'd head
The choicest of its curses sheet.
Prior.

4. To fix unalterably.
The internal judge's dreadful pow'r
From the dark urn shall throw thy destin'd hour.
Prior.

DESTINY. n. s. [destiné, Fr.]
1. The power that spins the life, and determines the fate, of living beings.
Then art neither by thy sire or dam:
But, like a foul unhap'ned gnatick,
Mark'd it by the destinies to be avoided.
Shaksp.

2. That which is invisible to the senses.
He said, dear daughter, right may I see
The fall of famous children born of me;
But who can turn the stream of destiny,
Or break the chain of strong necessity.
Which fast is tied to Jove's eternal seat?
Fairy Queen.

How can hearts, not be, be tried who er serve Willing or no, who will but what they must,
By destiny, and can no other choice.
Milton.
Hast thy great destiny but given thee skill
To know, as well as pow'r to act, her will.
Denham.

Chance, or forcible destiny.
Which forms in causes first whatever shall be.
Dryden.

3. Doom; condition in future time.
At the pit of Acheron
Meet me i' th' morning; either he will Come to know his destiny.
Shaksp.

DESTINATE, t. a. [destinatus, Lat.]
1. Forseen; abomined; with of.
To forsake, the true God of heaven, is to fall into all such evils upon the face of the earth, as men, either destinat of, grace divine, may commit, descried from above, may endure.
Hooker.

2. Abjunct; friendless.
He will regard the prayer of the destinat, and not despise their prayer.
Psal. cxvi. 17.

In want of.
Take the destinat way
To find the regions destinat of thee.
Dryden.
Nothing can be a greater instance of the love that God has for liberty, than such a savage mountain covered with pell and the Campania and the Tanyns, which lies in the same country, destinate of inhabitants.
Addison.

DESTINAT, n. s. [From destinat.]
Want; the state in which something is wanted: applied to persons.
That destination in food and clothing is such an impediment, an, till it be removed, nothing can be of man to redeem.
Hooker.
They which want furtherance unto knowledge, are not left in so great destination, that justly any man should think the ordinary means of their life taken from them.
Hooker.

The order of paying the debts of contract or restitution is set forth by the civil laws of a king,
In destination or want of such rules, we are to observe the necessity of the creditor, the time of
To DESTROY. v. a. [destruo, Lat. destructive, Fr.] 1. To overthrow a city; to raze a building; to ruin. The Liable consumer. To that Lord will destroy this city. Gen. xvi. 14. 2. To lay waste; to make desolate. Solomon sent his army, which burnt and de- stroyed the country villages. 3. To kill. A people great and many, and tall as the Anakims; but the Lord destroyed them before them, and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead. Deut. xii. 21. 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy. Shak. The wise Providence hath placed a certain anti- pathy between some animals and many insects, whereby they delight in their destruction, though they use them not as food; as the peacock destroys snakes and adders; the weasel, mice and rats; spiders, flies; and some sorts of flies destroy spiders. Halie. 4. To put an end to; to bring to nought. Do we not see that slothful, intemperate, and incontinent persons destroy their bodies with dis- eases, their reputations with disgrace, and their faculties with want? There be as many sovereigns as fathers: the mother too hath her title, which destroy the sovereignty of one supreme monarch. Locke. Destroyer. n. s. [from destroy.] The person that destroys or lays waste; a murderer. It is said, that Asor both founded it and ruined it: it may be understood, that Assor the founder was the son of Shecan, and Assor the destroyer was an ancient man. Ryth. Triumph, to be stild' great conquerors. Patrons of mankind, gods, and sons of gods! Destroyers righther call'd, and slayers of men. Sill. Yet, godlike too, this bright destroyer lives; At random wounds, nor knows the wound she gives. Dryden. DESTRUCTIBLE. adj. [from destruo, Lat.] Liable to destruction. DESTRUCTIBILITY. n. s. [from destructible.] Liability to destruction. DESTRUCTION. n. s. [from destructive, Lat.] The act of destroying; subversion; demolition. 2. Murder; massacre. 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy. Shak. 3. The state of being destroyed; ruin; murder suffered. If that your muddy discontented souls Do through the clouds behold this present hour, Even for revenge no murder. Shak. When that we immolate thought We saw no more destruction brought, We felt what you did then endure, And tremble yet, as not secure. Waller. 4. The cause of destruction; a destroyer; depopulator; as a consuming plague. The destruction that wasteth at noon-day. Psal. cxi. 6. 5. [In theology.] Eternal death. Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction. Mathew. DESTRUCTIVE. adj. [destructivus, low Lat.] 1. That which destroys; wasteful; caus- ing ruin and devastation; that which brings to destruction. In ports and roads remote, Destructive fires among whole fleets we send. Dryden. One may think that the continuation of existence, with a kind of resistance to any destructive force, is the continuation of solidarity. Locke. 2. Of those. He will put an end to so absurd a practice, which makes our most refined diversions destruct- tive of the public peace. Addison. Both are defects equally destructive of true reli- gion. Rogers. 3. With to. To a building, even the cavities ought not to be filled with rubbish, which is of a pernicious kind, destructive to the strength. Dryden. Excess of cold, as well as heat, pains us; be- cause it is equally destructive to that temper which is necessary to the preservation of life. Locke. DESTRUCTIVELY. adv. [from destructive.] Ruinously; maliciously; with power to destroy. What remains but to breathe out Moses's wish? O that men were not so destructively foolish! Decoy of Piety. DESTRUCTIVENESS. n. s. [from destructive.] The quality of destroying or ruining. The vice of professors exceeds the destructive- ness of the most hostile assassins, as intestine treach- ery is more ruinous than foreign violence. Halie. DESTRUCTUR. n. s. [from destroy.] Destroyer; consumer. Helmet wittily calls the fire the destructor and the artificial death of things. Boyle. DESUATION. n. s. [desuatio, Lat.] A profuse and inordinate sweating, from what cause soever. DESECT. v. a. [desecto, Lat.] Cessation to be accustomed; discontinuation of practice or habit. By the irruption of numerous armies of barbarous people, those countries were quickly fallen off, with barbarism and desecration, from their former civility and knowledge. We see in all things how desecration does con- tract and narrow our faculties, so that we can apprehend only those things wherein we are com- versant. Government of the Tongue. DE'SULTORY. adj. [desolitrus, Lat.] Moving from thing to thing; unsettled; immetho- dal; unconstant. Desolitrus is not in use. 'This not for a desolitory thought to stow for a lowl' course of life; nor for any thing but the su- perincumbency of a virtuous habit upon a vicious one, to qualify an effectual conversion. L'Etat. Let the least trifle cross his way, and his desolatory fancy presently takes the scent, leaves the unfinished and half-mangled notion, and skips away in pursuit of the new game. Noris. Take my desolatory thoughts in their native or- der, as they rise in my mind, without being re- duced to rules, and marshalled according to art. Felton on the Classics. To DE'SUME. v. a. [desume, Lat.] To take from any thing; to borrow. This while doth suppose, as pre-existent to it, the more simple matter out of which it is desume, the heat and influence of the sun, and the due preparation of the matter. They have left us relations suitable to things of Alien and Pliny, whereby they descend to their own- ers. Brown. Laws, if convenient and useful, are never the worse though they be desume and taken from the laws of other countries. Hold. DE'TACH. v. a. [detacher, Fr.] 1. To separate; to disengage; to part from something. The heat takes along with it a sort of vegetative and terrestrial matter, which it detaches from the uppermost stratum. Woodward. 2. To send out part of a greater body of men on an expedition. If ten men are in war forty, and the latter detach only an equal number to the engagement, what benefit do they receive from their sup- periority? Add. DE'TACHMENT. n. s. [from detach.] A body of troops sent out from the main army. The earl dispatched instructions to send out detachments of cavalry, to prevent the king of Sweden's joining the army. Tatler, No. 88. Besides materials, which are brute and blind, Did not this work require a knowing mind, Who for the task should fit detachments chose From all the atoms? Blackmore. To DETAIL. v. a. [detailer, Fr.] To relate particularly; to particularise; to display minutely and distinctly. They will perceive the mistakes of these philoso- phers, and be able to answer higher arguments, without my being obliged to detail them. Chomos. DETAIL. n. s. [detail, Fr.] A minute and particular account. I chose, rather than trouble the reader with a detail here, to defer them to their proper place. Woodward. I was unable to treat this part of my subject more in detail, without becoming dry and tedious. Pope. 1. To keep that which belongs to another. Detain not the wages of the hireling; for every degree of detention of it, beyond the time, is in- justice and unchristianness. Taylor. 2. To withhold; to keep back. These things sting him So venomously, that hearing these detains him. From his Cordelia, Shak. He has described the passion of Calypso, and the indecent advances she made to detain him from his country. Brooms. 3. To restrain from departure. Let us detain thee until we shall have made ready a bed. Had Orpheus sung it in the nether sphere, So much the hymn had pleased the tyrant's ear. The wife had been detain'd to keep her husband there. Dryden. 4. To hold in custody. DETAINER. n. s. [detinere, Lat.] The name of a writ for holding one in custody. DETAINER. n. s. [from detain.] He that holds back any one's right; he that detains any thing. Judge of the obligation that lies upon all sorts of injurious persons; the sacrilegious, the detainers of tithes, and cheaters of men's inheritances. Taylor. To DETECT. v. a. [detectus, Lat.] 1. To discover; to find out any crime or artifice. There's no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of time as well as a clock. Shak. Though should I hold my peace, yet thou Wouldst easily detect what I conceale. Milton. 2. To discover in general. The utmost infinite ramifications and insin- clusions of all the several sorts of vessels may easily be detected by glasses. Rob. DETECTOR. n. s. [from detect.] A dis- coveryer, one that finds out what another desires to hide. 508
Oh, heavens! that this treason were not; or not the detector.

But public is a secret instinct of its detectors, which will bring it to a test which it cannot pass.

DETECTION. n. s. [from detect.]

1. Discovery of guilt or fraud; or any other hidden thing. Should I come to her with any detection in my hand, I could drive her then from the want of her purity.

2. Discovery of any thing hidden. Not only the sea, but rivers and rains also, are instrumental to the detection of amber, and other fossils, by washing away the earth and dirt that concealed them.

DETENTION. n. s. [from detain.]

1. The act of keeping what belongs to another. How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd with claims of debt, of broken bonds, and the detection of long since debts, against my honour? Shakespeare.

2. Confinement; restraint. This is the operation of the spirits, and construction of the tangible parts. Bacon.

To DETE R. v. a. [deterre], Lat. To discourage by terror; to fright from any thing.

I never yet the tragick strain assayed, to deter'd by thy insensible guilt. Waller.

Many potent enemies tempest and detest us from our duty; yet our case is not hard, so long as we have a greater strength on our side. Tilottam. Beauty and unbecomeliness are more force to draw or deter imitation, than any discourses which can be made to them. Locke.

The ladies may not be deter'd from correspondning with me by this method. Addison.

My own face deter me from my glass; and Kneller only shews what Celia was. Prior.

To DETERGE. v. a. [detergo], Lat. To cleanse a sore; to purge any part from fecculence or obstructions. Consider the part and habit of body, and add or diminish your simples as you design to deter or incite.

Sea salt preserves bodies, through which it passeth, from corruption; and it detergeth the vessels, and keeps the fluids from putrefaction. Arbuthnot.

DERTFEN. adj. [from deterg.] That which cleanses. The food ought to be nourishing and detergent. Arbuthnot.

DERTERATION. n. s. [from deterior, Lat.] The act of making any thing worse; the state of growing worse.

DERTMENT. n. s. [from deter.] Cause of discouragement; that by which one is deterred. A good word, but not now used.

This will not be thought a discouragement unto spirits, which endeavour to advantage nature by art; nor will the ill success of some be made a sufficient determent unto others. Brown's Use, Err. These are not all the determents that oppose my obeying you. Boyce.

DETERMINABLE. adj. [from determine.] That which may be certainly decided. Whether all plants have seeds, were more easily determinable to conclude concerning harts-tongue, fern, and some others.

Brown's Use, Err. About this matter, which seems so easily determinable by sense, accurate and sober men widely disagree. Boyle.

DETERMINATE. v. a. [determiner, Fr.] To limit; to fix; to determine; to terminate; not in use. The fly-slow hours shall not determinate. Shakspeare.

DETERMINATUS, adj. [determinatus, Lat.]

1. Settled; definite; determined.

Demonstrations in numbers, if they are not more evident and exact than in extension, yet they are more general in their use, and determinate in their application. Locke. We could conclude, that all the planets move about the sun in circular orbs, there must be given to each, by a determinate impulse, those present particular decrees of velocity which the whole sum of whatsoever love is owing unto God's truth. Shakspeare.

2. Established; settled by rule; by decree.

Scriptures are read before the time of divine service, and without either choice or stint appointed by any determinate order. Hooker.

3. Decisive.

I 'll bring this of my business, ere a determinate resolution, he, I mean the bishop, did require a respite. Shakspeare.

4. Fixed; resolute.

Like men disputing in a long peace, more determinate to do, than skilful how to do. Sidney.

5. Resolved.

My determinate voyage is more extravagancy. Dertcrimination, n. s. [from determinate.]

1. Absolutely with fixed resolve. The queen obeyed the king's commandment, full of raging against us, and determinately bent that she would seek all loving means to win Luzana. Sidney.

In those errors they are so determinately settled, that the party unto which the whole sum of whatsoever love is owing unto God's truth.

2. Certainly; unchangeably.

Think thus with yourselves, that you have not the making of things true or false but that the truth and existence of things is already fixed and settled, and that the principles of religion are already either absolute or false, before you think of them. Tillotson.

DETERMINATION. n. s. [from determinate.]

1. Absolute direction to a certain end. When we voluntarily waste much of our lives, that restlessness can by no means consist with constant determinate of will or desire to the greatest apparent good. Locke.

2. The result of deliberation; combination formed; resolution taken.

They had deliberated with their determinations, which is to go home, and trouble you no more. Shakspeare. Merch. of Venice.

3. The proper acts of the intellect are deliberation, determination, and determination or decision. Hume's Origin of Mankind.

It is much disputed by divines, concerning the power of man's will to good and evil in the state of innocence; and upon very nice and dangerous precipices stand their determinations on either side.

Consult thy judgment, affections, and inclinations, and make thy determination upon every particular; and be always as suspicious of thy self as possible. Calamy.

4. Judicial decision.

He confined the knowledge of governing to justice and equity, and to the speedy determinations of civil and criminal causes. Gulliver's Travels.

DETERMINATIVE. adj. [from determinate.]

1. That which uncontrollably directs to a certain end.

That individual action, which is justly punished as sinful in us, cannot proceed from the special influence and determinative power of a great cause. Brummell against Hobbes.

2. That which makes a limitation.

If the term added to make up the complex subject be not necessarily bound to it, then it is a determinate, and limits the subject to a particular part of its extension; as, the sun must be hot. Watts.

DETERMINATOR. n. s. [from determinate.] One who determines. They have recourse unto the great determinator of vice, infelicities, and the insensible determinations of the whole body. Brown.

To DETERMINE. v. a. [determiner, Fr. determiner], Lat.

1. To fix; to settle.

Is it concluded he shall be protector? — It is determin'd, not concluded yet; but so it must be, if the king miscarry. Shakspeare.

More particularly to determine the proper season for grammar, I do not see how it can be made a study, but as an introduction to rhetoric. Locke.

2. To conclude; to fix ultimately.

Probability, in the nature of it, supposes that a thing may of necessity be so, for any thing that you shall say, or is certainly determined, on the other side. South.

Milton's subject was still greater than Homer's. Virgil's subject is greater than either; it does not deter, nor limit the number of single persons or nations, but of a whole species. Addison.

3. To bind; to confine.

The knowledge of man betherto has been determinate by the view or example, so that whatever is incommunicable, either in respect of the fineness of the body itself, or the smallness of the parts, or the subtlety of the motion, is little enquired. Bacon.

The principle individualities is existence itself, which determines a being of any sort to a particular time and place, incommunicable to two beings of the same kind. Locke.

4. To adjust; to limit; to define.

He that has settled in his mind determined ideas, which are fixed to his soul, will be able to discern their differences one from another, which is really distinguishing.

5. To influence the choice.

You have the captives who were the opposites of the day's strife; we do require them of you, so to use them as we shall find their merits and our safety may equally determine. Shakspeare.

A man may suspend the act of his choice from being determined for or against the thing proposed, till he has examined it. Locke.

As soon as the studious man's hunger and thirst makes him uneasy, he, whose will was never determined to any pursuit of good cheer, is, by the constant renovations of hunger and thirst, presently determined to eating and drinking. Locke.

6. To resolve.

Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David. 1 Sam. xx. 33.

7. To decide.

I do not ask whether bodies so exist, that the motion of one cannot be without the motion of another; to determine this either way, is to beg the question for or against a vacuum. Locke.

8. To put an end to; to destroy.

Now where is he, that will not stay so long? Titus, betherto is he determined? Shakspeare.

To DETERMINE, n. v.

1. To conclude; to form a final conclusion.

500
DET

Our love of God will inspire us with a detesta-tion for sin, which is of all things most con-try to his divine nature.

DETSTER, n. s. [from detest]. One that hates or abhors.

To DETHRONE, v. a. [detroner, Fr. de and thronus, Lat.] To divest of regality; to throw down from the throne; to deprive of regal dignity.

DETNYE, n. s. [detenue, Fr.] A writ that lies against him, who, having goods or chattels delivered him to keep, refuses to deliver them again.

DETONATION, n. s. [detoné, Lat.] Some of those things that are more formidable than the ordinary crackling of salts in calcination; as in the going off of the pulvis or aurum fulminans, or the like. It is also used for that noise which happens upon the mixture of fluids that ferment with violence, as oil of turpentine with oil of vitriol, resembling the explosion of gunpowder.

DETONIZE, v. a. [from detoné, Lat.] To calcine with detonation. A chemical term.

Nineteen parts in twenty of detoné nitre is destroyed in eighteen days. Anon, on Air.

To DETORT, v. a. [determinus, of determinan, Lat.] To wrest from the original import, meaning, or design.

They have supposed what amounts to an infelibility in the private spirit, and have detorted texts of scripture to the sedition, disturbance, and destruction of the civil government. Dryden.

To DETRACT, v. a. [detractum, Lat. detractor, Fr.]

1. To derogate; to take away by envy, calumny, or censure, any thing from the reputation of another; with from.

Those were assistants in private, but not trusted.to manage the affairs in public; for that would detract from the honour of the principal ambassador. Bacon.

No envy can detract from this; it will shine in history, dead, like swans, grow whiter the longer it endures. Dryden.

2. To take away; to withdraw.

By the largeness of the corners they bind the fold within, and likewise detract much from the view of the front without. Cotton.

The multitude of partisans does nothing from each private share, nor does the publickness of it lessen propriety in it. Boyle.

DICT.

The act of wearing away.

To DETRUDE, v. a. [detrudus, Lat.] To thrust down; to force into a lower place.

Such are are distrudus down to hell, Either for shame they still themselves retire, Or, tied in chains, they in close prison dwell.
DE

Philosophers are of opinion, that the souls of men may, for their misadventures, be detru ded into the bodies of beasts.

To bring them, for her eternal soul, wakes.

To DETRUNCATE. v. a. [detruncarre, Lat.]

To let to cut; to shorten by depravation of parts.

DETRUANCE. n. s. [from detruncate.] The act of lopping or cutting.

DETRUSION. n. s. [from detrusio, Lat.] The act of thrusting or forcing down.

From this detrusion of the waters towards the side, the parts towards the pole must be much in DETERURAT. n. s. [deturbo, Lat.] The act of throwing down; degradation.

DEVASTATION. n. s. [devasto, Lat.] Waste; havoc; desolation; destruction.

By devastation the rough warrior gains,

And farmers fatten when infamous rage.

That flood which overflowed Attica, in the days of Ogues, and that which drowned Thebes in Dedalus's time, made cruel havoc and devastation among them.

Woodward.

DEUEL. n. s. [deut, Fr.]

1. Two; a word used in games.

You are a gentleman and a gusser; then; I am sure you know how much the gross sum of devey see amounts to.

Shake.

2. The devil. See Deuse.

To DEvelop, v. a. [developer, Fr.] To disengage from something that enolds and conceals; to dissipate; to clear from its covering.

Take him to develop, if you can,

And hew the block off, and get out the man.

Devour.

DEVERGENCE. n. s. [deverygentia, Lat.] Declivity; declination.

Dict.

To DeVest, v. a. [devester, Fr. de and vestia, Lat.]

1. To strip; to deprive of clothes.

Friends all but now,

In quarter and in terms like bride and groom

Destruction threat for you! says Shake.

Then of his arms Androgens he devest,

His sword, his shield, he takes, and unplumed crests.

Note.

2. To annul; to take away any thing good.

What are those breaches of the law of nature and nations, which do fatest and devest all right and title in a nation to government?

Bacon.

3. To free from any thing bad.

Come on, then little humour of this beast,

Which for thy sake from passions I devest.

Prior.

DEVEX. adj. [devex, Lat.] Bending down; devious; incurvated downward.

DEVEXITY. n. s. [from devex.] Incuration downwards; declivity.

To DEViate, v. n. [de via devederi, Lat.]

1. To wander from the right or common way.

The rest to some faint meaning make pretence.

But Shadwell never deviates into sense.

Dryden.

Thus Peggy, in such manner to way,

May boldly deviate from the common track.

Pope.

What makes all physical and moral ill?

There nature devest, and here-wanders will.

Pepe.

Besides places which may deviater from the sense of the author, it would be kind to observe any deficiencies in the direction.

2. To go astray; to err; to sin; to offend.

DEVIATION. n. s. [from deviate.]

1. The act of quitting the right way; error; wandering.

These bodies constantly move round in the same tracks, without making the least deviation.

Uege.

2. Variation from established rule.

Having once surveyed the true and proper natural alphabet, we may easily discover the devi tions from it, in all the dialects in use, whether by defect of some characters, of letters, or by con fusion of them.

Holden.

3. Offence; obliquity of conduct.

The worthy persons, if inadvertently drawn into a devi tion, will endeavour instantly to recover their lost ground, that they may not bring error into bitter.

Chap.

4. A contrivance; a stratagem.

This is our device;

That Falsestaff at that oak shall meet with us.

Shake.

He intended it as a politick device to lessen their interest, and keep them low in the world.

Attire.

2. A design; a scheme formed; project;

speculation.

Touching the exchange of laws in practice with laws in device, which they say are better for the plate of the church, if they might take place;

the farther we examine them, the greater cause we find to conclude, although we continue the same we speak the last, or this hooker.

His devise is against Babylon, to destroy it.

Jer. li. 11.

There are many devices in a man's heart;

nevertheless the counsel of the Lord shall stand.

Prov. xix. 21.

3. The emblem on a shield; the ensign armorial of a nation or family.

Then change we shields and their devices bear;

Let every spirit supply the rest of force in war.

Dryd.

Hibernia's harp, device of her command,

And parent of her mirth, shall thereby be seen.

Prior.

They intend to let the world see what party

they are of by figures and designs upon these fans;

as the knights-emrnt man to distinguish themselves by devices on their shields.

Addison.

4. Invention; genius.

He's gentle; never schooled, and yet learned;

full of noble devices, of all sorts enchantingly beloved.

Shake.

Devilish, adj. [from devilish.] In a manner suiting the devil; diabolically.

Those trumpeters threatened them with conful alarms of damnation, if they did not venture life, fortune, and all, in that which wickedly, and visibly those impostors called the cause of God.

South.

DEVILKIN, n. s. [from devi]] A little devil. Clarissa.

DEVIOUS. adj. [devi, Fr.]

1. Out of the common track.

Greece kept behind her with the devil.

Dryd.

Through every dark and every devious way.

In this minute devious subject, I have been necessitated to explain myself in more words than seem needful.

Holden.

2. Wandering; roving; rambling.

Every muse,

And every blooming pleasure, wait without

To bless the wildly deviKinen morning walk.

Thoms.

3. Erring; going astray from rectitude.

One deviKious step, at first setting out, frequently leads a person into a wilderness of doubt and error.

Clarissa.

Some lower muse, perhaps, who lightly trends

The deviKious paths where wanton fancy leads.

Rove.

4. I uses likewise of persons.

Roving; idly vagrant; erring from the way.

To DEVISE, v. a. [deriser, Fr. as of de visare to look about.

Skinner.

1. To contrive; to form by art; to in vent; to exogitate; to strike out by thought.

Whether they, at their first coming into the land, or afterwards, by trading with other nations which had led them, learned of them of things, or de vored them among themselves, is very doubtful.

Spener's State of Ireland.

He could by his skill draw after him the weight of five thousand bushels of grain, and devise those rare engines which shot small stones at hand, but great ones afaroff.

Pesth.

Ye sons of art, one curious piece devise out of its constructor motion shall arise.

Blackmore.

2. To plan; to scheme.

Belief I form evil against you, and devise a device against you.

Jcr. xiii. 11.

To DEVISE, v. a. To consider; to contrive; to lay plans; to form schemes;

anciently of with.

Her mercy fit she freshly 'can to rear,

And did of joy and joyful devise.

Herself to cherish and her guest; to cheris举行的.

But still her safe ye seïed have the shore,

And well arrived we, let God be her protector.

Let us devise of ease and everlasting rest.

Fairy Q.

Since we are so far entered, let us pray,

A little while of these-consider, that the country is held in this wretched ease, that it cannot, as you say, be cured.

Spener's Ireland.

Devise how you'll use them of the pieces and let us two devise to bring them thither.

Shak. 511
DEVISE. n. s. [devis, a will, old Fr.]

1. The act of giving or bequeathing by will.

This word is properly attributed, in our common language, to the last will or testament in writing; and the reason is, because those that now appoint only to the devisees, by this act are distributed into many parts.

The allocation is made by devise in a last will only, and the third part of these profits is there specified.

2. Contrivance. See Device.

God hath omitted nothing needful to his purpose, nor left his intention to be accomplished by our devises.

To DEVISE. v. a. [from the noun.] To grant by will. A law term.

DEVISEE. n. s. He to whom something is bequeathed by will.

DEVISER. n. s. [from devise.] An inventor; an inventor.

Being divided from truth in themselves, they are yet further removed by avowed deception; for it is, if I say they are daily mocked into error by devisers. Brown.

The authors of useful inventions, the promoters of wholesome laws, as were the philosophers of ancient times, were honoured as the fathers and prospectors of their country.

Gree. Device.

DEVISER. n. s. He that gives by will.

See Device.

DEVITABLE. adj. [devitabilis, Lat.] Possible to be avoided; avoidable.

DEVIATION. n. s. [deviation, Lat.] The act of escaping or avoiding. Dict.

DEVOUR. v. [ruide, Fr.]

1. Empty; vacant; void.

When I awoke and found her place devoured, and sought but pressed grass where she had lain, I sorrow'd all so much as e'er I joy'd. Fairy Queen.

2. Without any thing, whether good or evil; free from; in want of.

He flung it from him, and devoured of dread upon him lightly leaped without hind. Fairy Queen.

That the soul and angels are devoured of quantity and duration, and that they have no part in this world's locality, is generally assumed.

Glaucus.

The motion of this chariot will be still as exalting as it ascends taller, till at length it will become utterly devoured of gravity, when the least strength will be able to bestow upon it a swift motion. Whole's Math. Magic.

His warlike mind, his soul devoured of fear, His high designing thoughts were fix'd there. When, by magic's glosse, ghosts are made appear. Dryden.

We sit in such a sense of sense.

Dryden.

DEVOUR. n. s. [devour, Fr.]

1. Service. A sense now not used.

To restore again the kingdom of the Mammakles, he offered them their utmost devour and serv. and knows.

2. Act of civility or obsequiousness. Gentlemen, who do not design to marry, yet pay their devoure to one particular fair. Spectator.

And so, and so, such devour to pay, she hastens her good lady to ice a-day. Pope.

To DEVOLVE. v. a. [devolare, Lat.]

1. To roll down.

Thee splendid kings he devoured his mazes, Now wanderers wild through military tract... Of life-deserted sand. Thomson.

2. To move from one hand to another.

Upon the duke of Ormond the king had wholly devoured the care and disposition of all affairs in Ireland. Temple. Because they found too much confusion in such a multitude of statesmen, they devoured their whole authority into the hands of the council of sixty. Addison.

The whole power, at home and abroad, was devoured upon that family. Swift.

The man with a warlike edge from the hills down upon the lower grounds, does not considerably raise and augment them, Woodward.

To DEVOLVE. v. n.

1. To roll down.

To fall in succession into new hands.

Supplications, for want spiritual blessings, did lose all their right to temporal, yet that forswear must devoure only to the supreme Lord. Dryden's Kings.

DEVILOU. n. s. [devolution, Lat.]

1. The act of rolling down.

The raising of new mountains, deteriorations, or the devolution of earth up upon the valleys from the hills and higher grounds, will fall under our consideration. Woodward.

2. Removal successive from hand to hand.

The jurisdiction exercised in those courts is derived from the crown of England, until the last devolution is to the king by way of appeal. Hale.

DEVORATION. n. s. [devorato, Lat.] The act of devouring.

Dict.

To DEVOR. v. a. [devoro, devorus, Lat.]

1. To dedicate; to consecrate; to appropriate by vow.

No devotus has a man that shall devot unto the Lord, of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed. Lev. xxvii. 21.

What black magician conjures up the devil, To stop devorated charitable deeds? Shaksp.

They, impious, dard to prey On heeds devour'd to the giddiest day. Pope.

2. To add; to as a sect, or study.

While we do admire This virtue and this moral discipline, Let's be no straggler, no stags, I pray; Or so devore to Aristotle's checks, As Ovid be an outright abjur'd. Shaksp.

If persons of this muke should ever devote themselves to science, they should be well assured of a solid and strong constitution of body. Watts.

3. To condemn; to resign to ill.

Aliens were devore to their rapine and despight. Dryden's Paris. Ah why, Pendlope, this woeless fear, To render sleep's soft blessings insincere!... All like devore to sorrow's dire extremes The day reflection and the midnight dream. Pope.

4. To addict; to give up to ill.

The Romans having once devor'd their senses with the pleasures of other nations, they devoured themselves unto all wickedness. Dryden.

5. To curse; to execrate; to doom to destruction.

The" Those wicked tents devoted; lest the wrath intense, raging into sudden flame, Distinguish not. To destruction sacred, and devote. He with his whole posterity must die. Milton. Goddess of mists, and conscious of our hearts, So keep us from the vengeance of thy darks Whose rapture's devoted issue felt, When, hissing through the skies, the feather'd devorus devours. Dryden. Let her, like me, of e'ry joy forlorn. Devore the hour when such a wretch was born; Like me to devour the darkness run. Rowe.

DEVOR. adj. For devoted.

How on a sudden lost, Devoc'd, devou'd, and now to death devote! Milton. DEVORENESS. n. s. [from devore.] The state of being devoted or dedicated; consecration; addictedness.

Whatever may fall from my pen to her disadvantage, relation to her but as she was, or may again be, an obstacle to your devotedness to spare this love. Boyle. The owning of one obligation unto virtue, may be styled natural religion; that is to say, a devotion unto God, so as to act according to his" one verse. Dryden.

DEVOTEE. n. s. [devot, Fr.] One erroneously or superstitiously religious; a bigot.

DEVOTION. n. s. [devotion, Fr. devotio, Lat.]

1. The state of being consecrated or dedicated.

2. Piety; acts of religion; devoutness.

Meaning her warlike brother on the seas His waving streamer to the winds displays And vows for his return with vain devotions. Dryden.

3. An act of external worship.

Religious minds are inflamed with the love of publick devotion. Hooker.

For as I passed by and beheld your devotion, I found an altar with this inscription, To the unknown God. Acts, xvii. 23.

In vain doth man the name of just expect, If his devotion he to God neglect. Denham.

4. Prayer; expiation of devotion.

An aged holy man, That day and night said his devotion, No other worldly business did apply. Dryden's Fairy Queen.

Your devotion has its opportunity; we must pray always, but chiefly at certain times. Sporrov.

5. The state of the mind under a strong sense of dependence upon God; devoutness; piety.

Grateful to acknowledge whence his good Descends, thither with heart, and voice, and eyes Directed in devotion, to adore. And worship God supreme, who made him chief Of all his works. Milton.

From the full choir when loud hosannas rise, And swell the pomp of dreadful sacrifice; Amid that scene, if some relenting eye Glance on the stone where our cold reliques lie, Devotion's self shall steal a thought from heav'n. One human tear shall drop, and be forgiv'n. Pope.

Devotion may be considered either as an exercise of publick or private prayers at set times and occasions, or as a temper of the mind, a state and disposition of the heart, which is rightly affected with such exercises. Law on Christ's Perfection.

6. An act of reverence, respect, or ceremony.

—Whither so swift and far?—Upon the like devotion as yourselves, To gratulate the gentle princes there. Shaksp.

7. Strong affection; ardent love; such as makes the lover the sole property of the person loved, Be opposite all planets of good luck To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love, Immediate devotion, holy thoughts, I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter. Milton.

He had a particular reverence for the person of the king, and the more extraordinary devotion for that of the prince, as he had had the honour to be trusted with his education. Charleson.

8. Earnestness; ardour; eagerness.

He seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposition. Shaksp.

9. Disposal; power; state of dependence on any one.

Around castle would keep that rich corner of the country at his majesty's devotion. Charleson.

DEVOTIONAL. adj. [from devotion.] Pertaining to devotion; annexed to worship; religious.

512
DEV

Not are the soberest of them so apt for that decrotical compliance and jucutre of hearts, which

I desire to bear in holy offices, to be disemmurmured with me.

The favourable opinion and good word of men comes oftentimes at a very easy rate, by a few demure looks, or some devoution postures and gri-mures.

South.

Devotionalist. n. s. [from devotion.]

A man zealous without knowledge; superstitiously devout.

To DEVOUR. v. a. [devoro, Lat.]

1. To eat up ravenously, as a wild beast or animal of prey.

We will say some evil beast hath devoured him.

Genesis.

2. To destroy or consume with rapidity and violence.

A fire devoured before them, and behind them a flame followed.

Job, i. 3.

How dire a tempest from Mycenas port'd,

Our plans, our temples, and our town devolv'd

It was the waste of war.

Dryden.

Notwithstanding that Socrates lived in the time of this devouring pestilence at Athens, he never cought the least idea of it.

Addison.

3. To swallow up; to annihilate.

He seed in swiftness to devour the way. Shak.

Such a pleasure as grows fresher upon enjoyment; and though continually fed upon, yet is never devoured.

South.

Death stalks behind thee, and every flying hour does some bone remnant of thy life devour.

Dryd.

4. To enjoy with avidity.

Loudly they look, and gaping at the sight,

Devor her o'er and o'er with vast delight.

Dryd.

Devourer. n. s. [from devour.]

A consumer; he that devours; he that preys upon.

Rome is but a wilderness of tyrants;

Tygers must prey, and Rome affords no prey

But me and mine: how happy art thou, then,

From these devourers to be banished! Shak.

Since those levitans are withdrawn, the lesser devourers supply their place; fraud succeeds to violence.

Carp and tench do best together, all other fish being devourers of their spawn.

Martiner.

Devout. adj. [devoted, Lat.]

1. Pious; religious; devoted to holy duties.

We must be constant and devout in the worship of

Our God, and ready in all acts of benevolence to our neighbour.

Rogers.

2. Filled with pious thoughts.

For this, with soul devout, he thank'd the god;

And, of success secure, return'd to his abode.

Dryd.

3. Expressive of devotion or piety.

Anon dry ground appears, and from his ark

The ancient sire descends with all his train;

Then with bended hands, and eyes devout,

Grateful to heav'n.

Milton.

Devoutly. adv. [from devout.]

Piously; with ardent devotion; religiously.

Her grace rose, and with modest pace

Came to the aia, where she knee'd; and saint like

Cast her fair eyes to heav'n, and pray'd devoutly.

One of the wise men having a white attently and devoutly viewed and contemplated this pillar and cross, fell down upon his face.

Bacon.

Her twilight were more clear than our mid-day,

She dreamt devoutlier than most use to pray.

DEW

Think, O my soul, devoutly think,

How, with allighted eyes,

Though her ravish'd heart, devoutly deep

In all its horrors rise!

To second causes we seem to trust, without expecting, so seriously as we ought to do, the dependence on the first.

Addison.

Deuse n. s. [more properly than dews,

Jones, from Denisus, the name of a certain class of evil spirits.] The devil; a ludicrous word.

'Twas the prettiest prologue, as he wrote it;

Well, the devil take me if I hadn't forgot it.

Deuterogamy. n. s. [deuterogamy and gamous.] A second marriage.

Dict.

Deuteronomy. n. s. [Deuteron and nomos.] The second book of the law; the fifth book of Moses.

Deuteroscopic. n. s. [Deuteron and skope.] The second intention; the meaning beyond the literal sense; not in use.

Not attaining the deuteroscopic, or second intention of the words, they are fain to omit their consequences, corollaries, figures, or tropologues.

Brown's Foll. Ear.

Dew. n. s. [deep, Sax. daex, Dut.]

The moisture upon the ground.

Fogs which we frequently observe after sun-setting, even in our hottest months, are nothing but a vapour consisting of water; which vapour was sent up in greater quantity all the foregoing day, than now in the evening; but the sun then being above the horizon, taking it at the surface of the earth, and rapidly mounting it up into the atmosphere, it was not discernible: the sun being now gone, the vapour stagnates at and near the earth, and saturates the air till it is so thick as to be easily visible therein; and when at length the heat there is somewhat further spent, which is usually about the middle of the night, it falls down again in a dew, alighting upon herbs and other vegetables, which it saturates, cools, and refreshes.

Yet never yet one hour in bed

Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,

But with his tins rous dreams was still awak'd.

Shak.

That churchman bears a bounteous mind, individual,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;

He's dew as ev'y where.

Shak.

As morning roses newly wash'd with dew.

Shak.

Dew and rain are but the returns of intravagant condensation.

Parson.

Now sliding streams the thirsty plants renew,

And feed their fibres with reviving dew.

Pope.

To Dew. v. a. [from the noun.] To wet

as with dew; to moisten; to bedew.

A trickling stream of balm at sovereign,

And dainty dear, which on the ground still fall,

And overflow all the fertile plain,

As it had dew'd been with timely rain.

F. Queen.

With him pour we in our country's purg

Each drop of dew.

Or so much as it needs

To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.

Shak.

Give me thy hand,

That I may dew't with my wondrous tears.

Shak.

He could discern Adam with such joy

Surcharg'd, as bad, like grief, been'd dew'd in tears,

Without the vent of words, which he breath'd.

Milton.

Palamon above the rest appears

In sable garments, dew'd with gushing tears.

Dryd.

In Gallick blood again

He dew'd his recking sword, and strowe's the ground

With headless ranks.

Phil.

Dewberry. n. s. [from dew and berry.]

Dewberries, as they stand here among the more delicate fruits, must be understood to mean bas-berries, which are also of the bramble kind.

Ham.

Feed him with apricocks and dewberries,

With purple grapes, green figs, and murrain.

Shak.

Dewbaspent. port. [dew and be-spray.] Sprinkled with dew.

This evening late, by then the cheruing flocks had taken their supper on the savoury herb

Of knot-grass dewbaspent, and were in fold,

I set me down to watch upon a bank

With ivy canopy'd, and meower

With flowing hyacinth-suckle.

Milton.

Dew-burning. adj. [from dew and burning.] The meaning of this compound is doubtful. It perhaps alludes to the sparkling of dew.

He, n w to prove his late renewed night,

High blushings his bright dew-burning blade.

Upon his crossed scalps so sore did shine,

That to the cool a yawning wound it made.

Fairy Queen.

Dew-drop. n. s. [dew and drop.] A drop of dew which sparkles at sun-rise.

I must go seek some dewdrops here,

And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

Shak.

An host

Immunable as the stars of night.

Or drops of morning, dew drops, which the sun

Incurs on every leaf, and every flower.

Milton.

Rest, sweet as dewdrops on the flow'ry lawns,

When the sky opens, and the morning Dawns!

Tich.

Dewlap. n. s. [from lapping or lick-the dew.] The flesh that hangs down from the throat of oxen.

Large roars of fat about his shoulders slung,

And from his neck the double dewlap hung.

Addison.

2. It is used in Shakespeare for a lip flaccid with age, in contempt.

And sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl,

In very likeness of a roasted crab;

And when she drinks against her lips I bob,

And on the wither'd dewlap pour the ale.

Shak.

Dewlapt. adj. [from dewlap.] Furnished with dewlaps.

Who would believe that there were mountaineers

Dewlap like bulls, whose throats had hanging at Wallets of flesh.

Shak.

The dewlap bull now chases along the plain,

While burning loret ferment in ev'y vein.

Guy.

Dew-worm. n. s. [from dew and worm.]

A worm found in dew.

For the tow, the dew worm, which some call the lob worm, and the branding, are the chief.

Ful.

Dewy. adj. [from dew.]

1. Resembling dew; partaking of dew.

From the earth a dew dist

Went up, and water'd all the ground, and each

Plant of the field.

Milton.

Where two adverse winds,

Sublime'd from dew vapours in mid sky,

Engage with horrid shock, the rutted brine

Bows stormy.

Phil.

2. Mixed with dew; roseid.

The joyous day can early appear,

And fair Aurora from her dew bed

Of aged Tithone gan herself to rear,

With rosy checks, for shame as blushing red.

Spenser.

The bee with honied thigs,

That at her flow'r doth both sing,

And the waters murmuring,

With such consort as they keep

Entice the dew feather'd sleep.

Milton.
DIA

His deye looks distill'd

Ambrosia.

Besides the sucour which cold Ancien yields,
The rocks of Hernicus and dey fields. Dryden.

DÉCENT, [Lat.] The right; not the left. A term used in heraldry.

My mother's blood runs on the dexter check, and this sinister

DÉTERIORITY, Lat. 1. Readiness of limbs; activity; readiness to attain skill; skill; expediency. 2. Readiness of contrivance; quickness of expedient; skill of management.

His wisdom, by often evading from peril, was turned rather into a dexterity to deliver himself from dangers, when they pressed him, than into a providence to prevent and remove them after off. Bacon.

They attempted to be knaves, but want dexterity and South.

The same Protestants may, by their dexterity, make themselves the national religion, and dispose the church-revenues among their pastors. Swift.

DÉTRESPUS. adj. [deterius, Lat.] 1. Expert at any manual employment; active; ready; as, a dextrous workman.

For their dexterous hands the lance could wield.

2. Expert in management; subtle; full of expedients.

They confine themselves, and are dextrous managers enough of the wares and products of that corner with which they content themselves. Locke.

DÉTRESPUS, adv. [from dexterus.] Expertly; skillfully; artfully.

The magistrate sometimes cannot do his own office dextrously, but by acting the minister. South.

But then we must be to gog the dexter, and dextrously to throw the lucky size. Dryden.

DÉTRAL. adj. [dexter, Lat.] The right; not the left.

As for any tunick or skia, which should hinder the liver from enabling the dextral parts, we must not conceive it distusseth its virtue by mere irradication, but by its veins and proper vessels.

DÉTRALITY. n. s. [from dextral.] The state of being on the right, not the left, side.

If there were a determinate prepotency in the right, and such as ariseth from a constant root in nature, we ought to expect the same in other animals, whose parts are also dextrally disposed of the dextrality.

Brown's Vulg. Err.

DIABÉTES. n. s. [αίμων.] A morbid copiousness of urine; a fatal colliquation by the urinary passages.

An increase of this affection may accompany the general colliquations; as in phlegm, hectic sweats and coughs, diabetes, and other consumptions.

Duchan's Physico-Theology.

DIABOLICAL. adj. [from diabolus, Lat.] Devilish; partaking of the qualities of the devil; impious; atrocious; nefarious; pertaining to the devil.

This, in other beasts observ'd, Doubt might beget of diabolick power. Active within, beyond the sense of brute. Milton.

D. does not the ambitious, the envious, and the revengeful man know very well, that the thirst of blood, and affection of domination by violence and oppression, is the diabolical extreime, without the laws of God and Nature? L'Estrange.

The practice of lying is a diabolical exercise, and they that use it are the devil's children. Ray.

D. must needs be ever skilful, despotic, and rage; and have so much of a diabolical nature in them, as to wish all men to share their exercise.

Attarbury.

DIACODIUM, n. s. [Διακοδήμος.] The syrop of poppies.

DIACOUSTICS. n. s. [Διακοστικά.] The doctrine of sounds.

DIADEM. n. s. [Διακομή.] A diametrical line of geometrical figures; a mathematical scheme.

Many a fair precept in poetry is like a seeming demonstration in the mathematics; very specious in the diagram, but falling in the mechanical operation. Dryden.

Why do not these persons make a diagram of these cogitative lines and angles, and demonstrate their properties of perception and appetite, as plainly as we know the other properties, of the line, triangle, and circle? Leibnitz.

DIAGRÁMÁTI. n. s. (from díagraúmati) D. Strong purgatives made with diadrymol.

All cholerick humours ought to be evacuated by diaphragmata, mixed with tamar, or some acid, or rhubarb powder.

DIAL. n. s. [dia, Skinner.] A plate marked with lines, where a hand or shadow shows the hour.

O, gentlemen, the time of life is short:

To spend that shortness basely too long, though life did work at an easy point.

Still ending at th' arrival of an hour. Shakes, Henry IV.

If the motion be very slow, we perceiue it not: we have no idea of the diaphragm in parts of plant or of animals; and the skly shadow steals away upon the dial, and the quickest eye can discover no more than that it is gone. Givernou, Diastol.

DIAL-PLATE. n. s. [dial and plate.] That on which hours or lines are marked.

Strabo tells us that the two friends, being each of them possessed of a magnetic needle, made a kind of dial plate, inscribing it with the latitude and twenty letters, in the same manner as the hours of the day are marked upon the ordinary dial plate. Stadilius's Spectator.

DIALECT. n. s. [dialect.] 1. The subdivision of a language; as the Attic, Doric, Ionie, &c., dialects.

2. Style; manner of expression.

When themselves do practice that whereby they write, they change their dialect; and those words they shew, as if there were in them some secret sense. Hooker.

3. Language; speech.

In her youth There is a proue and speechlie dialect, Such as moves none. Shakes, Meas. for Meas.

If the confering of a kindness did not blind the person upon whom it was conferred to the return of gratitude, why, in the universal dialect of the world, are kindnesses still called obligations? South.

DIALECTICAL. adj. [from dialect.] Logical; argumentative.

These dialectical subtleties, that the schoolmen employ about physiological mysteries, more declare the wit of him that uses them, than increase the knowledge of solers of tractions of the planet. Bacon.

DIALECTICK. n. s. [Διαλεκτικ.] Logick; the art of reasoning.

DIALLING. n. s. [dia] The scierterick science; the knowledge of shadow; the art of constructing dials on which the shadow may show the hour.

DIALIST. n. s. [from dial.] A constructor of dials.

Scientiick diallats, by the geometrick consideration of lines, have found out rules to mark out the irregular motion of the shadow in all latitudes, and on all places.
DIALOGIST. n. s. [from dialogue.] A speaker in a dialogue or conference; a writer of dialogues.

DIALOGUE. u. s. [dial'og.] A conference; a conversation between two or more, either real or feigned.

Will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and eagle?
Oh, the impudence of this wicked soul! Lasci-uous dialogues are innocent with you.

In easy dialogues is Fletcher's praise; he now'd the mind, but had not pow'r to raise.

To DIALOGUE, n. o. [from the noun.]
To discourse with another; to confer.

Dial'ogy, n. s. [dial'og-i.] The figure in rhetoric by which syllables or words are divided.

DIA'meter, n. s. [dia'met'er.] The line which, passing through the centre of a circle, or other curvilinear figure, divides it into equal parts.

The sun, moon, and earth, according to Ptolemy, is seventeen times the diameter of the earth, which makes, in a gross account, about one hundred and twenty thousand miles.

The bay of Naples is the most delightful one that I ever saw; it lies almost a round figure of about thirty miles in the diameter.

Addition on Italy.

DIA'metrical adj. [from diameter.] Describing the diameter; relating to the diameter.

DIA'met'ri
c, ade. [from diametrical.] According to the direction of a diameter; in direct opposition.

Christian piety is, beyond all other things, diometrical to profanities and impurity of actions.

Hammond.

DIA'metrical adj. [from diameter.] 1.
Describing a diameter. 2. Observing the direction of a diameter.

The sin of calumny is set in a most diametrical opposition to the opinions of our neighbours as ourselves. Cow of the Tongue.

DIA'metrical adj. [from diametrical.] In a diametrical direction.

He persuaded the king to consent to what was diametrical against his conscience and his honour, and, in truth, his security. Clavendor.

Thus intercepted in its passage, the vapour, which cannot penetrate the stratum diametrically, glides along the lower surface of it, percuting the horizontal interval, which is bestowed the said dime stratum and that which lies underneath it.

Diana, n. s. [diamant, Fr. adamas, Lat.]
The diamond, the most valuable and hardest of all the gems, is, when pure, perfectly clear and pellicial as the best water; and it is continually distinguished from all other substances by its vi-sid splendour, and the brightness of its reflections. It is extremely various in shape and size, being found in the greatest quantity very small, and the larger ones extremely seldom met with. The largest ever known is that in the possession of the Great Mogul, which weighs two hundred and seventy-nine carats, and is computed to be worth seven hundred and twenty-nine thousand and forty-four pounds. The diamond bears the force of the strongest fires, except the concentrated red rays, without hurt; and even that infinitely fiercest of all fires does it no injury unless directed to its weaker parts. It bears a glass house fire for many days, and if taken carefully out, and suffered to cool by degrees, is found as bright and beautiful as before; but if taken hastily out, it will sometimes crack, and even split into two or three pieces. The places where we have diamonds are the East Indies and the Bra-zils; and though they are usually found clear and colourless, yet they are sometimes slightly tinged with the colours of the other gems, by the mixture of some metallic particles.

Diamonds chiefly resemble the forcible bending of a spring, and the diastole its lying out again to its natural state. Ray on the Creation.

2. To draw flowers upon clothes.

If you diaper upon folds, let your work be broken, and taken, as it were, by the half; for reason cells will make you that your fold must cure sometime unseen.
A sort of edifice, where the pillars stand at such a distance from one another, that three diameters of their thickness are allowed for intercolumniation. Harris.

Prior.

An interval in music, composed of one greater tone, one lesser, and one greater semitone; its proportion being as four to three. It is called, in musical composition, a perfect fourth. Harris.

The ordinary sort of music which proceeds by different tones, either in ascending or descending. It contains only the two greater and lesser tones, and the greater semi-tone. Harris.

Tone. [of dia and ζύγω.] In the ancient Greek music, disjoined two fourths, one on each side of it; and which, being joined to either, made a fifth. This is, in our music, from A to B. They allowed to this diazōtik ton, which is our modern term of music, nine, to eight, being the unalterable difference of the fifth and fourth.

Harris.

Diph., n.s. [from diphel, Del. a sharp point, Skinner; from dapple, Junius.] A small spade; a pointed instrument with which the gardeners make holes for planting.

Dyke. [By line and by level trim garden is made.]

Dyestone. n.s. A little stone which children throw at another stone. I have seen little girls exercise whole hours together, and take abundance of pains, to be expert at ditelates.

Harris.

Dictatory, n.s. [diectiturs, Lat.] Pertness; sauciness. Dict.

Diece. n.s. The plural of die. See Die.

It is above a hundred to one against any particular throw, that you do not cast any given set of faces with four critical dice, because there are so many combinations of the six faces of four dice; nor, after you have cast all the trials but one, is it still as much odds at the last remaining time, as it was at the first. "Lutley.

To Dicke. n.u. [from the noun.] To game with dice.

I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be, virtuous enough; a more little; diced not above seven times a week. Shakesp. Hen. IV.

Diece-box. n.s. [diece and box.] The box from which the dice are thrown.

What would you say, should you see the sparkler shaking her elbow for a whole night together, and thumping the table with a dice-box? Addis. Guard.

Diccer, n.s. [from dice.] A player at dice; a gamester.

They commonly make marriage vows as false as dice's oaths. Shakesp. Hamlet.

Dich. This word seems corrupted from dit for do it.

Dichotomy, n.s. [dichotomia.] Distribution of ideas by pairs.

Some persons have disturbed the order of nature, and abused their rulers by an affectation of dichotomies, trichotomies, sevens, twelves, &c. Let the nature of the subject, considered together with the design which you have in view, always determine the number of parts into which you divide it.

Dickens. A kind of adverbial exclamation, importing, it seems, much the same with the devil; but I know not whence derived.

Where had you this pretty weathercock?—I cannot tell the name of this old man: is my husband his ? St. Merry Wives of Windsor.

What a devil's does he mean by a trivial sum?—But isn't you found it, Sir? Congy. Old Bock.

To Dictate. v.a. [diecto, Lat.] To deliver to another with authority; to declare with confidence.

The speake of elphants the roofs inflas, And studded amber Dutch a golden ray; Such, and not nobler, in the realms above. My wonder dictates is the dome of Jove. Pope's Od.

Whatever is dictated to us by God himself, or by men who are divinely inspired, must be believed with full assurance. Watts.

Dictate. n.s. [dictatum, Lat.] Rule or maxim delivered with authority; prescription; precept.

These right helps of art, which will scarce be heard by those who sincerely confine themselves to the dictates of others. Locke.

I credit what the Grecian dictates say, and Samian sounds over Scota's hills convey.

Then let this dictate of my love prevail. Prior.

Dictation. n.s. [from dictate.] The act or practice of dictating or prescribing. Dict.

Dicator, n.s. [Lat.]

1. A magistrate of Rome made in times of exigence and distress, and invested with absolute authority.

Kind dictators made, when they came home, Their vanquish'd foes free citizens of Rome. Weller.

Julius with honour tam'd Rome's foreign foes; But patriots fell, ere the dictator rose. Prior.

2. One invested with absolute authority.

Unanimous they all commit the care And management of this main enterprise To him, their great dictator. Milton.

3. One whose credit or authority enables him to direct the conduct or opinion of others.

Nor is it a small power it gives one man over another, to have the authority to be the dictator of principles, and teacher of unquestionable truths. Locke.

That riches, honours, and outward splendor, should set up persons for dictators to all the rest of mankind, is a most monstrous invasion of the right of our understanding. Watts.

Dictatorial, adj. [from dictator.] Authoritative; confident; dogmatical; overbearing.

A young academick often dwells upon a journal, or an observer that treats of trade and productions in a dictatorial style, and is lavish in the praise of the author. Watts.

Dictatorship. n.s. [from dictator.]

1. The office of dictator. This is that splendid title they confer under the prince, being indeed a kind of dictatorship. Watts.

2. Authority; insolent confidence.

This is that perpetual dictatorship which is exercised by Lucræus, though often in the wrong. Dryden.

Dictature. n.s. [dictatura, Lat.] The office of a dictator; dictatorship. Dict.

Diction. n.s. [diction, Fr. dictio, Lat.] Style; language; expression.

There appears in every part of his diction, or expression, a kind of noble and bold purity. Dryden.

Dictionary. n.s. [dictionarium, Lat.] A book containing the words of any language in alphabetical order, with explanations of their meaning; a lexicon; a vocabulary; a word-book.

Some have delivered the polity of spirits, and left an account of charms in all their names and spells, and conjurations; that they are afraid of letters and characters, notes and dashes, which, set together, do act upon and seduce; and not only in the dictionary of man, but in the subter vocabulary of Satan. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Is it such a fault to translate amslers images? I see what a good thing it is to have a good cathedal dictionary. Stillingfleet.

An army, or a parliament, is a collection of men; a dictionary, or nomenclature, is a collection of words. Watts.

Did, of do. [bib, Sax.]

1. The preterite of do.

Thou cannot say I did it. Shakesp.

What did that greatness in a woman's mind? Ill guard'd, and weak to act what it design'd. Dryden.

2. The sign of the preter-imperfect tense, or perfect.

When did his pen on learning fix a brand, Or fail at arts he did not understand? Dryden.

3. It is sometimes used emphatically; as, I did really love him.

Didactic. adj. [didas'lick.] Preceptive; didactic; giving precepts in some art.

I found it necessary to form some story, and give a close view to the people that would be of that species it may be comprehended, whether didactick or heroic, I leave to the judgment of the critics. Prior.

To Dider. v.a. [did'ær, Teut. zittern, Germ.] To quake with cold; to shiver.

A provincial word. Skinner.

Didst. The second person of the preter tense of do. See Did.

Oh last, and best of Scots who didst maintain Thy country's freedom from a foreign reign. Dryden.

Dieduction, n.s. [dideuction, Lat.] Separation by withdrawing one part from the other.

He ought to shew what kind of strings they are, though strongly fastened to the inside of the receiver and spacers of the bladder, must draw as forcibly one as another, in comparison of those that within the bladder draw so as to hinder the distension of its sides. Boyle.

To Dief. v.a. [deëg, Sax, a colour.] To tinge; to colour; to stain.

So much of death her thoughts Had entertain'd, as did her cheeks with pale. Milton.

All white, a virgin sain she sought the skies; For marriage, though it suffers not, it dies. Dryden.

Die. n.s. [from the verb.] Colour; tincture; stain; hue acquired.
DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.

DIE

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

11. To vanish.

12. [In the style of lovers.] To languish with affection.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

15. To perish by violence or disease.

16. To perish by an instrument of death.

17. To perish by a disease.

18. For commonly before a private, and of before a positive case; these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

19. To be lost; to perish; to come to nothing.

20. To sink; to faint.

21. [In theology.] To perish everlastingly.
If the pipe be a little wet on the inside, it will make a different sound from the same pipe dry.

Thy prejudices, Sphyxus, won't discern
What virtues grow from ignorance and choice.
Nor how the hero differs from the brute, Adda Cato
The several parts of the same animal differ in their qualities.
Bacon.

2. To contend; to be at variance.
A man of judgment shall sometimes hear ignorant men differ, and know well within himself that those which so differ mean one thing, and yet they themselves never agree.
Bacon.

We'll never differ with a crowed pit.
Rove.

3. To be of a contrary opinion. In things purely speculative, as these are, and no ingredients of our faith, it is free to differ from one another in our opinions and sentiments.
Burnet's Theory.

There are certain measures to be kept, which may leave a tendency rather to gain than to irritate those who differ with you in their sentiments.
Addison's Freeholder.

Others differ with me about the truth and reality of these speculations.
Cheyne.

DIFFERENCE. n. s. [differentia, Lat.]

1. State of being distinct from something; contrariety to identity.
Where the faith of the holy church is one, a difference between customs of the church doth no harm.

2. The quality by which one differs from another.
This nobility, or difference from the vulgar, was not in the beginning given to the succession of blood, but to the succession of virtue.
Ralph.

Thus, born alike, from virtue first began;
The difference that distinguish'd man from man:
He claim'd no title from decent of blood;
But, that which made him noble, made him good.
Dryden.

Though it be useful to discern every variety that is to be found in nature, yet it is not convenient to consider every difference that is in things, and divide them into distinct classes under every such difference.
Locke.

3. The disproportion between one thing and another, caused by the qualities of each.
You shall see great difference between our Babylon and your Sicilia.
Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.

Oh the strange difference of man and man!
To the same body they set the care due;
My soul usurps my body.
Shakespeare. K. Lear.

Here might be seen a great difference between men practised to fight, and men accustomed only to spoil.
Hawarden.

4. Dispute; debate; quarrel; controversy.
What was the difference?
Shakspeare. Cymbeline.

He was weary of his life, that hath a difference with any of them, and will walk abroad after daylight.
Sandy.

Nothing could have fallen out more unluckily than that there should be such differences among them about that which they pretend to be the only means of ending differences.
Tilottam.

5. Distinction.
Our constitution does not only make a difference between the guilty and the innocent, but, even among the guilty, between such as the most or less criminal.
Addison's Freeholder.

6. Point in question; ground of controversy.
Are you acquainted with the difference?
That holds this present question in the court?
Shakespeare.

7. A logical distinction.
Some are never without a difference; and commonly, the most amusing men with a subtility, blubber the matter.
Bacon.

8. Evidences of distinction; differential marks.
Henry had the title of sovereign, yet did not put those things in execution which are the true marks and differences of sovereignty.
Bacon.

This is notoriously known in some differences of brake or fern.

To Difference. p. a. [from the noun.]
To cause a difference; to make one thing not the same as another.

Holder.

Grass differenteth a civil and well cultivated region from a barren and desolate wilderness. Bay.

We see nothing that differences the courage of Menestheus from that of Seriphus.
 Pope's Fancy on Homers.

DIFFERENT. adj. [from differ.]

1. Distinct; not the same.
There are covered galleries that lead from the palace to five different churches.
Addison on Italy.

2. Of contrary qualities.
The Britons change
Sweet native home for unaccustom'd air.
And other climes, where different food and soil
Portend different air.
Philostr. Imag.

3. Unlike; dissimilar.
Neither the shape of faces, nor age, nor the colour, ought to be alike in all figures, any more than the hair; because men are as different from each other, as the regions in which they are born are different.
Dryden's Fugitive.

Happiness consists in things which produce pleasure, and in the absence of those which cause any pain; now these, to different men, are very different things.
Locke.

DIFFERENTIAL. Method, is applied to the doctrine of infinitesimals, or infinitely small quantities, called the arithmetick of fluxions. It consists in descending from whole quantities to their infinitely small differences, and comparing together these infinitely small differences, of what kind soever they be; and from thence it takes the name of the differential calculus, or analysis of infinitesimal quantities.
Harris.

DIFFERENTIALLY. adv. [from different.]
In a different manner.

He may consider how different he is affected by the same thought, which presents itself in great variety, from the time he first finds it delivered by an ordinary genius.
Addison.

DIFFERENTIALLY. adv. [from different.]
In a different manner.
Such protestant and concave parts of a surface may remit the light so differently, as to vary a colour.
Boyle.

DIFFICIL. adj. [difficilis, Lat.]

1. Difficult; hard; not easy; not obvious.
Little used.
That which should give motion to an unwieldy bulk, which itself hath neither bulk nor motion, is of as difficult apprehension as any mystery in nature.

Latin was not more difficult.

To a blackbird's whistle. Hudsons.

2. Scrupulous; hard to be persuaded.
The cardinal finding the pope difficult in granting the dispensation to some particular person, took it as a principal argument, concerning the king's merit, that he had touched none of those deniers which had been levied by the pope.

DIFFICILESS. n. s. [from difficult.]
Difficulty to be persuaded; incompleteness; impracticability. A word not in use, but proper.

DIF}

There be that in their nature do not affect the good of others; the lighter sort of maliglity turns hands and differences, or fraudfulness, or spitefulness, or difficulties, or rudeness; but the deeper sort, to envy and mere mischief.
Bacon.

DIFFICULT. adj. [difficilis, Lat.]

1. Hard; not easy; not facili.
It is difficult in the event of this people.
Zachar.

2. Troublesome; vexations.

3. Hard to please; peevish; morose.
DIFFICULTY. adv. [from difficult.] Hardly; with difficulty.

A man, who has always indulged himself in the full enjoyment of his station, will difficulty be persuaded to think any methods unjust that offer to continue it.
Rogers's Sermon.

DIFFICULTY. n. s. [from difficult; difficulté, Fr.]

1. Hardiness; contrariety to easiness or facility.
The religion which, by this covenant, we engage ourselves to observe, is a work of labour and difficulty; a service that requires our greatest care and attention.

2. That which is hard to accomplish; that which is not easy.
They mistake difficulties for impossibilities: a pernicious mistake certainly; and the more pernicious, for that all men and mankind convinced of it.

All their convictions do them no good.

3. Distress; opposition.
Thus, by degrees, he rose to Jove's imperial seat.
Thus difliculties prove a soul legitimately great.
Dryden.

4. Perplexity in affairs; uneasiness of circumstances.
They lie under some difficulties by reason of the emperor's displeasure, who has forbidden their manufacture.
Addison on Italy.

5. Objection; cavil.

6. Doubt; want of confidence in ourselves.
If the evidence of its being, or that this is its true sense, be only on probable proofs, our assent can reach no higher than an assurance or difficulty arising from the more or less apparent probability of the proofs.

Be silent always when you doubt your sense;
And speak, though sure, with seeming difficulties.

Pope.

Whatever atheists think on, or whatsoever they look on, all do administer some reasons for suspicion and difficulty, lest possibly they may be in the wrong; and then it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Bentley.

DIFFIDENT. adj. [from difficult.]

1. Distrustful; doubting others.
Be not diffident.

Of wisdom; she deserts thee not, if thou
Dismissest her, when most thou need'st her right.

2. Doubtful of an event, used of things; uncertain.

518
DIFF

I was really so diffident of it, as to let it lie by me these two years, just as you now see it.

Page.

3. Doubtful of himself; not confident.

I am not so confident of my own sufficiency, as not willingly to admit the counsel of others; but yet I am not so diffident of myself, as brutishly to submit to every man's dictates.

King Charles. Distress makes the humble heart diffident.

Clarissa.

To DIFFYND. v. a. [diffindo, Lat.] To cleave in two; to split. Dict.

DIFFUSION. n. s. [diffusio, Lat.] The act of spreading or splitting. Dict.

DIFFUSION. n. s. [diffusio, Lat.] The act of scattering with a blast of wind. Dict.

DIFFUSIBILITY. 1. n. s. [from diffuso, Lat.] The quality of falling away on all sides; the effect of fluidity; the contrary to consistency.

Ice is water congealed by the rigidity of the air, whereby it acquired no new form, but rather a consistence or determination of its diffusibility; and without it there is the same condition of the air as in a body of liquid.

DIFFUSIBILITY. 2. n. s. [from diffuso, Lat.] Flowing every way; not consistent; not fixed.

DIFFUSE. adj. [from forma, Lat.] Contrary to uniformity; having parts of different structure; dissimilar; unlike; irregular; as, a diffuse flower, one of which the leaves are unlike each other. The unequal additions of diffuse rays proceed from any constant irregularities; such as are veins, an uneven polish, or fortuitous position of the pores of glass.

DIFFUSEMENT. n. s. [from diffuso, Lat.] The act of taking away the privileges of a city.

To DIFFUSE. v. a. [diffusus, Lat.]

1. To pour out upon a plane, so that the liquor may run every way; to pour without particular direction.

When these waters began to rise at first, long before they could swell to the height of the mountains, they would diffuse themselves everywhere.

Burnet’s Theory.

2. To spread; to scatter; to disperse.

Wisdom had ordained it Good out of evil to create; instead of its misgiving, a better race to bring into their own world, and worthily use his good to worlds, and ages, infinite. Milton. No sect wants its apostles to propagate and diffuse it.

Devyng of Pity. A chief renown’d in war, whose race shall bear aloft the Latin name, and through the conquer’d world diffuse our fame. Dryden.

His eyes diffus’d a venerable grace, and charity itself was in his face. Dryden’s Good Parson.

DIFFUSE’SE. adj. [diffusus, Lat.]

1. Scattered; widely spread.

2. Copious; not concise.

DIFFUSED. participial adj. [from diffuso, Lat.] This word seems to have signified, in Shakespeare’s time, the same as wild, uncouth, irregular.

Let them from forth a swift pur rush at once.

With some diffuse song, Shah, M. W. of Windsor.

To swarming and stern looks, diffuse’d attire.

And every thing that seems unnatural.

Shakespeare. Henry V.

DIFFUSELY. adv. [from diffuso, Lat.]

1. Widely; extensively.

DIFFUSION. n. s. [from diffuso.

1. The state of being diffuse; dispersion.

DIFFUSELY. adv. [from diffuso.

2. Copiously; not concisely.

DIFFUSION. n. s. [from diffuso.

1. Dispersion; the state of being scattered every way.

Whereas all bodies act either by communication of their natures, or by the impressions and signatures of their motions, the diffusion of species visible seemeth to partake more of the former operation, and the species audible of the latter. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

A sheet of very well stuck marble paper did not cast distinct colours upon the wall, nor throw its light with any equal diffusion; but throw its beams, sustained and bright, to this and that part of the wall.

Ray on Colours.

2. Copiousness; excess of style.

DIFFUSIVE. adj. [from diffuso.

1. Having the quality of scattering any thing every way.

Diffusive of themselves, where’er they pass. They make that warmth in others they expect. Their valour works like savages, and does its image on their own projects. Dryden.

2. Scattered; dispersed; having the quality of suffering diffusion.

All liquid bodies are diffuse; for their parts, being in motion, have no connexion, but glide and fall off every way. Burnet’s Theory of the Earth.

No man is so general and diffuse a lust, as to prosecute his amours all over the world. South.

The stars, no longer overlaid with weight, Evert their heads from underneath the mass, And upward shoot, and kindle as they pass, And with diffuse fire adorn their heavenly spheres. Pope.

Cherish’d with hope, and fed with joy, it grows: Its cheerful buds their opening bloom disclose, And round the happy soil diffuse about their power. Prior.

3. Extended.

They are not agreed among themselves where illudility is seated, whether in the paper alone, or a council alone, or in both together; or in the diffuse body of Christians. Tilson.

DIFFUSIVELY. adv. [from diffuso.

1. Extension; dispersion; the power of diffusing; the state of being diffused.

2. Want of conciseness; large compass of expression.

The facts I find with a modern legend is its diffusion: you have sometimes the whole side of a medal over-run with it. Addis. on Med. Eye.

To DIG. v. a. preter, dug, or digged; part. pass. dug, or digged. [B. Sax. a ditch; digg, Dan. to dig.]

1. To pierce with a spade.

They said we were very me, two of man, dig now in the wall; and when I had digged in the wall, I beheld a door. Ezek.

2. To form by digging.

Seek with heart and mouth to build up the walls of Jerusalem, which you have broken down; and to fill up the minas that you have digged, by craft and subtilty, to overthrow the same. Illegit.

To DIG. v. n. To work with a spade; to work in making holes, or turning the ground.

They long for death, but it cometh not: and digg’d it over more than for his treasures in hell. Matt. 6.

The Italiens have often dug into lands, described in old authors as the places where statues or obelisks stood, and seldom failed of success. Addison’s Treat.

To DIG up. v. a. To throw up that which is covered with earth.

If I dig’d up the forefathers graves, And lading them on colins up in chains, It would not shake mine ire. Shakespeare.

DIGAMY. n. s. [dyasia.] Second marriage; marriage to a second wife after the death of the first: as bigamy, having two wives at once.

Dr. Champaigne only proves, that archbishop Cranmer was twice married, which is not denied; but brings nothing to prove that such bigamy, or digamy rather, deprives a bishop of the lawful use of his power of ordaining. Bishop’s Excess.

DIGERENT. adj. [digerens, Lat.] That which has the power of digesting, or causing digestion.

DIGEST. n. s. [digesta, Lat.] The sumpt of the civil law, containing the opinions of the ancient lawyers.

I had a purpose to make a particular digest, or recompense to the laws of nine own nation. Bacon.

Laws in the digest show that the Romans applied themselves to trade. Archibald on Com.

To DIGEST. v. a. [digerro, digestum, Lat.]

1. To distribute into various classes or repositories; to range or dispose methodically.

2. To concoct in the stomach, so as that the various particles of food may be applied to their proper use.

If little faults, proceeding on discontent, Shall not be wink’d at, how shall we stretch ear way? When capital crimes chew’d, swallow’d and digested.

Appear to the ear. Shakespeare. Henry V.

Each then has organs to digest his food; one to beget, and one receive, the brood. Prior.

3. To soften by heat, as in a boiler, or in a dunghill: a chemical term.

Be first to friends, with sense refresh’d. Learning digested well. Thomson.
DIG

5. To reduce to any plan, scheme, or method.

Our play
Leaps over the vaunt and firstlings of those broils, "Ginning 't' the middle: stirring thence away.
To what a great point a play does grow! Shaksp.
6. To receive without loathing or repugnance; not to reject.

First, let us go to dinner.
— Nay, let me pray you while I have a stomach.
— No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk.
Then, however thou speakest, in unkind things,
I shall digest it. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.
The pulse of philosophers is, that rudeness and barbarism might the better taste and digest the lessons of civility. Peacham.
7. To receive and enjoy.

Cornwall and Albany.
With my two daughters dawers, digest the third. Shaksp.
8. [In chirurgery] To dispose a wound to generate pus in order to a cure.
To DIGEST, r. n. To generate matter, as a wound, and tend to a cure.
DIGESTER, n. s. [from digest.] 1. He that digests or disposes.
2. He that digests or concocts his food.
People that are bilious and fat, rather than lean, are great eaters and ill digesters. Arbuthnot.
3. A strong vessel or engine, contrived by M. Papin, wherein he boil'd, with very strong and billious substances, so as to reduce them into a fluid state. Quincy.
That which causes or strengthens the concoctive power.
Rice is of excellent use for all illnesses of the stomach, a great restorer of health, and a great digestor. Temple.
DIGESTIBLE, adj. [from digest.] That which is capable of being digested or concocted in the stomach.
Those medicines that purge by stool are, at the first, not digestible by the stomach, and therefore more immediately downwards to the grate.
Bacon's Nat. History.
DIGESTION, n. s. [from digest.]
1. The act of digestion or concocting food in the stomach.
Now good digestion wait on appetite.
And health on both. Shaksp. Macbeth.
Digestion is a fermentation begun, because there are all the requisites of such a fermentation;
heat, air, moisture, and as it is not a complete fermentation, because that requires a greater time than the continuance of the aliment in the stomach; vegetable putrefaction resembles very much animal digestion. Arbuthnot on Aliments.
Quantity of food cannot be determined by measures and weights, or any general measure; but must vary with the vigour of weeks, or of digestion of the stomach, and the use or disuse of air or of exercise, with the changes of appetite; and then,
by what every man may find or suspect of the present strength or weakness of digestion. Temple.
Every morsel to a satisfied hunger, is only a new labour to a tired digestion. Shaksp.
2. The preparation of matter by a chemical heat.
We conceive, indeed, that a perfect good concoction, or digestion, or maturation of some metals, will produce gold. Bacon's Nat. History.
Did chemick chance the fences prepare,
Raise all the labour-houses of the air,
And lay streights' cross-breeds? Blackmore.
3. Reduction to a plan; the act of methodising;
the maturation of a design.
The digestion of the councils in Sweden is made in senate, consisting of forty counsellors, who are generally the principal barons.
4. The act of disposing a wound to generate matter.
5. The disposition of a wound or sore to generate matter.
The first stage of healing, or the discharge of matter, is by surgeons called digestion.
DIGESTIVE. adj. [from digest.] 1. Having the power to cause digestion, or to strengthen the stomach.
A chafactory menstruum, or a digestive preparation, drawn from species or individuals, whose stomachs peculiarly dissolve insipid bodies.
Brown's Vulg. Errors.
2. Capable by heat to soften and subdue.
The earth and sun were in that very state; the one active, piercing, and digesting, by its heat;
the other passive, receptive, and stored with materials for such a production. Hole.
3. Methodizing; adjusting.
To business, ripen'd by digestious thought,
This future rule is into method brought. Dryden.
DIGESTIVE, n. s. [from digest.] An application which disposes a wound to generate matter.
I dressed it with digestia. Wm. on Abscession,
DIGESTURE, n. s. Concoction; not used.
Neither tie yourself always to eat meats of easy digestion; such as veal, sweetbreads. Harvey.
DIGEST, r. n. 1. To digest.
One that opens the ground with a spade.
When we visited mines, we have been told by diggers, that even when the sky seemed clear, there were still a kind of steam that would put out the coal-candles.
Boyle.
To DIGEST, r. a. [sult to prepare, to regulate, Sax.]
1. To dress; to deck; to bedeck; to embellish; to adorn; it seems always to signify the past;
the particle passive is digest, as digested in Hudibras is perhaps improper.
Let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloisters pale;
And love the high embowed roof,
With antick pillar, massy proof;
And stor'd windows richly digst,
Casting a dim religious light.
Milton. Just so the proud insulting has Array'd and digstte Hudibras.
Hudibras.
2. To put on.
On his head his dreadful hat he digst,
DIGIT, n. s. [digitis, Lat.]
1. The measure of length containing three fourths of an inch.
If the inverted tube of mercury be but twenty-five digits high, or somewhat more, the quick-silver will not fall, but remain suspended in the tube, because it cannot press the subjacent mercury with so great a force as doth the incumbent cylinder of the air, reaching to the top of the atmosphere. Boyle's Spring of the Air.
2. The twelfth part of the diameter of the sun or moon.
3. Any of the numbers expressed by single figures; any number to ten; so called from counting upon the fingers.
Not only the numbers seven and nine, from considerations abstract, have been extolled by most, but all or most of other digits have been as mystically applied as the figures. Brown's Vulg. Errors.
DIGITATE, a. [from digitus, Lat.]
Branch'd out into divisions like fingers; as a digitated leaf is a leaf composed of many small leaves.
For animals multiform, or such as are digitated, or have several divisions in their feet, there are but two that are unipinnate; that is, men
DIGLATION, n. s. [digladiatio, Lat.]
A combat with swords; any quarrel or content.
Aristotle seems purposely to intend the valour of controversial digladiations, by his own affiliation of an amorous quality. Glanvill's Serp.
DIGNIFIED, adj. [from dignify.] Invested with some dignity: it is used chiefly of the clergy.
Abbots are stiled dignified clerks, as having some dignity in the church. Athlyf's Parergon.
DIGNIFICATION, n. s. [from dignify.]
Exaltation.
I grant that where a noble and ancient descent and merit meet in any man, it is a double dignification of that person. Walton's Angler.
To DIGNIFY, r. a. [from dignus and facio, Lat.]
1. To advance; to prefer; to exalt. Used chiefly of the clergy.
2. To honour; to adorn; to give lustre to;
to improve by some adventitious excellence,
or honorary distinction.
Such a day.
So fought, so follow'd, and so farly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times
Since Caesar's fortunate. Shaksp. Henry IV.
Not that we think as worthy such a guest,
But that your worth will dignify our feast.
No turds dignify my boards.
But prodigious, tremendous, what my Thames affords.
Dr. Pope.
DIGNITARY, n. s. [from dignus, Lat.]
A clergyman advanced to some dignity, to some rank above that of a parochial priest.
If there be any dignitaries, whose preferments are perhaps not liable to the accusation of superfluity, they may be persons of superior merit. Swift.
DIGNITY, n. s. [dignitas, Lat.]
1. Rank of elevation.
Angels are not any where spoken so highly of as our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and are not in dignity equal to him. Hooker.
2. Grandeur of men; elevation of aspect.
Some men have a native dignity, which will procure them more regard by a look, than others can obtain by the most imperious commands.
Cicero.
3. Advancement; preferment; high place.
Faster than spring-time snows comes thought on thought.
And not a thought but thinks on dignity. Shaksp.
For those of old,
And these late dignities heap'd up to them. Shaksp.
4. [Among ecclesiastics.] By a dignity we understand that promotion or preferment to which any jurisdiction is annexed.
Athlyf's Parergon.
5. Maxim; general principles; seriatim.
The science, consisting from dignities, and principles known by themselves, receive not satisfaction from probable reasons, much less from bare
6. [In astrology.] The planet is in dignity
when it is in any sign.
DIGNITATION, n. s. [from dignoscio, Lat.]
Distinction; distinguishing mark.
That temperamental dignitations, and conjecture of prevalent humours, may be collected from spots in our mails, we are not averse to concede.
Brown's Vulg. Errors.
To DIGRESS, r. n. [digressus, Lat.]
1. To turn aside out of the road.
2. To depart from the main design of a discourse, or chief tenour of an argument.
D I L

In the pursuit of an argument there is hardly room to digress into a particular definition, as often as a man varies the significations of a term. Locke.

3. To wander; to expatiate.

It seemed (to digress no farther) that the Tartanther, spreading so far, cannot be the Beverwoof.

4. To go out of the right way, or common track; to transgress; to deviate: not in use.

I am come to keep your word,

Though in some part you forced to digress,

Which at more leisure I will not excuse

As you shall well be satisfied. Shakspere.

The noble shape is but a form of wax,

Digressions, you the value of a man. Shakspere.

D I G R E S S I O N. n.s. [digression, Lat.]

1. A passage deviating from the main temon or design of a discourse.

The good man thought so much of his late conceived commonplace, that all other matters were but digressions to him. He, she, knew, would intermeli of grateful digression, and solve high dispute

With corporeal existence. Milton.

Here some digression I must make, t' accuse

Thee, my forgetful and ungrateful muse. Denham.

To content and fill the eye of the understanding,

the best authors sprinkle their works with plentig digressions, with which they recreate the minds of their readers. Dryden.

2. Deviation.

The digression of the sun is not equal; but, near the equinoctial intersections, it is right and greater;

near the solstices, more oblique and lesser.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

D I J U D I C A T I O N. n.s. [dijudicatio, Lat.]

Judicial distinction.

D I K E. n.s. [oe, Sax. dyke, Erse.]

1. A channel to receive water.

The dykes are silted, and with a running sound

The rising rivers float the slender ground.

Dryden’s Trig.

The king of dykes! than whom no sluice of nudes

With deeper sabie blus the silver flood.

 Pope’s Dunciad.

2. A mound to hinder inundations.

God, that breaks up the flood-gates of so great a deluge, and all the art and industry of man is not sufficient to raise up dykes and ramparts against it. Cowper.

To D I L I C E R A T E. v.a. [dilacero, Lat.]

To tear; to rend; to force in two.

The infant, at the accomplished period, struggling to come forth, dilacerates and breaks those parts which restrained him before.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

D I L A C E R A T I O N. n.s. [from dilaceratio, Lat.]

The act of rending in two

The greatest sensation of pain is by the obstruction of the small vessels, and dilaceration of the nervous fibres. Arbuthnot.

To D I L I N A T I E. v.a. [dilinatio, Lat.]

To tear; to rend in pieces.

Rather than they would dilinate the entablature of their own mother, and expose her thereby to being ravished, they met half way in a gallant kind.

Hawes’s Eng. Tears.

To D I L A P I D A T E. v.n. [dilapidato, Lat.]

To go to ruin; to fall by decay.

D I L A P I D A T I O N. n.s. [dilapidatio, Lat.]

The incumbent’s suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same; and it likewise extends to his committing, or suffering to be committed, any wilful

VOL. I.
DILIGENCE. n.s. [diligentia, Lat.] Industry; assiduity; constancy in business; continuance of endeavour; uninterrumtped application; the contrary to idleness.

Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me. 2 Tim. iv. 9.

Brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure. 2 Pet. i. 10.

DILIGENT. adj. [diligens, Lat.] 1. Constant in application; persevering in undertaking; assiduous; not idle; not negligent; not lazy.

Sest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings. Prov. xxii. 29.

2. Constantly applied; prosecuted with activity and perseverance; assiduous.

And the judges shall make diligent inquisition. Deut. xix.

DILIGENTLY. adv. [from diligent.] With assiduity; with heed and perseverance; not carelessly; not idly; not negligently.

If you inquire not attentively and diligently, you can never be able to discern a number of mechanical motions. Bacon.

The ancients have diligently examined in what consists the beauty of good portraits. Dryden, Dufresne.

DILL. n.s. [Sile, Sax.] It hath a slender, fibrose, annual root; the leaves are like those of fennel; the seeds are oval, plain, streaked, and bordered.

Dill is raised of seed, which is ripe in August. See Hortiner.

2. Clear; plain; not obscure.

To DILUCIDATE. v.a. [from dilucidate, Lat.] To make clear or plain; to explain; to free from obscurity.

I shall not extenuate, but explain and dilucidate, according to the custom of the ancients. Brown's Vulg. Errors.

DILUCIDATION. n.s. [from dilucidatio, Lat.] The act of making clear; explanation; exposition.

DILUCENT. adj. [diluens, Lat.] Having the power to thin and attenuate other matter.

DILUCENT. n.s. [from the adjective.] That which thins or neutralizes the other matter.

There is no more diluent but water: every fluid is diluent, as it contains water in it. Arberth, ou Ali.

To DILUTE. v.a. [dilue, Lat.] 1. To make thin; to attenuate by the admixture of other parts.

Drinking a large dose of diluted tea, as she was ordered by a physician, she got to bed. Locke.

The alien ought to be thin to dilute, deminute to temper, or acid to subdue. Arberth, ou Ali.

2. To dilute.

The chamber was dark, lest these colours should be diluted and weakened by the mixture of any adventurous light. Newton.

DILUTE. adj. Thin; attenuated.

If the red and blue colours were more dilute and weak, the distance of the images would be less than an inch; and if they were more intense and full, that distance would be greater. Newton.

DILUTE. n.s. [from dilute.] That which makes any thing else thin.

Water is the only diluter, and the best dissolvent of most of the ingredients of our aliment. Arberth, ou Ali.

DILUTION. n.s. [dilutio, Lat.] The act of making any thing thin or weak.

DILUVIAN. adj. [from diluvian, Lat.] Relating to the deluge.

Support that this diluvian lake should rise to the mountain tops in one place, and not diffuse itself equally into all countries about. Burnet's Theory.

DIM. adj [bume, Sax. dy, Welsh; duv, Erse.]

1. Not having a quick sight; not seeing clearly.

For her true form how can my spark discern, Which, dim by nature, art did never clear: Davies.

2. Dull of apprehension.

The understanding is dim, and cannot by its natural light discover spiritual truths. Rogers.

3. Not clearly seen; obscure; imperfectly discovered.

We might be able to aim at some dim and seeming conception, how matter might begin to exist by the power of that eternal first Being. Locke.

something, as dim to our internal view. Is thus perhaps the cause of all we do. Pope.

4. Obstructing the act of vision; not luminous; somewhat dark.

Her face round wondrous fair did seem to be, That her broad beauty's beam great brightness gave. Pope.

Through the dim shade, that all men might see. Spenser.

To DIM. f. a. [from the adjective.]

1. To cloud; to darken; to hinder from a full perception of light, and free exercise of vision.

As where the Almighty's lightning brand does light,
It dim the dazed eyes, and daunts the senses. Spenser's F. Quea.

It hath been observed by the ancients, that much use of Venus doth dim the sight; and yet canals, which are unable to generate, are nevertheless dim sighted. Bacon.

Every one declares against blindness, and yet who almost is not fond of that which dims his sight? Locke.

For thee I dim these eyes, and stuff this head, With all such reading as was never read. Pope.

Pope's Dunciad.

2. To make less bright; to obscure.

A ship that through the ocean wide,
By conduct of some star, doth make her way.
When as a storm hath dimmed her trusty guide. Out of her course doth wander far away. Spenser.

All of us have cause
To view the dimming of our shining star. Shakespeare, Richard III.

Thus while he spake, each passion dimm'd his face, Thrice chang'd. Milton.

The principal figure in a picture is like a king among his courtiers, who dines all his attendants. Dryden.

To make less brilliant; to diminish.

Diction.

3. To make less; to be impaired.

That judgment I had, increases rather than diminishes; and thoughts, such as they are, come crowding in so fast upon me, that my only difficulty is to choose or to reject. Dryden.

Cretes's ample fields diminish to our eye; Before the Boreal blasts the vessels fly. Pope's Odyssey.

DIMINISH. v.n. To grow less; to be diminished.

In a manner tending to viliify, or lessen.

I never heard him censure, or so much as speak diminishment of any one that was absent. Locke.

DIMINUTION. n.s. [diminutio, Lat.] The act of making less; opposed to augmentation.

The one is not capable of any diminution or augmentation at all by men; the other apt to admit both. Hooke.

2. The state of growing less; opposed to increase.

The gravitating power of the sun is transmitted through the vast bodies of the planets without any diminution, so as to act upon all their parts, to their very centres, with the same force, and according to the same laws, as if the part upon which it acts were not surrounded by the body of the planet. Newton.

Finites and infinites seems to be looked upon as the modes of quantity, and to be attributed primarily to those things which are capable of increase or diminution. Locke.

3. Discredit; loss of dignity; degradation.

Gladly to thee Herold laurel'd Eugene yields the prize; Nor thinks it diminution to be rank'd in his military honour, for the many marks of numbers.

4. Deprivation of dignity; injury of reputation.

Make me wise by thy truth, for my own soul's salvation, and Eschylus not regard the world's opinion or diminution of me. King Charles.

They might raise the reputation of another, though they are a diminution to his. Addison, Spect.

5. [In architecture.] The contraction of the diameter of a column, as it ascends.

DIMINUTIVE. adj. [diminutus, Lat.] Small; little; narrow; contracted.

The poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight, Her young ones in her nest, against the owl. Shebbeare, Masseth.
DIM

It is the interest of mankind, in order to the ad of knowledge, to be sensible they have yet

alised it but in poor and diminutive measure.

The light of man's understanding is but a short,

diminutive, contracted light, and looks not beyond the present.

If the ladies should once take a liking to such a diminutive race of lovers, we should, in a little time, see mankind epiphitized, and the whole species in mutiny.

They know how weak and awkward many of these little diminutive discourses are.

DIMINUTIVE, n.s. [from the adjective.]

1. A word formed to express littleness;
as lapillus, in Lat. a little stone; masonette, in Fr. a little house; maieteen, in Eng. a little man.

He afterwards proved a dainty and effeminate youth, was commonly called, by the diminu-tive of his name, Peterius or Perkin. Bacon's

Hen. VII. Sim., while but Sim, in good repute did live; was then a knife, but in diminutive. Cotton.

2. A small thing: a sense not now in use.

Follow his chariot; monster-like, he shew

For poor st diminuitive, for doth ! Shadep.

DIMINUTIVELY, adv. [from diminutive.]

In a diminutive manner.

DIMINUTIVENESS, n.s. [from diminu-tive.] Smaliness; littleness; pettyness; wanof bulk; want of dignity.

DIMISH. adj. [from dimin.] Somewhat dim; somewhat obscure.

'Tis true, but let it not be known.

My eyes are somewhat dimish grown;

For nature, always in the right,

To your decays adapted may I.

DIMSOSORY. adj. [dimissorius, Lat.]

That by which a man is dismissed to another jurisdiction.

A bishop of another diocese ought neither to ordain or admit a clerk, without the consent of his own proper bishop, and without the letters dimis-sory.

DIMITY. n.s. A fine kind of fustian, or cloth of cotton.

I directed a trove of fine dimity. Wiccan.

DIMLY. adv. [from dim.]

1. Not with a quick sight; not with a clear perception.

Unspeakable! who sits on these heavy

, To us invisible, or dimly seen,

In these thy lowest works. Milton.

2. Not brightly; not luminously.

In the beginning of our pumping the air,

the match appeared well lighted, though it had almost filled the receiver with fumes; but by degrees it burnt more and dimly more.

Boyle's Spring of the Air.

I saw th'angelick guards from earth ascend,

Grie'd they must now no longer man attend;

The beams about their temples dimly shine;

One would have thought the crime had been their own. Dryden.

DIMNESS. n.s. [from dim.]

1. Dullness of sight.

2. Want of apprehension; stupidity.

Answerable to this diminu of their perception, was the whole system and body of their religion.

Decay of Piety.

DIMPLE. n.s. [dint a hole; dintle a little hole; by a careless pronunciation dinkle. Skinner.] A small cavity or depression in the cheek, chin, or other part.

The dimple of the upper lip is the common measure of them all.

Dimm.
DIP

DICTIONARY. n.s. [dictarion, Lat.]. The act of numbering out singly.

DIOCESAN. n.s. [from dioeces]. A bishop, as he stands related to his own clergy or flocks.

As a diocese you are like to outdo yourself in all other capacities, and exemplify every word of this discourse.

South

I have heard it has been advised by a diocesan to his inferior clergy, that they should read one of the most celebrated sermons printed by others. Tatler.

DIOCES. n.s. [dioces: a Greek word, compounded of δικς and οικς.]. The circuit of every bishop's jurisdiction; for this realm has two divisions, one into shires or counties, in respect of temporal policy; another into dioceses, in respect of jurisdiction ecclesiastical.

Cowell.

None ought to be admitted by any bishop, but such as have dwelt and remained in his diocesan a convenient time.

Whigall.

He should regard the bishop of Rome as the islands of Jersey and Guernsey do him of constancy in Normandy; that is, nothing at all, since by that French bishop's refusal to swear to our king, those isles were annexed to the dioceses of Winchester.

Rutledge's Essay.

St. Paul looks upon Titus as advanced to the dignity of a prince, ruler of the church, and invested with a large diocese, containing many particular cities, under the immediate government of their respective elders, and those deriving authority from his ordination.

South

DIOPTICAL. n.s. [διόπτεας].

Dioptrick. for forming a medium for the sight; assisting the sight in the view of distant objects.

Boyle.

But especially well furnish'd with dioptrical glasses, he had not been able to see the sun spotted.

View the aspens of the moon through a dioptrick glass, and you will see the proportion of her bills by their shadows. More's Lattis. against Atheism.

DIOPTRICKS. n.s. A part of optics, treating of the different refractions of the light passing through different mediums; as the air, water, glasses, &c.

Harrn.

DIORTHOSIS. n.s. [διωρθος]. of which to make straight.]. A chirurgical operation, in which crooked or distorted members are restored to their primitive and regular shape.

Harrn.

To DIP. v.a. pret. dipped; particip. dipping, or dipt. [from dip, Sax. doopen, Dut.

1. To immerge; to put into any liquor.

The person to be baptized may be dipped in water; and such an immersion or dipping ought to be made thrice, according to the canon.

Ayliff's Parergon.

DIPPER. n.s. [from dip]. One that dips in the water.

DIPPING NEEDLE. n.s. A device which shows a particular property of the magnetick needle, so that, besides its polarity or verticity, which is its direction of altitude, or height above the horizon, when duly poised about an horizontal axis, it will always point to a determined degree of altitude, or elevation above the horizon, in this or that place respectively.

DIPSSAS. n.s. [Latin, from διπτω to thrust]. A serpent, whose bite produces the sensation of unquenchable thirst.

Scorpion, and asp, and amblyphoma dene, Cerastes hom'd, hydra, and cleops thar, and dipppas. Milton.

DIPSTOK. n.s. [διπτός]. A noun consisting of two cases only.

Clarke.

DIPYCH. n.s. [diplaychi; Lat. two leaves folded together]. A register of bishops and martyrs.

The commemoration of saints was made out of the dipyches of the church, as appears by many places in St. Austin's Stillingfleet.

DIRE. adj. [dirus, Lat.]. Dreadful; dismal; mournful; horrible; terrible; evil in a great degree.

Women fight, To doff their dire distresses. Shaksp. Macbeth.

In meats and drinks, which on the earth shall bring.

Dryden's Alnasca.

Disease did of which a monstrous crew Before they should appear. Milton.

Hydra, and gorgons, and chimere dire. Milton.

Or what the cross dire-looking planet ssates, Or hurtful worm with canker'd venom bites. Milton.

Dire was the toasting, deep the groans, despair Tended the sick.

Discord! dire sister of the slaughter'd pow'r, Small at her birth, but rising ev'ry hour; While scarce the skies her horrid head can bound, She stalks on earth, and shakes the world around. Pope.

DIRECT. adj. [directus, Lat.].

1. Straight; not crooked.

2. Not oblique.

The ship would move in one and the same surface; and consequently must needs encounter something they either advance towards another, in direct lines, or meet in the intersection of cross lines.

Bentley.

3. In astronomy. Appearing to an eye on earth to move progressivly through the zodiac; not retrograde.

Two geomantick figures were display'd

Above his head, a warrior and a mind.

One when direct, and one when retrograde.

Dryden's Fables.

4. Not collateral, as the grandson succeeds his grandsire in a direct line.

5. Apparently tending to some end, as in a straight line.

Such was as then the state of the king; as it was no longer to direct means to track her. And such was the state of his captivated will, as he would delay no time of seeking her.

Sidney.

He that does this, will be able to cast off all that is superfluous: he will see what is pertinent, what coherent; what is direct to, what slides by, the question.

Lecky.

6. Open; not ambiguous.

There be, that are in nature faithful and sincere, and plain and direct, not crafty and involved.

Bacon.

524
To DIRECT. n. s. [dirigo, directum, Lat.] 1. One that directs; one that prescribes. 2. An instrument that serves to give any manual operation.

DIRECT. n. s. [directio, Lat.] 1. Aim at a certain point. These men's opinions are not the product of judgment, or the consequence of reason; but the effects of a habit, a mind guided at all adventures, without choice, and without direction.

DIRECT. n. s. [directio, Lat.] 1. Having the power of direction. A law therefore, generally taken, is a directive rule unto goodness of operation.

DIRECT. n. s. [directio, Lat.] 1. In a straight line; rectilinearly.

DIRECT. n. s. [dirigo, directum, Lat.] 1. To aim or drive in a straight line. Two eagles from a mountain's height, By Jove's command, direct their rapid flight. Pope.

DIRECT. n. s. [directio, Lat.] 1. To regulate; to adjust. It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.

DIRECT. n. s. [dirigo, directum, Lat.] 1. To direct, to order: to direct is a softer term than to command. The voice of God himself speaks in the heart of men, whether they understand it or no; and by secret intimations governs the actions, and foretells of that direful cup, which he is like to drink now deeply of hereafter.

DIRECT. n. s. [directio, Lat.] 1. To order; to command: to direct is a softer term than to command.

DIRECT. n. s. [dirigo, directum, Lat.] 1. In a straight line; rectilinearly.

DIRECT. n. s. [dirigo, directum, Lat.] 1. To aim or drive in a straight line. Two eagles from a mountain's height, By Jove's command, direct their rapid flight. Pope.
D I S

The sea rises as high as ever, though the great dhaps of dirt it brings along with it are apt to check up the shallows. Addison.

Mark by what stretched steps their glory grows;
From dirt and sea-weed as proud Venice rose;
In each how guilt and greatness equal ran,
And all that hero sunk the man. Pope.

Is yellow dirt the passion of thy life? Pope.

2. Meanness; sordidness.

To Dr. S. [from the n. J. To foul;
To blemire; to make filthy; to bedaub;
to soil; to pollute; to nasty.

I imply that company is a dog, who dirt those most whom he loves best. Swift.

D I R T-

n. s. [dirt and pie.]

Forms moulded by children of dirty,
in imitation of pastry.

Thou art the heart upon that which has newly left off making of dirt-pies, and is but preparing itself for a green-sickness. Suckling.

D I R T I L Y. adj. [from dirtly.]

1. Nastily; foully; filthily.

2. Meanly; sordidly; shamefully.

3. Such gold as that wherewith

Chimneys from each minimal

Are dirty and desperately guid'd. Donne.

D I R T I N E S S. n. s. [from dirtly.]

1. Nastiness; filthiness; foulness.

2. Meanness; base; sordidness.

D I R T Y. adj. [from dirt.

1. Foul; nasty; filthy.

2. Foully; in bad or evil

The Dol and Helen of thy noble thoughts
Is in base durance, and contigious prison,
How'd thither by mechanic, dirty hands. Shaks.

3. Sullied; cloudy; not elegant.

4. Possessed with what filth

And the clear white colour will be altered into a dirty one, and the sweet taste
Into an only one. Locke.

5. Mean; base; despicable.

Such employments are the duties of labour,
And the rest of time, which it contracts not by lying still, but by dirty employment.

Taylor's Holy Living.

Marriages would be made up upon more natural motives than mere dirty interests, and increase of riches without measure or end.

They come at length to grow sots and epicurean, mean in their discourses, and dirty in their practices. South.

To D I R T Y. v. a. [from the n. J.

1. To foul; to soil.

The lords Stuarts lived generally, and never used to dirty their fingers with pen, ink, and counter-fetters. Arbuthnott.

2. To disgrace; to scandalize.

DIRUPTION. n. s. [diruption. Lat.

1. The act of bursting, or breaking.

2. The state of bursting, or breaking.

D I S. An inseparable particle used in composition, implying commonly a privative or negative signification of the word to which it is joined; as, to arm, to disarm; to join, to disjoin. It is borrowed from des, used by the French and Spaniards in this sense as: desouer unto: detercor to banish: from the Latin de; as, struo to build; strueco to destroy.

DI S A B I L I T Y. n. s. [from disabled.]

1. Want of power to do any thing; weakness; impotence.

Our consideration of creatures, and attention unto scriptures, are not in themselves things of like disability to breed or beget faith. Hooker.

Many are, themselves out of pure meekness, and disability to attend the conclusion.

Raleigh.

He that knows most of himself, knows least of his knowledge, and the exercised understanding is conscious of its disability: Gianville.

The inability of man's nature does not lie in his poverty or disabilities of brutes. Locke.

2. Want of proper qualifications for any purpose; legal impediment.

A suit is commenced in a temporal court for an inheritance, the plaintiff and defendant, inabilita-that the plaintiff is a bastard. Atiyuj's Parergon.

This disadvantage which the dissenters at present lie under, of a disability to receive clerical preference, will be easily rectified by the repeal of the test. Swift.

To DISABLE. v. a. [dis and able.]

1. To deprive of force; to weaken; to disqualify for any act.

The invasion and rebellion did not only disable this king to a companion, but deprived him both of his kingdom and life. Darley's Ireland.

Nor so is over came.

Satan, whose fall from heaven, a deathbrute
Disabled to give thee thine death wound. Milton.

A Christian's life is a perpetual exercise, a wrestling and warfare, for which sensual pleasure disables him, by yielding to that enemy with whom he must strive. Taylor's Holy Living.

To hinder from action: used of things.

- I have known a great fleet disabled for two months, and thereby lose great occasions by an invasion of the admiral. Temple.

3. To impair, to injure: used of things.

I have disabled mine estate.

By showing something a more swelling part
Than my faint means would grant continuance.

Shaks.

4. To deprive of usefulness or efficacy.

Farewel, Monsieur Traveller; look you lip,
And wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own counsellor. Benjon.

Your days I will alarm, I'll haunt your nights,
And worse than age disable your delights. Dryden.

5. To exclude, as wanting proper qualifications.

I will not disable any for having seen a scholar, not yet discernable that I have seen many happily forced upon the course to which by nature they seemed much indisposed. Hestor.

To DISABUSE. v. a. [dis and abuse.]

To set free from a mistake; to disentangle from a fallacy; to set right; to undeceive.

The imposture and fallacy of our senses impose not only on common minds, but even more refined mercenaries, who have the advantages of an improved reason to disabuse you. Gianville's Scipios.

Those texts, fair Lyce, must not show,
If she would be a faithful lover:
Though like birds they stop at seeming grapes,
Are dissu'd when first she gazes. Waller.

If by simplicity you meant a general defect in those that profess angerly, I hope to disabuse you,
Wotton's Angler.

Chaos of thought and passion, all confus'd;
Still by himself abus'd or disabuse'd. Pope.

D I S A C C O M M O D A T I O N. n. s. [dis and accommodation.] The state of being unfit or unprepared.

Devastations have happened in some places more than in others; according to the accommodation or disaccommodation of them to such calamities.

Hume's Origin of Mankind.

To DISACCUSTOM. v. a. [dis and accustom.]

To destroy the force of habit by disuse or contrary practice.

To DISACKNOWLEDGE. v. a. [dis and acknowledge.] Not to acknowledge.

The manner of denying Christ is his duty here prohibited, was, by von M. and other expressions verbally to deny and disacknowledge it. South.

D I S A C Q U I N T A N C E. n. s. [dis and acquaintance.] Disuse of familiarity.

Consequence, by a long neglect of, and disac-quaintance with itself, contracts an invertebrate rust or soil. South.

DISADVANTAGE. n. s. [dis and advancetage.]

1. Loss; injury to interest: as, he sold to disadvantage.

2. Diminution of any thing desirable, as credit, fame, honour.

Dissipation in many things resembled Ovid, and that with a disadventableness on the side of the eastern author. Dryden.

The most shining merit goes down to posterity with disadvantage, when it is not preserved in its proper light. Addison's Fitcheller.

Those parts already give reason to think that the Follis will appear with no disadvantage to that immortal poem. Addison's Fitcheller.

Their testimony will not be of much weight to its disadvantage, since they are liable to the common objection of condemning what they did not understand. Swift.

3. A state not prepared for defence.

So fort can be so strong,
Ne fleshly breast can be so sound,
But will at last be won by batter'ty long,
Or unawares at disadvantage found. Fairy Queen.

To DISADVANTAGE. v. a. [from the n. J. To injure in interest of any kind.

All other vices are so far from advancing Christianity, that they extremely weaken and disadvantage it. Decay of Piety.

DISADVANTAGEABLE. adj. [from disadvantage.] Contrary to profit; producing loss. A word not used.

In clearing of a man's estate, he may as well hurt himself in being too sudden, as in letting it run on too long; for lasty selling is commonly disadvantageable as interest. Bacon.

DISADVANTAGEOUS. adj. [from disadvantage.] Contrary to interest; contrary to convenience; unfavourable.

A multitude of eyes will narrowly inspect every part of an eminent man, consider him nicely in every view, and not be a little pleased when they have taken him in the worst and most disadvantageous lights. Addison's Spectator.

DISADVANTAGEOUSLY. adv. [from disadvantageous.] In a manner contrary to interest or profit; in a manner not favourable.

An approving nod or smile serves to drive you on, and make you display yourselves more disadvantageously. Government.

DISADVANTAGEOUSNESS. n. s. [from disadvantageous.] Contrariety to profit;
incoveneince; mischief; loss.

DISADVENTURous. adj. [dis and adventurous.] Unhappy; unprosperous.

Now he hath left you here,
To be the record of his rueful case,
And of my doleful disadventurous death. Fairy Q.

To DISAFFECT. v. a. [dis and affect.]

To fill with discontent; to discontent;
to make less faithful or zealous.

They had attempted to affections and discontent his majesty's late army. Clarendon.

DISAFFECTED. part. adj. [from disaffect.] Not disposed to zeal or affection. Usually applied to those who are enemies to the government.

By denying civil worship to the emperor's station, which the custom then was and still were they were proceeded against as disaffected to the emperor. Stillings.

526
DIS

DISAFFECTEDLY. adv. [from disaffected.] After a disaffected manner.

DISAFFECTEDNESS. n. s. [from disaffected.] The quality of being disaffected.

DISAFFECTION. n. s. [from disaffected.] 1. Dislike; ill-will.

2. To make the sense of esteem or disesteem sink the deeper, and be of the more weight, either agreeable or disagreeable things should constantly accompany each other in these different states.

3. Disorder; bad constitution: in a physical sense.

The disease took its original merely from the disaffection of the part, and not from the peculiarity of the humours.

DISAFFIRMANCE. n. s. [dis and affirm.]

Contra- tion; negation.

The cause of disaffirmance which reduces the opposite conclusion to that which is apparently absurd, is a demonstration in disaffirmance of any.

Hale.

To DISAFForest. v. a. [dis and forest.]

To throw open to common purposes: to reduce from the privileges of a forest to the state of common ground.

The commissioners of the treasury moved the king to disafforest some forests of his, explaining, that such forests as lay out of the way not near any of the king’s houses. Bacon.

How happy’s he, which hath due place assigned to his hearts; and disafforested his mind! Donne.

To DISAGREE. v. n. [dis and agree.]

1. To differ; not to be the same.

The mind clearly and infallibly perceives all distinct ideas to disagree; that is, the one not to be the other.

2. To differ; not to be of the same opinion.

Why both the hands in worship disagree, And some adore the bow’r, and some the tree.

Dryden.

To DISAGREEABLE. adj. [from disagree.]

1. Contrary; unsuitable.

Some demon, an enemy to the Greeks, had forced her to a conduct disagreeable to her sense.

Brome.

2. Unpleasing; offensive.

To make the sense of esteem or disesteem sink the deeper, and be of the more weight, either agreeable or disagreeable things should constantly accompany each other in these different states.

Disagreeableness. n. s. [from disagreeable.]

1. Unsuitableness; contrariety.

2. Unsatisfaction; offensiveness.

A father will hug and embrace his beloved son, for all the dirt and fondness of his cloaths; the dearness of the person makes it agreeable to the disagreeableness of the habit.

South.

Disagree ment. n. s. [from disagree.]

1. Difference; dissimilitude; diversity; not identity; not likeness.

These carry such plain and evident notes and characters, either of disagreement or affinity with one another, that the several kinds of them are easily distinguished.

Woodward.

2. Difference of opinion; contrariety of sentiments.

They seemed one to cross another, as touching their several opinions about the necessity of sacrificial, whereas in truth their disagreement is not great.

Hooke.

To DISALLOW. v. o. [dis and allow.]

1. To deny authority to any.

When, said she, Were those first councils disallowed by me? Or where did I state such tradition strikes.

Hooke.

Provided still it were apostolic?

Dryden’s Hind and Panther.

2. To consider as unlawful; not to permit.

Their usual kind of disputing sheweth, that they do not disallow only these Romanish ceremonies which are unprofitful, but count all unprofitable which are Romish.

Hooke.

3. To censure by some posterior act.

It was known that the most eminent of those who professed his own principles, publicly disallowed his proceedings.

Swift.

4. To censure; not to justify.

There is a secret kind of judging fear, that some evil or other will follow the doing of that which a man’s own conscience disallows him in.

South.

To DISALLOWABLE adj. [from disallow.]

Not allowable; not to be suffered.

Prohibition.

That God doth in converts, being married, allow continuance with infidels, and yet disallow that the faithful, who are they, should enter into hands of wedlock.

South.

DISAPPOINT V. n. [dis and appoint.]

1. To defeat of expectation; to bulk; to hinder from something expected.

That the superior being can defeat all his designs, and disappoint all his hopes.

Talbot.

To disappoint the champion, with redoubled might, strikes home the javelin, his retiring foe.

Shak. Shrews.

There’s nothing like surprising the regents how will they be disappointed, when they hear that thou hast prevented their revenge!

Addison.

We are not only tortured by the reproaches which are offered us, but are disappointed by the silence of men when it is unexpected, and humiliated even by their praises.

Addison.

2. It has of before the thing lost by disap-point.

The Janizaries, disappointed by the basses of the spoil, received of the bounty of Solymon a great largess.

DISAPPOINTMENT. n. s. [from disappoint.]

Defeat of hopes; miscarriage of expectations.

It is impossible for us to know what are calamities, and what are blessings. How many accidents have passed for misfortunes, which have turned to the welfare and prosperity of the persons in whose lot they have fallen! How many disappointments have, in their consequences, saved as men in their lives?

Hume.

If we hope for things of which we have not thoroughly considered the value, our disappointment will be greater than our content in the fruition of them.

If we hope for things of which we have not thoroughly considered the value, our disappointment will be greater than our content in the fruition of them.

Hume.

DISAPPROBATION. n. s. [dis and approbation.] Censure; condemnation; expression of dislike.

He was obliged to publish his letters, to show his disapprobation of the publishing of others.

Page.

To DISAPPROVE. v. a. [disapprove. Fr.]

1. To dislike: to censure.

I reason’d much, alas! but more I love’d;

Sent and recall’d, ordain’d and disapprov’d.

Page.

Without good breathing truth is disapproved.

Addison.

That only makes superior sense before.

Page.

2. To reject as disliked; not to confirm by concurrence.

A project for a treaty of barrier with the States was transmitted hither from Holland, and was disapproved by our courts.

Swift.

DISARM. n. s. [disarm, Sax. a fool, Skinner; disarm, Fr. Junius.] A pratler; a boasting talker.

This word is inserted both by Skinner and Junius; but I do not remember it.

To Disarm. v. a. [disarmer, Fr.]
1. To spoil or divest of arms; to deprive of arms.

An order was made by both houses, for disarming all the papists in England. Clarendon.

I am still the same, By different ways still moving to one fame; And by disarming you I now do more.

To save the town, than arming you before. Dryden.

2. It has of before the arms taken away.

They would be immediately disarmed of their great magazine of artillery. Locke.

To Disarray. v. a. [dis and array.] To undress any one; to divest of clothes.

So, as she bad, the witch they disarray'd.

Now night is come, now soon her disarray, And in her bed she lay. Spencer's Epithalamium.

Disarray, and shameful rout ensue,
And force is added to the fainting crew. Dryden's Fables.

2. Undress.

Disadulsity. n. s. Absence of care or attention.

The Celts kept him back; as very well knowing that, upon every little absence or disadulsity, he should be subject to take cold at his back. Hutton.

Disaster. n. s. [desaster, Fr.]
1. The blast or stroke of an unfavourable planet.

Stars shone with trains of fire, dews of blood fell;
Disasters well'd the sun, and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's cupids stand, Was sick almost to dissolution with eclipse. Shak.

2. Misfortune; grief; mishap; misery; calamity.

This day black omens threaten the brightest fair;
That e'er desastral'd a watchful spirit's care.
Some dire disaster, or by force or slight;
But what, or where, the fate are wont in night.

Pope.

To Disaster. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To blast by the stroke of an unfavourable star.

Ah, chaste bed of mine, said she, which never heretofore could accuse me of one decided thought, how canst thou now receive that disastral chancing? Sidney.

2. To afflict; to mischief.

These are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the checks. Shakspere.

Turn his own fields, the swain Disaster's stands. Thomson.

Disastrous. adj. [from disaster.]
1. Unlucky; not fortunate.

That seventh a most disastrous day to the Scots, not only in regard of this overthrow, but for that upon the same day they were defeated by the English at Floddenfield. Haywood.

2. Gloomy; threatening misfortune.

The moon,
In dim eclipse, disastrous twilight sheds
On half the nations. Milton.

3. Unhappy; calamitous; miserable; struck with affliction.

Then June, pving her disastrous fate,
Sent Iris down, her pangs to mitigate. Denham.

Disastrously. adv. [disastrous.] In a dismal manner.

Disastrousness. n. s. [disastrous.] Unluckiness; unfortuntness. Dict.

To Disavow. v. a. [dis and avouch.] To retract profession; to disown.

Thereupon they faintly disavow
To yield him more obedience or support. Daniel.

To Disavow'd. v. a. [dis and avouch'd.] To disown; to deny knowledge of; to deny concurrence in anything, or with any person.

The heirs and posterity of them which yielded the same, are either ignorant thereof, or do wilfully deny, or stedfastly disavow it. Spencer's State of Ireland.

The English did believe his name was therein abused; which he manifested to be true, by disavowing it openly afterwards. Haywood.

To deal in person is good, when a man's face breveld regard, and generally when a man will reserve to himself liberty either to disavow or to expound. Bacon.

A man that acts below his rank, doth but disavow fortune, and seemeth to be conscious of his own want in worth, and doth but teach others to envy him. He only does his conquest disavow.

And thinks too little what they found too much. Dryden.

We are reminded by the ceremony of taking an oath, that it is a part of that obedience which we learn from the gospel, expressly to disavow all evasions and mental reservations whatsoever. Addison's Freethinker.

Disavowal. n. s. [from disavow.] Denial.

An earnest disavow of fear often proceeds from fear. Charriss.

Disavowment. n. s. [from disavow.] Denial.

As touching the Tridevinyr righteousness, his holiness will not press you to any disavowment thereof. Wotton.

To Disavowize. v. a. [dis and autho- ris.] To deprive of credit or authority.

The obversion of such particular instances as these, are insufficient to disavowize a note grounded upon the true intention of nature. Wotton.

To Disband. v. a. [dis and bund.] 1. To dismiss from military service; to break up an army; to dismiss soldiers from their colours.

They disbanded themselves, and returned every man to his own dwelling. Rustics's Hist.

Pythagoras bids us in our station stand,
Till God, our general, shall us disbanded. Denham.

I am content to lead a private life;
Disband my army to secure the state,
Dryden's Aegolus.

Bid him disbanded his legions. Addison's Cato.

To Disband. v. n. 1. To retire from military service; to separate; to break up.

Our navy was upon the point of disbanded, and many of our men come ashore. Bac. War and Sp. to Disband. v. n.

The run'd pow'r
Disband, and wanding each his several way Pursue.

The common soldiery, and inferior officers, should be fully paid upon their disbanding.

Clarendon.

Were it not for some small remaneters of pitty and virtue, which are yet let scattered among nations, human society would in that short space disband and run into confusion, and the world would grow wild and become a forest. Titiasan.

2. To be dissolved.

While rocks stand, And rivers stir, thou canst not shrunk or quail; Yea, when both rocks and all things shall disband, Then shalt thou be my rock and tower. Herb.

To Disband'd. v. a. [debark'd, Fr.] To land from a ship; to put on shore.

Together sail'd they, fraught with all the things
To service done by land that might belong,
And, when occasion serv'd, they disbanded. Dryden.

The ship we moor on these obscure abodes;
Disband the sheep, an offering to the gods. Pope's Odyssey.

Disbelieve. n. s. [from disbelieve.] Re- fusal of credit; denial of belief.

Our belief or disbelieve of a thing does not alter the nature of the thing. Titiasan.

To Disbelieve. v. a. [dis and believe.] Not to credit; not to hold true.

The thinking it impossible his soul should be forgiven, though he should be truly penitent, is a sin, but rather of insolence than despair; it being the disbelieving of an eternal truth of God's. Hammond's Prac. Cathec.

Such who profess to disbelieve a future state, are not always equally satisfied with their own reasonings. Afterbury.

From a fondness to some vices, which the doctrine of fustity rendered necessary; in which, they brought themselves to doubt of religion. But, out of a vain affectation of seeing farther than other men, preferred to disbelieve it. Rogers.

Disbeliever. n. s. [from disbelieve.] One who refuses belief; one who denies any position to be true.

An humble soul is frightened into sentiments, because a man of great name pronounces hereby upon the contrary sentiments, and casts the disbelief out of the common way. Watts.

To Dispose. v. a. [dis and bench.] To drive from a seat;
Sir, I hope
My words disbelieved you not?
No, Sir, yet off.
When blows have made me stay, I fed from words. Shakspere.

To Dispose of. v. a. [dis and branch.] To separate, or break off, as a branch from a tree.

She that herself will silver and disbranch From her maternal arms, performs most wistfully, And come to deadly use. Shakspere, King Lear.

Such as are newly planted, need not be disbranched till the sap begins to stir, that so the wound may be healed without a scar. Evelyn's Kalendar.

To Disbrach'd. v. a. [With gardeners.] To take away the branches or spurs newly put forth, that are ill placed. Dict.

To Disburden. v. a. [dis and burden.] 1. To ease of a burden; to unload.

The river, with ten branches or streams, disburden himself within the ocean sea. Peacham's Drawing. Denham's leav'd rejoic'd.

2. To discernumber, discharge, or clear.

They removed either by casualty and tempest, or by intention and design, either out of lucje of gold, or for the disburdening of the countries surcharged with innumerable inhabitants,
Hale's Origin of Mankind.

We shall disburden the piece of those hard shadowings, which are always unprofitable.
Dryden's Essay.

3. To throw off a burden,
Better yet do I live, that through my thoughts
Into my life's bondage, I yet may disburden a passion.
Salvian.

Lucina, understand all thy cares on me, and let me share thy most rest'd distress.
Addison's Cato.

Disburden, n. v. [deburser, Fr.]
1. To throw out of the hand such cards as are useless.
2. To dismiss or eject from service or employment.

These men being certainly jewels to a wise man, considering what wonders they were able to perform, yet were disburden'd by that unworthy prince, as not worthy the holding.

Selden.

Their captives, if they list, discard whom they please, and send away such as will perhaps willingly be rid of that dangerous and hard service.

Should we own that we have a very imperfect idea of substance, wouldn't it be hard to charge us with disburdening substance out of the world? Locke.

Justice discards party, friendship, kinship, and is always therefore represented as blind.
Addison's Guardian.

They blame the favourites, and think it nothing extraordinary that the queen should be at end of her patience, and resolve to discard them. Swift.

I do not conceive why a sunk, discarded party, who neither expect nor desire more than a quiet life, should be charged with endeavouring to introduce popery.
Swift.

Discarded, adj. [dis, and care flesh; scarabate, Ital.] Stripped of flesh.
'Tis better to own a judgment, though but with a carta supplex of coherent notions; than a memory, like a sepulcher, furnished with a head of broken and discerned bones. Glanville.

Vol. I.

To DISCAR D, v. a. [d-case, and case.] To strip; to unmask.
Fret me the hat and rapiers in my cell; I shall discourse me, Shak. Temp.

To DISCERN, v. a. [d'cervin, Lat.]
1. To discern; to see; to discover.
And behold among the simple ones, I discerned amongst the youths a young man void of understanding.
Poe.

2. To judge; to have knowledge of by comparison.
What doth better become wisdom than to discern what is worthy the loving?
Selden.

Do any beast know understand and make use of degrees by degrees the faculty of discerning between truth and falsehood.
Locke.

3. To distinguish.
To discern such words as are fit to produce busing, from such as will play themselves, but in leaves, is no difficult matter.
Bosley.

4. To make the difference between.
They follow virtue for reward to-day; Tomorrow, if she give better pay, we are so good, we use her piece.

For nothing else discern the virtue or vice, Ben Jonson.

To DISCERN, v. n.
1. To make distinction.
Great part of the country was abandoned to the spoils of the soldiers, who not troubling themselves to discern between a subject and a rebel, whilst their liberty lasted, made indifferently profit of both.

Bayard.

The custom of arging on any side, even against our persuasion, is very dangerous, because it is by degrees to make the faculty of discerning between truth and falsehood.

Locke.

2. To have judicial cognizance: not in use.
It discerns of forces, frauds, crimes various of stellonction, and the incursions towards crimes capital, not actually perpetrated.
Bacon.

To DISCERN, v. n. [from discern.] Is discoverer; discoverable; perceptible; distinguishable; apparent.

It is indeed no sin of so small a sort, so formidable a bulk, that there needs no help of optics to render it discernible, and therefore I need not further explain it to you.

Browne's Vulg. Err.

Discernible, adj. [from discern.] Discoverable; discoverable; perceptible; distinguishable; apparent.

Justice discards party, friendship, kindred, and is always therefore represented as blind.

Addison's Guardian.

They blame the favourites, and think it nothing extraordinary that the queen should be at end of her patience, and resolve to discard them. Swift.

I do not conceive why a sunk, discarded party, who neither expect nor desire more than a quiet life, should be charged with endeavouring to introduce popery.
Swift.

Discernibly, adv. [from discernible.]
Perceptibly; apparently.
Consider how doctrines are infused discernibly amongst Christians, most apt to obstruct or interrupt the true path of life.

Discernibly, adv. [from discernible.] Judicially; knowing.
This hath been maintained not only by warm enthusiasts, but by cooler and more discerning heads.

Discernible, adj. [discernibly, adv.]

Judicious; discerning.

He had the present money to disburden the Jews; he would not take it. Shak., Merchant of Venice.

7. To clear a debtor.

3 Y
A grateful mind
By going ows now, but still pays; at once
Indebted and discharged.

8. To set free from obligation.
If one man's fault could discharge another man of his own faults, there would be no place left for the common offices of charity.

9. To clear from an accusation or crime; to absolve, with or without condemnation.

They wanted not reason to be discharged of all blame, who are confessed to have no great fault, even by their very word and testimony, in whose eyes indulgence of such hath ever hitherto been extended to be small.

10. To perform; to execute.
As to his hundred oaths, discharge.

11. To put away; to obliterate; to destroy.
It is done by little and little, and with many exposure; but all this discharge not the light. Bacon.

Trial would also be made in herbs poisonous and purging, whose efficacy perhaps may be discharged, or overmeasured, by setting stronger poisons or purgatives by them. Bacon.

12. To divest of any office or employment; to dismiss from service: as, he discharged his steward; the soldier was discharged.

13. To dismiss; to release; to send away from any business or appointment.

Discharge your spoon unto their several coun-trees. Shaksp.

When Cesar would have discharged the senate,
he was set on by Caius the tribune, who told him, he hoped he would not dismiss the senate till his wife had dreamed a better dream. Bacon.

14. To cut.
The matter being suppurated, I opened an inflamed ulcer in the great angle of the left eye, and discharged a well-concocted matter.

[From Brown's Surgery.

To DISCHARGE, n. n.
To dismiss itself; to break up.
The cloud, if it were oily or fatty, would not

DISCHARGE, n. a. [from the verb.]
1. Dismission; evacuation.

As the heat of all springs is owing to subterraneous fire, so wherever there are any extraordinary discharges of this fire, there also are the neighbouring springs hotter than ordinary. O. Nordau.

2. Matter vented.
The haemorrhage being stopped, the next occurrence is a thin scious discharge. Sharp's Surgery.

3. Disruption: evacuatio.
Mark the discharge of the little cloud upon glass or gem, or blades of swords, and you shall see it over break up first in the skirts, and last in the middle. Bacon's Nat. History.

4. Dismission from an office; as, the goVERNOR offered his discharge.

5. Release from an obligation or penalty.
He warned
Us, haply too severe of our discharge
From slavery, because from death releas'd
Some day. Milton.

6. Absolution from a crime.
The text expresses the sound estate of the conscious, but there was not accusing, but by its not condemning, which word imports properly an acquittance or discharge of a man upon some pre ce fault or occasion, and a full trial and cognoscence of his cause.

7. Ransom; price of ransom.
O, all my hopes defeated
To free him hence! But death who sets all free, Hath paid his ransom now and full discharge. Matt.

8. Performance; execution.
The obligations of hospitality and protection are sacred; nothing can absolve us from the discharge of these duties.

9. An acquittance from a debt.
10. Exemption; privilege.
There is no discharge in that war, neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.
Eccle. viii. 8.

DISCHARGER, n. s. [from discharge.
1. He that discharges in any manner.
2. He that fires a gun.

To abate the bombardment of gunpowder, a way is promised by Porta, by burax and butter, which he says will make it so go off, as scarcely to be dispatched by the discharge.
Brown.

DISCHARGE, adj. [discinatus, Lat.]
Un-girded; loosely dressed.
Dict.

To DISCHARGE, v. a. [disceso, Lat.]
To divide; to cut in pieces.

We found several concrections so soft, that we could easily dissect them with our fingers. Boyle.

DISCIPLINE, n. s. [disciplina, Lat.]
A scholar; one that professes to receive instruction by means of discipulorum.

He rebuked disciples who would call for fire from heaven upon whole cities, for the neglect of a few.
King Charles.

The commemoration the death of Christ, is the professing ourselves the disciples of the crucified Saviour; and that engageth us to take up his cross and follow him. Herodot.

A young disciple should behave himself so well, as to gain the affection and the ear of his instructor. Watts.

To DISCIPlNE, v. a.
1. To train; to bring up.
He did look far
Into the service of the time, and was
Shaksp.

2. To punish; to discipline. This word is not in use.
She, bitter penance! with an iron whip
Was wont him to discipline every day. Spenser.

DISCIPLINESHIP, n. s. [from discipline.]
The state or function of a disciple, or follower of a master.

That to which justification is promised, is the preparing up of the whole soul entirely unto Christ, undergoing discipleship upon Christ's terms.
Rogers.

DISCIPLINAL, adj. [disciplinabilis, Lat.]
Capable of instruction; capable of improvement by discipline and learning.

DISCIPLINALNESS, n. s. [from disciplina-plumb.] Capacity of instruction; qualification for improvement by education and discipline.

We find in animals, especially some of them, as foxes, dogs, dogs, horses, and elephants, not only perception, phantasy, and memory, common to most if not all animals, but something of sagacity, providence.

DISCIPLINARIAN, adj. [from discipline.]
Pertaining to discipline.

What eagerness in disciplinarian uncertainties, when the love of God and our neighbour, evangelically, and at the same time; and...

DISCIPLINARIAN, n. s. [disciplina, Lat.]
1. One who rules or teaches with great strictness; one who allows no deviation from stated rules.

2. A follower of the presbyterian sect, so called from their perpetual clamour about discipline.

They draw those that dissent into dislike with the state, as puritans, or disciplinarians.
Souther. Par. Eccles.

DISCIPLINARY, adj. [disciplina, Lat.]
1. Pertaining to discipline.
2. Relating to government.

These are the states, wherein our noble and gentle youth ought to bestow their time in a disciplinary way.
Milton.

DISCIPLINE, n. s. [disciplina, Lat.]
1. Education; instruction; the act of culturating the mind; the act of forming the manners.

He had charge my discipline to frame,
And tutors nourish to oversee. Spenser.

The cold of the northern parts is that which,
without aid of discipline, doth make the bodies hardiest, and the courage warmest. Bacon.

They who want that sense of discipline, hearing, are also by consequence deprived of speech.
Holker.

It is by the assistance of the eye and the ear es-specially which are called the senses of discipline, that our minds are furnished with various parts of knowledge. Watts.

2. Rule of government; order; method of government.

They hold, that from the very apostles time to this present age, wherein yourselves imagine you have found out a right pattern of sound discipline, there never was any time safe to be follow'd.
Holker.

As we are to believe for ever the articles of evangelical doctrine, so the precepts of discipline we are, in like sort, bound for ever to observe. Holker.

While we do admire
This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stocks.
Shaksp.

This open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace. Shaksp.

While let crooked steel invade
The lawless troops which discipline disdain,
And their superuous growth with rigour tame.
Dryden.

The most perfect, who have their passions in the best discipline, are yet obliged to be constantly on their guard. Rogers.

5. Any thing taught; art; science.
Art may be said to overcoome and advance nature in these mechanical disciplines, which, in this respect, are much to be preferred. Newton.

6. Punishment; chastisement; corre-cation.
A lively cobler kicked and spurred while his wife was carrying him, and had scarce passed a day without giving her the discipline of the strap.
Addison's Spectator.

7. External mortification.
The love of God makes a man chaste without the labours of fasting and exterior discipline;
he reaches at glory without any other arms but those of love. Taylor.

To DISCIPLINE, v. a.
1. To educate; to instruct; to bring up.
We are wise enough to begin when they are very young, and disciplinary by times; those other creatures we would make useful and good for somewhat.

They were ware with care prepared and disciplined for confirmation, which they could not arrive at till they were found, upon examination, to have made a sufficient progress in the knowledge of Christianity. Addition on the Christian Religion.

530
2. To regulate; to keep in order.

They look to us, as we should judge of an army of well-disciplined soldiers at a distance.

Dekker's Aos-Theology.

3. To punish; to correct; to chastise.

To Disclaim. v. a. [dis and claim].

To disclaim; to deny any knowledge of; to retract any union with; to abrogate; to renounce.

You cowardly rascal! nature disclaims all share in thee: a taylor made thee. Shaksp. King Lear.

He calls the gods to witness their odium.

Disclaim the war, asserts his innocence.

Dryden's Encls.

We find our Lord, on all occasions, disclaiming all pretensions to a temporal kingdom.

Rogers.

Very few, among those who profess themselves Christians, disclaim all concern for their souls, disown the authority, or renounce the expectations of the gospel.

Rogers.

DISCLAIMER. n. s. [from disclaim].

1. One that disclaims, disowns, or renounces.

2. [In law.] A plea containing an express denial or refusal.

Corell.

To DISCLOSE. v. a. [disclose, lat. dis and close].

1. To uncover; to produce from a state of latitancy to open view.

In this deep quiet, from what source unknown, Those seeds of fire their fatal birth disclose;

And first a scintillating spark about was blown, Big with the flame that in the rose rose. Dryden.

Then earth and ocean various forms disclose.

Dryden.

The shells being broken, struck off, and gone, the stone included in them is thereby disclosed and set at liberty.

Woodward.

2. To hatch; to open.

It is repeated by the ancients, that the ostrich lays her eggs under sand, where the heat of the sun discloses them.

Bacon.

3. To reveal; to tell; to impart what is secret.

There may be a reconciliation, except for upbraiding, or pride, or disclaiming of secrets, or a treacherous wound; for from these things every friend will depart. Ecles.

If I disclaim my passion,
Our friendship's at an end; if I conceal it,
The world will call it self-righting. Addison's Cato.

DISCLOSED. n. s. [from disclose].

One that reveals or discovers.

DISCLOSEURE. n. s. [from disclose].

1. Discovery; production into view.

The producing of cold is a thing very worthy the inquisition, both for the use and disclosure of causes.

Bacon.

2. Act of revealing any thing secret.

After so happy a marriage between the king and her daughter, she was, upon a sudden mutability and disclosure of the king's mind, severely handled.

Disclosure. n. s. [disculus, Lat.]

Emission.

Judge what a ridiculous thing it were, that the continuing the flames of that to our ruin should be broken by sudden miraculous eruptions and disclosures of light to prevent the art of the lantern-maker. More.

DISCOLORATION. n. s. [from disclose.]

1. The act of changing the colour; the act of staining.

2. Change of colour; stain; die.

In a deprivation of the humours from a sound state to what the physicians call by a general name of a cachexy, spots and discolorations of the skin are signs of weak fibres.

Arbuthnot.

To DISCOLOUR. v. a. [discolora, Lat.]

To change from the natural hue; to stain.

Many a widow's husband groveling lies,

Coldly embracing the discolor'd earth.

Drink water, either pure, or but discolor'd with malt.

Suspicions, and fantastical surprise,

And jealousy, with jaunt in her eyes,

Discouraging all she view'd.

Dryden.

He who looks upon the soul through its outward actions, succeeds in his cunning, which is apt to discolor and pervert the object.

Adison's Spectator.

I have a care lest some beloved notion, or some daring science, to prevail over your mind as to discolor all your ideas.

Watts.

To DISCOMFIT. v. a. [disconfer, Fr. sconfigurer, Ital. as if from disconform, Lat.] To defeat; to conquer; to vanquish; to overpower; to subdue; to beat; to overthrow.

Fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,

Whom, since, I heard to be discomfited. Shaksp.

Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword. Conutsa.

He, fugitive, declin'd superior strength;

Discomfited, pursu'd, in the sad chase

Te'd thousand hundred sinews falling. Philopous.

While our gallant countrymen are employed in pursuing rebels half discomfited through the consciousness of their guilt, I shall introduce to your stories to the good of my fellow subjects. Addison.

Discomfit. n. s. [from the verb].

Defeat; rout; overthrow.

Fly you must: incurable discomfit.

Regus in the hearts of all our present party.

Shaksp.

Dagon must stop, and shall ere long receive

Such a discomfit, as shall quite despoil him

Of all these boasted trophies. Milton's Amadis.

Discomfiture. n. s. [from discomfit.]

Defeat; loss of battle; rout; ruin; overthrow.

Sad tidings bring 1 you out of France,

Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture. Shaksp.

Behold, every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great discomfiture. Sam.

What a defeat and discomfiture is it to a man, when he comes to use this wealth, to find his table discomfited? Government of the Tongue.

He sent his angels to fight for his people; and the discomfiture and destruction of great hosts is attributed to their assistance.

Atterbury.

Discomfiture. n. s. [dis and com fort].

Uneasiness; sorrow; melancholy; gloom.

This himself did foresee, and therefore armed his church, to the end they might sustain it without discomfiture.

Brooke.

Discomfit guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair. Shak.

In solitude there is not only discomfiture, but weakness also. South.

To DISCOMFORT. v. a. [from the noun.]

To grieve; to sadden; to deject.

Her champion went away discomfited as much as disconsolate. Sidney.

His funeral shall not be in our camp,

Lest it discomfit us. Shaksp. Julius Caesar.

DISCOMFORTABLE. adj. [from discomfit.]

1. That is melancholy and refuses comfort.

Discomforable counsel, know'st thou not

That when the searching eye of Heav'n is hid

Behind the globe, it lights the lower world? Shaksp.

2. That causes sadness.

What did that help poor Dora, whose eyes could carry unto him no other news but discomfortable? Sidney.
To DISCOURSE. v. a. [disc and concert.]
1. To unsettle the mind; to discompose.
You need not provoke their spirits by outrages; a careless jest, a word, or a look, is enough to discompose them. Collier.
2. To break a scheme; to defeat a machination.

DISCONFORMITY. n. s. [dis and conformity.] Want of agreement; inconsistency.
Lies arise from error and mistake, or malice and forgery; they consist in the disagreement and disconformity between the speech and the conception of the mind, or the conceptions of the mind and the things themselves, or the speech and the things. Hooker on Providence.

DISCONFORMITIE. n. s. [dis and congruity.]
There is want of capacity in the thing, to sustain such a donation, from the intrinsic incongruity of the one to the other. Locke's Origin of Mankind.

DISCONSOLATE. adj. [dis and console.] Void of comfort; hopeless; sorrowful; melancholy.

See Cato. See illustrious, from illustrious.

With Pindarus his friend, on this hill. Shaksp. If you can weep, be not disconsolate.

Disconsolate them; do not disconsolate.

Disments them not disconsolate.

The ladies and the knights, no shelter nigh, We ere the wised, disconsolate and wan, And through their thin array receiv'd the rain. Dryden.

The moon reflects the sunshine on us, and so, by illuminating the air, takes away in some measure the disconsolate darkness of our winter nights.

DISCONSOLATELY. adv. [from disconsolate.] In a disconsolate manner; comfortlessly.

DISCONSOLATENESS. n. s. [from disconsolate.] The state of being disconsolate.

DISCONTENT. n. s. [dis and content.] Want of content; unassaying at the present state.

I see your brows full of discontent,
Your heart of sorrow, and your eyes of tears. Shaksp.

Not that their pleasures caus'd her discontent,
She sigh'd, not that they stay'd, but that she was Pope.

DISCONTENT. adj. [dis and content.] Uneasy at the present state; dissatisfied.

They were of their own nature circumspect and shew, disconsolament and discontent; and those the earl singled as fittest for his purpose. Heywood.

To DISCONTENT. v. a. [from the noun.] To dissatisfaction; to make uneasy at the present state.

I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble meanes match not his haughty spirit. Shaksp.

The discontented now are only they
Whose crimes before did your just cause betray. Dryden.

DISCONTENTED. participial adj. [from discontent.] Uneasy; cheerless; melancholy.

Let us know
What will tie up your discontented sword. Shaksp.
These are, beyond comparison, the two greatest evils in that way of life; wickedness; a disease, and a discontented mind.
Titlioton.

The goddess, with a discontented air,
Seems to reject him, the she grants his pray'r. Pope.

DISCONTENTEDNESS. n. s. [from discontent.] Uneasiness; want of case; dissatisfaction.

A beauty is the child of Alexander the Great: casts up his face to heaven with a noble air of grief, or discontentedness, in his looks. Addison's Travels.

DISCONTENTMENT. n. s. [from discontent.] The state of being discontented; unassaying.

These are the vices that fill them with general discontentment, as though the bosom of that famous church, wherein they live, were more loaded with sorrow than a heavy house.

The politick and artificial nourishing and enterprising of hopes, and carrying men from hopes to hopes, is one of the best antidotes against the pangs of discontentments. Bacon.

DISCONTINUANCE. n. s. [from discontinu-1.

Want of cohesion of parts; want of union of one part with another; disruption.

The stilllicious of water, if there be enough to follow, will draw themselves into a small thread, because they will not discontinue; but if there be no reeding they will cast themselves into round drops, which is the figure that savours most from discontinuance. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Cessation; intermission.

Let us consider whether our approaches to him were sweet and refreshing, and if we were not under any long discontinuance of our conversation with him. Atterbury.

3. [In the common law.] An interruption or breaking off; as discontinuance of possession, or discontinuance of process. The effect of discontinuance of possession is that a man may not enter upon his own land or tenement alienated, whatsoever his right be unto it, or by his own authority; but must seek to recover possession by law. The effect of discontinuance of plea is, that the instance may not be taken up again, but by a new writ to begin the suit afresh. Cowell.

DISCONTINUATION. n. s. [from discontinu-1.

Disruption of continuity; breach of union of parts; disruption; separation.

Upon any discontinuance of parts, made either by liquids, or by shaking the glass, the mercury falls. Newton.

To DISCONTINUE. v. n. discontinuer, Fr.] 1. To lose the cohesion of parts; to suffer separation or disruption of substance.

All bodies, ductile and tensile, as metals, that will be drawn into wires; wool and tow, that will be drawn into yarn, or thread; have in them the appetite of not discontinuing strong, which maketh them follow the force that pulleth them out, and yet so as not to discontinue or forsake their own body. Bacon.

To lose an established or prescriptive custom or right.
Thus shall discontinuation from thine heritage that I give thee, and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies. Jer.

To DISCONTINUE. v. a.
1. To leave off; to cease any practice or habit.

Twenty puny lies I'll tell,
That men shall swear I've discontented school
Above a twelvemonth. Shaksp.

I examine all the annals of diet, sleep, exercise, apparel, and the like; and try, in any thou shalt judge harmful, to discontinue it by little and little; but so, if it be any inconvenience by the change, thou come back to it again. Bacon.

2. To break off; to interrupt.

There is that property, in all letters, of aptness to be combined in syllables and words, through the voluntary motions of the organs from one stop or figure to another, that they modify and discontinue the voice, with which they discontinues it. Holder's Elements of Speech.

DISCONTINUITY. n. s. [dis and conti-1. Disunity of parts; want of cohesion.

That discontinuity of parts is the principal cause of the opacity of bodies, will appear by considering that opaque substances become transparent by filling their pores with any substance of equal, or almost equal, density, or parts.

DISCONVENIENCE. n. s. [dis and convenience.] Incongruity; disagreement; opposition of nature.

Faear ariseth many times out of natural antipathies of nature; but, in these discontinuities of nature, deliberation hath no place at all. Bramhall's Answer to Hobbes.

DISCORD. n. s. [discord, Lat.]
1. Disagreement; opposition; mutual anger; reciprocal oppugnancy.

See what a sore base, that he's founds means to kill your joys with love.

And I, for sitting at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinshom. Shakespeare. Romeo and Juliet.

He is a false witness, and maketh lies, and that sevenfold among brethren. Proverbs.

2. Difference or contrariety of qualities, particularly of sounds.

Take but degree away, untune that string,
And hard what discord follows; each thing sects
In more oppugnancy. Shaksp. Troil and Cress.

Discord, like that of music's various parts,
Discord that makes the harmony of hearts,
Discord, that only this one discord it is but a harshness of divers sounds meeting. Bacon.

Who best shall love the doke and serve the king. Dryden.

All nature is but art unknown to thee;
All chuse, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good. Pope.

3. [In music.] Sounds not of themselves pleasing, but necessary to be mixed with others.

It is sound alone that doth inherently and corporally affect most; this is most manifest in music, and concords and discords found in music: for all sounds, whether they be sharp or flat, if they be sweet, have a roundness and equality; and if they be harsh, are unequal, and it is but a harshness of divers sounds meeting. Bacon.

It is the lark that sings out of tune,
Shewing harsh discordant and pleasing sharps. Shaksp. How doth music amaze us, when of discord she maketh the sweetest harmony! Poecham.

To DISCORD. v. n. [discordo, Lat.] To disagree; not to suit with.
Souls do disturb and alter the one the other; sometimes the one drowning the other, and making it not heard; sometimes the one jarring and discording with the other, and making a confusion. Bacon.

DISCORDANCE. n. s. [from discord.]
DISCORDANCE. adj. opposition; inconsistency.

DISCORDANT. adj. [discordans, Lat.]
1. Inconsistent; at variance with itself.

Myrtha was joy'd the welcome news to hear,
But, clagg'd with guilt, the joy was unsecure;
So various, so discordant, she shew'd;
That in our will a different will we find. Dryden.

2. Opposite; contrarious.

The discordant attraction of some wandering comets would perhaps produce the revolutions of the planets, if they approached too near them. Cheyne.

3. Incongruous; not conformable.

Other concords is to be referre'd; if by a comparison of things done with the rule there be a Wisdom, in discourse with her,

Loves discountenance'd, and, like folly shows, Milton.

He came, and with him Eve, more keth, the first

To offend; discountenance'd both and discountenanced, Milton.

How would one look from his majestic brow,

Seated on the top of tenants hill,

Discountenance her desire, and Milton.

Discountenance. n. s. [dis and counteracen.] Cold treatment; unfavourable aspect; unfriendly regard.

He thought a little discountenance upon those persons would supplant the effect. Clarendon.

All accidental misfortunes, how inevitable soever, were still attended with very apparent discountenance. Clarendon.

In expectation of the hour of judgment, he patiently bears all the difficulties of duty, and the discountenance he meets with from a wicked and profligate world. Bacon.

Discountenance n. s. [from discountenance.] One that discourages by cold treatment; one that depresses by unfriendly regard.

Rumours of scandal and murmurs against the king, and his government, taxed him with great taunt of his people, and discountenance of his abilities.

Bacon.

To DISCOURAGE. v. a. [décourager, Fr. dis et coeur.

1. To depress; to deprive of confidence; to deject; to dastardize.

2. To deter; to fright from any attempt: with from before the thing.

Wherefore discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land of Israel.

Numbers.

3. It is irregularly used by Temple with to before the following word.

You may keep your beauty and your health, unless you destroy them yourself; you discourage them to stay with you, by using them ill. Temple.

DISCOURAGE. n. s. [from discourage.] One that impresses difficulty and terror.

Most men to years, as they are generally discouraged by youth, are made to despair of their strength, which, by past hearing themselves, will suffer not young plants to flourish beneath them. Pag."
DIS

Sure he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To rest in us thus. Shakesp.
The act of the mind—which connects propositions, and deduceth conclusions from them, the schools call discourse; and we shall not unseal it, if we use the term. Clav. We.

2. Conversation; mutual intercourse of language; talk.
He waketh wiser than himself, more by an hour's discourse, than by a day's meditation. Bacon.

In thy discourse, if thou desire to please,
All such is courteous, useful, new, or witty; if use them.
Usefulness comes by labour, wit by ease. Courtesy grows in court, news in the city.
The vainish'd party with the victors joint.
Nor wanted sweet discourse, the banquet of the mind.
Dryden.

3. Effusion of language; speech.
Topical and superficial arguments, of which there is store to be found on both sides, filling the head with variety of thoughts, and the mouth with copious discourse, serve only to confuse the understanding and entertain company. Locke.

The discourse here is about ideas, which, he says, are real things, and seen in God. Plutarch.
In his discourse upon garrulity, commands the fidelity of the companions of Ulysses. Pope's Iliad.

To Discourse. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To converse; to talk; to relate.
How well thou handled, being prisoner?
Discourse, I pr'ythee, on this turrett's top. Shakesp.
Of every thing discoursing as he past. Anckles ith the heart. Dryden.

2. To treat upon in a solemn or set manner.
The general maxims we are discoursing of are not known to children, fools, and a great part of mankind. Locke.

3. To reason; to pass from premises to consequences.
Any yet the power of her disconceyning thoughts, From the collection is a diverse thing. Davies.
Brutes do want that quick discoursing power. Davies.

To Discourse. v. a. [from the noun.]
To treat of; to talk over; to discuss.
Geth us into the alhe here, And let us there at large discourse all our fortunes. Shakesp.

DISCOURSER. n. s. [from discourse.]
1. A speaker; an arranger.
The treat of every thing
Would by a good discounter lose some life, Which action's self was tongue to. Shakesp.

2. A writer on any subject; a disserter.
Philosophers and critical discoursers, who look beyond the obvious extenuations of things, will be angry at our narrower explorations. Brown.
But it must be noted, that such discoursers do reason upon short views, and a very moderate compass of thought. Swift.

DISCOURSE. adj. [from discourse.]
1. By passing by intermediate steps from premises to consequences. The soul reason receives, and reason is her being. Discourse, or intuitive; discourse is from year to year, the latter is most ours. Milton.

2. Containing dialogue; interlocutory.
The epic is everywhere interlaced with dialogue, or discoursive scenes. Dryden on Dramatic Poem.

DISCOURTEOUS. adj. [dis and courteously.]
Uncivil; uncompilasient; defective in good manners.

He resolved to unhorse the first discreet knight he should meet. Moxon's Don Quixote.

DISCOURTESY. n. s. [dis and courteously.]
Uncivility; rudeness; act of disrespect.
As if cheerfulness had been too muchness, and good entertainment had been turned to discrediting, he would ever get himself alone. Sidney.

Be calm in arguing; for here your's makes.
Error a fault, and work of your's. Herbert.
He made me visits, musing Ton as if I had done him a discourteous. Fierman.

DISCOURTEOUSLY. adv. [from discoursely.]
Uncivilly; rudely.

DISCOURSES. adj. [disc of discourses.]
Broad; flat; wide. Used by botanists to denote the middle, plain, and flat part of some flowers, such as the flos solis, etc. Quincy.

DISCREDIT. n. s. [discréditer, Fr.]
Ignominy; reproach; lower degree of infamy; disgrace; imputation of a fault.
Had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredit. Shakesp.

Idlers will ever live like rogues, and not to work, but be lazy, and then certify over their conclusions to the discredit of a plantation. Bacon.
That they may quit their wounds without any discredit to their intellectuals, they fly to several states, pilate objections and cavils. Smith.
To the duty of every christian to be concerned for the reputation or discredit his life may bring on his profession. Rogers.
Also, the small discredit of a brick
Searcely hurts the lawyer, but enables the scribe. Pope.

To DISCREDIT. v. a. [discréditer, Fr.]
1. To deprive of credibility; to make not trusted.
He had framed to himself many deceiving premises of life, which I have discredited to him, and now is resolved to die. Shakesp.

2. To disgrace; to bring reproach upon; to shame; to make less reputable or honourable.
You had left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been lobsit withal, would have discredited you. Shakesp.

He is a commodious that makes a saving voyage, and least discredits his travels, who returns the same by steam. Pope.
He, like a priviledg'd spy, whom nothing can discredit, rebels now against each great man. Donne.
Reflect how glorious it would be to appear in connivance with all and by example of piety revive the declining spirit of religion. Rogers.
Without care our best actions will lose much of their influence, and our virtues will be discredited with the appearance of evil. Rogers.

3. To distrust; not to credit; not to hold certain.
DISCREDIT. adj. [discret, Fr.]
1. Prudent; circumspect; cautious; sober; not rash; not precipitant; not careless; not hardily adventurous.
Honest, discreet, quiect, moderately learned men, will not be withdrawn by you. Whigett.

Less fearful than discreet,
You love the fundamental part of the constitution,
More than you doubt the charge of 't. Shakesp.
To elder years to be discreet and grave,
Then to old age maturly she gave. Denham.

Is the discreet man, not the witty, nor the studious, learned, nor the brave, who guides the conversation, and gives measures to society. Johnson's Spectator.

2. Modest; not forward; not well autho. rised. Dear youth, by fortune fav'rd, but by love, Alas! not fav'rd less, be still as now. Discret. Thomas.

DISCREETLY. adv. [from discreet.]
Prudently; cautiously; circumspectly.
Let's lose half the praise they should have got. Could it be known what they discreetly blot.

Wallace.
The labour of obedience, loyalty, and subjection, is no more but for a man honestly and discreetly to sit still. South.

Pitifully, from beasts discreetly; 'twas. Phillips.
The dullest brain, if gently stir'd,
Perhaps may waken to a shining bird.
The most recusant, discreetly open'd by Tavernier.
Congenial object in the list is the Pope. Dun's Pope.

DISCRETENESS. n. s. [from discreet.]
The quality of being discreet; discretion.

DISCREEANCE. n. s. [disrepeanat, Lat.] Differrence; contrariety; disagreement.

Diversity of education, and discrepancy of those principles wherewith men are at first imbued, and wherein all our after reasonings are founded. Lord Digby to K. Digby.

DISCREPANT. adj. [discrepanat, Lat.]
Different; disagreeing; contrary.
To DISCRETE. v. a. [discretes, Lat.]
To separate; to distinguish.
As the diapason divides the sounder that most eminently as; having its earthly and sullent parts so exactly resolved, that its body is left imporous, and by every deduction by analogical terminations. Brown.

DISCRETE. adj. [discres, Lat.]
1. Distinct; disjoined; not continuous.
Discrete quantity, or distinct individuals, are measured by number, without any breaking continuity; that is, in things that have continuity, as continued quantity and number. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

2. Disjunctive; as, I resign my life, but not my honour, is a discrete proposition.

3. Discrete Proportion is when the ratio between two pairs of numbers or quantities is the same; but there is not the same proportion between all the four; thus, 6:8::3:4. Harris.

DISCRETION. n. s. [from discretio, Lat.]
1. Prudence; knowledge to govern or direct one's self; skill; wise management.
Nothing thus was further thought upon than the number of governers, who were to be united into their wisdom and discretion which were to rule. Hooker.

A knife may be taken away from a child, with out depriving them of the benefits thereof which have years and discretion to use it. Hooker.

It is not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks have discretion, and know the world. Shakespeare.

All this was order'd by the good discretion Of the right reverend cardinal of York. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

The pleasure of commanding, our passions is to be preferred before any sexual pleasure; because it is the pleasure of wisdom and discretion. Tilletian.

But care in poetry must still be had, It asks discretion even in running mad. Pope.

There is no talent so useful towards rising in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune, than discretion, a species of low prudence. Swift.

2. Liberty of acting at pleasure; uncontrolled and unconditional power; as, he surrenders at discretion; that is, without stipulation.

DISCRETIONARY. adj. [from discretion.]
Left at large; unlimited; unrestrained.

A deacon may have a dispensation for entering into orders before he is twenty-three years of age; and it is discretionary in the bishop to admit him to that order at what time he thinks fit.
DIS

Aulphc's Paragon

The major being a person of consummate experience, was invested with a discretionary power.

DISCREETIVE, adj. [discretus, Lat.]

1. [In logick.] Discreet propositions are such wherein various, and seemingly opposite, judgments are made, whose variety or distinction is noted by the particles but, though, yet, &c., us, travellers may change their climate, but not their temper; Job was patient, though his grief was great. Watts.

2. [In grammar.] Discrete distinctions are such as imply opposition; as, not a man, but a beast. To Holder.

DISCRIMINABLE, adj. [from discriminate.]

Distinguishable by outward marks or tokens. Dict.

To DISCRIMINATE. v. a. [discrimino, Lat.]

1. To mark with notes of difference; to distinguish by certain tokens from another. Oysters and cockles and muscles, which move not, have no discriminate sex. Bacon's Nat. Hist. There are three sorts of it differing in figure from each other, and discriminated by the natives by three peculiar names. Hold. The right hand is discriminated from the left by a natural, necessary, and never to be confounded distinction. South. Although the features of his countenance be no reason of obedience, yet they may serve to discriminate him from any other person, whom she is not to obey. South. There may be ways of discriminating the voice; as by acuteness and gravity, the several degrees of raising and falling from one tone or note to another.

2. To select or separate from others. You owe little less for what you are not, than for what you are, to that discriminating mercy, to which alone you owe your exemption from severities. Boyle.

DISCRIMINATENESS. n. s. [from discriminate.] Distinction; marked difference. Dict.

DISCRIMINATION, n. s. [from discriminate.] The state of being distinguished from other particulars or things. There is a reverence to be showed them on the account of their discrimination from other places, and separation for sacred uses. Stillingfleet. In the act of distinguishing one from another; distinction; difference put. A phrase should express nothing but what is corrigible; and make a due discrimination between those that are, and those who are not, the proper objects of it. By that prudent discrimination made between the offenders of different degrees, he obliges those whom he has distinguished as objects of mercy. Addison's Freethinker.

3. The marks of distinction.

Take heed of setting any faction, or applying any publick discriminations in matters of religion. King Charles.

Letters arise from the first original discriminations of voice, by way of articulation, whereby the ear is able to judge and observe the differences of vocal sounds. Holder.

DISCRIMINATIVE, adj. [from discriminate.]

1. That which makes the mark of distinction characteristic. The only standing test, and discrimination characteristic of any metal or mineral, must be sought for in the constituent matter of it. Wood.

2. That which observes distinction. Discriminative Providence knew before the nature and course of all things. More's Antidote against Atheism.

DISCRIMINOUS, adj. [from discriminu, Lat.] Dangerous; hazardous. Not usual.

Any kind of spitting of blood imports a very discriminative state, unless it happens upon the gaping of a vein opened by a plectre. Harvey on Consumptiuns.

DISCUSITORY. adj. [discusitorius, Lat.]

Fitted to the posture of leaning. After battling they retired to bed, and refreshed themselves with a rest; and so that custom, by degrees, changed their cubicles into beds discriminator. Brown's Lady's Tuto.

DISCRIMINANCY. n. s. [discusancus, Lat.]

The act of leaning at meat, after the ancient manner. The Greeks and Romans used the custom of discriminator at meals, which was upon their left side: for so their right hand was free and ready for all service. Brown's Vulg.Essays.

To DISCOURS. v. a. [discourir, Fr.] To discover; to reveal. A word perhaps peculiar to Spenser. I'll, if please you, it discourse, assay. In a story of that kind. Fairy Queen.

DISCURSIVELY. adj. [discursif, from discursa, Lat.]

1. Moving here and there; roving; devious. Some noses help sleep; as the blowing of the wind, and the trickling of water. They move with a gentle attention; and whatsoever moveth attention, without too much labour, stilleth the natural and discriminative motion of the spirits. Benon.

2. Proceeding by regular gradation from premises to consequences; argumentative. This is sometimes, perhaps not improperly, written discursively. There is a sanctity of soul and body, of more efficacy for the receiving of divine truths, than the greatest pretences to accurate demonstration. More's Divine Dialogues. There hath been much dispute touching the knowledge of brutes, whether they have some kind of discriminative faculty, which some call reason. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

DISCURSIVELY. adv. [from discursive.]

By due gradation of argument. We have a principle within, whereby we think, and we know we think: whereby we do discern, and by way of ratiocination, deduce one thing from another. Hook.

DISCOURSORY. adj. [discursor, Lat.] Argumentative; rational.

DISCUPS, n. s. [Lat.] A quotient; a heavy piece of iron thrown in the ancient sports.

From Eleatus' strong arm the discus flies, And slings with unmatched force along the skies. Pope's Odyssey.

To DISCOURSE. v. a. [discuto, discussion, Lat.]

1. To examine; to ventilate; to clear by disquisition. We are to discourse only those general exceptions which will hinder. Holmes.

His usage was to commit the disquisition of causes privately to certain persons learned in the laws. Agellis's Paragon.

This knotty point should you and I discuss, Or tell a tale or two.

2. To disperse; commonly applied to a humour or swelling.

Many arts were used to discuss the beginnings of new affection. Shakesp.

3. To break to pieces.

Consider the threefold effect of Jupiter's triple, to burn, discuss, and teruncate. Brown's Vulg. Essays.

DISCOURSING, n. s. [from discourse.]

He that discusses; an examiner.

DISCOURAGEMENT. n. s. [from discourse.]

1. An acquisition; examination; ventilation of a question. Truth cannot be found without some labour and intention of the mind, and the thoughts dwelling a considerable time upon the survey and discussion of each particular. South. Various discourses near our heated brain: Opinions often turn; still doubts remain; And what indulges thought, increases pain. Pope.

2. In surgery. Discussion or resolution is nothing else but breasting out the humours by insensible transpiration. Wiseman.

DISCURSIY. adj. [from discourse.]

Having the power to discuss or disperse any noxious matter.

DISCANT. n. s. [discantus, Lat.] A melody that has power to repel or drive back the matter of tumours in the blood. It sometimes means the same as carminative. Quincy.

The swellings arising from these require to be treated, in their beginning, with moderate repelents and discanters. Wiseman.

To DISDAIN, v. a. [dédaignar, Fr.] To scorn; to consider as unworthy of one's character.

There is nothing so great, which I will fear to do for you; nor nothing so small, which I will abase to do for you. Sidney.

Disdain us as much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweet with wrath. Shakesp.

What safe and surely I might well delay By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn. Shak.

Tell him, Cato.

Disdains a life which he has power to offer. Adda.

DISDAIN, n. s. [degno, L.] Contempt; scorn; contemptuous anger; indignation.

Consider the being haughty, though disdain not want of nurture, do stain the nobility of their kindred. Dryden.

But against you, ye Greeks, ye coward tramps, God's how my soul is mord' with just disdain! Pope's Odyssey.

DISDAINFUL. adj. [disdainful and ful] Contemptuous; haughtily scornful, indignant.

There will come a time when three words, uttered with charity and meekness, shall receive a far more blessed reward, than three thousand volumes, written with disdainful sharpness of wit. Hooker.

The queen is obdurate, Stubbins to justice, apt 't accuse it, Disdainful to be tried by t'. Shakesp.

Seek through this grove;

A sweet Athenian lady is in love

With a disdainful youth: a mount his eyes:

But do when this thing he expels,

Shall be the lady. Shakesp.

But those I can accuse, I can forgive.

By my disdainful silence let them live. Dryden.

The disdainful soul came rushing through the wound. Dryden.

DISDAINFULLY. adv. [from disdainful]

Contemptuously; with haughty scorn; with indignation.
DIS

Either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more.

It is not to insult and dominion, to look disdainfully, and revile imperiously, that procures esteem from any one.

Dishableness, n.s. [from disdainful.] Ignominious; contemptuousness; haughtiness scorned.

She called the evil.
Shakespeare.
And as, in the thirty and ninth year of his reign, was disabled in his feet, and his disease was exceedingly great; and in his disease
he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians.

It is idle to propose remedies before we are assured of the disease, or to be in pain till we are Convinced of the danger.

Swift's Project for the Advancement of Religion.

In meats and drinks, which in the earth shall bring Diseases die.

Diseased, adj. [dis and edge.] Blunted; obtunded; dulled.

I grieve myself
To think, when ten shall be diseased by her
Whom now thou hast; and, how thy memory
Will then be pangs by me.

Disembark'd, adj. [dis and embark.] To carry to land.

I must, as to do disembark
Some necessary. Shakespeare. To You Gent. of Verona.

To Disembark. v. n. To land; to go land.

There disembarking on the green sea-side,
We land our cattle, and the spoil divide.

Pope's Odyssey.

To Disembitter. v. a. [dis and embitter.] To sweeten; to free from bitterness; to clear from acrimony; an unusual word.

Encourage such innocent amusements as may

Discourage the minds of men, and make them mutually rejoice in the same agreeable satisfactions.

Addison's Freeholder.

To Disembogue. v. a. [dis and embogue.] Divested of the body.

To Disembogue, v. a. [disemboucher, old Fr. Skinner.] To pour out at the mouth of a river; to vent.

River
In ample oceans destitute, or lost. Dryden.

Rolling down, the steep Timavo's waves,
And through nine channels disembogues his waves.

Addison.

To Disembogue. v. n. To gain a vent; to flow.

By eminences placed up and down the globe,
The rivers make hummerring turnings and windings;
and at last disembogue in several mouths into Chesnay.

Disembowelled, participial adj. [dis and embowel.] Taken from out the bowels.

So her disemboweled's web
Arabine in a ball or kitchen spreads,

Obvious to vagrant tides.

Philip.

To Disembroid. v. a. [debossiler, Fr.] To disentangle; to free from perplexity; to reduce from confusion.

Then earth from air, and seas from earth were disembroid.

And grosser air sunk from either hear'n;
Thus disembroid, they take their proper place.

Dryden.

The system of his polities is disembroidled, and clear of all those inscrutables and independent matters that are woven into this medley piece.

Addison's Whig Examiner.

To DisenSIDE. v. a. [dis and enable.] To deprive of power; to disable; to sink into weakness; to weaken.

Now age lives overtaken me; and want, a more inscrutable evil, through the change of the times, has wholly disenchanted me.

Dryden.

To Disenchant. v. o. [dis and enchant.] To free from the force of an enchantment; to deliver from the power of charms or spells.

Als! let your own brain disenchant you, Sidney.
Muse, stoop thy disenchanted wing to truth.

Swift.

To Disencumber. v. a. [dis and encumber.] To make free from impediments; to disencumber oneself of impediments; or to disencumber the ground.

Dryden.

To Disencumber. v. a. [dis and encumber.] To make free from encumbrances; to free from clogs and obstructions;

to disburthen; to exonerate.

It will use the actual intention, the particular stress and application of the whole soul, to disencumber and set it free, to scorn off its rest, and remove those hindrances which would otherwise clog and check the freedom of its operations. Spratt.

The disencumber'd soul.

Dreams look like the amusements of the soul, when she is disencumber'd of her machine; her sports and recreations, when she has laid her charge ascept.

Spectator.

To free from obstruction of any kind.

Disembark'd, adj. [disembark'd, heathe.] Shakespeare.

The church of St. Justine, designed by Palladio, is the most handsome, luminous, disencumbered building in the inside, that I have ever seen.

Addison on Italy.

Disencumbrance, n.s. [from the verb.] Freedom from encumbrance and obstruction.

There are many who make a figure below what their fortune bend entitles them to, out of mere elegancy, and an elegant desire of ease and disencumbrance.

Spectator.

To Disengage. v. a. [dis and engage.] To separate from any thing with which it is in union.

Some others, being very light, would float up and down a good while, before they could wholly disengage themselves and descend. Barnet's Theory.

To disengage; to clear from impediments or difficulties.

From civil broils let us disengage;

Fonrou nobler objects for our martial rage. Waller.

In the next paragraph, I found my author pretty dissipated with quotations.

Addison.

To disengage, applied to the affection; to withdraw, to abstract the mind.

It is requisite that we should acquaint ourselves with God, that we should frequently disengage
our hearts from earthly and worldly pursuits.

The consideration that should disengage our consolations from worldly things, is, that they are uncertain in their foundation; fading, transient, and corruptible in their nature.

Rogers.

To free from any powerful temptation.

When our mind's eyes are distant'd and free,
They clearer, farther, and distinctly see.

Denham.

To release from an obligation.

To Disengage, v. n. To set one's self free from; to withdraw one's affections from.

Provided gives us notice, by sensible declensions, that we may disengage from the world by degrees.

Addison in the Spectator.

Disengaged, participial adj. [from disengage]

1. Disjoined; disengaged.

2. Vacant; at leisure; not fixed down to any particular object of attention.

3. Released from obligation.

Disengagedness, n.s. [from disengage.] The quality of being disengaged; of being detached from any occupying business; disjunction.

Disengagement, n.s. [from disengage.]

1. Release from any engagement, or obligation.

2. Freedom of attention; vacancy.

To Disengage. v. a. [dis and entangle.] To unbind or lose the parts of any thing interwoven with one another.

Though in conjunctions particles to entangle one another, that they cannot in a short time clear themselves, yet do they incessantly strive to disengage themselves, and get away.

Boyle.

To set free from impediments; to disencumber; to clear from perplexity or difficulty.

Till they could find some expedient to explicate and disengage themselves out of this labyrinth, they made no advance towards supplying their armies.

Chadwick.

The welfare of their souls requires a better judgment than their own, either to guide them in their duty, or to disentangle them from a temptation.

South.

To disengage; to separate.

Neither can God himself be otherwise understood by us than as a mind free and disengaged from all corporeal mixtures.

Cotter on Thought.

To Disentangle, v. a. [dis and entangle.] To unbraid; to take out of the grave.

Though the blindness of some fanatics have savage on the bodies of the dead, and have been so injurious unto worms as to disentangle the bodies of the deceased, yet had they therein no design upon the soul.

Brown's Vulg. Enum.

To Disenthrall. v. a. [dis and enthrall.] To set free; to restore to liberty; to rescue from slavery.

536
Of Tomors, for Lavinia disown'd.

Milton.

Dise<st'em>, n. s. [from dis and estem.]

Slight regard; a disregard more moderate than contempt.

When any one, by miscarriage, falls into diestem, he will fall under neglect and contempt.

Locke.

To Dis<st'em>, v. a. [from the noun.]

To regard slightly; to consider with a slight degree of contempt.

Such was the rage of

South.

To Disenthrone, n. a. [dis and en-

To deposit from sovereignty; to dethrone.

Either to dethrone the King of heaven Our Way, or make be lost; or to regain

Our own right lost.

Milton.

To Disentrance, v. a. [dis and en-

To awaken from a trance, or doek sleep.

Rashly, by this time disentranced,

Upon his born advance' d

Himberus.

To Disespouse, v. a. [dis and es-

To separate after faith pledged.

Vol. I.

The rape.

Abute is their punishment,

Disfiguring not God's likeness, but their own,

Or, if his likeness, by themselves deface'd. Milton

Uriel, on the Assyrian mount,

Saw him digurd more than could beft

Spirit of happy sort. Milton

A nose flatter, or a mouth wider, could have consisted, as well as the rest of his figure, with such a soul and such parts as made him, disfigured as he was, capable to be a dignitary in the church.

Locke.

Nor would his slaughter'd arm now have lain

On Africa's sands, disfigur'd with their wounds,

To gorge the wolves and vultures of Numidit. Addison's Cato.

His long absence, and travels which had disfigur'd him, made him altogether unknown.

-Beaum on Epic Poetry.

Disfigurment. n. s. [from disfigure.]

Deformity of beauty; change of a better form to a worse.

The disfigurment that travel or sickness has bestowed upon him, is not thought great by the lady of the island.

And they, so perfect is their misery,

Once not perceive their foul disfigurment.

Milton's Comus.

To Disforest, v. a. [dis and forest.]

To reduce land from the privileges of a forest to the state of common land.

To Disfranchise. v. a. [dis and fran-

To deprive of privileges or immunities.

Disfranchisement. n. s. [from dis

Disfranchise.] The act of depriving of privileges.

Dict.

To Disfurnish, v. a. [dis and furnish.]

To deprive: to unburthen; to strip.

My riches are these poor habitations,

Of which if you should disfurnish me,

You take the sun and substance that I have. Shak.

He durst not disfurnish that country either of so great a commander, or of the wanted garrisons.

Klesower's History.

To Disgarnish, v. a. [dis and garnish.]

1. To strip of draperies. Dict.

2. To take guns from a fortress.

To Disgloify, v. a. [dis and glorify.]

To deprive of glory; to treat with indignity.

So Dagon shall be magnified, and God,

Besides I am no god, compare'd with idols,

Disfigur'd, blasphemed' and had in scorn. Milton.

To Disgorge, v. a. [degorgor, Fr. from gorge the throat.]

1. To discharge by the mouth; to spew out; to vomit.

So, so, thou common dog, distil thou disgorge

Thy putrid breath of the royal Richard's

Now and then wouldst eat thy dead vomit up.

Shakesp.

From the distant shore they loudly taught,

To see his heaving breast disgorge the briny draught.

Dryden.

2. To pour out with violence.

All his embazon'd moons and heady evils,

That thou with licence of foot last caught,

Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world? Shakesp.

The deep-drawing bars do there disgorge

Their warlike fragmang.

Shakesp.

Along the banks

Of four infernal rivers, that disgorge

Into the burning lake their baleful streams. Milton.

Countries much consumed with earthquakes and volcanoes; and these are constantly all in flames, whenever any earthquake happens; they disgorge that fire which was the cause of the disaster.

Disgrace, n. s. [disgrace, Fr.]

1. State of being out of favour.

2. State of ignominy; dishonour; state of shame.

To such bondage he was for so many courses tied by her, whose disgrace to him was greater by her excellence.

Sidney.

4. Cause of shame.

And it is not a foul disgrace.

To lose the boltsprit of thy face? Baynard.

And he whose infamy distain'd a place,

Thou'dt be the latest, makes it a disgrace. Brown.

To Disgrace, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To bring a reproach upon; to disho-nour, as an agent.

We may not so in any one special kind admire her, that we were disgrace her in any other; but let all her ways be according unto their place and degree adorned.

Men's passions will carry them far in misrepres-enting an opinion which they have a mind to disgrace.

Burnet.

2. To bring to shame, as a cause; as, his ignorance disgraced him.

3. To put out of favour; as, the minister was disgraced.

Disgraceful. adj. [disgrace and full.]

Shameful; ignominious; reproachful; procuring shame.

Masters must correct their servants with gentleness; however, and more, not with upbraiding and disgraceful language, but with such only as may express and remove the fault, and unveil the person.

Taylor's Rule of Living.

Hester.

To retire behind their characters, was a little disgraceful then, as it is now to alight from one's horse in a battle.

Hep.

Disgracefully. adv. [from disgraceful. In disgrace; with indignity; ignominiously.

The senate have cast you forth

Disgraci'd, to be the common tale

Of the whole city. Ben Jonson's Catesb.

Disgracefulness. n. s. [from disgraceful.] Ignominity.

Disgraze. n. s. [from disgrace.]

One that exposes to shame; one that causes ignominy.

I have given good advice to those infamous disgraceers of the sex and calling. Swift.

Disgrazious. adj. [dis and gracious.]

Unpleasing.

I do suspect I have done some offence,

That seems disgraceful in the city's eye. Shakesp.

To Disguise, v. a. [disguiser, Fr. dis and guiser.]

1. To conceal by an unusual dress.

How might we disguise him?

Alas! I know not; there is no woman's gown dark enough for him. Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Disguise'd he came; but those his children clear

Their parent soon discern'd through his disguise.

Milton.

2. To hide by a counterfeit appearance; to cloak by a false show: as, he disguised his anger.

3. To disguise: to change the form.

They saw the faces, which too well they knew.

Though they disgree'd in death, and ungu'd all

Over with filth obscure, and dropping patrid gore.

Dryden, Absurd.
DIS

More duteous at her call,
Than at the hour the herd disgae'd. Milton.
Ulysses wakes, not knowing the place he was;
but because Minerva made all things appear in a disguise, Deidamia. Pope.
4. To deform by liquor; a low term.
I have just left the right worshipful, and my Prymnyonds, about a sneaker of five gallons; the whole magazynery was pretty well disguised before
I gave them his specer. Spectator.

DISGUISE. n.s. [from the verb.]
1. A dress contrived to conceal the person that wears it.
They generally act in a disguise themselves, and make all outward show and appearances for hypocrisy in others. Addison.
Since I am in Artic cannot Artic find,
The world may search in vain with all their eyes,
But never penetrate through this disguise.
Dryden's Fables.
2. A false appearance; counterfeit show.
Hence guilty joys, distastes, sorrimes,
False oaths, false tears, deceites, disguises. Pope.
3. Disorder by drink.
We see we've burnt our candles; and mine own
Young tongue.
She knows the disguise to the last word.
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost

DISGUISEMENT. n.s. [from disguise.]
Dress of concealment.
Under that disguisement I should find opportunity to reveal myself to the owner of my heart.
Sidney.
The marquis thought best to disguise his beard, and told him, that he was going covertly to take a secret view of the forwarsness of his majesty's fleet: this did somewhat harselyly hurt the dis guisement. Walton.

DISGUISEs. n.s. [from disguise.]
1. One that puts on a disguise.
I hope he is grown more disingaged from his im tention on his own affairs, which is quite the re verse to you, unless you are a very desetuous dis guiseur. Swift.
2. One that conceals another by a disguise;
that disfigures.
Death's a great disguiser. Shakesp.

DISGUST. n.s. [dégout, Fr.]
1. Aversion of the palate from any thing.
2. Ill humour; malevolence; offence con ceived.
The manner of doing is of more consequence than the thing done, and upon that depends the satis faction or disgust where with it is received.
Thence dark disgust and hatred, winding wiles,
Coward deceit, and ruthless violence. Thomson.
To DISGUST. v.a. [dégouter, Fr. degrès-lu, Lat.]
1. To raise aversion in the stomach; to distaste.
2. To strike with dislikes; to offend. It is variously common all with out with.
He is not discret, the word is.
If he was never disguiseed at marriage, he would never recommend it to his friend. Atterbury.
Those unenlightened souls are disguished with the wonders which the microscope has discovered.
3. To produce aversion: with from.
What disgusts me having to do with an swer-jobbers, is, that they have no conceit.
Swift.

DISGUSTFUL. adj. [disgust and fall.
Nausous; that which causes aversion.
I have finished the most disgustful task that ever
I undertook. Swift.

DISH. n.s. [Sax. Dys, Dysc, Erse; dis
s, Lat.]
1. A broad wide vessel, in which food is served up at the table.
2. A dish of the second course; a small bowl.
3. A cloth to serve in; a napkin.
4. A dish of the first course; a large bowl.
5. A broad wide dish.

DISHABILLE. n.s. [from the verb.
Dishabillage.
6. A state of nakedness.
7. A state of nakedness.

DISH-CLOTH. n.s. [dish and cloth.]
The cloth with which the maids rub their dishes.
A dish-cloth of Jaquemette's wears next his heart for a favour. Shakesp. Love's Labour Lost.
Send them up to their masters with a dish-cloth plated at their tails. Swift's Directions to the Cook.

DISH-WASHER. n.s. [dish and washer.]
The name of a bird: mergus.

DISHABILABLE. adj. [deshabillable, Fr.
Undressed; loosely or negligently dressed.
Those are not to be too negligingly dressed or dishabille. Dryden's Defoeus.

DISHABILABLE. n.s. Undress; loose dress.
A woman, who would preserve a lover's ress, etc to her person, will be careful of her appearance before him when in dishabillé. Chatter.

To DISHABILATE. v.a. [This word I have found only in Shakespeare.] To throw out of place; to drive from their habi tation.
But for our approach those sleeping stones
By the companion of this night's repose;
By this time from their fresh beds of lime
Had been dishabill'd, and wide havoc made.
Shakesp. King Lear.

DISHARMONY. n.s. [dis and harmony.
Contrariety to harmony.
To DISHAETEN. v.a. [dis and hearten.]
To discourage; to despect; to terrify; to depress.
To dishàten with fearful sentences, as though salvation could hardly be hoped for, is not so con sonant with Christian charity. Hooker.
Be not dishàten'd then, nor cloud those books
That won't be more cheerful and serene. Milton.
Yet neither thus dishàten'd nor dismay'd it.
The time prepar'd I wait'd. Milton.
1. Without faith; without probity; faithlessly; wickedly.
   I protest he had the chain of me, Tho' more, or less, and all to thine.
   Shakep.

2. Lewdly; wantonly; unchastely.
   A wise daughter shall bring an inheritance to her husband but she that liveth dishonesty is her husband's unfaithfulness.
   Ecclus. xvi. 1.

DISHONESTY, n. s. [from dishonest.]

1. Want of probity; faithlessness; violation of trust.
   Their fortune depends upon their credit, and a stain of open public dishonesty must be to their disadvantage.
   S.

2. Unchastity; incontinence; lewdness.
   Mrs. Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous food to her husband! I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?—Heaven be my witness do you, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.
   Shakep.

DISHONOUR, n. s. [dis and honour.]

1. Reproach; disgrace; ignominy.
   Let not my jealousies be your dishonours.

He was pleased to warn Lazarus even in the dishonours of the grave, and vouchsafed him, in that despicable condition, the glorious title of his friend.
   Bacon's Ser. Plen. Disp. 10.

Take him for your husband and your lord;
'Tis no dishonour to confer your grace.
On one descended from a royal race.
Dryd. Fables.

2. Reproach uttered; censure; report of infamy.
   So good, that no tongue could ever pronounce dishonour of her; by my life She never knew harm doing.
   Shakep. Hen. VIII.

To DISHONOUR, v. a. [dis and honour.]

1. To disgrace; to bring shame upon; to blast with infamy.
   It is no vicious blot, mother, or baseness, No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step, That hath deprived me of your grace and favour.
   Shakep.

This no more dishonours you at all, Than to take in a town with gentle words, Which else would put you to your fortune.
Shakep. Coriol.

A woman that honoureth her husband, shall be judged wise of all; but she that dishonoureth him in her pride, shall be counted ungodly of all.
Ecc. xxvi. 26.

We are not so much to strain ourselves to make those virtues appear in us which really we have not, as to avoid those impositions which may dishonour us.
Dryden's Illiad.

2. To violate chastity.

One glorious of glory to my issue give, Grace'd for the little time he has to live; Dishonour'd by the king of men he stands; His rightful prize is ravish'd from his hands.
Shakep.

DISHONOURABLE, adj. [from dishonour.]

1. Shameful; reproachful; ignominious.
   He did dishonourable find.

Those articles which did our state disgrace. Dan.

2. Being in a state of neglect or dessteem.
   He that is homorous to poverty: how much more in riches? he that is dishonourable in riches, how much more in poverty? Ecclus. v. 21.

DISHONOURER, n. s. [from dishonour.]

1. One that treats another with indignity.
   Preaching how meritorious with the gods
   It would be to enounce an unceremonious
   Dishonour of Dagon.
   Milton.

2. A violater of chastity.

To DISHORN, v. a. [dis and horn.]

1. To strip of horns.
   One will dishorn the spirit,
   And mock him home to Windsor.
   Shakep.

2. The state of being cut off from any hereditary right.

In respect of the effects and evil consequences, this is the most of the woman's cause, as bringing bastardy into a family, and dishonours or great injuries to the lawful children.
Taylor.

To DISINHERIT, v. a. [dis and inherit.]

To cut off from an hereditary right; to deprive of an inheritance.

It is then just with us to disinherit
The upright negro for the father's fault! Dan.

Unmolested, ye fairest stars; and thou, fair moon, Stamp thy pale visage through the amber cloud,
And disherit that reigns here.

In double night of darkness, and of slander. Mill.

Postern stands cuck'd! fair patronize
That I must leave ye, sons! O were I able
To waste it all myself, and leave ye none;
So disinterested, how would ye bless
Me, now ye curse!

Milton.

Of how far a portion Adam disinherit his whole posterity by one single prerogative? South.

To DISINTER, r. o. [from dis and inter.]

To unbury; to take out of the grave.

The philosopher, the saint, or the hero, the sage, or the great man, very often lie hid and concealed in a pietist, which a proper education might have disinterred.
Addison.

DISINTERESTED, adj. [dis and interest, Fr.]

It is written disinterested by those who derive it immediately from interest, and I think more properly.

Without regard to private advantage; not biased by particular views; impartial.

That selfish part of a man, so often here,
When general, old, disinterred, and clear.
Dryd.

DISINTERESTMENT, n. s. [dis and interestment, Fr.]

Disregard to private advantage; disinterest; disinterestedness.

This word, like charges in the same sentence, is merely Gallic.

He has managed some of the charges of the kingdom with known ability, and laid them down with entire disinterestment.
Prior's Pastiche.

DISINTEREST, n. s. [dis and interest.]

1. What is contrary to one's wish or prosperity; that which any one is concerned to prevent.

They judge it the great disinterest to Rome.

Glantick.

2. Indifference to profit; superiority to regards of private advantage.

DISINTERESTED, adj. [from disinterest.]

1. Superior to regard of private advantage; not influenced by private profit.

As disinterested you appear to the world, no man is more in the power of that prevailing false vanity, which then to confest.
Sept.

2. Without any concern in an affair; with out fear or hope

DISINTERESTEDLY, adv. [from disinterested.]

In a disinterested manner.

DISINTERESTEDNESS, n. s. [from disinterested.]

Contempt of private interest; neglect of personal profit.

These expressions of selfishness and disinterestedness have been used in a very loose and indeterminant manner.

To DISINTERTRIGUE, v. a. [dis and intrigue.]

To disintertrigue.

Diet.

To DISJOINT, v. a. [dis and join.]

To separate; to part from each other; to disunite; to sunder.

Diet.
DISJUNCTION

3. [In logic.] A disjunctive proposition is when the parts are opposed to one another by disjunctive particles: as, It is either dark or light. The weather is either shining or rainy. Quantity is either length, breadth, or depth. The truth of disjunctives depends on the necessary and immediate opposition of the parts, therefore only the last of these examples is true: but the two first are not strictly true; because twilight is a medium between day and night; and dry cloudy weather is a medium between shining and raining. Watts's Logic.

A disjunctive syllogism is when the major proposition is disjunctive as, the earth moves in a circle, or an ellipse; but it does not move in a circle, therefore it moves in an ellipse.

DISJUNCTIVE. adv. [from disjunctive].

Distinctly; separately.

What he observes of the numbers disjunctively and apart, reason suggests to be applicable to the whole body united.

Causes of the Decay of Piety.

from

DISK. n. s. [discus, Lat.]

1. The face of the sun, or any planet, as it appears to the eye.

The disk of Phobus, when he climbs on high, appears at first as but a bloodshot eye. Dr. Druce.

It is to be considered, that the rays, which are equally refrangible, do fall upon a circle answering to the sun's disk.

Newton.

Mercury's disk can scarcely be caught by the philosophic eye.

Lost in the far vallies of the moon.

Thomson.

2. A broad piece of iron thrown in the ancient sports; a quoit.

The crystal of the eye, which in a fish is a ball, in any land animal is a disk or bowl; being hereby fitted for the cleaner sight of the object.

Gree.

In areas varied with mossy turf.

Some whil the disk, and some the javelin dart.

PoPE.

DISKINDNESS. n. s. [dis and kindness.]

1. Want of kindness; want of affection; want of benevolence.

2. Ill turn; injury; act of malignity; detriment.

This discourse is so far from doing any diskindness to the cause, that it does it a real service.

Postward.

from

DISLIKE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Disinclination; absence of affection; the contrary to fondness.

He then took them, and tempering goodly well Their contrary dishes with a lovely meal,

Did place them all in order, and compell To keep themselves within their sordid reigns,

Together link'd with adamantine chains

Spencer.

Your dishes, to whom I would be pleasing,

Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

ShAKEp.

God's grace, that principle of his new birth, gives him continual dislike to sin.

Hammond's Proct Catechism.

Our likings or dislikes are founded rather upon honour and fancy, than upon reason.

L'EtRANGE.

Sorrow would have been as silent as thought, as severe as philosophy. It would have rested in inward senses, taint dislikes.

South.

The jealous man is not angry if you dislike another, but if you find those faults which are in his own character, you discover not only your dislike of another, but of himself.

Addison.

1. Incapable of union.

Such principles, whose atoms are of that disjunctive nature, as not to be united in a sufficient number to make a visible mass.

Gree.

2. That which marks separation or opposition as, I love him, or fear him.

This sense is not now in use.
To DISMISS. v. a. [dimissus, Latt.]
1. To send away.
To DISMIS. See DISMISS.
2. To dismiss from any office or place.
Not only thou depravest of them, or revivest to life obscure, which were a fair dishonour; but throwst them lower than thou didst exist them high.
Milton's Dunciad.
3. To discard; to divest of office.
To DISMIS'sion. n.s. [from dimissio, Lat.]
1. Dispatch; a set of sending away.
So proud, so greatly she descends from high.
It seems a soft dishonour from the sky.
Dryden.
2. An honourable discharge from any office or place.
To DISMIS'sion. v. a. [dis and mortgage.]
To Dismortgage.
To Dismount.
To DISMOUNT. v. a. [from dismount.]
1. To throw off an horse.
This flying steed unbrid'ed, as once Bellerophon, though from a lower elme,
Dismounted, on the Achean field I fall.
Milton.
2. To throw from any elevation or place of honour.
To DISMOUNT. v. n. [from dismount.]
To throw from any elevation or place.
To DISMOUNT. n. u. [from dismount.]
1. To throw a cannon from its carriage.
The Turks artillery, planted against that tower, was by the Christian cannoners dismounted with shot from the tower, and many of the gunsman.
Knolles.
2. To descend from an elevation.
To DISMOUNT. v. n. [from dismount.]
To dismount.
To Dismount.
To DISMOUNT. v. a. [from dismount.]
1. To throw off an horse.
When he came within sight of that prodigious army at Agincourt, he ordered all his cavalry to dismount, and implore upon their knees a blessing.
Addison's Frenehid.
2. To descend from an elevation.
To DISMOUNT. v. a. [dis and naturalize.] To ablend to make alien; and deprive of the privileges of birth.
DISMOURN. adj. [dis and nature.] Unnatural; wanting natural tenderness; devoid of natural affection. Unusual.
3. To throw a cannon from its carriage.
This flying steed unbrid'ed, as once Bellerophon, though from a lower elme, Dismounted, on the Achean field I fall.
Milton.
2. To throw from any elevation or place of

To DISORDER. n.s. [dis and obedience.]
1. Violation of lawful command or prohibition; breach of duty due to superiors. To obedience of body that she hath committed; and this deceit loses the name of craft.
Shakespeare.
2. Murder, adultery, or disobedience to parents, has a general notion antecedently to law. Noltingent.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of disobedience, or undutiful title. Shakespeare.
3. Of man's first disobedience, and the fruit.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
Of that forbidden tree, sing heavily muse. Milt.
DISOBEDIENT. \textit{adj.} [dis and obedient.] Not observant of lawful authority; guilty of the breach of lawful commands, or prohibitions. The man of God was disobedient unto the word of the Lord. 1 Kings, viii. 26.

To DISOBEDY. v. a. [dis and obey.] To break commands, or transgress prohibitions. She absolutely bade him, and he durst not know how to disobey. Sidney.

DISOBSTRUCTION. n. s. [dis and obligation.] Offence; cause of disgust. If he be accused from what he had promised, it would be such a disobstruction to the prince that he would never forget it. Charenton.

There can be no malice, and consequently no crime or disobstruction.

To DISOBIDGE. v. a. [dis and oblige.] To offend; to disgust; to give offence to. A term by which offence is tenderly expressed.

Ashley had been removed from that charge, and was thereby so much disoblige, that he quitted the party. 3. Her. Dict. These, though in highest place, who slight and disoblige their friends, shall infallibly come to know the value of them, by having none when they shall most need them. Bacon.

It is in the power of more particular persons in this kingdom, than in any other, to distress the government, when they are disoblige, Addison's Freeloader.

My plan has given offence to some gentlemen, whom it would not be very safe to disoblige. Addison's Guardian.

We love and esteem our clergy, and are apt to lay some weight upon their opinion, and would not willingly disoblige them. Swift.

Soji concerning the Sacramental Test. If a woman suffers her lover to see she is both to disoblige him, let her beware of an encænest, Clarion.

DISOBLIGING, participialadj. [from disoblige.] Disgusting; unpleasing; offensive.

Peremptoriness can beft no form of understanding: it renders wise men disobligeable and troublesome, and foils ridiculous and contemptible persons.

DISOBLIGINGLY. adv. [from disobligeing.] In a disgusting or offensive manner; without attention to please. DISOBLIGINGNESS. n. s. [from disobligeing.] Offensiveness; readiness to disgust.

DISORDERED. adj. [dis and orb.] Thrown out of the proper orbit.

Fly like clidien Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disordered. Shak. Troilus and Cressida.

DISORDER. n. s. [dis and order; disorder, Fr.] 1. Want of regular disposition; irregularity; confusion; immethodical distribution.

When I read an account of genius without method, I fancy myself in a wood that abounds with many noble objects, rising among another in the greatest confusion and disorder. Spectator.

2. Tumult; disturbance; bustle.

A greater favour this disorder brought Upon her servants, than their awful thought Durst entertain, when thus compass’d they press The yielding marble of her snowy breast. W. Walker.

3. Neglect of rule; irregularity.

DISORDERLY. adv. [from disorder.] 1. Without rule; without method; irregularly; confusedly.

DISORDER. n. s. [vulgar bounds with disordered part; and swarm a grace beyond the reach of art. Pope. 4. Breach of laws; violation of standing institutions. There reigned in all men blood, manslaughter, discovering of good men, forgetfulness of good turns, and disorder in marriages. Hud. xiv. 5. Breach of that regularity in the animal economy which causes health; sickness; distemper. It is used commonly for a slight disease.

Pleasure and pain are only different constitutions of the mind, sometimes occasioned by disorder in the body, or sometimes by thoughts in the mind. Locke.

To DISORDER. v. a. [dis and order.]

1. To throw into confusion; to confound; to put out of method; to disturb; to ruffle; to confuse.

Eve, Not so repuls’d, with tears that eased not flowing, And terrors all disorder’d, at his feet fell humble. Milton.

You disorder’d heap of ruin lies. Stones root from stones, where clouds of dust arise. Dryden.

The incursions of the Goths, and other barbarous nations, disordered the affairs of the Roman empire. Addison.

2. To make sick; to disturb the body; as, my dinner disorders me.

3. To decompose; to disturb the mind.

4. To turn out of holy orders; to depose; to strip of ecclesiastical vestments.

Let him be strict, and disordered; I would fain see him walk in quero, that the world may behold the inside of a friar. Dryden's Span. Friar.

DISORDERED. adj. [from disorder.] Disorderly; irregular; vicious; base; unrestrained in behaviour; debauched.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and sires Men disorder’d, so debauch’d and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners, Shews like a riotous inn. Shakes. King Lear.

DISORDEREDNESS. n. s. [from disorder’d.] Irregularity; want of order; confusion.

By that disorder’dness of the soldiers, a great advantage was lost. Addison.

DISORDERLY. adj. [from disorder.]

1. Confused; immethodical; without proper distribution.

Those obsolete laws of Henry I. were but disorder’d, came and general things; rather cases and shells of administration than institutions. Hale.

2. Irregular; tumultuous.

They thought it the extremest of evils to put themselves at the mercy of those hungry and disorder’d people. Bacon.

His thoughts, which are the pictures and results of passions, are generally such as naturally arise from those disorder’d motions of our spirits. Dryden.

A disorder’d multitude contending with the body of the legislature, is like a man in a fit under the conduct of one in the fullness of his health and strength. Addison.

3. Lawless; contrary to law; inordinate; contrary to the rules of life; vicious.

He reproved them for their disorder’d assemblies against the peaceable people of the realms. Hayward.

DISORDERLY. adv. [from disorder.]

Without rule; without method; irregularly; confusedly.

DISORDINATE. adj. [dis and ordinate.] Not living by the rules of virtue; inordinate.

These not disordinate, yet causeless suffer.

The punishment of dissolute days. Swift. Agamemnon.

DISORDINATELY. adv. [from disordinate.] Inordinately; viciously.

DISORDERENTED. adj. [dis and orient.] Turned from the east; turned from the right direction; thrown out of the proper place.

Harris.

To DISOWN. v. a. [dis and own.] 1. To deny; not to allow.

Then they, who brother’s better claim dunned, Expel their parents, and usurp the throne.

Dryden's Aelia.

2. To abrogate; to renounce.

When an author has publickly disowned a spurious piece, they have disputed his name with him. Swift.

DISPAND. v. a. [dispand, Lat.] To display; to spread abroad. Diet.

DISPANN. n. s. [from dispavse, Lat.] The act of displaying; the act of spreading; diffusion; dilatation.

To DISPARAGE. v. a. [from dispar, Lat.]

1. To marry any one to another of inferior condition.

2. To match unequally; to injure by union with something inferior in excellence.

3. To injure by a comparison with something of less value.

1. To treat with contempt; to mock; to flout; to reproach.

Abaz, his sottish conqueror, he drew God's altar to disparage and displace, For one of Syrian mode. Milton's Par. Lost. Thou dost not thus disparage glorious arms, Which greatest heroes have in battle won, Their ornament and safety. Milton's Agamemnon. They will resolve That which they love most tenderly; Quarter with mine'ed pies, and disparage Their best and dearest friend, plum-pudding. Hudson.

5. To bring reproach upon; to be the cause of disgrace.

How shall frail pen, with fear dispa'ried, Conceive such sovereign glory and great bountifl'd? Spenser.

His religion sat easily, naturally, and gracefully upon him, without any of those forbidding appearances which sometimes dispa'ried the actions of men sincerely pious. Atterbury.

DISPAREGMEN T. n. s. [from disparge.] 1. Injurious union or comparison with something of inferior excellence.

They take it for a disparagement to set themselfes with any other than the enemies of the publick peace. E. Strange.

2. [in law.] Matching an heir in marriage under his or her degree, or against decency. Cowell.

You wrongfully do require Mopsa to so great a disparagement, as to wed her father's servant. Sidney.

She was much affected to her own kinsman, which did not greatly enrage in the lords of the king's side, who counted her blood a disparagement to be mingled with the king's. Bacon.

3. Reproach; disgrace; indignity.
D I S

Gentle knight,
That doth against the dead his hand uprear,
His honour stains with rancour and deslight,
And great disparagement makes to his name.

Spenser.

In a commonwealth, much disparagement is occasioned, when able spirits, attracted by a familiarity, are involved with faction. Watton.

'Tis no disparagement to philosophy, that it cannot delire us.

Rogers.

Reason is a weak, diminutive light, compared to revelation; but it ought to be no disparagement to a star that it is not a sun.

Spenser.

Rely upon your heart, and dare a disparagement of that to talk of conditions, when you are certain of making your own terms.

Southern's Innocent Adultery.

4. It has to be before the person or thing dispersed.

To Them, nor when, that were dispersed.

Tate's Juntled.

1. Inequality; difference in degree either of rank or excellence.

Between Elia and the rest of Job's familiars, the greatest disparity was but in years. Hooker.

Among unequals, what society can sort, what harmony or true delight which must be mutual, in proportion due when received, but in disparity, the one intense, the other still reless.

Tate's Juntled.

Can sort, what society can sort, what harmony or true delight which must be mutual, in proportion due when received, but in disparity, the one intense, the other still reless.

Tate's Juntled.

Between Elia and the rest of Job's familiars, the greatest disparity was but in years. Hooker.

Among unequals, what society can sort, what harmony or true delight which must be mutual, in proportion due when received, but in disparity, the one intense, the other still reless.

Tate's Juntled.

2. Dissimilitude; unlikeness.

To DISPARK. v. a. [dis and park.]

To draw by scattering; to dissipate.

If the sight
Have gathered'd out of evil, or conceiv'd
Disperse it, as now light disperses the dark. Milton.

When the spirits bring light unto our minds, it disperses darkness; but as we do that of the sun at noon, and need not the twilight of reason to shew it.

Lecter.

To DISPEL. v. a. [dispello, Lat.]

To drive by scattering; to dissipate.

Thus the low'd dispers'dly resigns. Earth.

DISPENSATION. n. s. [from dispence.]

The place where medicines are dispensed.

To the low'd dispers'dly resigns. Earth.

DISPENSATION. n. s. [from dispence, Lat.]

1. Distribution; the act of dealing out anything.

This perpetual circulation is constantly promoted by a dispensation of water abundantly and diffusely to all parts of the earth. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

2. The dealing of God with his creatures; method of providence; distribution of good and evil.

God delights in the trinities of his own choice, and the methods of grace, in the economy of heaven, and the dispensations of eternal happiness.

Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

Neither is God's methods or intentions different in his dispensions to each private man. Rogers.

Do thou, my soul, the destin'd period wait.

When God shall solve the dark decrees of fate;

His will may be fulfilled, and make all wise and beautiful appear. Tickell.

3. An exemption from some law; a permission to do something forbidden; an allowance to omit something commanded.

A dispensation was obtained to enable Dr. Parrow to marry. Ward.

DISPENSATOR. n. s. [Lat.]

One employed in dealing out anything; a distributer.

As her majesty hath made them dispensators of her favour towards her people, so it behoved them to shew themselves equal dispensers of the same.

Bacon.

DISPENSATORY. n. s. [from dispence.]

A book in which the composition of medicines is described and directed; in the Greek, a Pharmacopoeia.

The description of the ointment is found in the chemical dispensatory. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

A whole dispensatory was little enough to meet with, and suffice to all their wants.

Hammond.

Our materia medica is large enough; and, to look into immortalities, one would think no disease incurable.

Rogers.

To DISPENSE. v. a. [dispellor, Fr.]

1. To deal out; to distribute.

There now, that were dispersed.

Bunyan.

The burner of many hearts, on one light,

And you, my lyre, my government, my fortune,

Among equal, above each, below his own,

The great, the mean, the stars, the goats.

Milton.

To them as his wisdom and fashion,

Lines of Poets.

At length the nurse's stand restored again.

When you dispense the laws, and guide the state.

Dronden.

5. To dispense with: before persons. To set free from an obligation. This construction seems ungrammatical.

I could not dispense with myself from making a voyage to Capetown. Addison on Italy.

To DISPENSE. v. a. [dispendes, parsounds, basts.]

The spirit of winds.

Dispense.

DISPENSE. n. s. [from the verb] Dispen-sation; exemption; not in use.

Upon a voyage.

Then reliefs, breads, indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bull's, the spirit of winds.

Milton.

DISPENSE. n. s. [from dispence.] One that dispenses; one that deals out any thing; a distributer.

The dispensers of that faith.

Sprat.

Those who stand before earthly princes, who are the dispensers of their favours; and conveyers of their will to others, challenge high honours.

Atterbury.

To DISPEOPLE. v. a. [dis and prop.]

To depeopulate; to empty of people.

The Irish, banished into the mountains, where they lived only upon white meats, seeing their lands so depeopled and weakened, came down into their inheritance.

Sprat.

Conflagrations, and great droughts, do not merely depeople, but destoy the land. Bacon.

His heart exalts him in the harm.

Already done, to have depeopled heav'n.

Milton.

Kings, furious and severe.

Who claim'd the skies, depeopled air and floods.

The lowly lords of empty winds, and woods. Pope.

DISPEOPLE. n. s. [dispeople.] A depeopulator; a waster.

Nor dran' i fonds the golden carpe to take;

Nor towele for pikes, dispellers of the lake. Gay.

To DISPERSE. v. a. [disperso, Lat.]

To sprinkle; to scatter.

Shakespeare.
To DISPERSE. v. a. [dispersus, Lat.] 1. To scatter; to drive to different parts.
   And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the earth.
   Exch. xxxvi. 19.

2. To dissipate. Soldiers, disperse yourselves. Shakespeare.
   Have gathered aught of evil, or conceald
   Disperse it, as now light disperses the dark. Milton.

3. To deal about; to distribute.
   Being a king that loved wealth, he could not endure to have trade sick, nor any obstruction to continue in the gate wherein disperses that blood.

DISPERSELY, adv. [from dispersed.] In a dispersed manner; separately.
   The exquisitely wits of some few, peculiarly are able, dispersedly here and there, to find now a word, and then a sentence, which may be more probably suspected, than easily cleared, of error.
   Hooker.

Those minerals are either found in grains, dispersedly intermixed with the corporcles of earth or sand, or else amassed into balls or nodules.

Woodward.

DISPERSION. n. s. [from dispersed.]
   The state of being dispersed; dispersion.

DISPERSION. n. s. [from dispersed.]
   Thinness; scatteredness.
   The torrid parts of Africk are by Pisa resembled to a fistard's skin, the distance of whose spots represent the dispersions of habitations or towns in Africk.
   Brevi ware on Languages.

DISPERSER. n. s. [from dispersed.]
   A scatterer; a disturber.
   Those who are pleased with defamatory libels,
   so far as to approve the authors and dispersers of them,
   are as guilty as if they had composed them.
   Spectator.

DISPERSION. n. s. [from dispersed, Lat.]
   1. The act of scattering or spreading.
   2. The state of being scattered.
   Noah began to diuscern his dispersion. Raleigh.

After so many dispersions, and so many divisions,
two or three of us may yet be gathered together.

Pope.

To DISIPRIT. v. a. [dis and spirit.]
   1. To discourage; to deject; to depress; to damp; to terrify; to intimidate; to fright; to strike with fear.
   Certain it is, that the poor man appeared so dispirited, that he spoke but few words after he came upon the scaffold.
   Clarendon.

The providence of God strikes not in with them,
but dashes; and even dispers, all their endeavours,
and makes their designs heartless and ineffectual.

Steady to my principles, and not dispirited with my afflictions, I have overcome all difficulties.

Dryden.

And all the honours that are paid him, he feels nothing in himself but a poor, weak, dispirited mortal, yielding to the laws of corruption.
   Rogers.

2. To exhaust the spirits; to oppress the constitution of the body.
   He has dispirited himself by a debauch, and drunk away his good humour.

Dispiritedness. n. s. [from dispirit.]
   Want of vigour; want of vivacity.

Dict.

To DISPLACE. v. a. [dis and place.]
   1. To put out of place; to place in another situation as, the chemmen are displaced.

2. To put out of any state, condition, office, trust, or dignity.

To displace any who are in, upon displeasure, is by all means to be avoided, unless there be a man nifest cause for it.

Abdel, who commands
The city, is the prince's friend, and therefore Must be displace'd, and thou shalt stand succeed him.

Dryden.

A religion, established by God himself, should not be disarranged by this; and the dispensation of that divine power that first introduced it.

South.

One man may be displace'd, and one may reign;
And want of merit render birthright vain.

Dryden.

3. To disorder. You have displace'd the ninth, broke the good meeting.
   With most admir'd disorder.

Shakespeare.

DISPLACENCY. n. s. [displecic, Lat.]
   1. Incivility; disobedience.
   2. Discord; anything unpleasing.
   The discrepancies that he receives, by the conse quences of his excess, far outweigh all that is grateful in it.

Decay of Piety.

To DISPLAINT. v. a. [dis and plant.]
   1. To remove a plant.
   The northern wind his wings did broadly
   At his command, and reared him up light.
   Fairy Queen.

There he him found all carelessly
   In secret shadow from the sunny ray.
   The bright of dreams, and the milky way.

Fairy Queen.

2. To exhibit to the sight or mind.
   You speak not like yourself, who ever yet Have stood to chalybe and displace'd the terrible
   Of disposition gentle.
   Shakespeare.

Then heaven's alternate beauty can't display
   The blush of morning, and the milky way.

Dryden.

The works of nature, and the words of revelation, display truth to mankind in characters so visible,
that those, who are not quite blind, may read.

Loki.

The storm the dark Lycean groves displayed
   And first to light expos'd the sacred shade.
   Pope's Statues.

Say how this instrument of love began.
   In immortal strains display the flat.
   Gay.

3. To carve; to cut up.
   He carves, displaies, and cuts up to a wonder.
   Spectator.

4. To talk without restraint.
   The very fellow which of late
   Display'd so wilyly against our highness.
   Shakespeare.

5. To set ostentatiously to view.
   They are all couched in a pit, with obscured lights; which, at the very instant of our meeting, they will at once display to the light.
   Shakespeare.

DISPLAITY. n. s. [from the verb.]
   An exhibition of any thing to view.
   Our enabled, by which, the wings of the morning to visit the world above us, and have a glorious display of the highest form of created excellencies.

Glamis.

D I S

When the way of pleasing or displeasing is not by the favourite, it is impossible any other is to be over great.

To DISPOLE, n. a. [displode, Lat.] To disperse with a loud noise; to vent with violence.

Stood rank’d of seraphin another row,

To disperse their second time.

Of Thunder.

Milton.

DISPLOSION, n. s. [from displodes, Lat.] The act of dispersing; a sudden burst or dispersion with noise and violence.

DISPLORT, n. s. [dis and sport.] Play; sport; pastime; diversion; amusement; merriment.

She list not hear, but her indisposed

And ever came he stay, till time the tide renew’d.

His indisposed were ingenuous and manlike, where he always learned something.

Hayward on Ed. VI.

She busied, heard the sound.

Of rustling leaves; but minded not, as us’d

To such disport before her through the field.

Milton.

To DISPORT. v. a. [from the noun.] To divert.

He often, but attended with weak guard,

Comes biding this way to disport himself.

Shak.

To DISPORT. v. a. To play; to toy; to wanton.

Fresh gales and gentle airs.

Whisper’d it to the woods, and from their wings

Distant leaves.

Disporting!

Milton.

Loose to the winds their airy garments swell;

The glitt’ring textures of the finly dew

Dipt in the richest fleck of the skies,

Where light disports in ever mingling dyes.

Pope.

DISPOSLAL, n. s. [from dispose.]

1. The act of disposing or regulating any thing; regulation; dispensation; distribution.

Tax not divine disposal; wisest men

Have err’d, and by bad women been deluded.

2. The power of distribution; the right of bestowing.

Are not the blessings both of this world and the next in his disposal?

Atterbury.

3. Government; management; conduct.

We shall get more true and clear knowledge by one rule, than by taking up principles, and there by putting our minds into the disposal of others.

Locke.

4. Establishment in a new state; dismission into new hands.

I am called off from public dissertations by a domestic affair of great importance, which is no less than the disposal of my sister Jenny for life.

Totten, No. 75.

To DISPOSE. v. a. [disposer, Fr. disposer, Lat.]

1. To employ to various purposes; to diffuse.

Thus, whilst she did her various powr dispose,

The world was free from tyrants, wars, and woes.

Prior.

2. To give; to place; to bestow.

Yet see, when noble benefits shall prove

Not well disposed, the mind grown once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly

Than ever they were fair.

Shaksp.

Of what you gathered, as most your own, you have disposed such in works of public piety.

3. To turn to any particular end or consequence.

Endure, and conquer; Jove will soon dispose

To future good our past and present woes.

Dryg.

dispose

4. To adapt; to form for any purpose.

These when the knights betl’d, they gave dispose

Themselfe to court, and each a daunsel chose.

Spenser.

But if the list unto the court to throng,

And there to haunt after the hoped preys,

Then must thor’ thee dispose another way.

Hudibras’s Tale.

5. To frame the mind; to give a propension; to incline: with ro.

Suspicions dispose kings to tyranny, husbands to jealousy, and wise men to irresolution and melancholy.

Bacon.

The memory of what they had suffered, by being without it, easily dispose them to this.

Clarendon.

He knew the seat of Paradise;

And, as he was dispose’d, could prove it

Below the moon, or else above it.

Hadibras.

This dispose men to believe what it teaches,

To follow what it advises.

Temp.

A man might do this now if he were maliciously disposed,

And had a mind to bring matters to extremity.

Dryden.

Although the frequency of prayer and fasting may be of no efficacy to dispose God to be more gracious, yet it is of great use to dispose us to be more objects of his grace.

Swift.

If were moralists find themselves disposed to pride, lust, incontinence, or avarice, they do not think their morality concerned to check them.

Swift.

6. To make fit: with far.

This may dispose me, perhaps, for the reception of truth; but helps me not to it.

Locke.

7. To regulate; to adjust.

Wak’d by the cries, th’ Athenian chief arose

The knightly forms of combat to dispose.

Dryden’s Falstaff.

8. To dispose of. To apply to any purpose; to transfer to any other person or use.

All men are naturally in a state of perfect freedom to order their actions, and dispose of their possessions and persons, as they think fit, within the bounds of the law of nature.

Locke.

Dispose of the meat with the butter, or any other condiments.

Swift.

9. To dispose of. To put into the hands of another.

As she is mine, I may dispose of her:

Which shall be either to this gentleman,

Or her death.

Shak.

I have dispose’d of her to a man of business,

Who will let me see, that to be well dressed, in good humour, and cheerful in her family, are the arts and sciences of female life.

Tatler.

10. To dispose of. To give away by authority.

A rural judge dispose’d of beauty’s prize.

Waller.

11. To dispose of. To direct.

The lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposal thereof is of the Lord.

Prov.

12. To dispose of. To conduct; to behave.

They must receive instructions how to dispose of themselves when they come, which must be in the nature of laws unto them.

Bacon to Villiers.

13. To dispose of. To place in any condition.

For the remaining doubts,

What to resolve, and how dispose of me,

Be war’d to cast that useless care aside.

Dryg.

14. To dispose of. To put away by any means.

They require more water than can be found, and more than can be dispose of, if it was found.

Burnet.

To DISPOLE, v. a. To bargain; to make terms.

Obsoleto.

When she saw you did suspect

She had dispose’d with Caesar, and that your rage

Would not be parg’d, she sent word she was dead.

Shaksp.
I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconstancy of man's dispositions is able to bear.

Shakes.

Lesser had been
The thwartings of your disposition, if
You had not shew'd them how you were disposed,
Ere they have given me time to cross you.
Shak. Cymbel.

5. Affection of kindness or ill-will.

I take myself to be as well informed as most men in the dispositions of each people towards the other.

Swift.

6. Predominant inclination.

As they pitch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more. Shakes. Asth. and Cleopatra.

The one suffer, to us our friends is generally caused by our finding the same disposition in them which we feel in ourselves.

Pope.

7. Assortment; adjustment of external circumstances: not used.

I crave fit disposition for my wife, Due reference of place and exhibition, As levels with her breeding. Shak. Othello.

DISPOSITIVE. adj. [from dispose. That which implies disposals of any property; decretive.
The words of all judicial acts are written narratively, unless it be in sentences wherein dispositive and enacting terms are used of.

Aylliff's Poregon.

DISPOSITIVELY. adv. [from dispose.]

1. In a disposition manner.

2. Respecting individuals; distributively.

That axiom in philosophy, that the generation of one thing is the corruption of another, although it be substantially true, concerning the form and matter, is also dispositively verified in the efficient or producer.

Dispositor. n. s. [from dispose.] The lord of that sign in which the planet is, and by which therefore it is overruled.

To Dispose's. v. a. [dis and possess.]

1. To put out of possession; to deprive; to disseize.

The blow from saddle forced him to fly; Hee might it needs down to his manly breast
Have cleft his head in twain, and life thence dispoe'd: Fairy Queen.

Shak. Thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will lose thy adoration; and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispos'se the soul of thy gruendame.

Shak. Twelfth Night.

Let us sit upon the ground, and tell How some have been depos'd, some slain in war, Some haunted by the gloists they dispese'd:

Shak. Richard II.

I will chase
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world, And disposser him all.

Shak. Timon. In thee I hope; thy succours I invoke; To win the crown whence I am dispos'd: Fairf. To like renown awaiteth on the stroke.

To cast the haughty down, or raise th' oppress'd.

Fairf.

The children went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossered the Amorite which was in it;

Numb. xxxii. 29.

This inaccessible high strength, the seat Of Deity supreme, us dispos'd, He trussed to have seiz'd. Restless Amata lay

Fird with disdain for Turmus disposser,

And the new nuptials of the Trojan guest. Dryden's Ancket.

2. It is generally used with of before the thing taken away.

Charles resolved, with a puissant army, to pass over, and to dispessor the pirate of Tunis.

Knolles's History.
DIS

Disproportionable. adj. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitable in form or quantity; not duly regulated in regard to something else.

Doubts and fears are the sharpest passions: through these false optics all that you see is like the evening shadows, disproportionate to the truth, and strangely longer than the true substance. Suckling.

Had the obliquity been greater, the earth had not been able to endure the disproportionable differences of season. Brown.

We are apt to set too great a value on temporal blessings, and to have too low and disproportionate esteem of spiritual. There is no wine of so strong a body as to bear such a disproportionate quantity of water as sixty water. Browne.

Disproportionable. n. s. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitableness to something else.

Disproportionally. adv. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitably; not symmetrically.

We have no reason to think much to sacrifice to God our greatest interests in this world, if we consider how disproportionately great the retribution of our sufferings shall be in another. Tillotson.

Disproportion. adj. [from disproportionate.] Disproportionable; unsymmetrical; unsuitable in quantity or form to something else.

Disproportionably. adv. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitably with respect to quantity or value.

Disproportionate. adj. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitably; unsuitable to something else in bulk, form, or value.

None of our members are crooked or distorted, or disproportionate to the rest, either in excess or defect. Ray.

It is plain that men have agreed to a disproportionate and unequal possession of the earth. Locke.

Disproportionately. adv. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitably; unsymmetrically.

Disproportionateness. n. s. [from disproportionate.] Unsuitableness in bulk, form, or value.

To Disprove. v. a. [dis and prove.] 1. To confute an assertion; to convict of error or falsehood.

This exposition they plainly disprove, and shew by manifest reason, that of David the words of David could not possibly be meant. Hooker.

This Westmoreland maintains, and Warwick shall disprove. Shak.

The traitor's odious name I first return; and then disprove the claim. Dryden's Fables.

It is easier to affirm than to disprove. Hooker. That false supposition I advanced in order to disprove it, and by that means to prove the truth of my opinion. Atterbury.

We see the same assertions produced again, without notice of what hath been said to disprove them. Swift.

2. To convict a practice of error.

They beheld those things disproved, disannulled, and rejected, which use had made in a manner natural. Hooker.

If God did not forbid all indifferent ceremonies, then our conformity with the church of Rome in some such as is not hitherto as yet disproved, although such practices were unto us as heathenish unto Israel. Hooker.

3. To disprove; to disallow.

Some things are good, yet in so mean a degree of goodness, that men are only not disproved, nor disallowed of God for them. Hooker.

Disprover. n. s. [from disprove.] 1. One that disproves or confutes. 2. One that blames; a censor: if the following passage be not ill printed for disapprover.

The single example that our annals have yielded of two extremities, within so short a time, by most of the same commanders and disprovers, would require no slight memorial. Watton.

Dispunishment. adj. [dis and punishable.] Without penal restraint. Without merit.

No leases of any part of the said lands shall ever be made, other than leases for years not exceeding thirty-one, in possession, and not in reversion or remainder, and not, or impossibly of waste. Swift's Last Will.

To Dispurse. v. a. [dis and pursue.] To pay; to disburse. It is not certain that the following passage should not be written disburse.

Many a pound of my own proper store, of which I would not tax the needy commoner, Have I dispered to the garrisons, and never asked for restitution. Shak. Hen. VI.

Dispute's. adj. [from dispute.] To dispute. To dispute; to debate.

1. Liable to contest; controverted; that for which something may be alleged on opposite sides.

If they are not in themselves disputable, why are they so much disputed? South.

2. Lawful to be contested.

Until any point is determined to be a law, it remains disputable by every subject. Swift.

Disputant. n. s. [from dispute; disputants. Lat.] A contester; an arguer; a reasoner.

Notwithstanding these learned disputants, it was to the unscholarish statement that the world owed their peace, defence, and liberties. Locke.

Our disputants put me in mind of the skittish ass, that, when he is unable to extricate himself, blackens all the water about him till he comes invisible. Spectator.

Disputant. adj. Disputing; engaged in controversy. Not in use.

There have been many among the gravest rabblets, disputant.

On points and questions fitting Moses' chair. Milton.

Disputation. n. s. [from disputatio; disputatio, Lat.] 1. The skill of controversy; argumentation. Consider well the learning of the disputators, and how they are employed for the advantage of themselves or others, whose business is only the vain ostentation of sound.

2. Controversy; argumental contest.

Well do I find, by the wise knitting together of your answer, that any disputatio I can use is as much too weak as I unworthy. Sidney.

Till some adorable or singular accident happens, as it hath in some, to work the beginning of a better alteration in the mind, disputatio about the knowledge of God commonly prevails little; and the contrary devil prevails with most. Locke.

Disputatious. adj. [from dispute.] Inclined to dispute: cavilling.

A man must be of a very disputatious temper, that enters into state controversies with any of the fair sex. Addison.

Disputative. adj. [from dispute.] Disposed to debate; argumentative.

Perhaps this practice might not so easily be persevered, as to a cavilling, disputative, and sceptical temper in the minds of youth. Watt's Improvement of the Mind.

To Dispute. v. n. [dispute. Lat.] To contend by argument; to altercate; to debate; to argue; to controvert.

If attempts of the pen have often proved unfruitful, those of the sword are more so, and fighting is a worse expedient than disputing. Decrepit. Pytchley.

Our disputation can pretend no obligation of conscience, why he should dispute against religion. Tillotson.

Did not Paul and Barnabas dispute with vehemence about a very little point of convenience? Atterbury.

To Dispute. r. a. 1. To contend for, whether by words or action.

Things were disputed before they came to be determined: men afterwards were not to dispute any longer, nor obstinate. Hooker.

As if you sought before Cytherea's eyes, Dryden's Indian Emperor.

One says the kingdom is his own; a Saxon drinks the quart, and swears he'll dispute with him. Tatler.

2. To question; to reason about.

Now I am sent, and am not to dispute my prince's orders, but to execute. Dryd. Ind. Emp.

3. To discuss; to think on: a sense not in use.

Dispute it like a man.

But I must also feel it as a man. Shakespeare.

To Dispute. n. s. [from the verb.] Contest; controversy; argumental contention.

The question being about a fact, it is begging it, to bring as a proof an hypothesis which is the very thing in dispute. Locke.

The earth is now placed so conveniently, that plants thrive and flourish in it, and animals live: this is matter of fact, and beyond all dispute. Bentley.

Disputless. adj. [from dispute.] Un-disputed; uncontroversible.

Disputter. n. s. [from dispute.] A contester; one given to argument and opposition.

Both were vehement disputers against the heathen idolatry. Stillingfleet.

These conclusions have generally obtained, and have been acknowledged even by disputers themselves, till with labour they had stilled their convictions. Rogers.

Disqualification. n. s. [from disqualify.] That which disqualifies; that which makes unfit.

It is recorded as a sufficient disqualification of a wife, that, speaking of her husband, she said, Spectator.

To Disqualify. v. a. [dis and qualify.] 1. To make unfit; to disable by some natural or legal impediment.

Such persons as shall confer benefices on unworthy and disqualified persons, after a notice or correction given, shall for that time be deprived of the power of presenting unto such benefices. Actul's Parergon.

2. It has commonly to be before the objective noun.

I know no employment for which pitiful disqualify.

My common illness utterly disqualifies me for all conversation; I mean my deafness. Swift.

3. To deprive of a right or claim by some positive restriction; to disable; to except from any grant. Swift has from.

The church of England is the only body of Christians which disqualifies those, who are employed to preach its doctrine, from sharing in the civil power, farther than as senators. Spectator on Disqualification Test.

To Disquaintity. r. a. [dis and quantity.] To lessen; to diminish. Not used.

547
DISREGARD. n. s. [dis and regard.] Slight notice; neglect; contempt.

To DISREGARD, v. a. [from the noun.] To slight; to neglect; to contemn.

Since we are to do good to the poor, to strangers, to enemies, those whom nature is so apt to make us despise, regard, or hate, then undoubtedly we are to do good to all.

Spratt.

Those facts which God hath disregarded hither-to, he may regard for the time to come. Smollett.

Studious of good, man disregarded fame.

And useful knowledge was his eldest aim. Blacken.

DISREGARDFUL. adj. [disregard and full.] Negligent; contemptuous.

DISREGARDFULY. adv. [from disregardful.] Negligently; contemptuously.

DISRELISH. n. s. [dis and relish.]

1. Bad taste; unpleasantness.

Fruits of taste to please True appetite, and not desire thirst

Of nectarous draughts between, from milky stream.

Pope.

The same anxiety and solicitude that embittered the pursuit, diversified the fruition itself. Rogers.

2. To make nauseous; to infect with an unpleasant taste.

Dissatisfaction. n. s. [dis and satisfaction.] The state of being dissatisfied; discontent; want of something to complete the wish.

He that changes his condition, out of impatience and dissatisfaction, when he has tried a new one, wishes for his old again. d'Estrange.

The ambitious man has little happiness, but is subject to much uneasiness and dissatisfaction. Addison's Spectator.

In vain we try to remedy the defects of our acquisition, by varying the object; the same dissatisfaction pursues us through the circle of created goods. Rogers.

DISSATISFACTORY. adj. [from dissatisfactory.] Inability to give content.

That which is unable to give content.

To DISSATISFY, v. a. [dis and satisfy.]

1. To content; to please.

The advantages of life will not hold out to the length of desire; and, since they are not big enough to satisfy, they should not be big enough to satisfy. Collet.

2. To fail to please; to offend by the want of something requisite.

I still retain some of my notions, after your lordship's having appeared dissatisfied with them. Locke.

Te DISSECT, v. a. [dissect, Lat.]

1. To cut in pieces. It is used chiefly of anatomical enquiries, made for the separation of the parts of animal bodies.

No mask, no trick, no favour, no reserve; Dissect your mind, examine every nerve. Rowan.

Following life in creatures we dissect, We lose it in the moment we detect. Pope.

2. To divide and examine minutely.

This paragraph, that has not one ingenious word throughout, I have dissected for a sample. Atterbury.

Dissection. n. s. [dissection, Lat.]

1. The act of separating the parts of animal bodies: anatomy.

She cut her eye; but, upon the dissection, found her just like other women. d'Estrange.

I shall enter upon the dissection of a coquet's heart, and communicate that curious piece of anatomy.

Addison.

2. Nice examination.

Such strict enquiries into nature, so true and so perfect a discretion of human kind, is the work of an extraordinary intellectual faculty.

Dissemble, v. a. [dissemel, Fr.] To disguise; to deprive. It is commonly used of a legal act. He so dissembled his greater grief, The knight his shining spear again assayed, In his breasts of such bodies to confound. Every Queen. If a prince should give a man, besides his ancient patrimony which his family had been dissembled of, an additional estate, never before in the possession of his ancestors, he could not be said to re-establish a kind of succession. Locke.

Dissemble, n. s. [from dissemel, Fr.] An unlawful dispossessing a man of his land, tenement, or other immovable or incorporeal right. Cowell.

Dissembler, n. s. [from dissemel.] He that dissembles another.

Dissemble, v. a. [dissemel, Lat. semel, dissimulare, dissimulation, and probably dissimulare, old Fr.].

1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be what really is. She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it. Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not. This is not the true signification.

Your son Laccino
Both love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections. Shakes. In vain on the dissembled mother's tongue
Had cunning art and sly persuasion hung;
And real care in vain, and native love,
In the true parent's parting breath lived. Prior.

To dissemble, v. n.

1. To play the hypocris; to use false professions; to wheedle.

Ye dissembled in your hearts when ye sent me unto the Lord your God, saying, Pray for us. Jeremiah xlii. 20.

I would dissemble with my nature, where My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, require it. Should I dissemble, Shakes. Cymbeline.

That you too shall dissemble, and sanctify dissembling, Rowe's Amb. Stem. Rowe's Amb. Stem.

2. Shakespeare uses it for fraudulent; unperforming;

That was an eurnst'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Defor'm'd, unfounded. Shakes. Richard III.

Dissembler, n. s. [from dissemel.] An hypocrite; a man who conceals his true disposition.

Though dost wrong me, thou dissembler, thou.

Shakes. The French king, in the business of peace, was the greater dissembler of the two. Rac. Henry VII. Such as one, whose virtue forbidde d him to be base and a dissembler, shall evermore hang under the wheel. Raleigh.

The queen, with rage inflamed, thus grieves them; that dissembler, wouldst thou by Out of my arms by stealth? Deucham.

Men will not so farther than they judge a person for sincerity fit to be trusted: a discovered dissembler can achieve nothing great and conside rable. South.

Dissemblingly, adv. [from dissemel.]

With dissimulation; hypocritically.

They might all have been either dissemblingly spoken, or falsely reported of the equity of the baronage king. Knolles.

To disseminate, v. a. [disseminato, Lat.]

To scatter as seed; to sow; to spread every way.

Ill uses are made of it many times in stirring up seditions, rebellions, in disseminating of heresies, and instilling of prejudices. Hammond's Fundamentals. There is a nearly uniform and constant fire or heat disseminated throughout the body of the earth. Woodward.

The Jews are indeed disseminated through all the trading parts of the world, Addison's Spectator. By finnness of mind, and freedom of speech, the gospel was disseminated at first, and must still be maintained. Atterbury.

Dissemination, n. s. [disseminatio, Lat.]

The act of scattering like seed; the act of sowing or spreading.

Though now at the greatest distance from the beginning of error, yet we are almost lost in its dissemination, whose ways are boundless, and countless. Dods. This is the act of scattering, a sower; a spreader. Locke.

Men, vehemently thirsting after a name in the world, hope to acquire it by being the disseminators of novel doctrines. Decay of Piety.

Disension, n. s. [disscnatio, Lat.]

Disagreement; strife; discord; contention; difference; quarrel; breach of union.

Friend now, fast sworn,
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, whose exercise,
Are still together; who twin's, as 'twere, in love
Insensibly, shall within this hour.
On a discernment of a bolt, break out
To bitterest enmity. Shakes. Coriolanus.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts
That no discernment hinder government. Shakes. He appeas'd the disension then arising about religion. Knowles.

Grown
In wealth and multitude, factions they grow
But first among the priests; discension spring.
Mnt. Debates, discensions, uprose are thy joy;
Pricket's without offence, and practis'd to destroy.
Drayton.

Disensions, adj. [from discension.]

Disposed to discord; quarrelsome; factions; contentious.

Either in religion they have a divisions head, or in the commonwealth a factions head.

Auchan's Schoolmaster.

Who are they that complain upon the king,
That I am stern? They love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such discensions rumours.
Shakes.

You discensions rage,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,

To disent, v. n. [disentio, Lat.]

1. To disagree in opinion; to think in a contrary manner.

Let me not be any occasion to defraud the publick of what is best, by any morose or perverse disquisitions. King Charles.

What enmity of heathens has not been matched by the inhumanity of disseminating Christians? Decay of Piety.

There are many opinions in which multitudes of men dissent from us, who are as good and wise as ourselves. Addison.

2. To differ; to be of a contrary nature.

We see a general agreement in the secret opinion of men, that every man ought to embrace the religion which he is bred up to, provided it be a true, whatever discord it brings from it, but that most which doth farthest dissent. Hooker.

3. To differ from the established church.

How will desisting brethren relief? Hundred.

What will malignants say? Hundred.

1. Disagreement; difference of opinion; declaration of difference of opinion.

In propositions, where though the proofs in view are of most moment, yet there are grounds to suspect that there is proof as considerable to be produced on the contrary side, there suspense or dissent are voluntary actions. Locke.

What could be the reason of this general dissent from the restoration of the resurrection, seeing that almost all of them did believe the immortality of the soul? Bentley's Sermon.

2. Contrariness of nature; opposite quality.

Not in use.

The divers of the mensural or strong waters may hinder the incorporation, as well as the dis cement of the metals. Therefore where the mensural are the same, and yet the incorporation followeth not, the discretion is in the metals. Bacon.

Disentaneous. adj. [from dissent.]

Disagreeable; inconsistent; contrary.

Disenser, n. s. [from dissent.]

1. One that disagrees, or declares his disagreement, from an opinion.

They will admit of matter of fact, and agree with dissenters in that; but differ only in assigning the cause. Locke.

2. One who, for whatever reasons, refuses the communion of the English church.

Dissertation. n. s. [dissertatio, Lat.]

A discourse; a disquisition; a treatise.

Pilatroch, in his dissertation upon the Peets, quotes an instance of Homer's judgment in chusing a ludicrous scene with decency and instruction.

Brown on the Odyssey.

To disserve, v. a. [dis and serve.]

To do injury to; to mischievous to; to damage; to hurt; to harm.

Having never done the king the least service, he took the first opportunity to disserve him, and engaged against him from the beginning of the rebellion. Clarendon.

Desires of things of this world, by their tendency to promote or disserve our interests in another.

Roger.

Diservice, n. s. [dis and service.]

Injury; mischievous to; ill turn.

We shall rather perform good offices unto truth, than disservice unto rulers who have well deserved. Brown.

Great sicknesses make a sensible alteration, but smaller indispositions do a proportionable disservice. Collier.

Diserviceable, adj. [from disservice.]

Injurious; mischievous to; hurtful.

Diserviceableness, n. s. [from disserviceable.]

Injury; harm; mischief; damage.

All action being for some end, and not the end itself, its aptness to be commanded or forbidden, must be founded upon its serviceableness or disserviceableness to some end. Newton.

To dissettle, v. a. [dis and settle.]

To unsettle; to disserve.

To disserve, v. a. [dis and serve.]

In this word the particle dis makes no change in the signification, and therefore the word, though supported by great authorities, ought to be ejected from our language. 'To part in two; to break; to divide; to sunder; to separate; to disunite.

Shortly had the storm so dissered the company, which the day before had tarried together, that most of them never met again, but were swallowed. Simeon.
The disarming of fleets hath been the overthrow of states and actions.
Boile.

All downright airs dissuade the violence of outrageous winds, and level the mountainous hillys.
Boile.

Dissuade your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again. Shak.

The meeting points the sacred fire.
Boile.

From parts, and for ever.
Pope.

Dissidence. n.s. [dissidea, Lat.]
Discord; disagreement.
Dict.

Dissidence. n.s. [dissilio, Lat.]
The act of starting asunder.
Savage's Dissimilitude.

Dissilient. adj. [dissilions, Lat.] Starting asunder; bursting in two.

Dissolution. n.s. [dissilio, Lat.]
The act of bursting in two; the act of starting different ways.

The air having much room to receive motion, the dissipation of that air was great.
Boile's Spring of the Air.

Dissimilar. adj. [dissimilarity, Lat.]
Unlike; heterogeneous.

Simple oil is reduced into dissimilar parts, and yields a sweet oil, very differing from sillage oil.

The light, whose rays are all alike refrangible, I call simple, homogenial, and similar; and that, whose rays are some more refrangible than others, I call compound, homogenerial, and dissimilar.
Newton.

If the fluid be supposed to consist of heterogeneous particles, we cannot conceive how those dissimilar parts can have a like situation.
Bentley.

Dissimilarity. n.s. [from dissimilar.]
Unlikeness; dissimilitude.

If the principle of reunion has not its energy in this life, whenever the attractions of sense cease, the acquired principles of dissimilitude must repel those beings from their centre: so that the principle of reunion, being set free by death, must drive these beings towards God their centre; and the principle of dissimilitude, forcing them to repel them with infinite violence from him, must make them infinitely miserable.
Chenye.

Dissimilitude. n.s. [dissimilitudo, Lat.]
Unlikeness; want of resemblance.

Thereupon grew marvellous dissemblitides, and by reason thereof jealousies, heartburnings, jars, and discords.

We doubt whether the Lord, in different circumstances, did frame his people unto any utter dissemblitude, either with Egyptians, or any other nation.

The dissimilitude between the Divinity and images, shows that images are not a suitable means whereby to worship God.
Stillingfleet.

As human society is founded in the similitude of some things, so it is promoted by some certain dissimilitudes.
Gree.

Women are curious observers of the likeness of children to parents, that they may, upon finding dissimilitude, have the pleasure of uniting unnatural.
Fuce's Odissey, Notes.

The act of dissimbling; hypocrisy; falsacious appearance; false pretensions.

Dissimulation is but a kind of policy; for it asketh a strong wit, and a strong heart, to know when to tell truth, and to do it.
Boile.

He added not; and Satan, bowing low.
His prey dissimulation, disappear'd
Into that divinity.
Milton.

Dissimulation may be taken for a bare concealment of one's mind; in which sense we commonly say, that it is prudence to dissimulate injuries.
South.

Dissipable. adj. [from dissipate.]
Easily scattered; liable to dispersion.

The heat of those plants is very dissipable, which under the earth is continued and held in; but when it cometh to the air it exhaleth.
Boile's Natural History.
The staff from which the flax is drawn in spinning.

In sum, proud Boreas never ruled fleet,
Who may there's web on danger's distaff spins,
With greater pow'r than she did make them send each way, as she that age's praise did bend.

Weave thou to end this web which I begin;
I will the distaff hold, come thou and spin.
Fairly.
Banish our dog, and Talbot, with the hand,
And Malikin, with her distaff in her hand. Dryden.

2. It is used as an emblem of the female sex. So the French say, The crown of France never falls to the distaff.

In my civil government some say the crosser,
Some say the distaff, was the badge of Heset's England's Tears.

See my royal master murder'd,
His crown usurp'd, a distaff in the theme. Dryden.

DISTAFF-THISTLE. n.s. A species of thistle.

To DISTAIN, v. a. [dis and stain].
1. To stain; to tinge with an adventitious colour.
Nay, e'er his arrows, still the shaly plain
Sev'n mighty bodies with their blood distain.
Dryden, Virgil.

Place on their heads that crown distain'd with gore,
Which those dire hands from my slain father tore.
Pop.

2. To blot; to sully with infamy.
He understood,
That lady, whom I had to me assign'd,
Had borne distain'd her honourable blood.
And sullied the faith which she to me did bind.
Fairy Queen.
The worthiness of praise distain'd his worth,
If he'th's praise'd himself bring the praise forth.
Shakespeare.

Some theologians delie plac'd erect for religion, by defending oppressions, distain'd their professions by publishing obdious untruths upon report of others.

Sir J. Hayward.

DISTANCE. n.s. [distance, Fr. distan-ta, Lat.]
1. Distance is space considered barely in length between any two beings, without considering any thing else between them.

Locke.

It is very cheap, notwithstanding the great distance between the vineyards and the towns which sell the wine.

Addison, on Italy.

As he lived but a few miles distance from her father's house, he had frequent opportunities of Addicion.

2. Remoteness in places.

Cesar is still disposed to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Caesar.
Addison.

These dwell at such convenient distance,
That each may give his friend assistance. Prior.

3. The space kept between two antagonists in fencing.

We come to see fight; to see thy pass, thy stock, yr, thy reverse, thy distance.

Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

4. Contrariety; opposition.

Banquo was your enemy,
So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my nearest life. Shakespeare, Macbeth.

5. A space marked on the course where horses run.

This was the horse that ran the whole field out of distance, and won the race.
L'Estrange.

6. Space of time.

You must do it by distance of time: 2 Esdr. v. 47.
I help my preface by a prescription, to tell that there is ten years distance between one and the other.
Prior.
7. Remoteness in time either past or future.
We have as much assurance of these things as things future and at a distance are capable of.
Tillotson.
To judge right of blessings prayed for, and yet at a distance, we must be able to know things future.
Smollett.
8. Ideal disjunction; mental separation.
The qualities that affect our senses are, in the things themselves, as united and blended, that there is no separation, no distance between them.
Locke.
9. Respect; distant behaviour.
I hope your modesty
Will know what distance to the crown is due.
Dryden.
'Tis by respect and distance that authority is upheld.
If a man makes me keep my distance, the contempt, he keeps his at the same time.
Swift.
10. Retraction of kindness; reserve; alienation.
On the part of love,
Now alienated, distance and distance,
Anger, and just rebuke, and judgment given.
Shakespeare.
To DISTANCE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To place remotely; to throw off from the view.
That which gives a relish to a bowl, is the quick light, or white, which appears to be on the side, and scarce to us, and the black by chance distances the object.
Dryden's Dunciad.
2. To leave behind at a race the length of a distance; to conquer in a race with great superiority.
Each daring lover, with adventour's pace
Pursuit his wish, in the dangerous race.
Like the swift hind the bounding damsel flies,
Strains to the goal; the distance lover dies.
Gay.
DISTANT, adj. [distant, Lat.]
1. Remote in place; not near.
This heav'n which we behold
Distant so high.
Milton.
Though distant from the worlds between.
Milton.
The wind's rook the Parian marble stone,
And seem'd half of solid bronze. Pope.
Narrowness of mind should be cured by reading histories of past ages, and of nations and countries distant from our own.
Watts's Improvement of the Mind.
The scenes will discover things near us with sufficient exactness, and things distant also, so far as they relate to our necessary use.
Watts's Logick.
2. Remote in time either past or future.
3. Remote to a certain degree: as, ten years, ten miles, distant.
4. Reserved; shy.
5. Remote in nature; not allied.
What besides this unhappy servility to custom can reconcile men, that own Christianity, to a practice so widely distant from it?
Gis. of the Tongue.
6. Not obvious; not plain.
It was one of the first distinctions of a well-bred man to express every thing obscene in modest terms and distant phrases; while the clown clothed those ideas in plain homely terms that are the most obvious and natural.
Adams's Spectator.
DISTASTE. n. s. [distaste and taste.]
1. Aversion of the palate; displeasure; disgust.
He gives the reason of the distaste of salacity, and the pleasure in novelty in meats and drinks.
Bacon's Nat. History.
2. Dislike; unfitness. Prosperity is not without many fears and distaste, and adversity is not without comforts and hopes.
Bacon's Essays.
3. Anger; alienation of affection.
Julius-Cæsar was by acclamation termed king to try how the people would take it: the people showed great murmurs and distaste at it.
Bacon's Apothegms.
The king having tasted of the cup of the people, for his imprisonment of Edward Plantagent, was doubtful to heap up any more distastes of that kind by the imprisonment of this noble prince.
Bacon's Henry VII.
On the part of heaven,
Now alienated, distance and distance,
Anger, and just rebuke.
Milton's Par. Lost.
With stern distaste avow'd,
To their own distant districts drive the sower crowd.
Pope's Odyssey.
To DISTASTE, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To fill the mouth with nauseousness, or distasteful.
Dagon's concords are in their nature poisons, which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Born like the names of sulphur. Shakspe. Othello.
2. To dislike; to loath.
I'd have it come to question;
If he distaste it, let him to my sister.
Shakspe. King Lear.
I am unwilling to believe that he dastit with a design to play tricks, and fly-blow my words to make others distaste them.
Sillingviet.
3. To offend; to disgust.
He thought it no policy to distaste the English or Irish, or a course of reform, but sought to please them.
Davies.
4. To vex; to expatriate; to sour.
The whistling of the winds is better music to contented minds, than the opera to the spleenful, ambitious, diseased, distasteful, and distracted souls.
Pope.
DISTASTEFUL adj. [distaste and full.]
1. Nauseous to the palate; disgusting.
What to one palate is sweet and delicious, to another is odious and distasteful.
Glan. Sparr.
2. Offensive; displeasing.
The visitation, though somewhat distasteful to the English lords, was sweet and welcome to the common people.
Davies.
None but a fool distasteful truth will tell;
So be now and peace, 'tis fall as well.
Dray. Distasteful humours, and whatever else may rouse the conversation of men grievous and uneasy to another, are forbidden in the New Testament.
Tillotson.
3. Malignant; malevolent.
After distant looks,
With certain half-caps, and cold moving nods,
They froze me into silence.
Shakspe. Timon.
The ground might be the distasteful averseness of the Christian from the Jew.
Brown.
DISTEMPER. n. s. [distemper and temper.]
1. A disproportionate mixture of parts; want of a due temper of ingredients.
2. A disease; a malady; the peccant predominance of some humour; properly a slight illness; indisposition.
They heighten distemper to diseases.
Suckling.
It argues sickness and distemper in the mind, as well as in the body, when a man is continually turning and tossing.
South.
3. Want of due temperature.
It was a reasonable conjecture, that those countries which were situated directly under the tropic, were of a distemper inhabitable.
Ralegh's History.
4. Bad constitution of the mind; premonition of any passion or appetite.
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye
At capital crimes?
Shakspe. Henry V.
5. Want of due balance between contraries.
The true temper of empire is a thing rare, and hard to keep; for both temper and distemper consist of contraries.
Bacon.
6. Ill humour of mind; depravity of inclination.
I was not forgetful of those sparks, which some men's distemper formerly studied to kindle in parliament.
King Charles.
7. Tumultuous disorder.
Still as you rise, the state, exalted too,
Finds no distemper while 'tis chang'd by you.
Waller.
8. Disorder; unfitness.
There is a sickness,
Which puts some of us in distemper but I cannot name the disease, and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.
Shakspe. Winter's Tale.
To DISTEMPER. v. a. [dis and temper.]
1. To disease.
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good-morrow to thy bed.
Shakspe. Romeo and Juliet.
2. To disorder
In madness,
Being full of suppers and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious revear'y, dost thou come
To start my guilt?
Shakspe. Othello.
He distempered himself one night with long and hard study.
Bogey's History of Fools.
3. To disturb; to fill with perturbation; to ruffle.
Then see'st thou me much distemper'd in my mind?
Pul'd back, and then push'd forward to be kind.
Dryden.
4. To deprive of temper or moderation
Distemper'd zeal, sedition, canker'd hate.
No more shall vex the church and tear the state.
Dryden.
They will have admirers among posterity, and be equally celebrated by those whose minds will not be distempered by interest, passion, or partiality.
Addison's Freeholder.
5. To make disaffected, or malignant.
Once more to-day weel met, distemper'd lords;
The king by me requests your presence straight.
Shakspe.
DISTEMPERATE. adj. [dis and temperate.] Immoderate.
Aquinus objecteth the distemperate heat, which he supposeth to be in all places directly under the sun.
Ralegh's History.
DISTEMPERATURE. n. s. [from distemper.]
1. Intemperance; excess of heat or cold, or other qualities.
Through this distemper we see
The seasons alter; hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose.
Shakspe.
They were consumed by the disorders of the country, and the distemper of the air.
Abbot.
2. Violent tumultuousness; outrageousness.
3. Perturbation of the mind.
Thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art upon's d by some distemper.
Shak.
4. Confusion; commixture of contrarieties; loss of regularity.
O'er your birth
Our grandame earth, with this distemper
In passion shook.
Shakspe. Henry IV.
Tell how the world fell into this distemper,
And how so great distemper did grow.
Daniel.
To DISTEND. v. a. [distend, Lat.] To stretch out in breadth.
Avoid enormous heights of seven stories, as well as irregular forms; and the contrary fault, of low distended fronts, is as uncommon.
Wotton.
DIS

Thus all day long the full distended clouds
Indulge their golden stores.

DISTINCT. part. pass. [distant, Lat.] Spread. Not divided.

Some others were new driven and distant
Into great ingots and to wedges square,
Some in round plates without a manner.

DISTINCT. n. s. [from distant.] The space through which any thing is spread; breadth. Not much in use.

Those urges are the gracefulest, which, keeping precisely the same height, shall yet be distended one fourteenth of the space, which addition of distant will confer much to their beauty, and decorat but little from their strength. Wotton.

DISTENTION. n. s. [distant, Lat.] 1. The act of stretching; state of things stretched.

Wind and distention of the bowels are signs of a bad digestion in the intestines; for in dead animals, when there is no digestion at all, the distention is in the greatest extremity. Arbuthnot.

2. Breadth; space occupied by the thing distended.

3. The act of separating one part from another; divarication.

Our legs do labour more in elevation than in Distention.

To DISTRENZIE, v. a. [dis and throne] To dethrone; to depose from sovereignty.

Use.

By his death he it recovered;
But Periure and Virgin he distrewned.

DISTICH. n. s. [distichon, Lat.] A couplet; a couple of lines; an epigram consisting only of two verses.

The French compare anagrams, by themselves, to gems; but when they are cast into a distich, or epigram, to gems enclosed in enamelled gold. Camden's Remains.

The bard, whose distich all commend,
In power, a servant; out of power, a friend. Pope.

To DISTIL, v. n. [distillo, Lat.] 1. To drop; to fall by drops.

In vain kind seasons swell'd the teeming grain;
Soft show's distill'd, and suns grew warm, in vain.

Pope.

2. To flow gently and silently.

The Euphrates distilled out of the mountains of Armenis, and fellath into the gulf of Persia. Raleigh's History.

3. To use a still; to practise the act of distillation.

Have I not been
Thy pupil long: Hast thou not learn'd me how
To make perfumes, distil, preserve?
Shaksp. Cymbeline.

To DISTIL, v. a. 1. To let fall in drops; to drop any thing down.

They pour down rain, according to the vapour thereof, which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly.

The dew, which on the tender grass
The evening had distill'd,
To pure rose-water turned was,
The shades with sweets that fill'd.
Drogon's Cynthia.

From his fair head
Perfumes distil their sweets.
Price.

The roof is vaulted, and distill fresh water from every part of it, which fell upon us as fast as the first drizzlers of a shower. Addision on Italy.

2. To force by fire through the vessels of distillation; to extract, separate, or purify by fire; as, distill'd spirits.

There hangs a vap'rous drop; profound;
I'll catch it ere it comes to ground;

VOL. I.

And that, distill'd by magic slights,
Shall raise up artificial spirits. Shaksp. Macbeth.

9. To draw by distillation; to extract by the force of fire.

The liquid distill'd from benzoïon is subject to frequent viscissitudes of fluidity and firmness. Boyle.

4. To dissolve or melt.

Words by the lightning's subtle force distil'd;
And the cold sheath with running metal fill'd. Addison.

DISTILLATION. n. s. [distillation, Lat.] 1. The act of dropping; or falling in drops.

2. The act of pouring out in drops.

3. That which falls in drops.

4. The act of distilling by fire.

Water by frequent distillations changes into fixed earth. Newton.

The serum of the blood, by a strong distillation, affords a spirit, or volatile alkaline salt, and two kinds of oil, and an earth. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

5. The substance drawn away by the still.

I suffered the pangs of an egregious death, to be stopp'd in, like a strong distillation, with cliaths.

Shaksp.

DISTILLATORY. adj. [from distil] Belonging to distillation; used in distillation.

Besides those grosser elements of bodies, salt, sulphur, and mercury, ingredients of a more subtle nature, extremely little, and not visible, may escape at the junctures of the distillatory vessels.

Shaksp.

DISTILLER. n. s. [from distil] 1. One who practises the art or trade of distilling.

I sent for spirit of salt to a very eminent distiller of it. Boyle.

2. One who makes and sells pernicious and inflammatory spirits.

DISTILMENT. n. s. [from distill] That which is drawn by distillation; that which drops. A word formerly used, but now obsolete.

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
And in the porches of nine ears did pour
The leperous distill'd moisture. Shaksp. Hamlet.

DISTINCT. adj. [from distinct] 1. Different; not the same in number or kind.

Believe me, it is idolatry to give the same worship to an image which is due to God: Vasquez saith, it is idolatry to give distinct worship; therefore, if a man would avoid idolatry, he must give none at all.

Shilling Fleet.

Fatherhood and property are distinct titles, and began presently, upon Adam's death, to be in distinct persons. Locke.

2. Different; separate; being apart, not conjunct.

The intention was, that the two armies, which marched out together, should afterwards be distinct. Clarendon.

Men have immortal spirits, capable of a pleasure and happiness distinct from that of our bodies. Tilletson.

3. Clear; unconfused.

Heaven's high,
High and remote, to see from thence distinct
Each thing on earth. Milton.

4. Spotted; variegated.

Tempests now fell
His arrows from the fourfold-wing'd four,
Distinct with eagle's bale; and from the living wheels
Distinct alike with multitude of eyes. Milton.

5. Marked out; specified.

Dominion hold
Over all living things that move on th' earth,
Wherever thus created; for no place
Is yet distinct by name. Milton.

DISTINTION. n. s. [distinctio, Lat.] 1. The act of discerning one as preferable to the other.

In the wind and tempest of fortune's brow,
Distinction, with a bold and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away. Shaksp.

2. Note of difference.

3. Honourable note of superiority.

4. That by which one differs from another.

This faculty of perception puts the distinction between the animal kingdom and the inferior parts of creation; a distinction which Locke.

3. Difference regarded; preference or neglect in comparison with something else.

Maids, women, wives, without distinction fall;
The sweeping deluge, love, comes on, and covers all. Dryden.

This force abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Shaksp. Cymbeline.

7. Division into different parts.

The distinction of tragedy into parts was not known; or, if it were, it is yet so darkly delivered to us, that we cannot make it out. Dryden on Dramatick Poetry.

8. Notation of difference between things seemingly the same.

The mixture of those things by speech, which by nature are divided, is the mother of all error: to take away therefrom that error, which confusion breeds, distinction is requisite. Hooker.

Lawfulness cannot be handled without distinctions.

Bacon's Holy War.

This will puzzle all your logick and distinctions to answer it.

From this distinction of real and apparent good,
Some distinguish happiness into two sorts, real and imaginary. Newt.

9. Discrimen; judgment.

DISTINCTIVE. adj. [from distinct.

1. That which marks distinction or difference.

For from the natall hour, distinctive names,
One common right the great and lowly claims. Pope's Ode on the Death of the Duke of Buckingham.

2. Having the power to distinguish and discern; judicious.

Credulous and vulgar auditors readily believe it, and the more judicious and distincter heads do not reject it. Brown.

DISTINCTIVELY. adv. [from distinct.

Particularly; not confusedly.

I did all my pilgrimage dilate,
Were he by parts he had something heard,
But not distinctively.

DISTINCTLY. adv. [from distinct.

1. Not confusedly; without the confusion of one part with another.

To make an echo that will report three, or four, or five words distinctly, it is requisite that the body perfusing be a good distance off. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

On its sides it was bounded pretty distinctly, but on its ends very confusedly and indistinctly. Newton's Opticks.

2. Plainly; clearly.

The object I could at first distinctly view
Was tall straight trees, which on the waters flew.
Dryden.

After the light of the sun was a little worn off my eyes, I could see all the parts of it distinctly by a simmering reflection that played upon them from the surface of the water. Addison.

DISTINCTNESS. n. s. [from distinct.

1. Nice observation of the difference between different things.

The membranes and humour's of the eye are

4 B

553 perfectly pellucid, and void of colour, for the clarity, and the distinctness, of vision.
Bay on Creation.

2. Such separation of things as makes them easy to be separately observed.

To DISTINGUISH, v. a. [distinguish, Lat.]
1. To note the diversity of things.
Rightly to distinguish is, by concord of the mind, to seev things different in nature, and to discern, where they differ. Hooker.
2. To separate from others by some mark of difference, and to know them by their
They distinguish my poems from those of other men, and have made use of their peculiar care. Dryd.
Let us revolve that roll with strictest eye,
Where, safe from time, distinguish'd actions lie. Pr. Siph.
3. To divide by proper notes of diversity.
Moses distinguishes the causes of the flood into those that belong to the heavens, and those that belong to the earth, the rains, and the abyss.

4. To know one from another by any mark or note of difference.
So long
As he could make me, with his best ear,
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
We have not yet seen in any house,
Nor can be distinguish'd, by our laws,
For man or master. Shakesp. Tam. of the Shrew.
By our reason we are enabled to distinguish good from evil, as well as truth from falsehood.
Hume's Logic.

5. To discern critically; to judge.
Sweet prince, the talented virtue of your years
Hath not yet divers'd into the world's deceit;
Nor more can you distinguish of a man,
Than of his outward show! Shakesp. Rich. III.
6. To constitute difference; to specify;
and to make different from another.
St. Paul's Epistles contain nothing but points of Christian instruction, amongst which he seldom fails to enlarge on the great and distinguishing doctrines of our holy religion.
Locke.
7. To make known or eminent.
To DISTINGUISH, v. n. To make distinction; to find or shew the difference.
He assigns the way distinguish'd between the profit of the mercant and the gain of the Children's Discourse on Trade.
The readers must learn by all means to distinguish between proverbs, and those polite speeches which beauty conversation.
Swift.

DISTINGUISHABLE, adj. [from distinguish-]
1. Capable of being distinguished; capabile of being known, or made known, by notes of diversity.
A MENDANT, they left a race behind
Like to themselves, distinguishable scarce
From Gentiles, but by circumcision vain. Milton.
These, we see, in the mind, as it relates to perception and decision, to choice and pursuit, or aven-sion, is distinguishable to us. Hume's Orig. of Mankind.
I shall distribute duty into its principal and eminent branches, as they relate to God, our neighbour, and ourselves. Con. of the Tongue.
Being dissolved in aqueous juices, it is by the eye distinguishable from the solid body. Pope.
A simple idea, being in itself uncompounded, contains nothing but one uniform appearance, or conceivable, in the mind, and is not distinguishbly different ideas.

2. Worthly of note; worthy of regard.
I would endeavour that my betters should seek me by the merit of something distinguishable, instead of my seeking them. Swift.

DISTINGUISHED, participial adj. [from distinguish-]
Eminent; transcendent; extraordinary.

For sins committed, with many aggravations of guilt, the furnace of wrath will be seven times better, and burn with a distinguished fury. Rogers.
Now ver can hold him in greater passion.
With rays so strong, distinguish'd, and divine.
Pope's Odyssey.

DISTINGUISHER, n. s. [from distinguish-]
1. A judicious observer; one that accurately discerns one thing from another.
If writers be just to the memory of Charles II.
they cannot deny him to have been an exact knowner of mankind, and a perfect distinguisher of the state of nations. Dryd.
2. He that separates one thing from another by proper marks of diversity.
Let us admire the wisdom of God in this distinguisher of times, and visible deity, the sun.
Brown's Fugit. Err.

DISTINGUISHINGLY, adv. [from distinguish-]
With distinction; with some mark of eminent preference.
Some call me a Tory, because the heads of that party have been distinguishedly favourable to me.
Pope.

DISTINGUISHMENT, n. s. [from distinguish-] Distinction; observation of difterence.
To make corrections upon the searchers reports,
I considered whether any credit at all were to be given to their distinguishments.
Granton's Bills of Mortality.

To DISTORT, v. a. [dortort, Lat.]
1. To write; to twist; to deform by irregular motions.
I see her taste each nauseous draught,
And so obligingly an caught;
I bless the hand from whence they came,
Nay, or dare distort my face for shame.
Swift. Now mortal pangs distort his lovely form.
Smith.
2. To put out of the true direction or posture.
With fear and pain
Distorted, all my nature shape thus grew Transform'd.
Milton. Wrath and malice, envy and revenge, do darken and distort the understandings of men.
Tilton.
3. To wrest from the true meaning.
Sometimes, in mock, a purpose, besides the intent of the divine infilter.
Poeham on Poetry.
DISTORTION, n. s. [dortortio, Lat.] Irregular motion by which the face is with'd, or the parts disordered.
By his distortions he reveals his pains;
He by his tears and by his sighs complains. Prior.
In England we see people lulled asleep with solid and elaborate discourses of piety, who would be warred and transported out of themselves by the ill-bowing and distortions of enthusiasm.
Addison's Spectator.

To DISTRACT, v. a. part. pass. distracted; anciently distraught; and sometimes distract. [distrac't, Lat.]
1. To pull different ways at once.
The needle enrevolved to conform unto the meridian; but being distracted, driveth that way where the greater and powerfuller part of the
2. To separate; to divide.
By sea, by sea.
Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by hand;
Divia your array, which doth much consist
Of war-mas'd dominion. Shakesp. Ant. and Cleop.
By sea, by sea, by land, and by air.
3. To turn from a single direction towards various points.
If he cannot wholly avoid the eye of the observer, he hopes to distract it by a multiplicity of the object.
South.
5. Disturbance; discord; difference of sentiments.

The two armies lay quiet near each other, without improving the confusion and disturbance which the king's forces were too much inclined to cause among the rebels.

Distractive. adj. [from distract.] Causing perplexity.

Of growth unimpaired through distress and care, I've stretch'd my arms, and touch'd him unkind.

To DISTRAIN. v. a. [from disturb.] 1. To seize; to lay hold on as an indemnification for a debt.

Here's Beaufort; that regards not God nor king. Both here distress'd the Tower in his use. Shak.

2. To tend; to tear; not in use.

To DISTRAIN. v. n. To make seizure. The sum answered, I will not lend money to my superior, upon whom I cannot distrain for the debt. Camden's Remains.

Blood, his rent to have regained.

Upon the British diadem distrain'd. Mar.

DISTRAINER. n. s. [from distrain.] He that seizes.

DISTRAINT. n. s. [from distrain.] Seizure.

DISTRAUGHT. part. adj. [from distract.] Distracted.

He had been a good military man in his days, but was then distraught of his wits. Camden. Rem.

DISTRESS. n. s. [distress, Fr.] 1. The act of making a legal seizure.

He would first demand his debt; and if he were not paid, he would straight go and take a distress of goods and cattle, where he could find them, to the value of the same. Snell. Quotis she, some say the soul's secure.

Against distress and forfeiture. Hudibras.

2. A compulsion in real actions, by which a man is assured to appear in court, or to pay a debt or duty which he refused.

Cowell.

3. The thing seized by law.

4. Calamity; misery; misfortune.

There can I sit alone, unseen of any.

And to the nightingale's complaining notes

Time my distresses, and record my woes. Shakespeare.

There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring. People in affliction or distress cannot be hated by generous minds. Clarion.

To DISTRESS. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To prosecute by law to a seizure.

To barbar; to make miserable; to crush with calamity.

DISTRESS-t. n. s. [distress-t, Fr.] 1. Miserable; full of trouble; full of misery.

I often did beguile her of her tears.

When I did ask of some distress'd stroke

The eyes still folded, with distended thighs,

Unmilk'd, lay bleating in distress'd cries. Pope's Odyssey.

Distractive and desolating events, which have attended the mistakes of politicians, should be present in distress'ed bread.

To DISTRIBUTE. v. a. [distribute, Lat.] To divide amongst more than two; to deal out; to dispense.

The king gave over a great store of gentlemen and warlike people, amongst whom he distributed the land. Speiner.

The spoilt go on the Antilates.

Was not distributed. Shak., Coriolanus.

She did distribute her goods to all them that were near of kin. 1. Kings, xi. 21.

DISTRIBUTER. n. s. [from distribute.] One who deals out any thing; a dispenser.

There were judges and distributors of justice appointed for the several parts of his dominions. Addison.

Of that peculiar matter out of which the bodies of vegetables and of animals are formed, water is the common vehicle and distributive to the parts of those bodies. Woodward.

DISTRI-BUTION. n. s. [distribution, Lat.] 1. The act of distributing or dealing out to others; dispensation.

Of great riches there is no real use, except it be in the distribution. Pope's Essay.

Providences has made an equal distribution of natural gifts, whereof each creature severally has a share. L'Estrange.

Every man in a great station would imitate the queen in the distribution of offices in his disposal. Swift.

2. Act of giving in charity.

Let us govern our charitable distributions by this pattern of nature, and maintain a mutual circulation of benefits and returns. Atterbury.

3. [In logic.] As an integral whole is distinguished into its several parts by division; so the word distribution is most properly used, when we distinguish an integral whole into its several kinds of species. Watts.

DISTRIBUTIVE. adj. [from distributive.] 1. That which is employed in assigning to others their portions; as, distributive justice, that which allot to each his sentence or claim.

If justice will take all, and nothing give, Justice methinks is not distributive. Dryden.

Observe the distributive justice of the state, which is constantly applied to the punishment of virtue, and the reward of vice, directly opposite to the rules of their best critics. Selden.

2. That which assigns the various species of a general term.

DISTRIBUTIVELY. adv. [from distributive.] 1. By distribution.

2. Singly; particularly.

Although we cannot be free from all sin collectively, in such sort that no part thereof shall be found inherent in us; yet, distributively at the least, all great and grievous actual offences, as they offer themselves one by one, both may and ought to be by all means avoided. Butler.

3. In a manner that expresses singly all the particulars included in a general term; not collectively.

An universal term is sometimes taken collectively for all its particular ideas united together; and sometimes distributively, meaning each of them single and alone. Watts's Logic.

DISTRICT. n. s. [district, Lat.] 1. The circuit or territory within which a man may be compelled to appear. Cowell.

2. Circuit of authority; province.

His governors, who formed themselves upon the example of their grand monarque, practised all the acts of despotic government in their respective districts. Addison.

With stern distress he avow'd,

To their own districts drive the wretched crew. Pope's Odyssey.

3. Region; country; territory.

Those districts which between the tropics lie.

Those regions which by their burning heat.

The searching beams, directly darted, fry. Black.

DISTRICTION. n. s. [districtus, Lat.] Sudden display, A word little used.

A smile plays with a surprising agreeableness in the eye, breaks out with the brightest distriction, and sits like a glory upon the countenance. Collier on the Aspet.

To DISTRI.BUT. v. a. [dis and trust.] To regard with difference; to divide in; not to trust.

He shewed himself unto such as do not distrust him. Wisdom.

DISTRI.BUST. n. s. [from the verb.] 1. Disdiered; loss of credit; loss of confidence.

To me reproach

Rather belongs, distrust, and all dispraise. Milton.

2. Suspicion; want of faith; want of confidence in another.

You doubt not me; nor have I spent my blood,

To have my faith no better understood;

My weakness of distrust,

Nothing but love could make you so unjust. Dryd.

DISTRI.BUSTFUL. adj. [distrust and full.] 1. Apt to distrust; suspicious.

Generals often harbour distrustful thoughts in their breasts. Pope's Rape of the Lock.

2. Not content; difficult.

The great corruptors of discourse have not been so distrustful of themselves. Gower, of the Tongue.

3. Difherent of himself; modest; timorous.

Distrustful sense with modest caution speaks; But rattling nonsense in malicious breaks. Pope.

DISTRI.BUSTFULLY. adv. [from distrustful.] In a distrustful manner.

DISTRI.BUSTFULNESS. n. s. [from distrustful.] The state of being distrustful; want of confidence.

To DIS. TURB. v. a. [disturb., low Lat.] 1. To perplex; to disquiet; to deprive of tranquility.

He that has his own troubles, and the happiness of his neighbours, to disturb him, was work enough. Collier on Every.

His youthful wants and hardships must engage; plots and rebellions must disturb his age. Prior.

2. To confound; to put into irregular motions.

3. To interrupt; to hinder: as, care disturbs study.

4. To turn off from any direction; with from. This is not usual.

It oft-times may succeed, so as perhaps shall grieve him, if I fail not; and disturb his last moments with the dread of it. Milton.

DISTURB. n. s. [from the verb.] Confusion; tumultuous commotion.

Instant without disturb they took alarm, And onward more embattled. Milton.

DISTURBANCE. n. s. [from disturb.] 1. Perplexity; interruption of a settled state.

The denomination of money concerns trade, and the disturbance of that necessarily brings disturbance to it. Locke.

2. Confusion; disorder of thoughts.

They can survey a variety of complicated ideas without fatigue or disturbance. Weiss on the Mind.

3. Tumult; violation of peace.

This mischief had not then befell them,

And more that shall befal: innumerable Disturbances on earth through female snares. Milton.

DISTURBER. n. s. [from disturb.]
DIS

1. A violator of peace; he that causes tumults and public disorders.

He stands in the sight both of God and men most justly blameable, as a needless disturber of the peace of God's church, and an author of division.

Shakesp.,

Men that make an insult upon society, ought to be humbled, as disturbers of the public tranquillity, let them who they are.

Addison.

Ye great disturbers, who in endless noise,

In blood and horror, seek unnatural joys;

For what is all this bustle, but to shun

Those thoughts with which you dare not be alone?

Grass.

2. He that injures tranquillity; he that causes perturbation of mind.

Two deep ennemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers.

Shakesp.

To Disturb. v. a. [dis and turn.] To turn off; to turn aside. Not in use.

He glad was to disturb that fruitful stream

Of war on us, that else had swallowed them.

Don.

Disvaluation. n. s. [dis and valuation.] Dish Usage; diminution of reputation.

What can be more to the dishonour of the power of Spain, than that eleven thousand

English should have marched into the heart of his country?

Bacon.

To Disvalue. v. a. [dis and value.] To undervalue; to set a low price upon.

Her reputation was disvalued

In levity.

Shakesp. Measure for Measure.

The very same pride which prompts a man to vast and overvalue what he is, does as forcibly incline him to contempt and disvalue what he has.

Government of the Tongue.

To Disvelop. v. a. [developer, Fr.] To uncover.

Disunion. n. s. [dis and union.]

1. Separation; disjunction.

Rest is most opposite to motion, the immediate cause of disunion.

Glanville's Scopius.

Disunion of the corporal principles, and the vital, causeth to die.

Pope's Essay.

Let not peace be made before the disunion of France and Spain.

Addison's State of the War.

The strength of it will join itself to France, and grow the closer to it by its disunion from the rest.

Addison on the War.

2. Breach of concord.

To Disunite. v. a. [dis and unite.]

1. To separate; to divide.

The beast they then divide, and disunite

The ribs and limbs.

Pope's Odyssey.

2. To part friends or allies.

To Disunite. v. n. [dis and unite.] To fall asunder; to become separate.

While every particular member of the publick provides solely for itself, the several joints of the body politic do separate and disunite, and so become unable to support the whole.

South.

Disunity. n. s. [dis and unity.] A state of actual separation.

Disunity is the natural property of matter, which is nothing else but an infinite congeries of physical monads.

More.

Disuse. n. s. [dis and usage.] The gradual cessation of use or custom.

They eat off present such things as might be extinguished with more danger, leaving the rest to be abolished by disuse through tract of time.

Hooker.

Disuse. v. s. [dis and use.]

1. Cessation of use; desuetude; want of practice.

The disuse of the tongue is the only effectual remedy against the pride of the ancients.

Addison's Guardian.

2. Cessation of custom.

That obligation upon the lands did not prescribe,

or come into disuse, but by fifty consecutive years.

Arbuthn.

To Disuse. v. a. [dis and use.]

1. To cease to make use of.

To stop, though custom now divert the course;

As nature's institute is yet in force,

Uncancell'd though disused.

Dryden's Fables.

Phaen in arms disua'd invests his limbs decay'd.

Dryden.

To disaccustom: with from or to; more properly from.

Disuse me from the quasy pain

Of being help'd and loving.

Donne.

He shall his soldiers for fighting fields prepare,

Disua'd to toils and triumphs of the war.

Dryden's Ened.

To Disvo'uch. v. a. [dis and vouch.]

To destroy the credit of; to contradict.

Every letter he writ hath disvo'uch'd another.

Shakesp.

Diswitted. adj. [dis and wilt.] De twed of the winds;

matted; distracted.

A word not in use.

When which they heard, there was not one

But hasted after to be gone,

As she had been divit.

Drayton's Nymphid.

Dit. n. s. [dich, Dut.] A ditty; a poem; a tune.

Obsolete.

No bird but did her shrill notes sweetly sing;

No song but did contain a lovely dit.

Fairy Queen.

Ditation. n. s. [ditatus, Lat.] The act of enriching.

These eastern worshippers intended rather hymage than ditation; the blessed virgin comes in the form of poverty.

Hall's Contemplations.

Ditch. n. s. [bic, Sax. diik, Erse.]

1. A trench cut in the ground, usually between fields.

Sometimes asked for manors, others for acres that lay convenient for them; that he would pull down his fences, and level his ditches.

Arbuthn's History of John Bull.

Sudden the ditches swell, the meadows swim.

Thomson.

2. Any long narrow receptacle of water; used sometimes of a small river in con tempt.

In the great plagues there were seen, in divers ditches and low grounds about London, many toads that had tails three inches long.

Bacon.

3. The most with which a fortress is sur rounded.

The ditches, such as they were, were altogether dry, and easy to be passed over.

Knolks.

4. Ditch is used, in composition, of any thing worthless, or thrown away into ditches.

Poor Tom, when the foul fiend rages, eats dung for sallets, swallows the old rat, and the dog-dog.

Shakesp.

To Ditch. v. a. [from the noun.] To make a ditch.

I have employed my time, besides dicking, in finishing my travels.

Swift.

Ditcher. n. s. [from ditch.] One who digs ditches.

You merit new employments daily.

Our toner, ditches, water;

Swift.

Dithyram'bick. adj. Wild; enthusiasm.

Pindar does new words and figures roll

Down his imputes dithyrambick tide.

Cowley.

Dittander. n. s. The same with pep perwort.

Dittany. n. s. [dictamnus, Lat.]

Dittany hath been renowned, for many ages, upon the account of its sovereign qualities in mucilages. It is generally brought over dry from the Levant.

Miller.

Virgil reports of dittany, that the wild goats eat it when they are shot with darts.

Dittied. adj. [from ditty.] Sung; adapted to music.

He, with his soft pipe, and smooth dittied song,

Well knows to still the wild winds when they sorrow.

Milton.

Ditty. n. s. [dicht, Dut.] A poem to be sung; a song.

Although we lay altogether aside the consideration of ditty or matter, the very harmony of sounds being framed in due sort, and carried from the ear to the spiritual faculties of our souls, is, by a na tive puissance and efficacy, greatly available to bring to a perfect temper whatsoever is there troubled.

Hooker.

Being young, I framed to the harp

Many an English ditty, lovely well,

And gave the tongue a helpful ornament.

Shak.

Strike the melodious harp, shrill timbres ring,

And to the warbling lute soft ditties sing.

Sundays.

His annual wound in Lebanon, allured

The Syrian damsels to lament his fate,

In amorous ditties, all a summer's day.

Milton.

Mean while the rural ditties were mute,

Temper'd to th' oaten flute;

Round say's danc'd.

They were singing and singing under thy inexorable windows lancetables ditties, and call thee cruel.

Dryden.

Divan. n. s. [an Arabick or Turkish word.]

1. The council of the Oriental princes.

2. Any council assembled: used commonly in a sense of dislike.

Forth rush'd in haste the great consulting peers,

Raid's from the dark divan, and with like joy

Congratulate approach'd.

Swift.

Said it to the queen the herald Melon ran,

Who heard the consult of the dire divan.

Pope's Odyssey.

To Divaricate. v. n. [divaricatus, Lat.] To be parted into two; to become bifid.

The partitions are straitened across: one of them divaricates into two, and another into several small ones.

Long.

To Divaricate. v. a. To divide into two.

A slender pipe is produced forward towards the throat, whereunto it is at last inserted, and is there diverted, after the same manner as the spermatie vessels.

Divarication. n. s. [divaricatio, Lat.]

1. Partition into two.

Dogs running before their masters, will stop at a divarication of the way, till they see which hand their masters will take.

Roy.

2. Division of opinions.

To take away all doubt, or any probable divari

cation, the curse is plainly specified.

Greek Vulg. Erasures.

To Dive. v. n. [sippan, Sax.]

1. To sink voluntarily under water.

I am not yet informed, whether when a diver dives, having his eyes open, and swims upon his back, he sees things in the air greater or less.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

556
DIV

Around our pole the spiny dragon glides, And, like a winding stream, the bears divides, The less and greater; who, by fate's decree, Abhor to dive beneath the southern sea.

Drayden's Virgil.

That the air in the blood-vessels of live bodies has a communication with the outward air, I think, seems plain, from the experiments of man, and how human creatures being able to bear air of much greater density in diving, and of much less upon the tops of mountains, provided the changes be made gradually. Brutus.

2. To go under water in search of any thing. Crocodiles defend those pearls which lie in the lakes, and, if poor Indians are eaten up by them, when they dive for the pearl. Helbig's History.

The knave deserves it, when he tempts the main, Where folly decks for kings, or dives for gain. Pope.

3. To go deep into any question, doctrine, or science. The wits that dive most deep, and soar'd most high, Seeking man's powers, have found his weakness such. Davies.

He performs all this out of his own fund, without diving into the arts and sciences for a supply. Drayden.

Whenever we would proceed beyond these simple ideas, and dive farther into the nature of things, we shall fall presently into darkness and obscurity. Leake.

You swim a-top, and on the surface strive; To the depths of nature never dive. Blackmore.

You should have did't into my utmost thoughts. Phillips.

4. To immerge in any business or condition.

Sweet prince, th' exulting tide of your years Hath not yet did't into the world's deceit. Nor can distinguish. Shakespeare, Richard III.

5. To depart from observation; to sink. Dine, thoughts, down to my soul. Shakspeare.

To DIVE. v. a. To play by diving. To DIVE.

Then Bratus, Rome's first martyr, I must name; The Curtul bravely did'st the gulf of fame. Denham.

To DIVE'll. v. a. [direlle, Lat.] To pull; to separate; to sever. To DIVE.

They begin to separate; and may be easily disentangled or parted asunder. Brown's Vulg. Err.

DIVER. n. s. [from dive.]

2. One that goes under water in search of treasure. It is evident, from the relation of divers and fishermen for pearls, that there are many kinds of shell-fish which lie perpetually concealed in the deep, skreened from our sight. Wodward.

3. He that enters deep into knowledge or study. He would have him, as I conceive it, to be no superficial and floating artificer; but a diver into causes, and into the mysteries of proportion. Hutton's Architecture.

To DIVERGE. v. n. [diverge, Lat.] To tend various ways from one point. To DIVERGE.

Homogeneous rays, which flow from several points of any object, and fall perpendicularly on any reflecting surface, shall afterwards diverge from so many points. Newton.

DIVERGENT. adj. [from diverge, Lat.] Tending to various parts from one point. DIVERS.

DIVERS. adj. [diversus, Lat.] Several; sundry; more than one. It is now grown out of use. We have divers examples in the church of such as, by fear, being compelled to sacrifice to strange gods, moved, and kept still the office of confessing our faith. Whitting.

DIV

The teeth breed when the child is a year and a half old: then they cast them, and new ones come about seven years; but divers have backward teeth come at twenty, some at thirty and forty. Bacon's Natural History.

Divers letters were shot into the city with arrows, wherein Seldman's council were revealed. Koole.

Divers friends thought it strange, that a white dry body should acquire a rich colour upon the expansion of spitted and dressed fish. Boyle on Colours.

DIV

DIVERSE. adj. [diversus, Lat.]

1. Different from another.

Four great beasts came up out of the sea, diverse one from another. Daniel vii. 3.

2. Different from itself; various; multiform; diversified.

Elfinness is a great and diverse thing, nor did she yet ever favour any man so much as to wholly his. Ben Jonson.

3. In different directions. It is little used but in the last sense.

The gourd
And thirsty cucumber, when they perceive
Th' approaching olive, with resentment it's Fatty fumes, and with laisd tenuity.
Diverse, detecting contact.

To seize his papers, Carl, was next thy care;
His papers lightly diverse took in a
Pope's Dunciad.

DIVERSIFICATION. n. s. [from diverse.]

1. The act of changing forms or qualities. If you consider how variously several things may be compounded, you will not wonder that such fruitful principles, or manners of diversification, should generate differing colours. Boyle on Colours.

2. Variation; variation.

3. Variety of forms; multiplicity.

4. Change; alteration.

This, which is here called a change of will, is not a change of his will, but a change in the object, which seems to make a diversification of the will, but indeed is the same will diversified. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

To DIVERSIFY, v. a. [diversifier, Fr.]

1. To make different from another; to distinguish; to discriminate.

There may be many species of spirits, as much separated and different from one another as the species of sensible things are distinguished one from another. Leake.

Male souls are diversified with so many characters, that the world has not variety of materials sufficient to furnish out their different inclinations. Addison's Spectator.

It was easier for Holofer to find proper sentiments for Grecian samsungs, than for Milton to diversify his infernal council with proper characters. Addison's Spectator.

2. To make different from itself; to vary; to diversify.

The country being diversified between hills and dales, woods and plains, one place more clear, another more darksome, is a pleasant picture. Bacon.

There is, in the producing of some species, a composition of matter, which may be much diversified. Bacon.

DIVERSION, n. s. [from divert.]

1. The act of turning any thing off from its course.

Cutting off the tops, and pulling off the buds, work retention of the sap for a time, and diversion of it to the sprouts that were not forward. Bacon's Nat. Histor.

I have ranked this diversio of Christian practice among the effects of our contentions. The Decay of Piety.

2. The cause by which any thing is turned from its proper course or tendency.

DIV

Fortunes, honour, friends.

Are mere diversions from love's proper object,
Which only is itself. Denham's Sophy.

3. Sport; something that unbends the mind by turning it off from care. Diversions.

It seems to be something lighter than amusement, and less forcible than pleasure.

You for those ends whole days in coinhill sit, And the diversions of your youth forget. Waller.

In the book of games and diversions, the reader's mind may be supposed to be relaxed. Addison's Spectator.

Such productions of wit and humour as expose vice and folly, furnish useful diversions to readers. Addison's Frencbrother.

4. [In war.] The act or purpose of drawing the enemy off from some design, by threatening or attacking a distant part.

DIVERSITY, n. s. [diversitas, Fr. from diversus, Lat.]

1. Difference; dissimilitude; unlikeness.

There is then in this diversity no contrariety. Hooker.

They cannot be divided, but they will prove opposite; and, not resting in a bare diversity, rise into a contrariety. South.

The most common diversity of human capacities arises from the solid parts, as to their different degrees of strength and tension. Araboth on Aliment.

2. Variety.

The diversity of ceremonies in this kind ought not to cause dissension in churches. Hooker.

Society cannot subsist without a diversity of station, if God should grant every one a middle station, he would defeat the very scheme of happy lives proposed in it. Bergen.

3. Distinct being; not identity.

Considering anything as such at any determined time and place, we compare it with itself existing at another time, and thence form the ideas of identity and diversity. Leake.

4. Variegation.

A waving glow his bloomy beds display, Blushing in bright diversities of day. Pope.

DIVERSLY, adv. [from diverse.]

1. In different ways; differently; variously.

The lack we all have, as well of ghostly as of earthly favours, is in each kind equally known; but the gifts of God are so diversely bestowed, that it seldom appears what all receive: what all stand. Hooker.

Both of them do diversly work, as they have their medium diversly disposed. Baron's Nat. Hist.

Whether the king did permit it to save his purse, or to communicate the envy of a business displeasing to his people, was diversely interpreted. Bacon.

Leicester bewrayed a desire to plant him in the queen's favour, which was diversely interpreted by such as thought that great artizans of courts do nothing by chance, nor much by affection. Hutton.

The universal matter, which Moses comprehendeth under the names of heaven and earth, is by divers diversely understood. Raleigh's History.

Could nought avail, however fan'd in war; Nor armies leagued, that diversly assay'd To curb his power. Phillips.

2. In different directions; to different points.

On life's vast ocean diversly we sail; Reason the card, but passion is the gale. Pope.

To DIVERT. v. a. [diercto, Lat.]

1. To turn off from any direction or course. I rather will subject me to the malice Of a diverted blood and bloody breast. Shakspeare.

Knots, by the confines of the meeting sap, Infect the sound pine, and divers his grain, Torture and errant, from his course of growth. Shakspeare.
DIV

He finds no reason to have his rest abated, because a greater part of it is diverted from his hand.

Locke.

They diverted raffled from improper objects, and gave a new turn to ridicule.

Addison's Freethinker.

Nothing more is requisite for producing all the variety of colours, and degrees of refraction, than that the rays of light be bodies of different sizes; the least of which may make violet, the weakest and darkest of the colours, and be more easily diverted by refracting surfaces from the right course; and the rest, as they are bigger and bigger, make the stronger and more lucid colours, blue, green, yellow, and red, and be more and more distinctly diverted.

Newton.

2. To draw forces to a different part.

The kings of England would have had an absolute conquest of Ireland, if their whole power had been employed; but still there arose sundry opinions, which divided and diverted their power some other way.

Davies on Ireland.

3. To withdraw the mind.

Alas, how simple, to these cates compard, was that crude apple that directed Eve.

Milton's Paradise Regained.

They avoid pleasure, lest they should have their affections tainted by any sensuality, and diverted from the love of him who is to be the only comfort.

Maro's muse, not wholly bent
On what is gainful, sometimes she directs
From sad considerations.

Phillips.

4. To please; to exhilarate. See DIVERSE.

An ingenious gentleman did divert or instruct the kingdom by his papers.

Swift.

5. To subvert; to destroy. In Shakespeare, unless it belong to the first sense.

Frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and derruncate
The unity and married calm of states.
Shakespeare.

DIVERTER. n. s. [from the verb.]

Any thing that diverts or alleviates.

Angling was, after tedious study, a rest to his mind, a cheerer of his spirits, and a divertor of sadness.

Walton.

DIVERTISSE. r. a. [diversiter, Fr. divertio, Lat.] To please; to exhilarate; to divert. A word now little used.

Let erasors instruct, let them divert, and let them move us; this is what is properly meant by the word salt.

Dryden.

DIVERTISMENT. n. [divertissement, Fr.] Diversion; delight; pleasure. A word now not much in use.

How fond seaver men are of bad divertissement, it will prove nigh which ends in heaviness.

Government of the Tongue.

DIVERTIVE. adj. [from divert.] Recreative; amusing; exhilarating. A word not fully authorized.

I would not exclude the common accidents of life, nor even things of a pleasant and divertive nature, so they are innocent, from conversation.

Rogers.

To DIVEST. r. a. [derecrir, Fr. The English word is therefore more properly written derecrir. See DEVEST.] To strip; to make naked; to demude.

Then of his arms Androgens he divest:
His swords, his shield, he takes, and plumes crests.

Dryden.

Let us direct the gay phantom of temporal happiness to false and mischievous directions, which the pride, the passions, and the folly of men have dressed it up.

Rogers.

DIVESTURE. n. s. [from direct.] The act of putting off. The acrost of divesture dispenses them from those laborious and avocating duties which are here requisite to be performed.

Boyle's Scrutini. Love.
DIV

He took it with a bow, and soon divin'd
The seeming toy was not for nought designed.

Drayden.

In change of torment would be case
Could you divine what lovers bear.

Even you, Prometheus, would confess
There is no value like divine工程.

Graven.

DIVINELY. adv. [from divine.]
1. By the agency or influence of God.

2. Excellently; in the supreme degree.
The Grecians most divinely have given to the active perfection of men, a name expressing both beauty and goodness. Hooker.

3. In a manner notting a deity.

His golden horns appear'd, that on the forehead were divines bright.

And o'er the banks diffus'd a yellow light. Addis.

DIVINENESS. n. s. [from divine.]
1. Divinity; participation of the divine nature.

Is it then impossible to distinguish the divineness of this book from that which is human? Grew.

2. Excellence in the supreme degree.

By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly god; a being divineness.

No elder than a boy. Shakesp. Cambelline.

DIVINER. n. s. [from To divine.]
1. One that professes divination, or the art of revealing occult things by supernatural means.

This drudge of the devil, this diwere, laid claim to all my secrets; and swore I was assured to her; told me what privy marks I had about me. Shakesp. Comedy of Err.

Expelled his oracles, and common temples of divination, the devil runs in corners, exercising meaner trickeries, and acting his deceptions in witches, magicians, diviners, and such inferior seducers. Brown's Tid had. Err.

Conjecturer; guesser.

If he himself be conscious of nothing he then thought on, he must be a notable diwere of thoughts, that can assure him that he was thinking.

Locke.

DIVINERESS. n. s. [from diviner.]
A prophetess; a woman professing divination.

The mad divineress had plainly writ,
A true should come, but many ages yet,
In which sinister-entitenditborn,
A dame should drown with all her feather'd train.

Dryden.

DIVINITY. n. s. [diviné, Fr. from divinitus, Lat.]
1. Participation of the nature and excellence of God; deity; godhead.

As with new wine intoxicated both,
They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel
Divinity when shequires wings,
Wherewith to scorn the earth.

Milton.

When he attributes divinity to other things than God, it is only a divinity by way of participation.

Milton.

2. God; the Deity; the Supreme Being; the cause of causes.

Tis the Divinity that sits within us,
Tis the Divinity that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man.

Addison.

3. False god

Vain idols, deities that ne'er before
In Israel's hands had dí'd their dire abodes,
Beastly divinites, and droves of gods.

Prior.

4. Celestial being.

God doubtless can govern this machine he could create, by more direct and easy methods than employing these subservient divinities. Chrome.

5. The science of divine things; theology.

Hear him but reason in divinity.
And, all admiring, with an inward wish You would desire the king were made a prelate.

Shakesp.

They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in naveness, chance, or death. Shakesp.

DIVISIBLE. adj. [divisibility, Lat.]
Capable of being divided into parts; divisible; separable.

When we frame in our minds any notion of matter, we conceive nothing else but extension and bulk, which is impenetrable, or divisible and passive. Boyle's Sermo.

DIVISIBILITY. n. s. [divisibility, Fr.]
The quality of admitting division or separation of parts.

The most palpable absurdities will press the asserter of infinite divisibility. Glanville's Seripta. Locke.

This will easily appear to any one, who will lay his thoughts both in the vast expansion of space, or divisibility of matter. Locke.

DIVISIBILITY. n. s. [from divisible.]
Divisibility.

Naturalists disagree about the origin of motion, and the indefinite divisibility of matter. Boyle.

DIVISION. n. s. [divisio, Lat.]
1. The act of dividing anything into parts.

Thou madest the spirit of the firmament, and commandedst it to part问答, and to make a division between the waters. Exod. vi. 11.

2. The state of being divided.

There was a division among the people, because of this thing. vi. 43.

As to our divisions with the Romanists, were our differences the product of heat, they would, like small clefs in the ground, want but a cold season to cement them.

Dry of Firt.

3. That by which any thing is kept apart; partition.

4. The part which is separated from the rest by dividing.

If we look into communities and divisions of men, we observe the discreet manner, not divinity, guides the conversation. Addison's Spect.

5. Disunion; discord; difference.

There was a division among the people, because of this thing. vi. 43.

As to our divisions with the Romanists, were our differences the product of heat, they would, like small clefs in the ground, want but a cold season to cement them.

Dry of Firt.

6. Parts into which a discourse is distributed.

In the divisions I have made, I have endeavoured, the best I could, to govern myself by the divisibility of matter.

Div. Henry IV.

Our tongue will run divisions in a tune, not making a note of it, even when our thoughts are totally engaged elsewhere.

Glanville.

7. Space between the notes of music, or parts of a musical composition; just time.

Thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly pem'd
Sung by the queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

Shakesp. Henry IV.

8. Distinction.

I will put a division between my people and thy people.

Crotchet.

[In arithmetic.] The separation or partition of any number or quantity given, into any parts assigned.

Cocker.

9. [In arithmetic.] The separation or partition of any number or quantity given, into any parts assigned.

Cocker.

10. Subdivision; distinction of the general into species.

Abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Shakesp. Macbeth.

DIVISOR. n. s. [divisior, Lat.]
The number by which a given number is divided; the number which sheweth how many parts the dividend is to be divided into.

DIVORCE. n. s. [divorce, Fr. from di- vorticium, Lat.]
1. The legal separation of husband and wife.

Divorce is a lawful separation of husband and wife, made before a competent judge, on due cognizance of the cause, and sufficient proof made thereof. Aylye's Parergon.

To restore the king,
He counsels a divorce, a loss of him,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost his luster.

Shakesp. Henry VIII.

He had in his eye the divorce, that had passed betwixt the emperor and Serbonia. Drayden's Dedication to the Em.ild.

2. Separation; disunion.

Such marriages may occasion a farther alienation of mind, and divorce of affections, in her, from my religion.

These things, to be a bastard, and to be born one of a lawful wedlock, and of one blood with the other; and 'tis hard to make divorce between those things that are so near in nature to each other, as being convertible terms.

Aylye's Parergon.

3. The sentence by which a marriage is dissolved.

The cause of any penal separation.

Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of a steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to beca'm. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

To DIVORCE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To separate a husband or wife from the other.

To divorce; to separate by violence.

Were it consonant unto reason to divorce these two sentences, the former of which doth shew how the latter is restrained, and, not marking the former, to conclude by the latter only of them? Hooker.

The continent and the island were continued together within men's remembrance, by a drawbridge; but are now divorced by the downfallen cliff. C. S. of Cam. Div.

So seem'd her youthful soul not early forc'd,
Or from so fair, so sweet a seat divor'd.

Waller.

3. To separate from another.

If the u were not gloal,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulch'ring on asturdent.

Shakesp. K. Lear.

If so be it were possible, that all other ornamentals of mind might be in their full perfection, nevertheless the mind that should possess them, divorced from piety, could be but a spectacle subject to ridicule. Hooker.

DIVORCIMENT. n. s. [from divorce.]
Divorce; separation of marriage.

Write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send out of his house. Mark. xvii, 1.

DIVORCER. n. s. [from divorce.]
The person or cause which produces divorce or separation
DIV

Death is the vivid strangler of acquaintance, the eternal disposer of marriage.

DIURETICK. adj. [diuretico.] Having the power to provoke urine.

DIURNAL adj. [diurnus, Lat.]

1. Relating to the day.
We observe in a day, which is a short year, the greatest heat about two in the afternoon, when the sun is past the meridian, which is the diurnal solstice, and the same is evident from the thermometer.

Think, ere this diurnal star
Leaves cold the night, how we his gather’d beams Reflect, many with matter sore incensed.

2. Constituting the day.
Why does he order the diurnal hours?
To leave earth’s other part, and rise in ours?

3. Performed in a day; daily; quotidian.
The prime orb,
Incredible how swift, had thither row’d
Diurnal.

DIURNALLY adv. [from diurnal.] Daily; every day.
As we make the enquires, we shall diurnally communicate to the public. Tacket.

DIUTURNITY. n. s. [diuturnitas, Lat.]
Length of duration.
Such a coming, as it might be said that that generation should not pass till it was fulfilled, they needed not suppose of such diuturnity.

To DIVULGE. v. a. [divulgo, Lat.]
1. To publish; to make public; to reveal to the world.
Men are better contented to have their commendations suppressed, than the contrary much divulged. Hakluyt.

I will pluck the veil of modesty from the so seeming mistress Page, and divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Artreux.

These answers, in the silent night receiv’d,
The king himself divulg’d, the last believed.

Drugran’s Excid.
You are deprived of the right over your own sentiments, of the privilege of every human creature, to divulge or conceal them. Page.

The cabinets of the sick, and the closets of the dead, have been ranakced to publish private letters, and afterwards the maimk the most secret sentiments of friendship. Page.

2. To proclaim; to declare by a public act.
This is true glory and renown, when God.
Looking on the earth, with approbation marks The last man, and divulges him through heav’n To all his angels, who with true applause Recount his prais’d. Milton’s Par. Lost.

DIVULGER. n. s. [from divulge.] A publisher; one that exposes to public view.
I think not any thing in my letters could tend so much to my reproach, as the orisons divulging of them did to the infamy of the divulger. K. Charles.

DIVULSION. n. s. [divulsion, Lat.] The act of plunging away.
DOC

have done, you will have but a confused notion of the place.
Spectator.

3. To cease to be concerned with; to cease to care about; to desist from notice or practice: only in the compound preterite.

No man would make use of disguised parties to destroy one but he knew they were sure to master them when they had done with them. Stillingfleet.

I have done with Chaucer, when I have answered some objections.

We have not yet done with assenting to propositions at first hearing, and understanding their terms.

Having done with such usanances, we gave up what we cannot disown.

4. To fare; to be with regard to sickness or health.

Good woman, how dost thou?
—The better it that pleases your good worship to ask.
Shaksp.

5. To succeed; to fulfill a purpose.

Come, 'tis no matter; we shall do without him.
Addison.

You would do well to prefer a bill against all kings and parliaments since the conquest; and, if that won't do, challenge the crown.
Collier on Dolling.

6. To deal with.

No man, who hath to do with the king, will think himself safe, unless you be his good angel, and guide him.

If any thing in the world deserve our serious study and consideration, those principles of religion do.
Tillotson.

Take all things which relax the veins; for what does so, prevents too vigorous action through the arteries.
Arbutath.

8. Do is a word of vehement command, or ceremonial request: as, help me, do; make haste, do.

If thou hast lost thy land, do not also lose thy constancy; and if thou must die a little, Some —Loose me—I will free thee.

—Do, and I'll be thy slave.
Dryden's King Art.

9. Do is to put before verbs sometimes expletively, as, I do love; or I love; I did love; or I loved.

The Turks do acknowledge God the Father, creator of heaven and earth, being the first Person in the Trinity, though they deny the rest.
Bonfoy's Holy War.

This just reproach their virtue—do excite.

Dryden's Aenid.

10. Sometimes emphatically as; I do hate him, but will not wrong him.

Perdition catch my soul
But I do love thee; and when I love thee not,
Chaos is again.
Shaksp. Othello.

11. Sometimes by way of opposition as; I did love him, but scorn him now.

To DOAT. v. n. See To Dote.

DOCIBLE. adj. [docils, Lat.] Tractable; docile; easy to be taught.

The assinate feat of tow-thistles and brambles is commonly set before them, as all the food and entertainment of their tenderest and most docile age.
Milton.

DOCIBLENESS. n. s. [from docible].

Teachability; docility; readiness to learn.

I might enlarge in commendation of the noble bound, as also of the docility of dogs in general.

Hawkins's Angler.

VOL. I.

551

34.

DOC.

DOCILE. adj. [docils, Lat.]

1. Teachable; easily instructed; tractable.

Dogs soon grow accustomed to whatever they are taught, and being docile and tractable, are very useful.
Elia's Voyages.

2. With before the thing taught.

Soon docile to the secret acts of ill
With smiles I could betray, with temper kill. Prior.

DOCILIETY, n. s. [docilitis, Fr. from doc-ilitas, Lat.] Aptness to be taught; readiness to learn.

All the perfection they allowed his understanding, and the respectability and all that they ascribed to his will was a possibility to be virtuous.
South.

What is more admirable than the fitness of every creature for our use? the docility of an elephant, and the insipidity of a camel for travelling in deserts?
Gree.

Doke. n. s. [bocca, Sax.]. A plant; a flower.
The species are seventeen, ten of which grow wild, several of them being used in medicine; and the sort called the oriental burdock, is said to be the true thistle.
Miller.

Nothing teems

But hateful docks, rough thistles, keckses, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility. Shakspeare. Henry.

My love for gentle Dermot faster grows
Than you tall dock, that rises to thy nose:
Cut down the dock, 'twill sprout again; but know,
Love rooted out again will never grow.
Swift.

Dok. n. s.
The stump of the tail, which remains after docking.

2. The solid part of the tail.
The tail of a great rhinoceros is not well described by Bontius. The dock is about half an inch thick, and two inches broad, like an apes therapy's spatula.
Green's Museum.

Doric. n. s. [as some imagine of δόξα],
A place where water is let in or out at pleasure, where ships are built or laid up.
The boatswain and mariner may bring religion to what dock they please.
Hawel.

There are docks for their gallants and men of war, as well as work-houses for all land and naval preparations.
Addison.

To Dock. v. a. [from dock a tail.]

1. To cut off a tail.

2. To cut any thing short.

One or two stout can cer cut, which docke all favours hand on hand; and spread a huge invisible net between the prince and subject, through which nothing of value could pass.
Swift's Examiner.

3. To cut off a reckoning; to cut off an entail.

4. To lay the ship in a dock.

Döchet. n. s. A direction tied upon goods; a summary of a larger writing.

Dec.

DOCTOR. n. s. [doctor, Lat.]

1. One that has taken the highest degree in the faculties of divinity, law, or physsick. In some universities they have doctors of music.

It means a man so well versed in his faculty, as to be qualified to teach it.

No woman had it, but a civil doctor,
Who did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And hagg'd the ring. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

Then stood there up in our council, a Plas-ris, named Gamaclis, a doctor of laws. Acts v. 34.

2. A man skilled in any profession.

Then subtle doctors scribblers made their pride.

Causses like cocks, stuck out each other's eyes.

Dryden.
about this or that ceremony, is but like opening a few wickets, and leaving them ajar, by which no more can get in at a time. Swift.

4. The word in all its senses is low and vulgar.

Do'kin. n. s. [doukten, Dut.] A doitin or little dot: a contemptuous name for a low coin.

I would not buy them for a doitin. Lily's Grammar construed.

Do'man. n. s. The name of a fish. Fish that cast their shell are the lobster, the crab, the craw-fish, the kindmbad or toman, and she tortoise.

Bacon.

Do'e. n. s. [from da, Sax. dana, Dan. danna, Lat.] A she deer; the female of a buck.

There but forbear your food a little while. While, like a doe, I go to find my fawn, And give it food. Shakspe. As you like it. Bucks have horns, does none. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The fearful doe
And flying stam amidst the greyhounds go.

Dryden's Virgil.

Do'e. n. s. [from To do.] A feat; what one has to do; what one can perform.

No sooner he does peep into The world, but he has done his dose. Hubberus.

Doe. n. s. [from To do.]

1. One that does anything good or bad.

So foul a thing, of them they are of justice set, That torture both the deer and distrest. Daniel.

It may be indeed a public crime, or a national mischief; yet is it but a private act, and the doing of it may chance to pay his head for his presumption. South.

2. Actor; agent.

Shib thus far we open the things that have been done, let not the principal does themselves be forgotten. Hooker.

3. Performer.

One judgeth the prize to the best deer, of which they are no less glad than great princes are of triumphs. Shakspe.

4. An active, or busy, or valiant person.

Fear not, my lord, we will not stand to prate; Talkers are no good does: be assur'd, We go to use our bands, and not our tongues. Shakspe.

5. One that habitually performs or practises.

De does of the word, and not hearers only. Common Prayer.

In this we shew oursewes slack, and unapt to doers of his will, in that we take upon us to be contrivers of his wisdom. Hooker.

Doe. n. s. [from doe.]

1. The third person from do, for doth.

Though leaning to foreigners, upon use, doth not at all alter the balance of trade between those countries, yet doth alter the exchange between those countries. Locke.

Do'e. n. s. [from off.]

1. To put off dress. You have deceiv'd our trust, And made us doff our easy robes of steel To crush our old limbs in ungenteel steel. Shakspe, Henry IV. Milan. Agonistes.

Nature, in awe to him,
Had doff'd her dress to her time.
With her great master so to sympathize. Milton. That judge is hot, and doff's his gown. Alcides doffs the lion's tawny hide. Rowe.

2. To strip; to divest of anything.

Why art thou troubled, Herod! What vain fear
The blood hunting breast doth move? Heaven's king, who doffs himself our flesh to wear, Comes not to rule in wrath, but serve in love. Cranham.

3. To put away to get rid of.

Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, and make women fight.

Shakspe. Macbeth.

4. To shift off; to delay; to refer to another time; to put off.

Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather keep'st me from all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. Shakspe. Othello.

Away, I will not have to do with you— Canst thou so doff me? Shakspe. Mac Ado.

5. This word is in all its senses obsolete, and scarcely used except by rusticks; yet it is a pure and commodious word.

Dogg. n. s. [dogge, Dut. canis, Lat.]

1. A domestic animal remarkably various in his species; comprising the mastiff, the spaniel, the bulldog, the greyhound, the hound, the terrier, the cur, with many others. The larger sort are used as a guard; the less for sports.

Such smuggling rogues as these soothe every passion: Renegy, affirm, and turn your backs With every gale and vary of their masters, As knowing nought, like dogs, but following. Shakspe. King Lear.

Why should we not this dog and pistol as distinct species one from another, as a horse and a dog? Locke.

The clamorous roars of men, and boys, and dogs. Thomson.

2. A constellation called Sirius, or Canicula, rising and setting with the sun during the calendrical days, or dog days.

Among the southern constellations, two there are, which bear the name of the dog: the one in sixteen degrees latitude, containing on the left thigh a star of the first magnitude, usually called Procyon, or Antinous. Benes's Alman. It parts the twins and crab, the dog divides, and Argo's keel that broke the frowdy tides. Crecch.

3. A reproachful name for a man.

I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable, As the dog Jew did utter in the streets. Shakspe. Beware of dogs, beware of ev'ry worker. Phil. iii. 2.

4. To give or send to the Dogs, to throw away. To go to the Dogs; to be ruin'd, destroyed, or devoured.

Had whole Colepeper's wealth been hops and malt Could he himself have sent it to the dogs? Pope.

5. It is used as the term for the male of several species: as, the dog fox, the dog otter.

If ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliments is like the encounter of two dog apes. Shakspe. The same ill-taste of sense will serve to join Dog foxes in the yoke, and sheer the swine. Dryd.

6. Dog is a particle added to anything, to mark meanness, or degeneracy, or worthlessness: as, dog rose.

To Dog. v. a. [from the noun.] To hunt as a dog, insidiously and indefatigably.

I have dogg'd him like his motherer. Shakspe. I, his despicable Juno, sent him forth. From Courtly friends, with camping foes to live, Where death and danger dog the heels of worth. Shakspe.
DOG

through several nations, and even now scarce think myself secure. Pope.

Hate dogs their rise, and insult mocks their fall. Dryden, The Vision of Human Wonders.

DOGFISHER. n. s. [dog and fish.] A kind of fish.
The dog-fisher is good against the falling sickness. Walken.

DOG-TEETH. n. s. [dog and teeth.] The teeth in the human head next to the grinders; the eye-teeth.
The best instruments for dividing of herds are incisor-teeth; for cracking of hard substances, as bones and nuts, grinders or mill-teeth; for dividing of flesh, sharp-pointed or dog-teeth. Arbuthnot on Animals.

DOG-TRICK. n. s. [dog and trick.] An ill-turn; surly or brutal treatment.

Learn better manners, or I shall serve you a dog-trick; I'll make you know your rider. Dryden, Don Sebastian.

DOGbane. n. s. [dog and bone.] A plant. Miller.

Dogberry-tree. A kind of cherry.

Dogbolt. n. s. [dog and bolt.] Of this word I know not the meaning; unless it be, that when meal or flour is sifted or bolted to a certain degree, the coarser part is called dogbolt, or flour for dogs.

His only solace was, that now his dogbolt fortune was so low, that either it must quickly end, or turn about again, and mend. Hudibras.

Dogbrain. n. s. [dog and brain.] The brier that bears the hip; the cynosbaton.

Dogcheap. adj. [dog and cheap.] Cheap as dogs meat; cheap as the offal bought for dogs.

Good store of harlots, say you, and dogcheap.

Dogdays. n. s. [dog and days.] The days in which the dog-star rises and sets with the sun, vulgarly reputed unwholesome.

Nor was it mere in his power to be without promotion and titles, than for a healthy man to sit in what was, in the longest dog-days, and remain without warmth. Clarendon.

Dogdraw. n. s. [dog and draw.] A manifest apprehension of an offender against venison in the forest, when he is found drawing after a deer by the scent of a hound which he leads in his hand. Cowell.

Dog. n. s. [dodge, Ital.] The title of the chief magistrate of Venice and Genoa. Dover has a statue at the entrance of the doge's palace, with the title of deliverer of the commonwealth. Addison.

Dogfish. n. s. [from dog and fish.] Another name for a shark.

It is part of the jaw of a shark or dogfish. Woodward.

Dogfly. n. s. [dog and fly.] A voracious biting fly.

Thump-buckler Mars began, And at Minerva a lance of brass he head-long ran; These vile words ushering his blows, Thou dogfly what's the harm? Thou makest gods fight thus? Chapman's Blind.

Dogged. adj. [from dog.] Sullen; sour; morose; ill-humoured; gloomy. Your uncle must not know but your are dead: I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports. Shakesp. King John.

Dogged York, that reaches at the moon, Whose over-weening arm I have pluck'd back, By false accuse doth level at my life. Few miles on horseback had they jogged, But fortune unto them turn'd dogged. Hudibras.

Doggedly. adv. [from dogged.] Sullenly; gloomily; sourly; morosely.

Doggedness. n. s. [from dogged.] Gloom of mind; sullenness; moroseness.

Dogger. n. s. [from dog, for its meanness, Skinner.] A small ship with one mast.

Doggerel. adj. [from dog.] Loosed from the measures or rules of regular poetry; vile; despicable; mean: used of verses.

Then hasten Og and Dog to rehearse, Two foals that crash their feeble sense on verse; Who by his unseel to all succeeding times Shall live, in spite of their own doggrel rhymes. Dryden.

Your wit burlesque may one step higher climb, And in his sphere may judge all doggrel rhyme. Dryden.

It is a dispute among the critics, whether burlesque poetry runs best in heroic verse, like that of the Dispensary; or in doggerel, like that of Hudibras. Addison.

Doggerel. n. s. Mean, despiseful, worthless despicrmares, The hand and head were never lost of those Who dealt in doggrel, or who pined in prose. The vilest doggrel Grubstreet sends Will pass for yours with fees and friends. Swift.

Doggish. adj. [from dog.] Churlish; brutal.

Doghearted. adj. [dog and heart.] Cruel; pitiless; malicious.

This, that stript from his beneficence, turn'd her To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his doghearted daughters. Shakesp. K. Lear.

Doghole. n. s. [dog and hole.] A vile hole; a mean habitation.

France is a doghole, and it no more merits the tread of a man's foot: to the wars. Shakesp. But, could you be content to bid adieu To the dear playhouse, and the conquerors too, Sweet country seats are patch'd and d'ery where, With land and gardens, at less price than here You hire a darksome doghole by the year. Dryden's Journal.

Reverse your ornaments, and hang them all On some patch'd doghole with ends of wall. Pope.

Dogkennel. n. s. [dog and kennel.] A little hut or house for dogs.

A certain nobleman, beginning with a dogkennel, never lived to finish the palace he had commenced. Dryden.

I am desired to recommend a dogkennel to any that shall want a pack. Tales.

Doghouse. n. s. [dog and house.] An insect that harbours on dogs.

DOGMA. n. s. [Lat.]

1. Established principle: doctrinal notion. Our poet was a stoick philosopher, and all his moral sentences are drawn from the dogmas of that school. Dryden.

2. In canon law. Dogma is that determination which contains in, and has a relation to, some casuistical point of doctrine, or some doctrinal part of the christian faith. Ayliffe's Pavergon.

Dogmatically. adj. [from dogma.] Authoritative.

Dogmatick. adj. thoritative; magisterial; positive; in the manner of a philosopher laying down the first principles of a sect.

The dim and boundless intellect of man seldom personality ventured to be dogmatic about things that approach to infinite, whether in spacious or minute.

I had by my natural disposition and situation for a while, to take up that dogmatic way, which is so much his character.

Learning gives us a discovery of our ignorance, and keeps us from being preposterous and dogmatic in our determinations. Coler. on Pride.

Critics write in a positive dogmatic way, without either language, genius, or imagination. Spectator.

One of these authors is indeed so grave, sentimental, dogmatic, a rogue, that there is no mercy. Swift.

Dogmatically. adv. [from dogmatic.] Magisterially; positively;

I shall not presume to interpose dogmatically in a court, versus, which I look never to see decided. South.

Dogmatical. n. s. [from dogmatical.] The quality of being dogmatical; magisterial; mock authority.

Dogmatist. n. s. [dogmatiste, Fr.] A magisterial teacher; a positive asseter; a bold advance of principles.

I could describe the vanity of bold opinion, which the dogmatists themselves demonstrate in all the controversies they are engaged in. Gianelli's Scipio.

A dogmatist in religion is not a great way off from a bigot, and is in high danger of growing up to be a bloody persecutor. Watts' Improvement of the Mind.

To Dogmatize. v. n. [from dogma] To assert positively; to advance without distrust; to teach magisterially.

These, with the pride of dogmaticizing schools, impose'd on nature arbitrary rules; Fored their vain inventions to obey, And move as learned fancy traced the way. Blackmore.

Dogmatizer. n. s. [from dogmatize.] An asseter; a magisterial teacher; a bold advance of opinions.

Such opinions, being not entered into the conversation of our church, are not properly chargeable either on Papists or Protestants, but on particular dogmatists of both parties. Hammond.

Dogrose. n. s. [dog and rose.] The flower of the hip. Of the rough or hairy excrecence, those on the brier, or dogrose, are a good instance. Derham's Physico-Theology.

Dogsleep. n. s. [dog and sleep.] Pretended sleep.

Jvenual indeed mentions a drowsy husband, who raised an estate by storing; but then he is represented to have slept what the common people call dog-sleep.

Dogsmeat. n. s. [dog and meat.] Refuse; vile stuff; offal like the flesh sold to feed dogs.

His reverence bought of me the flower of all the market; these are but dogmats to them. Dryden.

Dogstar. n. s. [dog and star; canicula, Lat.] The star which gives the name to the dog days. All shun the raging dog-star's sultry heat, And from the half-impotent town retreat. Add.

Dogstooth. n. s. [from dog and tooth.] A plant.

Dogtrot. n. s. [dog and trot.] A gentle trot like that of a dog.

This with, them both and rode A dog trot through the crowding crowd. Hudibras.
DOL

Dole-Grey. adj. [dog and weary.]
Tired as a dog; excessively weary.
Oh, master, master, I have watch'd so long,
That I'm dog-grey. Shakesp. Taming of the Shrew.

Dogwood. n.s. A species of cornelian cherry.

DOLLY. n.s. A species of woolen stuff, so called, I suppose, from the name of the first maker.
We should be as weary of one set of acquaintance, though never so good, as we are of one suit, though never so fine: a fool, and a dolly stuff, worn on the first day of grace, and be worn for variety. Congr. 's Way of the World.

DOINGS. n.s. [from To do. This word has hardly any singular.]
1. Things done; events; transactions.
I have but kill'd 1 fly.—
But how if that fly had a father and mother?
How should he hang his slender gilled wings,
And buzz lamented dinges in the air! Shakesp.

2. Feats; actions; good or bad.
The next degree was to mark all Zelman's doings, speculating on fashions, and to take them unto his own part, as a pattern of worthy proceedings. Sidney.

If I'm traduced by tongues which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing. let me say
Their face is out of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through Shakesp. Hen. VIII.
At length a reverend sire among them came,
And of their doings great dislike declard, and Testified against their ways. Milton.

3. Behaviour; conduct.
Never the earth on his round shoulders bare,
A mask tir'd up from high or low degree,
That in her doings better could compare
Mirth with respect, few words with courtesy. Sidney.

4. Conduct; dispensation.
Dangerous it were for the free brains of man to Wade far into the doings of the most High. Hooker.

5. Stir; bustle; tumult.
Shall there be then, in the mean while, no doings? Hooker.

6. Festerity; meritment: as, jolly doings.

7. This word is only used in a ludicrous sense, or in low mean language.
After such miraculous doings, we are not yet in a condition of coming to France to our terms. Swift.

DOLT. n.s. [dolt; Dutt, dought, Erse.]
A small piece of money.
When they will not give a dote to relieve a lane beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Shakesp. Tempest.

In Anna's wars a soldier, poor and old,
Had dearly earn'd a little purse of gold;
Tid'd with a tedious march, one晷 unhappy night
He slept, poor dog! and lost it to a dote. Pope.

DOLE. n.s. [from dole; belian, Sax.]
1. The act of distribution or dealing.
It was your presumption,
That in the dote of blows your son might drop. Shakesp.

2. Any thing dealt out or distributed.
Now my masters, happy man be this dote, say
1; every man to his business. Shakesp.
Let us, that are unburth and whole,
Fall one, and happy man be his dote. Hudibras.

3. Provoked by my deceptions in charity.
They had such firm dependence on the day,
That need grew pamper'd, and forgot to pray;
So sure the dote, so ready at their call,
They stood prepar'd to see the manna fall. Dryd.

Clients of God were feeded; now a poor
Divided dote is dealt at th' outward door,
Which by the hungry rout is soon dispatch'd. Dryd.'s Journal.

What if his eyes-sight, for to Israel's God
Nothing is hard, by miracle restored,
He now doth knock on his foes' heads,
And over heaps of slaughter's walk his way. Milton.

5. [from dolor.] Grief; sorrow; misery; OBsolute.
Under they lie; the poor old man, their father,
Making vast dote over them, than all beholders
Take part with weeping. Shakesp. As you like it.
Our sometime sister, now our queen,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,
With mirth in funeral. and with dire in marriage.
In equal scale weighing delight and dote,
Taked to life. Shakesp. Hamlet.
They might hope to change
Tornent with ease. and soonst recompose
Dote with delight. Milton's Par. Lost.

To Dole. v.s. [from the noun.] To deal.
To distribute. Dole.

DOLEFUL. adj. [dote and full.]
1. Sorrowful; doleful; dismally; gloomily; impressing sorrow.
We are taught, by our example, that the presence of dolorous and dreadful objects, even in maims most perfect, any, as clouds, overcast all seasonable joy. Hooker.

'On you make in too dolorous a sense:
I spake't you for your comfort.

2. Lamentation; complaint.
Never troubling him either with asking questions, or finding fault with his melancholy; but rather fitting to his dolorous discourses of their own and other folk's misfortunes. Sidney.

3. Pain; sting.
A mind fixt and bent upon somewhat that is good, doth avert the doles of death. Bacon.

DOLPHIN. n.s. [dolphin, Lat. though the dolphin is supposed to be not the same fish.] The name of a fish.

The dolphi were like they; shew'd his back above
The element they liv'd in. Shakesp.

Draw boys riding upon goats, eagles and dolphin.

DOLT. n.s. [dol, Teutonick.]
A heavy stupid fellow; a blockhead; a thick-scall; a loggerhead.

Dolts in haste have some alter fair erect
To those high pow'rs, which idly sit above. Sidney.

Thou hast not half that power to do me harm,
As I have to hurt: oh gull, oh dolts,
As ignorant as dirt. Shakesp. Othello.
Like men condemn'd to thunder bolts,
Who, ere the blow, become more dolts;
They neither have the hearts to stay,
Nor wit enough to run away. Hudibras.

Wood's adultate corn, poor
Which, as he scatter'd, we, like dolts,
Missak to first for the dolts. Swift.

DOLTSISH. n.s. [from dolts.] Stupid; mean; dull; blockish.
Dolts, the most arast dolts that ever was without the privilege of a humble. Sidney.

DO'SABLE. adj. [doomabies, Lat.] -amine.

Doom. n.s. [from doom, Lat.]
1. Dominion; empire.
DOM

Domination, n. s. [dominatus, Lat.] Predominant; presiding ascendant.

Dominant, adj. [dominatus, Fr. dominius, Lat.] Predominant; presiding.

Dominator, n. s. [dominatus, Lat.] To predominate; to prevail over the rest.

To DOMINATE, v. a. To make domestic; to withdraw from the public. Clarissa.

DOME-STICK, n. s. One kept in the same house. A servant dwells remote from all knowledge of his lord's purposes; he lives as a kind of foreigner under the same roof; a domestic, and yet a stranger too. South.

To DOMIFY, v. a. [domifico, Lat.] To tame. Dict.

DON

Thou and thine usurp

The domination, royalties, and rights

Of this oppressed boy.

Shakespeare, King John.

2. Tyranny; insolent authority.

Maximus traded with the Goths in the product of his own extensive dominions, the choice of his native vicitv; whither he retired, to withdraw from the unjust domination of Optianus Macrinus.

Arriuus on Coins.

3. One highly exalted in power; used of angelic beings.

He heav'n of heav'n, and all the powers therein, By thee created; and by thee thrown down The impious Titus. Thomson.

Hear, all ye angels, progeny of light,

Thrones, dominations, princehoods, virtues, powers

Milton.

DOMINATIVE, adj. from dominatus, Imperious; insolent.

DOMINATOR, n. s. [Lat.] The presiding or predominant power or influence.

Jupiter and Mars are dominators for this north-west part of the world, which maketh the people impatient of servitude, loves of liberty, martial, and contention.

Dominic, 1. A thing given to sacred uses.

To DOMINEER, v. n. [dominor, Lat.] To rule with insolence; to swell; to bluster; to act without control.

Go to the feast, revel, and domineer,

Curse full measure. Shakers, Tom. of the Shakes.

The voice of conscience now is low and weak, chasting the passions, as old Eli did his lustful domineering sons.

South.

Both would their little ends secure;

He sighs for freedom, she for pow'r;

His wishes tend abroad to roam,

And hers to domineer at home. Prior.

DOMINICUS, [dominicallis, Lat.] That which notes the Lord's day, or Sunday.

The cycle of the moon serves to chear the epacts, and that of the sun the dominical letter, throughout all their variations.

Hokker on Time.

DOMINION, n. s. [dominium, Lat.]

1. Sovereign authority; unlimited power.

They on the earth

Dominion exercise, and in the air,

Chastly on a wing. Milton.

He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,

Dominion absolute; that right we hold

By his donation; but man over man

He made to be kings.

His best use of pow'r, O virtuous pride in kings!

And like his bounty whence dominion springs.

Tuckell.

2. Power; right of possession or use, without being accountable.

He could not have private dominion over that, which was under the private dominion of another.

Locke.

3. Territory; region; district; considered as subject.

The dominions of the bishoprics the kings of England did ever retain in all their dominions, when the pope's warred authority was at the highest.

Davies on Ireland.

4. Predominance; ascendant.

Objects placed foremost ought to be more finished than those cast behind; and to have dominion over things confused and transmuted.

Dryden's Frenzy.

5. An order of angels.

By him were all things created, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominations, or principalities or powers.

Col. i. 16.

DON, n. s. [dominus, Lat. The Spanish title for a gentleman, and Don Quixote.

It is used ludeously.

To the great don of wit,

Phæbus gives them full privilege alone

To damn all others, and cry up their own. Dryden.

DONSHIP. n. s. [from don.] Quality or rank of a gentleman or knight.

I'm none of those,

Your bosom friends, as you suppose; But Ralph himself, your trusty squire, Wh' has dragg'd your donship out o' th' mire. Hood.

To DON, v. a. [To do on.] To put on; to invest with; the contrary to daff.

Obsolet.

The purple morning left her crimson bed,

And donned her robes of pure vermilion hue.

Ferraris.

Fairest.

Her helm the virgin don'd.

What! should I don this robe, and trouble you? Shakespeare.

DONRY, n. s. [donarium, Lat.] A thing given to sacred uses.

1. The act of giving any thing; the act of bestowing.

He gave us only power, beast, fish, fowl,

Dominion absolute; that right we hold

By his donation. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. The grant by which any thing is given or conferred.

Hawseover the letter of that donation may be unregarded by men, yet the sense thereof is so imprinted in their hearts, as if every one had claim for himself unto that which was conferred upon all.

Raleigh's Essay.

The kingdoms of the world to thee were given, and to thee pow'r, and dominion, and a kingdom, that all nations should serve thee. Daniel.

Other donation none thou canst produce. Milton.

DONATIVE, n. s. [donatif, Fr. from donatus, Lat.]

1. A gift; a largess; a present; a dole of money distributed.

The Roman emperor's custom was, at certain solemn times, to bestow on his soldiers a donative, which denotation they received wearing garlands upon their heads.

Hokker.

They were entertained with publick shewes and donatives, to make them more easily digest their lost liberty.

Dryden.

2. In law.

A benefice merely given and collated by the patron to a man, without either presentation to the ordinary, or institution by the ordinary, or induction by his orders.

Cowell.

Never did sterke carry double truer:

He is the donative, and mine the cure. Cleveland.

DONE, part. pass. of the verb To do.

Another like fair tree eke grew thereby,

Whereof whose did cut, effusion did know

Both good and evil; O shameful memory!

That tree, through one man's fault, hath done

All to die. Spence's Fairy Queen.

DONE, a kind of interjection. The word by which a wager is concluded: when a wager is offered, he that accepts it says done.

Done: the wager? Shakespeare, Tempest.

One thing, sweet heart, I will ask:

Take me for a new fashion'd mask.

Done: but my bargain shall be this, I'll throw my mask off when I kiss. Cleveiland.

I was done and done, and the fox, by consent, was to be the judge. L' engagement.

DO'NION, n. s. [now corrupted to dungeon, from dominium, low Lat. according to Menage.] The highest and strongest tower of the castle, where prisoners were kept; as in Chaucer. It is now used of subterranian prisons.
DOO

The great tawny, that was so thick and strong, Which of the castle was the chief dungeon, Wherein the knights were in prison, Was ever green to the garden-wall, Ther as this Emley had her playing. Chaucer.

DONOR. n. s. [from dorn, Lat.] A giver; a bestower; one who gives anything.

Litters thick besiege the donor's gate, And begging lords and teeming ladies wait. Dryden's Journal.

It is a mighty check to beneficent tempers to consider how often good designs are frustrated and perverted to purposes, which, could the donors themselves have foreseen, they would have been very loth to promote. Aubrey.

DOODLE. n. s. [a cant word, perhaps corrupted from do little: faintain.] A trifier; an idler.

To DOOM, v. a. [bemam, Sax.]

1. To judge. Him through malice half, Father of doom, and you! thou dost not doom. Do'st not, so strictly, but much more to pity incline. Milton.

2. To condemn to any punishment; to sentence.

He may be doomed to chains, to shame, to death, While proud Hippodamas shall mount his throne. Smith.

Justly thy impartial fates conspire,
Dooming that son to be the sire
Of such another son. Granville.

3. To pronounce condemnation upon any.

Minos, the strict inquisitor, appears, And lives and crimes, with his assessors, hear; Round him in the blended halls he roams, Abolishes the just, and dooms the guilty souls. Dryden's Aeneid.

4. To command judicially or authoritatively.

Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death, And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave? Shakesp.

5. To destine; to command by uncontrollable authority.

Fate and the gods, by their supreme command, Have doomed our ships to seek the Latian land. Dryden's Aeneid.

I have no will but what your eyes ordain, Destin'd to love, as they are doom'd to reign. Granville.

DOOM. n. s. [bom, Sax. doom, Dut.]

1. Judicial sentence; judgment.

He's fed, my lord, and all his pow'r do yield; And ballybush, with hatters on their necks, Expect your highness' doom of life or death. Shak.

To Satan, first in sin, his doom applied, Though in mysterious terms, judged as they best. Milton.

And now, without redemption, all mankind Must have been lost, adjoyn'd to death and hell. By doom severe. Milton.

In the great day, wherein the secrets of all hearts shall be laid open, no one shall be able to discover whether his clothes be warm, or so naked; whether his house be firm, and live without doom. Decoy of Petty. Martin's office is now the second do in the street, where he will see Parol. Arbuthnot. Latib, though they be bred within doors, and never seen the action of their own species, push at those who approach them with their foreheads. Addison's Spectator.

The sultan entered again the peasant's house, and turned the owner out of doors. Addison's Guardian.

3. Entrance; portal.

The tender blades of grass appear; And buds, that yet conceive no fear, Stand at the door of life, and doubt to clothe the year. Dryden.

4. Passage; avenue; means of approach.

The dispensable necessity of slavey enslavement, shuts the door against all temptations to carnal security. Hammond.

5. Out of door, or doors. No more to be found; quite gone; fairly sent away. Should be, who was thy lord, command thee now, With a harsh voice and supercilious brow, To servile duties, thou'lt find no more; The gallows and the whip are out of door. Dryden's Persius.

His imaginary title of fatherhood is out of doors, and Cain is not his brother. Locke.

6. At the door of any. Imputable; chargeable upon him.

DOOR. n. s. [from dorn, Ger. a Thorn.]

In any of which parts if I have failed, the fault lies wholly at my door. Dryden. Dufres. Preface.

7. Next door to. Approaching to; near to: bordering upon.

A tedious walk leads to a loch, and a riot unpunished is but next door to a tumult. L'Estrange.

DOORCASE. n. s. [door and case.] The frame in which the door is inclosed. The making of frames for doors, is the framing of two pieces of wood athwart two other pieces. Mason.

DOORKEEPER. n. s. [door and keeper.] Porters, who keeps the entrance of a house.

He that hath given the following assistance to thee, desires to be even a doorkeeper in God's house, and to be a servant to the meanest of God's servants. Bacon's Essay of Almsgiving.

DOQUET. n. s. A paper containing a warrant.

Before the institution of this office, no doquet for licence to alien, nor warrant for pardon of alienation, could be given without an oath. Bacon's office of Alienation.

DORMANT. adj. [dormant, Fr.]

1. Sleeping.

He a dragon! if he be, 'tis a very peaceful one: I can insure his anger is dormant; or, if he seems uneasy, 'tis well how ever he sleeps, he will sleep like a top. Congreve's Old Bachelor.

With this radius he is said to strike and kill his prey, for which he lies, as it were, dormant, till it swims within his reach. Greer's Midas.

2. In a sleeping posture.

If a lion were the coast of Judah, yet were it not a lion rampant, but rather clothed and dormant. Brown.

3. Private; not public.

There were other dormant masters of soldiers throughout all parts of the realm, that were put in readiness, but not drawn together. Swift.

4. Concealed; not divulged.

It would be prudent to reserve these privileges dormant, never to be produced but upon great occasions. Swift.

5. Leaning not perpendicular.

Old dormant windows must confound Her beams: their glimmering spectacles, Struck with the splendor of her face, Do the office of a burning-glass. Clevelend.

DORMITORY. n. s. [dormitorium, Lat.]

1. A place to sleep in: used commonly for a room with many beds.

Rooms that have thorough lights are left for entertainment, and those that have windows on one side for dormitories. Mortimer. Naked doors the dormitory, Mortimer. And Jones and Boyke's united labours fall. Pepys's Diary.

2. A burial place.

The places where dead bodies are buried, are in Latin called cassus, and in English dormitories. Agassiz's Pervorion.

DORMOUSE. n. s. [dormio to sleep, and mous.] A small animal which passes a large part of the winter in sleep.

Come, we all sleep, and are mere dormio flies, A little less than dead; more dulness hangs On us than on the moon. Ben Jonson's Cynthia. After they have lain a little while, they grow as drowsy as dormio, unless they are severely vexed. Collier on Thought.

DORN. n. s. [from dorn, Ger. a Thorn.]

The name of a fish; perhaps the same as the thornback.

The coast is stored both with shell-fish, as scallops and sheepshad, and with turbot, dores, and bully. Carew.
To DOOR. n. n. [for stupid, Teutonic.]

To deafen or stupify with noise. This word I find only in Skinner.

DOERR. n. s. [so named probably from the noise which he makes.] A kind of flying insect, remarkable for flying with a loud noise.

Some insects fly with four wings, as all the va gonious, or shaggy-winged, as beetles and darts.

Brown's Vular Errors.
The door or hedge-cloner's chief marks are these: his head is small, like that of the common beetle: this, and his eyes, black; his shoulder-piece, and the middle of his belly, also black; but just under the wing-sheilfs spotted with white. His wing-sheils, legs, and the end of his tail, which is long and flat-pinted, of a light chestnut; his breast, especially, covered with a downy hair.

Green's Museum.

DOSEL. n. s. [from dorsum the back.]

DOSER. A pannier; a basket or bag, one of which hangs on either side a beast of burthen, for the reception of things of small bulk. It is corruptly spoken, and perhaps written, dosell.

DORSIFEROUS. adj. [from dorsum and ferre, Dorsif'paros. or pario, Lat.] Having the property of bearing or bringing forth on the back. It is used of plants that have the seeds on the back of their leaves, as fern; and may be properly used of the American frog, which brings forth young from her back.

DOR'TURE. n. s. [contracted from dormit'ure; dormit'tura, Lat. dortoir, Fr.] A dormitory; a place to sleep in.

He led us to a gallery like a dortuer, where he showed us along the one side seventeen cells, very neat.

DOSAN. n. s. [short.]

1. So much of any medicine as is taken at one time.

Quincy.

The too victorious dose too fiercely wrought,
And added fury to the strength it brought.

Drayden's Virgil.

In a vehement pain of the head he prescribed the juice of the thopas in warm water, without mending the dose.

Arabianat.

2. Any thing nauseous.

If you can tell an ignorant in power and place that he has a wit and understanding above all the world, I dare undertake that, as fasumle a dose as you give him, he shall readily take it down.

As much of any thing as falls to a man's lot. Ludicrously.

No sooner does he peep into
The world, but he has done his dose; Married his punctual dose of wives,
Is cuckolded, and breaks, or thrives. Hudibras.

4. Quantity.

We pity or laugh at these fatuous extravagants, while yet we know they have a considerable dose of what makes them so.

Grownville.

5. It is often used of the utmost quantity of strong liquor that a man can swallow. He has his dose; that is, he can carry off no more.

To Dose. v. a.

1. To proportion a medicine properly to the patient or table.

Plants seldom used in medicine, being esteemed poisonous, if corrected, and exactly dosed, may prove powerful medicines.

Jer. Beham's Phyisico-Theology.

2. To give physic, or any thing nauseous, to any man; in a ludicrous sense.

DOSIS. n. s. [corrupted from dosel, something laid upon the part. A pledger; a nodule or lump of lint to be laid on a sore.

Her complaints put me upon dressing with such medicaments as basilicon, with pricelit and cress.

Addison's Cato.

DOST. [the second person of do.]

Why then dost treat me with rebukes, instead Of kind consoled cares, and faintly sorrow.

Dyer's. 2. To be in love to extremity.

He was stricken with great affection towards me, and since is grown to such a dose of love, that I was fain to get this place sometimes to retire in freely.

Sidney.

I love long loved her, and bestowed much on her, for I will send her with a doing observance.

Dyer's.

To DOTE upon. To regard with excessive fondness; to love to excess.

All their prayers and love Were set on Heresford, whom they doted on, And hasted, and grazed, and loved;

Henry IV.

Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,

Because thou treat dost upon my love.

Shak. 2. A man fondly, weakly, and excessively in love.

If in black my lady's brow she Beck,

It means that painting and surpassing air

Should ravish doers with a false aspect:

And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Our dores upon red and white are incessantly perplexed by the uncertainty both of the continuance of their mistress' kindness, and of the lasting of her beauty.

Boyle.

DOTINGLY. adv. [from doting.] Fondly; by excessive fondness.

That he, to wedlock dotingly betray'd,

Should hope in this kild town to find a maid!

Dryden's Juvenile.

DOTTARD. n. s. This word seems to signify a tree kept low by cutting.

For great trees, we see almost all overgrown trees, that are near ancient buildings, and like the, are pollarded and dottards, and not trees at their full height.

Bacon.

DOTTEREL. n. s. [from dot.] The name of a bird that mimicks gestures.

We see how ready apes and monkeys are to imitate all motions of man; and in catching of dotterels, we see how the foolish bird playeth the ape in gestures.

Bacon.

DOUBLE. adj. [double, Fr. dupler, Lat. duplus, Erse.]

1. Two of a sort; one corresponding to the other; in pairs.

All things are double one against another, and he hath made nothing imperfect. Eccles. xiii. br.

2. Twice as much; containing the same quantity repeated. It is sometimes used with to, and sometimes without.

Great honours are great burdens; but on them They are cast with caviy, be with burden loads;

His cares must still be double to his joys,

In any dignity.

Ben Jonson's Catilina.

The sum of forty thousand pence is almost double; it is sufficient, as besides Digni- Letters.

3. Having one added to another; having more than one in the same order or parallel.
It is a curiosity also to make flowers double, which is effected by often removing them to new earth; as, on the contrary part, double flowers, by neglecting, and not removing prove single.

To the reverend, fat, old country friar:
With a panach swollen so high, his double chin
 Might rest upon.

4. Twofold; of two kinds.

Thus cursed steel, and more accursed gold,
Grave mischief birth, and made that mischief bold;
And double death did wretched man invade,
By steel assaulted, and by gold betray'd.

But there's another Double; Dryden's Ovid.
No star appears to lend his friendly light;
Darkness and tempest make a double night. Dryden.

5. Two in number.

And in one power and not both see and hear.
Our sights and sounds would always double be.

6. Having twice the effect or influence; having the power of two. Not useful.

The magnific is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potential.
As double as the dove's. Shaksp. Othello.

7. Deceitful; acting two parts, one openly, the other in secret.

He would say nutrums, and be ever double.
Both in his words and meaning. Shak. Henry VIII.
For in their life it might keep rank, there were not more of double heart.

1 Chron. xii. 33.

Doub-plea. n.s. [duplex placitum, Lat.] Is that in which the defendant alleges for himself two several matters, in bar of the action, whereof either is sufficient to effect his desire in debarring the plaintiff. Corell.

Doub-que-ral, is a complaint made by any clerk or other to the archbishop of the province, against an inferior ordinary, for delaying justice in some cause ecclesiastical. The effect is, that the archbishop directs his letters, under the authentic seal, to all clerks of his province, commanding them to admonish the said ordinary within nine days to do the justice required, or otherwise to cite him to appear before him or his official; and lastly to intimate to the said ordinary, that if he neither performs the thing enjoined, nor appears at the day assigned, he himself will proceed to perform the justice required. And this seems to be termed a double-quarrel, because it is most commonly made against both the judge, and him at whose petition justice is delayed. Corell.

Double. adv. Twice over.

I am not so exact in proportion to them as I formerly was, which I can prove by arithmetic; for then I was double their age, which now is not. Swift.

Double is much used in composition, generally for double, two ways; as, double-edged, having an edge on each side; or for twice the number or quantity; as, double-died, twice died.

Double-biting. adj. [double and bite.] Biting or cutting on either side.

But post their looks on the back of each bend,
His rising muscles and his brazen command;
His double-biting as, and beauty spear,
Each asking a glitter to rear. Dryn. Fables.

Double-buttoned. adj. [double and buttoned.] Having two rows of buttons.

Others y'could when all the town's afoist,
Wright in 'emembraces of a kersey coat.
Or double-button'd frieze.

Dryden's Sat. Satyr.

Double-dealer. n.s. [double and deal-er.] A deceitful, subtle, insidious fellow; one who acts two parts at the same time; one who says one thing and thinks another.

Double-dealers may pass muster for awhile; but all parties wash their hands of them in the conclusion. L'Estrange.

To Double-deal, n.s. [double and dealing.] Artifice; dissimulation; low or wicked cunning; the action of one thing with the profession of another.

Thon shall not be the worse for me; there's gold.
-But that it would be double-dealing. Shak. Twelf Night.

Our pocts have joined together such qualities as are by nature most compleat: valor with anger, meekness with piety, and prudence with dissimulation; this last union was necessary for the goodness of Ulysses; for, without that, his dissimulation might have made him appear into wickedness and double-dealing. Dryden's Fable of Poetic Poesy.

To Double-die. v.a. [double and die.] To die twice over.

Yes, I'll to the royal bed.
Where first the mysteries of our love were acted, and Double-die it with imperial crimson.

Dryden and Lee.

Double-founted. adj. [double and fount.] Having two sources.

Here the double-founted stream.
Jordan, true limit eastward.

Double-handed. adj. [double and hand.] Having two hands.

All things being double-handed, and having the appearance of truth and falsehood, where our affections have engaged us, we attend only to the former.

Glance's Suecia.

Double-headed. adj. [double and head.] Having the flowers growing one to another.

The double rich scarlet nonsuch is a large double-headed flower, of the richest scarlet colour. Mortimer.

To Double-lock. v.a. [double and lock.] To shoot the lock twice; to fasten with double security.

He immediately double-bolted his door, and sat down carefully to reading and comparing both his orders.

Trotter.

Double-minded. adj. [from double and mind.] Unsettled; undecided.

A double-minded man is unstable in all ways.
James II. 158.

Double-shining. adj. [double and shine.] Shining with double lustre.

He was
Among the rest that did take delight.
To see the sports of double-shining day.
Sidney.

To Double-tongued. adj. [double and tongue.] Deceitful; giving contrary accounts of the same thing.

The deceases must be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, nor greedy of alms. As.

1 Tim.

For such a fear'd the Tyrians double-tongued,
And knew the town to June's care belong'd.
Dryden's Virg.

To Double. v.a. [from the adjective.] 1. To enlarge any quantity by addition of the same quantity.

Rumour both double voice and echo.
The numbers of the fear'd. Shak. Henry IV.
Pay him six thousand, and debase the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that. Shak.
Our funder to appraiser to assist,
Or double his dishonour if he fail. Dryden.

This power of repeating or doubting any idea we have of any distance, and adding it to the former, as often as we will, without ever able to come to any stop or limit, is which gives us the idea of extent. Locke.

This was the value of the silver, there was besides a tenth part of that number of talents of gold, which, if gold was reckoned in a decuple proportion, will just double the sum. Arbuth. on Coin.

2. To contain twice the quantity.

Thus reinforced against the adverse fleet,
Still doubting ours, brave Rupert leads the way.

Dryden.

3. To repeat; to add.

He saw around Arcite and fierce Palemon
In mortal battle doubling blow on blow;
Like lightning flash'd their falsehoods to and fro.

Dryden.

4. To add one to another in the same order or parallel.

Thus thou shalt double the curtain in the tabernacle.
Exod.

5. To fold.

He bought her sermons, psalms, and graces,
And doubled down the useful places.
Prior.

6. To pass round the headlands.

Sailing along the coast, he doubled the promontory of Carthage, yet famous for the ruins of that proud city.

Killer.

Now we have the Cape of Good Hope in sight, the trade-wind is our own, if we can but double it.

Dryden.

To Double. v.n.

1. To increase to twice the quantity.

'Tis observed in particular nations, that within the space of three hundred years, notwithstanding all casualties, the number of men double.

Peverell's Theory.

2. To enlange the stake to twice the sum in play.

Throw Egypt's by, and offer in the stead.
Offer--the crown on Bernice's head:
I answer'd to double and go back again, and to maketh one long summer.

Bacon's Natural History.

Who knows which way she points?
Doubling and turning like a hunted hare
Find out the meaning of her word who can.

Swift.

3. To turn back, or wind in running.

Under the line the sun crosseth the line, and maketh two summers and two winters; but in the skirts of the torrid zone it doublieth and goeth back again, and to maketh one long summer.

Swift.

4. To play tricks; to use sleights.

Double. n.s.

1. Twice the quantity or number.

If the thief be found, let him pay double. Exod.

In all the four great years of mortality above mentioned, I do not find that any week the plague increased to the double of the precedent week above five times.

Graunt's Mortality.

2. Strong beer; beer of twice the common strength.

Here's a pot of good double, neighbour; drink, and fear not your man. Shaksp. Henry VI.

3. A turn used to escape pursuit.

Man is feal,
Convolutions rack his nerves, and cares his breast;
His flying life is chase'd by rav'ning pains,
Through all his doubles, in the winding veins.
Blackmore.

4. A trick; a shift; an artifice.

These men are too well acquainted with the chase, to be hung off by any false steps or doubles.

Addison.

Doubleness. n.s. [from double.] The state of being double.

If you think well to carry this as you may, the doublesness of the benefit defends the deceit from.

Shaksp.

Double. n.s. [from double.] He that doubles any thing.

Doublet. n.s. [from double.]
To Doubt, v. a.
1. To hold questionable; to think uncertain.
2. To think endangered.
He from the terror of this arm so late
Doubteth his empire.
Milton's Paradise Lost.
3. To fear; to suspect.
He did ordain the interdicts and prohibitions which we have to make entrance of strangers, which at that time was frequent, doubting noble and curious of manners.
Bacon.
If they turn not back perverse;
But that I doubt.
Shakespeare, Coriolanus.
4. To distrust; to hold suspect.
To teach vain wins a science little known,
'Tis admirable sense, and doubt their own.
Pope.

Doubt, n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Uncertainty of mind; suspense; undetermined state of opinion.
Could any difficulty have been proposed, the resolution would have been as early as the proposal;
it could not have had time to settle doubt.
South.
Those who with horror shun
A widow's daughter, or a dying son;
Their neighbour's offspring he to-morrow sees,
And dreads the rise of their increase.
Prior.
To Doubt, v. n. [doubter, Fr. dubiste, Lat.]
1. To question; to be in uncertainty.
Even in matters divine, concerning some things,
we may lawfully doubt and suspend our judgment,
inclining neither to one side or other, as, nameless, touching the time of the full both of man and angels.
Tillotson.
Let no man, while he lives here in the world, doubt whether any is hell or no, and therefore live so, as if absolutely there were none.
Shakesp.
I doubt not to make it appear to be a monstrous
folly to deride holy things.
Kellogg.
Can we conclude upon Luther's instability, because in a single nation, no way fundamentally,
an enemy writes that he had some doubts? Atterbury.
2. To question any event; fearing the worst.
Doubting things do ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do. Shakesp.
Cymbeline.
Admitting motion, this urge to shew
Invalid, that which thee to doubt it mov'd. Milton.
3. Sometimes with of in both the foregoing senses.
Solyman said he had hitherto made war against divers nations, and always had the victory, whereof he doubted not now also.
Kendall's History of the Turks.
Have I not man'd my contrivance well,
To try your love, and make you doubt of mine?
Dyer.
4. To fear; to be apprehensive of ill.
I doubt there's deep resentment in his mind,
For the late slight his honour suffer'd there. Otway.
If there were no fault in the title, I doubt there are too many in the body of the work.
Baker on Learning.
This is enough for a project, without any name;
I doubt more than will be reduced into practice.
Swift.
5. To suspect; to have suspicion.
The king did all his courage bend
Against those fears which now before him were,
Doubting not who behind him doth attend.
Daniel.
6. To hesitate; to be in suspense; to waver undetermined.
What fear we then, why doubt we to incense
His utterance? He, Milton.
At first the tender blades of grass appear,
And buds, that yet the blast of Eurus fear,
Stand at the door of life, and doubt to clench the year.
Dyer.

Vol. I.

4. Hazardous; of uncertain event.
We have sustained one day in doubtful light,
What heaven's high Lord had pow'r to raise.
Milton.
New counsels to debate.
What doubtful may ensue.
Milton.
5. Not secure; not without suspicion.
Our manner is always to cast a doubtful and a more suspicious eye towards that, over which we have least power. Hooker, Dissertation.
6. Not confident; not without fear.
With doubtful steps, and wavering resolution,
I come, still dreading thy displeasure, Samson.
Milton.
This was at first resolved
If we were wise, against so great a foe.
Conceiving, and forthwith, that might fall.
Milton.
7. Partaking different qualities.
Looks
Downcast and damp, yet such wherein appear'd
Some glimpse of joy, which on last countenance cast
Like doubtful hue. Milton.

Doubtfully, adv. [from doubtful.]
1. Dubiously; irresolutely.
2. Ambiguously; with uncertainty of meaning.
Knowing how doubtfully all allegories may be understood, and this book of mine being a commonal allegory, I have thought good to discover the general intention.
Spenser.
Now the goddess doubtfully declareth,
Her alter'd mind, and acquainted care.
Dryden.

Doubtfulness, n. s. [from doubtful.]
1. Dubiousness; suspense; instability of opinion.
Though doubtfulness or uncertainty seems to be a universal truth in our mind; and certain false-bond in our minds, yet there is no such medium in ing-thing themselves.
Watts.
2. Ambiguity; uncertainty of meaning.
In arguing, the opponent uses as comprehensive and equivocal terms as he can, to involve his advocacy in the doubtfulness of his expressions; and therefore the answerer, on his side, makes it his play to distinguish as much as he can.
Locke.
Most of his philosophy is in broken sentences, delivered with much doubtfulness. Baker on Learn.
3. Hazard; uncertainty of event or condition.

Doubtingly, adv. [from doubt.]
In a doubting manner; dubiously; without confidence.
Whatever a man imagineth doubtfully or with fear, must needs do hurt, if imagination have any truth in it at all, for a man needeth not, that he may confer than that he feareth, than the contrary. Bacon's N. Inst.

Doubtless, adj. [from doubt.] Free from fear; void of apprehension of danger.
Pretty child, sleep doubtless and secure.
That Halber, for the wealth of all the world,
I am doubtless, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal. Shaks. IV. IV.

Doubtless, a. v. Without doubt; without question; unquestionably.
Doubtless he would have made a noble knight.
Shakesp.
All their desires, deserts, or expectations,
The Conqueror had no other means to satisfy, but by the estates of such as had appeared open enemies to him and doubtless many innocent persons suf-fer'd in this kind.
Haile's Common Law.
Doubtless many men are finally lost, who yet have no men's sins to answer for but their own.

Mountains have been doubts much higher than they are at present; the rains have washed away the softness has laid the veins of stones being eroded out of them.
Woodward.
Doubtless, oh guest! great land and praise were mine.
If, after social rites and gifts bestow'd,
I stain'd my hospitable hearth with blood.
Pope's Odyssey.

A D 569
DOU

DOUCET. n.s. [doucet, Fr.] A custard. This word I find only in Skinner, and in Ainsworth.

DOUCKER. n.s. [columbus; from To duck, corrupted from To duck.] A bird that dips in the water. The columb, or douchers, or hawks, are admirably conformed for diving, covered with thick plumage, and their feathers as slippery that water cannot moisten them. Say, will the falcon, stooping from above, Smit with her varying plain, spare the dove? Pope.

POVE. n.s. [palumbus; davo, old Teutonick; taub, daub, Germ.]

1. A wild pigeon. So shows a dove, dowing cropping with crows, As young lady o'er her fellows shows. Say, when the skiles he drives the trembling dove, Pope.

2. A pigeon. I have here a dish of doves, that I will bestow upon your worship. Shakesp. Merck of Venice.

DOVECOT. n.s. [dove and cot.] A small building, in which pigeons are bred and kept.

DOVEHOUSE. n.s. [dove and house.] A house for pigeons. The hawk sets up for protector, and makes havock in the dovehouse. L'Estaing. But still the dovecote obstinately stood. Dryden.

DOVETAIL. n.s. [dove and tail.] A form of joining two bodies together, where that which is inserted has the form of a wedge reversed, and therefore cannot fall out.

DOUGH. n.s. [bah, Sax. deegh, Dut.] 1. The paste of bread, or pies, yet unbaked. When the gods moulded up the paste of man, Some of their doogh was left upon their hands, For want of soot, and so they made Egyptian cakes. You that from plant paste would fabricate, Expecting more than the mortal power. You knockles try, and let your sinew know Their power to knead, and give the form to dough, Dryden.

2. My cake is dough. My affiar has miscarried; my undertaking has never come to maturity. My cake is dough, but I'll in among the rest; Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast. Shakesp.

DOUGHBAKED. adj. [dough and baked.] Uninished; not hardened to perfection; soft. For when, though tasteless flat humidity, In doughtick'd men some harmlessness we see, 'Tis but his phlegm that's virtuous, and not he. Dryden.

DOUGHTY. adj. [dour, Sax. doought, virtue, Dut.] 1. Brave; noble; illustrious; eminent. Used of men and things. Such restless passion did all night torment The flint ring courage of that fair knight, Thousand to one, and the dooughty hero plain With greatest honour he achieve might. Fairy Q.

2. It is now seldom used but ironically, or in burlesque.
DOW

How goes the night boy? —The moon is down; I have not heard the clock, and she goes down at twelve. Shakesp. Macbeth.

5. To a total subjection; used of men and things.

What remains of the subject, after the defection, is continued to be bowed down, with the addition of fresh water, to a squid fat. Arbuthnot on Almaviva.

6. Into disgrace; into declining reputation.

He shord our dividend o’th crown, We had so painfully preach’d down; and force’d us, though against the grain. T. have we, thou, the price of it, Hudibras. It has been still preached up, but acted down; and dealt with as the eagle in the fable did with the oyster, carrying it up on high, that by falling, it might dash it in pieces. South. There is not a more melancholy object in the learned world, than a man who has written himself down. Addison.

7. [answering to up.] Here and there.

Let them wander up and down for meat, and gruff if the dog cannot satisfy. Psalm li. 13.

DOW. [To go.] To be digested; to be received.

If he be hungry more than wanton, bread alone will down; and if he be not hungry, tis not fit he should eat. Locke. I know not how absurd this may seem to the masters of demonstration; and probably it will hardly down with any body, at first hearing. Locke.

To DOW. v. a. [from the particle.] To knock; to subdue; to suppress; to conquer.

The hidden beauties seem’d in wait to lie, To down proud hearts that would not yield to grace. Sidney.

DOWCAST. adj. [down and cast.]

Bent down; directed to the ground.

W sent languishing bow’d of her eyes the downcast look of modesty. Sidney. My wife by long experience found, And first discovered your infamy, and his downcast eye, And guilty dumness, witness’d my surprise. Dryden.

Thy downcast looks, and thy disorder’d thoughts, Tell me my fate: I ask not the success My cause has found. Addison’s Cato.

DOWFAL. n. [from down and fall.]

1. Ruin; calamity; fall from rank or state.

Why dost thou say king Richard is depos’d? Dar’st thou, then, little better thing than earth, Divine his downfall? Shakesp. Richard II. We have been some by the ways by which they had designed to rise uncontrollably, to have directly procured their utter downfall. South.

2. A sudden fall, or body of things falling.

Each downfall of a flood the mountains pour From their rich beds, rolls a silver stream. Dryden.

3. Destruction of fabrics.

Not more aghast the motions of renown, When tyrant Nero burn’d th’ imperial town, Shrick’d for the downfall in a doleful cry, For which their guiltless lords were done down to die. Dryden.

DOWFALLEN. participial adj. [down and fall.] Ruined; fallen.

DOWGRED. adj. [down and gryd.]

Let down in circular wrinkles. Let down his thoughts loose, Ungarter’d and downcurr’d to his ankles. Shakesp.

DOWHILL. n. s. [down and hill.]

Deceit; descent.

Heavy the third, and still, he sinks space; And though ‘tis downhill all, but creeps along the race. Dryden.

DOWHILL. adj. Decievous; descending.

And the first steps a downhill greenward yields. Congreve.

DOWNUUCKED. adj. [down and look.]

Having a decrees countenance; gloomy; sullen; melancholy.

Jealousy, su’ded with justice in her eyes, Discoloring all she view’d, in one key dress’d; Downdown, and with a cushion on her heart. Dryd.

DOWLYING. adj. [down and lie.]

About to be in travail of childbirth.

DOWNTOWN. adj. [down and right.]

1. Straight or right down; right and perpendicularly.

A giant’s linn in fight, Or now’d the world down right, Hudib.

2. In plain terms; without ceremony.

Elves, away! We shall chide down right if I linger stay. Shak.

3. Completely; without stopping short.

This paper put Mrs. Bull in such a passion, that she fell downright into a fit. Arbuthnot.

DOWRIGHT. adj. [down and right.]

1. Plain; open; apparent; undisguised.

An admonition from a dead author, or a caveat from an impudent man, will prevail more than direct downright advice, which may be mistaken as spoken magisterially. Bacon.

It is downright madness to strike where we have no power to hurt. L’Estrange.

The merchant’s wife, who abounds in plenty, is not to have downright money; but the necessary part of her maintenance is engaged with a present of plate. Spectator.

2. Directly tending to the point; plain; artless.

I would rather have a plain downright wisdom, than a foolish and affected eloquence. Ben Johnson’s Discoveries.

DOWRY. n. s. [down ray.]

1. To be written downer.

1. A portion given with a wife. See DOWER.

I could marry this wench for this dowry. Sid. And ask no other dowry but such another jest. Shakesp.

The king must die, that I may make you great, And give a crown in downray with my love. Dryden’s Spanish Friar. Tethys all her waves in down ray gives.

DOWRY. n. s. [down ray. I. It ought

To be written downer.]

2. A reward paid for a wife.

Thine own hand

An hundred of the faithless foe shall say, And for a down ray a hundred for-skins pay. Cowley.

3. A gift; a fortune given.

DOWS/LOGY. n. s. [doze and logy.]

A form of giving glory to God.

David brake forth into these triumphant praises and doxologies, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who has kept me this day from shedding blood, and from avenging myself with my own hand. South.
DRAFF. n. s. [blop: dirty, Sax. drafl, Dutc.] The sediment of ale.
1. Refuse; lees; drags: properly something fluid.
You would think I had a hundred and fifty taffets and prodigals lately come from sinwrecking from eating draft and husks. Shaksp. Henry IV.
Twere simple fury, still myself to waste
On such as have no taste;
To offer them a surfeit of pure bread
Whose appetite is dead!
No fresh rind on their filf;
Husk, draft, to drink and swill. Ben Jonson.
I'll call'd and drew them thither,
My hell-bound's to lick up the draft and filth.
Which man's polluting sin with taint had shed
On what was pure. Milton's Parad. Lost. I.
Here rather let me drudge, and earn my bread.
Till vermin, or the draft of servile food
Consume me. Milton's Agonistes.
2. Refuse; sweepings. Perhaps improper.
Younger brothers but the draft of nature. Dryden. DRAFFY. n. a. [from draft.] Worthless; druggy.
DRAFT. adj. [corrupt from draught.]
Employed to draw.
Ulysses and old Nestor yoke you like draft oxen and make you plough up the war. Ben Jonson. All's Well and Cresida.
To DRAG. v. a. [Saxon, Sax.]
1. To pull along the ground by main force; to draw heavily along.
Such his aspect, when, soil’d with bloody dust,
Draft’d by the cords, which through their feet were thrust.
While I have any ability to hold a commerce with you, I will never be silent; and this chanceing to day that I can hold a pen, I will draft it as long as I am able. Swift.
2. To draw any thing hurthensome; any thing from which one cannot disengage one’s self.
Tis long since I, for my celestial wife,
Loath’d by the gods, have draft’d a living life.
Dryden.
Can I, who lov’d so well,
To part with all my bliss to save my lover,
Oh! can I draft a wretched life without him? Smith.
3. To draw contemptuously along, as a thing unworthy to be carried.
The triumphs of St. Austin’s opinion; and is not only content to draft me at his chariot-wheels, but he makes a shew of me. Stillingfleet.
4. To pull about with violence and ignominy.
They shall surprise
The serpent, prince of air, and draft in chains
Through all his realm, and there confounded leave. Milton.
The constable was no sooner espi’d but he was reproach’d with5 troublesome words, beaten and drafted in so barbarous a manner, that he hardly escaped with his life. Clarendon.
5. To pull roughly and forcibly.
To fall, that’s justice;
But then, to draft him after! For to die,
And yet in death to conquer, is my wish. Dryden.
In my fatal cause your sword was drawn;
The weight of my misfortunes draft’d you down. Dryden.
To DRAFF. n. r. To hang so low as to trail or grate upon the ground.
From hence are heard the groans of ghosts, the pains
Of sounding lashes, and of dragging chains. Dryden. A door is said to draft, when, by its ill hanging on its hinges, the bottom edge of the door rides in its sweep upon the floor.
DRAFF. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A net drawn along the bottom of the water.
Casting nets were spread in shallow brooks, Drafts in the deeps, and baits were hung on hooks. Dryden.
The creatures are but instruments in God’s hand: the returning our acknowledgments to them is just the same with those who burn incense to the drag, and sacrificed to the net. Rogers.
2. An instrument with hooks to catch hold of things under water.
You may in the morning find it near to some fixed place, and then take it up with a drag hook, or otherwise. Walton.
3. A kind of car drawn by the hand.
The drag is made somewhat like a low car: it is used for the carriage of timbers, and then drawn by the handle by two or more men. Mason’s Mech. Erer.
To DRA'GLE. v. a. [from drag.] To make dirty by dragging on the ground. You’ll see a dragged dandel, here and there, From Billingsgate her fishy traffic bear. Gay’s Trivia.
He wore the same gown five years, without dragging or tearing. Swift.
To DRAG'GLE. v. n. To grow dirty by being drawn along the ground.
His dragging tull hung in the dirt, which on his rider he would slit. Hudibras.
DRA'GET. n. s. [drag and net.] A net which is drawn along the bottom of the water.
Drapets were made to fish within the deep, And castiguiets did rivers bottom sweep. Mason’s Virgil.
Some fishermen, that had been eat with a dragnet, and caught nothing, had a draught towards the evening, which put them in hope of a sturgeon at least. L’Estrange.
One of our late great poets is sunk in his reputation, because he could never forgive any courtier which came in his way, but swept, like a dragnet, great and small. Dryden.
Whatever old Time, with his huge dragnet, has conveyed down to us along the stream of ages, whether it be shells or shellfish, jewels or pebbles, sticks or stones, seaweed or mud, these are the ancients, these are the fathers. Wattle.
DRA'GON. n. s. [draoco, Lat. drag. fr.]
1. A kind of winged serpent, perhaps imaginary, much celebrated in the romances of the middle ages. I go alone.
Like to a lonely dragon, that his pen Makes fear’d and talk’d of more than seen. Shaksp.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night! that dawning May bear the raven’s eye. Shaksp. Cymbeline.
And ye, ye dragons! of the scaly race, Whoa glittering gold and shining armes grace; In other nations harmless are you found, Their guardian genitl and protectours ord. Rowe.
On every volumes there a dragon rides. Here, from our strict embrace, a stream he glades. Pope.
2. A fierce violent man or woman.
3. A constellation near the north pole.
DRA'GONET. n. s. [dracanus, Lat. a plant.
Dracon.] From dragon.
A little dragon.
Or in his womb might lurk some hidden nest Of many dragonets, his fruitful seed. Fairy Q.
DRA'GONFLY. n. s. [dragon and fly : libella.] A fierce stinging fly.
The body of the cantharides is bright coloured; and it may be, that the delicate coloured dragonflies may have likewise some corrosive quality.  Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Dra'gonish. adj. [from dragon.] Having the form of a dragon; dragonlike. An arbitrary word.

Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish; A vapour sometimes like a bear or lion. Shakest., Coriolanus.

Dra'gonlike. adj. [dragon and like.]

Furious, he fights dragonlike, and does achieve As soon as draw his sword. Shakest., Coriolanus.

Dra'gon's Blood, n. s. [dragon and blood.] So called from a false opinion of the dragon's combat with the elephant.

Dra'gon's blood is a resin, so named as to seem to have been imagined an animal production. Hill.

Take dragon's blood, beat it in a mortar, and put it in a cloth with aqua vitae, and stain them together. Peacham.

Dra'gon's Head, n. s. A plant.

Dra'gon's Tree, n. s. A species of palm.

Dra'goon, n. s. [from dragen, Ger. to carry.] A kind of soldier that serves indifferently either on foot or horseback.

Two regiments of dragoons suffered much in the late action. Trotter.

To Dra'goon, v. a. [from the noun.] To persecute by abandoning a place to the rage of soldiers.

In politics I hear you're stanch, Directly bent against the French; Deny to have your free-born foe Draged into that shoe. Prior.

To Drain, v. a. [trainer, Fr.]

1. To draw off gradually. Salt water drained through twenty vessels of earth, hath become fresh. Bacon Nat. Hist. The fountains drain the water from the ground adjacent, and leave but sufficient moisture to breed moss. Bacon.

In times of death it drained much coin of the kingdom, to furnish us with corn from foreign parts. Bacon's to Tilliers.

Whilst a foreign war devoured our strength, and drained our treasures, luxury and expenses increased at home. Atterbury.

The last emperor drained the wealth of those countries into his own coffers, without increasing his troops against France. Swift.

2. To empty by drawing gradually away what it contains. Sinking waters, the firm land to drain, Fill'd the capacious deep, and form'd the main. Pope.

The royal babes a tawny wolf shall drain. Dryden.

While cruel Nero only drains The mortal Spaniard's ebbing veins, By study worn, and slack with age, How fast, how thoughtless is his rage! Prior. Had the world lasted from all eternity, these comets must have been drained of all their fluids. Pope.

3. To make quite dry. When wine is to be bottled, wash your bottles, but do not drain them. Swift's Disc. to the Butler.

Drain, n. s. [from the verb.] The channel through which liquids are gradually drawn; a watercourse; a sink.

If your drains be deep, that you fear cattle falling into them, cover them. Mortimer's Husband. When should I tell of ponds and drains, What cause invoke aid for our pains? Swift.

Drake, n. s. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. The male of the duck.

The duck should hide her eggs from the drake, who will seek them if he finds them. Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. [from draco, dragon, Lat.] A small piece of artillery.

Two or three shots, made at them by a couple of drakes, made them stagger. Clarendon.

Dr. n. s. [dragon and like.]

If a piece of cloth in a draper's shop be variously folded, it will appear of differing colours. Pepys's Colours. The draper and meurer may measure her. Houel.

Drapery. n. s. [drapper, Fr.] Cloth coverlet. Not in use.

When she brought into a stately hall, Wherein were many tables fair dispred, And ready dight with drepets festivall, Against the bounds should be minutely. Fairy Q.

Drostick. adj. [from dros.]

Powerful; vigorous; efficacious.

It is used of a medicine that works with speed; as, jalap, scannony, and the stronger purges. Quincy.

Drave. [theazerette of drive.] Drive is more used.

He drove them beyond Amon's flood, And their sad bounds mark'd deep in their own blood. Cowley.

The flush of drosie as he pants for breath, And through his navel drosie the pointed death. Pope's Ilïd.

Draugh. n. s. [correctly written for druff.]

Refuse; swill. See DRAFF.

We do not act, that often jest and laugh. 'Tis old, but true, still wine eat all the drugh. Shakest.

Draught. n. s. [from drave.]

1. The act of drinking. They slug up one of their heagsheads, and I drank it off at a draught, which I might well do, for it did not hold half a pint. Gulliver's Tr.

2. A quantity of liquor drunk at once. He had once continued about nine days without drink; and he might have continued longer, if, by tempering himself one night with hard study, he had not had some inclination to take a small draught. Boyle. Fill high the goblets with the sparkling flood, And with deep draughts invoke our common god. Dryden.

Long draughts of sleep his monstrous limbs enla\--

He reeks, and falling fills the spacious cave. Dryden's Aisild. I have cured some very desperate coughs by a draught every morning of spring water, with a handful of sage boiled in it. Temple.

Every draught, to him that has quenched his thirst, is but a further quenching of nature; a provision for rheum and diseases. South.

3. Liquor drunk for pleasure. Were it a draught for Juno when she banquet, With what a desire I would adduce the treasonous offer. Milton. Number'd tills, that lie unseen In the pernicious draught; the word obscene, Or harsh, which, once scarce, must ever be irrecoverable, the too prompt reply. Prior. Delicious winces th' attending herald brought; The gold gave lustre to the purple draught. Pope's Odyssey.

4. The act of drawing or pulling carriages.
A general custom of using oxen for all sorts of draught, would be perhaps the greatest improvement.

The most occasion that farmers have, is for draught horses. Mortimer's Husbandry. 6. To make any have Representation. Bacim. process To the South, Addison other shoals, 1.

A draught drawn. Wherein in other creatures we have but the trace of his footsteps, in man we have the draught of his hand; in him were united all the scattered perfections of the creature. South. 8. The act of sweeping with a net. Upon the draught of a pond, not one fish was left, but two pikes grew to an enormous bigness, Illeale. 9. The quantity of fishes taken by one drawing the net.

He laid down his pipe, and cast his net, which brought him a very great draught. L'Estrange. 11. The act of shooting with the bow. Geoffrey of Buxton, in one draught of his bow, shooting against David's tower in Jerusalem, broached three fearless birds called allorions. Camden's Remains. 12. Diversion in war; the act of disturbing the main design; perhaps sudden attack.

I conceive the manner of your handling of the service, by drawing sudden draughts upon the enemy, when he lookth not for you. Speaner on Ireland. 13. Forces drawn off from the main army; a detachment.

Such a draught of forces would lessen the number of those that might otherwise be employed. Addison. 14. A sink; a drain. Whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught. Mat. xv. 17. 15. The depth which a vessel draws, or sinks into the water.

With roomy decks, her guns of mighty strength, Deep in her draught, and warlike in her length. Dryden. With a small vessel one may keep within a mile of the shore, go amongst rocks, and pass over shoals, where a vessel of any draught would strike. Ellis's Voyage. 16. [In the plural, draughts.] A kind of play resembling chess. DRAUGHTHOUSE. n. s. [draught and house.] A house in which filth is deposited.

And they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draughthouse. Kings. 2 Sam. 6. To DRAW, r. a. pret. drew; part. pass. drawn. [Braxon, Sax.] 1. To pull along; not to carry.

Then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river. 2 Sam. 5. 2. To pull forcibly; to pluck.

He could not draw the dagger out of his belly, Judges, ii. 52. The arrow is now drawn to the heart. Atterb. 3. To bring by violence; to drag.

Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judge's seat? James, iv. 6. 4. To raise or put up; from a deep place.

He hath drawn thee dry. Exce. xliii. 7. There was no war, no death, no stop of trade or commerce, it was only the crown which had stuck to him, and now being upon, the head of a young king, was like to draw less. Bacon's Henry VII. 6. To attract; to call towards itself.

We see that salt, laid to a cut finger, healeth it; so as it seemeth salt draweth blood, as well as blood draweth salt. Bacon. Majestic in an eclipse, like the sun, draws eyes that would not have looked towards it if it had shined out. Suckling. He affected a habit different from that of the times, such as men had only beheld in pictures, which drew the eyes of most, and the reverence of many, towards him. Clarendon. 7. To draw as the magnet does.

She had all magnetic force alone, To draw and fasten sundred parts in one. Donne. Draw out with crealorous desire, and leave To will the manlike part. Bacon. As the magnetic hardest iron drawes. Milton. All eyes you draw, and with the cyes the heart; Of your own pomp yourself the greatest part. Dryden. 8. To inhale.

Thus I call'd, and stray'd I know not whither, from where I first drew air, and first beheld this happy light. Milton's Paradise Lost. While near the Lucerne lake, consum'd to death, I drew the silvery air, and gasp for breath. You taste the cloying smell on Illeale. Why drew Marseilles good bishop purer breath, When nature sicken'd, and each gale was death? Pope. 9. To take from any thing containing or holding.

They drew out the staves of the ark. 2 Chron. 15. 10. To take off the spit or broacher.

The rest They cut in legs and fillets of the chest, Which drawn and serv'd, their hunger they appeased. 11. To take from a cask.

What is life, but draught? And the mere lees Are left this vault to brag of. Shakesp. Macbeth. 12. To pull a sword from the sheath.

We will our youth head on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Shakesp. I will draw my sword; my hand shall destroy them. Exce. xxi. He proceeded so far in his insolence, as to draw out his sword with an intent to kill him. Dryden. In all your wars good fortune blew before you, Till in my fatal cask your sword was drawn; The weight of my misfortunes dragg'd you down. Dryden. 13. To let out any liquid.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion Of my more fierce endeavour. Shakesp. King Lear. I opened the tunnour by the point of a lancet, without drawing one drop of blood. Witsman's Surgery. 14. To take bread out of the oven.

The joiner puts breads into ovens after the hatch is drawn. Mortimer's Husbandry. 15. To unclose or slide back curtains.

Go, draw aside the curtains, and dis-cover There's certificates to this present. Shakesp. Alarumd, and with presaging heart be came, And draw the curtains, an' I exod the dame. Dryden. Shouts, cries, and groans first piece, by cars, and then

A flash of lightning draws the guilty scene, And shows new arms, and wounds, and dying. Dryden. 16. To close or spread curtains.

Philocrates intruded Pamela to open her grief; who, drawing the curtain, that the candle might not conceal her该项, was ready to speak. Sidney. 17. To extract.

Herbs draw a weak juice, and have a soft stalk. Bacon. Spirits, by distillations, may be drawn out of vegetable juices, which shall flame and fuse of themselves. Boyle. 18. To procure, as an agent cause.

When he finds the hardship of slavery outweigh the value of life, 'tis in his power, by resisting his master, to draw on himself death. Locke. 19. To produce, or bring, as an efficient cause.

When the fountain of mankind Did draw corruption, and God's curse by, sin, This was a change that all his heirs did feel, And all his offspring grew corrupt therein. Sir J. Dryes. Religion will require all the honour we can do it, by the blessings it will draw down upon us. Tillet. Our voluntary actions are the precedent causes of good and evil, which they draw after them, and bring upon us. Theophrastus. What would a man value land ready cultivated, and well stocked, where he had no hopes of commerce with other parts of the world, or draw money to him by the sale of the product? Locke. Those indulgences have given rise or increase to his doubts, and drawn obscurity upon places of scripture. Locke. His sword me'ere fell but on the guilty head; Oppression, tyranny, and pow'r usurp'd, Draw all the vengeance of his arm upon them. Addison. 20. To convey secretly or gradually.

The heirs in wait draw themselves along. T indicted, xx. 57. In process of time, and as their people increased, they drew themselves more westwardly towards the Red Sea. Bulfinch. 21. To protract; to lengthen; to spin.

How much her grace is after'd on the sudden! How long her face is drawn! how pale she looks, And of an earthly cold! Shakesp. Hen. VIII. Hear himself reprieved at Fate's unequal laws, and at the clue Which merciless in length the midwinter sister drew. Shakesp. Pericles. If we shall meet again with more delight, Then draw my life in length; and let me see, In hopes of his embrace, the worst of pains. Dryden's Adonis. In some smiles, men draw their comparisons into minute particulars of no importance. Felton on the Classics. 22. To utter lingeringly.

The brand, amid the flaming fuel thrown, Or draw, or seem'd to draw, a dying groan. Dryden's Fables. 23. To derive; to have some original cause or donor.

Shall free-born men, in humble awe, Begin to serve slavery. Who from consent and custom draw The same right to be milk'd by law. Which kings pretend to reign? Dryden. Several wits entered into commerce with the Egyptians, and from them drew the rudiments of science. Temple. 24. To deduce as from postulates.

From the events and revolutions of these governments, are drawn the usual instructions of princes and statesmen. Temple. 25. To imply; to produce as a consequential inference.

What shews the force of the inference but a view of all the intermediate ideas that draw in the conclusion, or proposition inferred? Locke. 26. To allure; to entice.
DRA

I do arm myself,
To welcome the condition of the time;
Which cannot look more hideously on me,
Than I have been arm'd, Mark H. IV.

With his other hand, thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it.

Draw not a world, with empty promises and threats, to do others to his purpose.

The Spaniards, that were in the town, had so good memories of their losses in their former sables, as the confidence of an army, which cause for their deliverance, could not draw them forth again.

Bot. War with Spain.

27. To lead as a motive.
A way; a way, my lord,
My purposes do draw me much about. Shakesp.

Egad, a way, Lord, thought o' the cause
Which to the stream the crowing people draws.

28. To persuade to follow.
I drew this gallant head of war,
And call'd these fiery spirits from the world
To outlook contradict, Shakesp.

The poet
Did feign the Orpheus drew trees, stones, and birds;,
Since bought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music, for the time, doth change his nature.

Shakesp.

29. To induce; to persuade.
The English lords did all themselves with the Irish, and draw in to dwell among them, and gave their children to be bred by them. Davies.
Their beauty or unconquemilness are of more force to draw or deter their imitation than discourses.

30. To win; to gain; a metaphor from gaming.
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loves. Shakesp. King Lear.

31. To receive; to take up: as, to draw money from the funds.
For the three thousand ducats here is six,
—If every ducat six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them, I would have my bond,

Shakesp.

32. To extort; to force.
So sad an object, and so well express'd,
Drawn signs and groans from the grief'd hero's breast. Dryden.

Can you e'er forget
The fond embraces, and repeated blessings,
Which you drew from him in your last Garth? Addision.

33. To wrest; to distort.
I wish that both you and others would cease from drawing the scriptures to your familiar affections.

Whitgift.

34. To compose; to form in writing; used of formulary or juridical writings.
In the mean time I will draw a bill of properties, as such our play wants. Shakesp.

Clerk, draw a deed of gift. Shakesp.
The report is not unfavourly drawn, in the spirit of a pleader, who can find the most plausible pickets. Swift.

Shall Ward draw contracts with a statesman's skill? Pope.

35. To withdraw from judicial notice.
Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action: come,
thou must not be in this humour with me. Shak.

36. To eviscerate; to embowel.
In private draw thy poultry, clean your tripes,
And from vell's their slimy substance wape.

King.

37. To convey a criminal to execution on a sledge.

38. To draw in. To apply to any purpose distortion or violence.
A little straw is laid hold on,
and every thing that can be drawn in any way, to give colour to the argument, is advanced with ostentation.

Locke.

39. To represent by picture, or in fancy.
DRA

1. The act of drawing.
2. The lot or chance drawn.
3. One employed in procuring water from the well.
4. A box in a case, out of which it is drawn at pleasure.
5. [In the plural:] The lower part of a man's dress.

DRAW. n.s. [from draw and back.]
Money paid back for ready payment, or any other reason.

DRAWBAR. n.s. [draw and back.]

DRAWBRIDGE. n.s. [draw and bridge.]

DRAWELL. n.s. [draw and well.]
A deep well; a well out of which water is drawn by a long cord.

DRAWHORSE. n.s. [draw and horse.]
A horse which draws a dray.

DRAWPLOUGH. n.s. [draw and plough.]
A plough of a particular kind.

DRAW-PLATE. m. A plate that is drawn from the side of a wall.

DRAZEL. n.s. [perhaps corrupted from drossel the scum or dross of human nature; or from drosselis, fr. a whore.]
A low, mean, worthless wretch.

DREAD. adj. [draeb, Sax.]
1. Terrible; frightful.
2. Awful; venerable in the highest degree.
3. This seems to be the meaning of that controverted phrase, dread majesty.

DREAD. n.s. [from dread.]
One that lives in fear.

DREADFUL. adj. [dread and full.]
1. Terrible; frightful; formidable.

DREADFULNESS. n.s. [from dreadful.]
Terribleness; frightfulness.

DREADFULLY. adv. [from dreadful.]
Terribly; frightfully.

DREADLESS. adj. [from dread.]
Fearless; unfrightened; intrepid; unshaken; undaunted; free from terror.
DRE

Dreadles, said he, that shall I soon declare;
It was complaine d, that thou hadst done great hurt
Unto an aerie woman. Fair. Queen. All night the dreadless angel, unpursued.
Through heav’n’s wide rampart held his way.
Milton.

DREAMLESS, n. s. [from dreamless.]
Fearlessness; intrepidness; undauntedness.
Zelman, to whom danger then was a cure of dreadlessness, all the composition of her elements being nothing but airy, with swiftness of desire crossed him. Sidney.

DREAM, n. s. [dream, Dut.] This word is derived By Meric Cusaboam, with more ingenuity than truth, from θυποτα
To the comedy of life; dreams being, as plays are, a representation of something which does not really happen. This conceit Janus has enlarged by quoting an epigram:

Σονο γιανω ην, ην με ανηρ
Της εναλ ομολογη ωτι τα αδρα.

Anthol.

1. A phantasm of sleep; the thoughts of a sleeping man.
We eat our meat in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of those terrible dreams
In dreams they feareth precipices read;
Or shipwreck’d, labour to some distant shore.
Dryden.

Glorious dreams stand ready to restore
The pleasing shapes of all you saw before. Dryden.

2. An idle fancy; a wild concept; a groundless suspicion.
Let him sleep.
A hundred knights; yes, that on every dream,
Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike;
He may engender his doute. Shakespeare. King Lear.

To DREAM, v. n. To dream, or dreamt, [from the noun.]
1. To have the representation of something in sleep.

Dreaming is the having of ideas, whilst the outward senses are stopped, not suggested by any external object, or known occasion, nor under the rule or conduct of the conscious mind. Locke.
I dreamt that I was conveyed into a wide and boundless plain. Tassler.

2. It has of late been the noun
I have long dream’d of such a kind of man,
But, being awake, I do despise my dream. Shak.
I have nightly since
Dream of encounter’d with myself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbecoming limbs, listing each other’s throat,
And wak’d half dead with nothing. Shak. Coriol. 1.

To think; to imagine.
These boys know little they are sons to th’ king,
Not Cymbeline dreams that they are alive. Shak.
He never dreams of the deluge, nor thought that first orl more than a transient crust of Burnet’s Theory.
He little dream’d how high he was to care,
Till breach’d fortune catch’d him in his care.
Dryden.

4. To think idle.
They dream on in a constant course of reading,
but not digressing.
I began to dream of nothing less than the immortality of my work. Smith.

5. To be sluggish to idle.
Why does Antony dream out his hours,
And tempts not fortune for a noble day? Dryden.

To DREAM, v. a. To see in a dream.
The Alcedon, by Jove’s decree,
Was taught to turn a head for Polyphem. Dryden.
At length in sleep their bodies they compose,
And dreamt the future sight, and early rose. Dryden.

DREAMER, n. s. [from dream.]

VOL. I.
DRE

2. Physick for a brute.

A drench is a potion or drink prepared for a sick horse, and composed of several drugs in a liquid form.

Aachen.

Haw, says she, how many last thou killed to-day? Give me now horse adrench, says he; and answers, fourteen, an hour after. Shaks. Hen. IV.

A drench of wine she with success been usd, and through a horn the gun roast juice intake.

Dredge.

3. Physick that must be given by violence.

Their journals are more like a drench that must be poured down; thus a draught which must be leisurely drank if it liked me. King Charles.

4. A channel of water.

Drencher. n. s. [from drench.]

1. One that dips or steeps any thing.
2. One that gives physic by force. Dict. Drenth. participle. Probably corrupted from drenched, to make a proverbial rhyme to brewt, or burst.

What flames, quoth he, when I the present see In danger rather to be drench than Fairy Q.

To DRESS. v. a. [dresser, Fr.]

1. To clothe; to invest with clothes.

The first request He made, was, like his brother to be dree'd; And, as his birth requir'd, above the rest. Dryden.

2. To clothe pompously or elegantly. It is used with up and out to enforce it.

Look upon pleasures not upon that side that is next to health and ease; that side, it seems, is, that is, as they come towards you to be enjoyed; for then they paint and smile, and dress themselves up in time, and glass gems, and counterfeit imagery.

Few admir'd the native red and white, Till poets dress'd them up to charm the sight. Dryden.

Lollia Paulina wore, in jewels, when dressed out, the value of three hundred twenty-two thousand nine hundred and sixteen pounds thirteen shillings and four-pence. Arbuthnott.

3. To adorn; to deck; to embellish; to furnish.

Where was a fine room in the middle of the horse, and somedance drenched up, for the commissioners to sit in. Clarckson.

Skill is used in dressing up power with all the splendour absoluteness can add to it.

The mind loses its natural relish of clear thought, and is reconciled insensibly to anything that can be dress'd up into any faint appearance of its. Locke.

4. To cover a wound with medicaments.

In time of my sickness another chirurgeon dress'd her. Wimeman.

5. To curvy; to rub: a term of the stable.

Our uninmates are so many, that we are forced to dress and tend horses and asses, that they may help our needs. Taylor.

Three hundred horses, in high stables fed, Stood ready, shining up, and smoothly dreed. Dryden's Aeneid.

6. To break or teach a horse: a term of horsemanship.

A steed Well m'd with well manag'd, which himself dreed; His aid in war, his ornament in peace. Dryden.

7. To rectify; to adjust.

Adam: well may we labour still to dreed, This garden; still to tend plant, herb, and flow'rt. Milton.

We must the ground be digg'd, and better dreed, New soil to make, and meliorate the rest. Dryden.

8. To prepare for any purpose.

In Derby they dress their lether with roots of tormentil, instead of bark. Mortimer's Husbandry.

9. To trim; to fit any thing for ready use.

When he dreed the lamps he shall burn incense. Endex. xxx.

DR\n
When you dress your young horses, cut away roots or spikes.

Merrriner's Husbandry.

10. To prepare virtualls for the table.

Thus the voluptuous youth, upred to dress
For his fabulous mess, in feeding high his tutor will supass,
An heir apparent of the gourmand race. Dryden.

Dress n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Clothes; garment; habit.

Dresses have these! Where is the rascal cook? How distant us! Will bring us ice. Dryd. Jnr.

3. The skill of adjusting dress.

The men of pleasure, dress, and gallantry. Pope.

Dresser n. s. [from dress.]

1. One employed in putting on the clothes and adorning the person of another. She barries all her hand-maids to the dress. Her heade alone will twenty dressers ask. Dryd. Jnr.

2. One employed in regulating, trimming, or adjusting any thing.

Said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I have secking fruit on this fig. And, dressing, and drifing, thou shalt become, And cross some rivulet passage did begin. Dryden.

3. The bench in a kitchen on which meat is drest or prepared for the table.

'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat. What dogs are these! Where is the rascal cook? How distant us! Will bring us ice. Shakesp.

4. To dress up; to adorn.

The second day we took off the dressings and found an eschar made by the cathericket. Wimeman on Tumours.

Dressing-room n. s. [dress and room.]

The room in which clothes are put on.

Dress books might be found every day in his dressing-room, if it were carefully searched. Swift.

Drest part. [from dress.]

In flow'ry wreathes the royal virgin drest
His bending bow's, and kindly clasp his breast. Addison.

To DRI.B. v. a. [contracted from drible.]

To crop; to cut off; to deface. A cant word.

Merchants gains come short of half the mart; For he who drives his bargains dries a part. Dryden.

To DRI.BBLE. v. n. [This word seems to have come from drop by successive alterations, such as are usual in living languages: drop, drip, dripple, drible, from thence dried and dripper. Drip may indeed be the original word from the Danish drypp].

1. To fall in drops.

Semulon processes on the surface owe their form to the dribling of water that passed over it. Wolvwood on Fonns.

A dribling difficulty, is a momentary suppression of urine, may be caused by the stone's shutting up the orifice of the bladder. Dr. Ben. on Aliment.

2. To fall weakly and slowly.

Believe not that the dribling dart of love Can pierce a complete bosom. Shakesp.

3. To slaver as a child or idiot.

To DRI.BBLE v. a. To throw down in drops.

DRI

Let the cook follow with a ladle full of soup, and drible it all the way up stairs. Swift's Rules to Servants.

DRI.BLET. n. s. [from drible.] A small sum; odd money in a sum.

Twelve long years of exile.

Twelve twice we number'd since his blest return; So strictly we trust thou just to pay, Even to the driblet of a day. Dryden.

DRI.BLET. n. s. [from dry.]

That which has the quality of absorbing moisture; a desiccative.

There is a tale, that boiling of daisy roots in milk, which it is certain are great driers, will make dogs little. Baraun.

DRI.BLET. n. s. [from drive.]

1. Force impellent; impulse; overwhelming influence.

A man being under the drief of any passion, will still follow the impulsion of it till something interpose, and by a stronger impulse, turn him another way. South.

2. Violence; course.

The mighty truck, half rent with rugged rift. Both roll along the rocks, and fall with fearful drief.

3. Any thing driven at random.

Some log, perhaps, upon the waters swam, An useless drief, which eaily cut within, And follow'd, first to follow this the chase, And cross some rivel passage did begin. Dryden.

4. Any thing driven or born along in a body.

The ready racers stand, Swift as on wings of wind upborne they fly, And dries of rising dust involve the sky. Pope's Odyssey.

5. A storm; a shower.

Our thunder from the south Shall rain their drief of bullets on this town. Shak.

6. A hoaper stratum of any matter thrown together by the wind: as, a snowdrief, a deep body of snow.

7. Tendency or aim of action.

The particular drief of every act, proceeding eternally from God, we are not able to discern; and therefore cannot always give the proper and certain reason of his works. Dryden.

8. Their drief comes known, and they discover'd are.

For some, of many, will be false of course. Daniel.

The main drief of his book being to prove, that what is true is impossible to be false, he opposes nobody. Titubon.

The drief of the pamphlet is to stir up our compassion towards the rebels. Addison.

This, by the stile, the manner, and the drief, 'twas thought could be the word of none but Swift. Swift.

To DRI.F. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To drive; to urge alone.

Snow, no larger than so many grains of sand, dript with the wind in clouds from every plain. Ellis's Voyage.

2. To throw together on heaps. Not authorized.

He wanders on

From hill to dale, still more and more a stray, Inpatient fences through the dripted heaps. Thomson.

To DRI. v. a. [drillen, Dut. Dàlmen, Sax. from Suppl. through.]

1. To pierce any thing: to thrust a drill.

The drill-plate is only a piece of flat iron, fixed upon a flat board, which iron hath an hole punctured a little way into it, to set the blunt end of the shank of the drill in, when it is driven into a hole. Mason's Mechanical Exercises.

2. To perforate; to bore; to pierce.

My body through and through he drill'd, And Whacum by my side kill'd. Hudibras.
Tell, what could drill and perforate the poles, and to their attractive rays adapt their holes?

Blacker.

3. To make a hole.

When a hole is drilled in a piece of metal, it holds the drill-bow in its right hand; but, when it turns small work, they hold the drill-bow in their left hand.

4. To delay; to put off; in low phrase; corrupted, I believe, from drawn.

5. I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.

Shakespeare.

To DRINK, v. a.
1. To swallow: applied to liquids.

He had eaten no bread, nor drank any water, three days and three nights; and let the purple violets drink the stream. Drud. Brush not thy sweeping skirt too near the wall; thy heedless sleeve will drink the colour'd oil. Gay.

2. To suck up; to absorb.

Set rows of rosemary with flow'ring stem, and let the purple violets drink the stream. Drud. Brush not thy sweeping skirt too near the wall; thy heedless sleeve will drink the colour'd oil. Gay.

3. To take in by any inlet; to hear; to see.

My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words of that tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound.

Shakespeare.

Thither write, my queen; and with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, though ink be made of gall. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.

Thither write, my queen; and with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, though ink be made of gall. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.

4. To act upon by drinking.

Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner: come, gentlewoman, I hope we shall drink down all the contents.

Shakespeare. All's Well that Ends Well.

He will drown his health and his strength in his belly; and, after all his drunken trothes, at length drink himself down.

South.

5. To make drunk.

Benhad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions. 1 Kings.

6. It is used with the intensive particles off, up, and off; to note a single act of drinking.

One man gives another cup of poison, a thing as terrible as death; but at the same time he tells him that it is a cordial, and so he drinks it off, and dies.

South.

7. Up, to note that the whole is drunk.

Alexander, after he had drank up a cup of fourteen pints, was going to take another. Arb. on Coin.

8. In, to enforce the sense: usually of inanimate things.

The body being reduced nearer unto the earth, and emptied, he cometh more porous, and credibly drinketh in water.

Brown's Twixt.

DRINK, n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Liquor to be swallowed: opposed to meat.

When God made choice to rear his mighty champion, strong above compare, whose drink was only from the liquid brook! Milton.

2. Liquor of any particular kind.

We will give you rare and sleepy drinks.

Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.

The juices of fruits are either watery or oily; I reckon among the watery all the fruits out of which drink is expressed, as the grape, the apple, and the pear.

Bacon.

O madness, to think use of strongest wines, and strongest drinks, our chief support of health! Milton.

These, when they allotted 2d. of time's complete; are more commendable than the husband's drink.

Philips.

Amongst drunks, austere wines are apt to occasion fund erupitions.

Abraham Brown on Aliments.

DRINK-MONEY, n. s. [drink and money.]

Money given to buy liquor.

Peg's servants were always asking for drink-money.

Drunkknot.

DRINKER, n. s. [from drink.]

One that drinks to excess; a drunkard.

It were good for those that have moist brains, and are great drinkers, to take fume of lignum, aloes, rosemary, and frankincense, about the full of the moon.

Bacon.

The drunker and debauched person is the object of scorn and contempt.

South.

The urine of hard drinkers affords a liquor extremely fit for, but no inflammable spirits; what is inflammable in the blood, and affects the brain.

Great drinkers commonly die apoplectic.

Archbishop on Aliments.

To DRIP, v. n. [drippen, Dut.]
1. To fall in drops.

2. To have drops falling from it.

The soil, with fatted moisture fill'd, is cloath'd with grass, and fruitful to be till'd; such as in fruitful vales we view from high, Which dripping rocks, not flowing streams, supply.

Dryden.

The finest sparks, and cleanest beats, Drip from the shoulders to the toes.

Prior.

To DRIP, v. a.
1. To let fall in drops.

Her blood of tears Seem like the lofty barn of some rich swain Which from the thatch drips fast a snow of rain.

Swift.

2. To drop fat in roasting.

Let what was put into his belly, and what he drinks, be his sauce. Walton's Angler.

His offer'd entrails shall his crime approve, And drip his fatness from the hazel boughs.

Dryden.

DRIPING, n. s. [from drip.]
That which falls in drops.

Water may be procured for necessary occasions from the heavens, by preserving the drips of the houses.

Drippings.

DRIPPING, n. s. [drip and pan.]
The pan in which the fat of roast meat is caught.

When the cook turns her back, throw smacking coals into the drippingpan.

Swift.

DRIPPLE. adj. [from drip.]
This word is used somewhere by Fairfax for weak, or rare; dripple shot.

To DRIVE, v. a. [preterite drove, anciently drove; part. pass. driven, or drove, driend, Got, drüpen, Sax. drypen, Dut.]
1. To produce motion in any thing by violence, as, the hammer drives the nail.

2. To force along by impetuous pressure.

He builds a bridge, who never drove a pike.

Pope.

On helmets helmets throng,

Shield press'd on shield, and man drove man along.

Pope.

3. To expel by force from any place: with from.

Driven from his native land to foreign grounds, He with a generous rage resents his wounds.

Dryden's Virgil.

His ignominious flight the victors boast,

Beaus banish beasts, and swordknights swordknights.

Pope.

4. To send by force to any place: with to.

Time drives the flocks from field to fold,

When rivers rage and rocks grow cold.

Shakespeare. Traft has driven all into the net.

Dryden's Don Sebastian.

5. To chase; to hunt.

To drive the deer with horn and hunt.

Earl Percy took his way.

Chir Harry.

6. To force or urge in any direction.

He stood and measured the earth: be beheld, and drove asunder the nations.

Hab. iii. 6.

7. To impel to greater speed.

8. To guide and regulate a carriage.

He took off their chariot-wheels, that they might drive them heavily.

Es. v. 25.

9. To convey animals; to make animals march along under guidance.
DRY

10. To clear any place by forcing away what is in it.
We come not with design of wasteful prey,
To drive the country, force the swarms away.
Addison.

11. To force; to compel.
For the metre sake, some words in him sometime he drives away, a mirth require straighten placing in Aeschines.

12. To hurry on inconsiderately.
Most miserable if such unskilfulness make them drive on their time by the periods of sin and death.
Drury.

He, drives to dismay, threatened, if I did not the like, to do as much for my horse as fortune had done for his.
The Romans did not think that tyranny was thoroughly extinguished, till they had driven one of their consuls to depart the city, against whom they found not in the world what to object, saying only that his name was Tarquin.
Hooker.

He was driven by the necessities of times, more than led by his own disposition, to write it.
King Charles.

13. To distress; to straighten.
This kind of speech is in the manner of desparate repair on a ship.
Spenner’s State of Trial.

14. To urge by violence, not kindness.
He taught the gospel rather than the law,
And forced himself to drive, but lov’d to draw.

15. To impel by influence of passion.
I drove my sailors from their usual love of life
To a living humour of madness. Shaksp. As you like it.
Discontents drive men into shippings. K. Charles.

Love is a master, being master of temper, and of the most profound dissimulation, knew too well how to lead him into a mistake, and then drive him into error.
Claridon.

It is better to marry than to burn, says St. Paul;
where we may see what drive men into a conjugal life; a little burning pushes us more powerfully than greater pleasures in prospect.
Locke.

16. To urge; to press to a conclusion.
The experiment of wood that shines in the dark, we have diligently driven and pursued; the rather for that, of all things that give light below, this is the most durable, and hath least apparent motion.
Bocon’s Nat. Hist.

We have thus the proper notions of the four elements, and both them and their qualities driven up and resolved into their most simple principles, Dibyson.

To drive the argument farther, let us inquire into the obvious designs of this divine architect, Cheyne’s Philos. Principles.

The design of these orators was to drive some particular point, either the condemnation or acquittal.
Swift.

17. To carry on; to keep in motion.
As a farmer cannot husband his ground so well, if he sit at a great rent; so the merchant cannot drive his trade so well, if he sit at great usury. Bacon.
The bee has the excellencies of its own,
And common sort: beneath one law they live,
And with one common stock their traffic drive.
Dryd.

Your Passion is a lawless bargain drove.
The parent could not sell the daughter’s love.
Dryd.
The trade of life cannot be driven without partners.

18. To purify by motion: so we say to drive feathers.
His thrice driven bed of snow.
Shaksp.
The one’s in the plot, let him be never so innocent; and the other as white as the driven snow, let him be never so criminal.
L’Estrange.

19. To drive out; to expel.
Tumults and their excitements drive myself and many of both houses out of their places.
As soon as they heard the name of Roscetes, they forthwith drive out their government, and received the Turks into the town.

Knolles’s History.

To DRIVE. n. p.

1. To go as impelled by any external agent.
The needle endeavours to conform unto the meridian; but, being distracted, drive that way where the greater power of powerer point of the earth is placed.
Dryd. The Philo. Err.

Love, set to one, still safe at anchor rides,
And drives the fury of the winds and tides;
But leaves his ship where he and the wind do please.
Dryd. It drives away at will, to very have we a storm.

Not with the rising storm would violently drive;
But left the helm, and let the vessel drove.
Dryd.’s Eclog.

2. To rush with violence.
Fierce Bocas drove against his flying sails,
And rent the sheets.

Near as he draws, thick harbingers of smoke
With gloomy pillars cover all the place;
Whose little intervals of night are broke.
Dryd. Then with so swift an ebb the flood drive backward,
It slipt from underneath the scaly herd.
Dryd. Dryd’en’s All for Love.

The bees drive out upon each other’s backs,
T’imboss them in the hills. Dryd. Don Sebast.
While thus he stood,
Perithons’ dart drove on, and maim’d him to the word.
Dryd. As a ship, which winds and waves assail.
Now with the current drives, now with the gale;
She feels a double force, by turns obeys
Imperious tempest, and insatiate seas.
Dryd.

The wolves scamper’d away, however, as hard as they could drive, held to the wide open seas.
Dryd.

Thick as autumnal leaves, or driving sand,
The moving squadrons blacken all the strand.
Clouds.

3. To pass in a carriage.
There is a litter ready; lay him in ‘t,
And drive to Gloster’s house.
Shaksp. King Lear.

Thy flaming chariot-wheels, that shuck
Heav’n’s everlasting frame, while over the necks
Thou driv’st of waving angels disarray’d.
Milton.

4. To tend to; to consider as the scope and ultimate design.
Authors drive at these, as the highest elegancies, which are but the frigidity of wit.
Brown’s Vulg. Errors.

We cannot widely mistake his discourse, when we have such a guide as his Drives at.
Addison.

They look no further back than the next line;
wherein it will inevitably follow, that they can drive to another point, but ramble from one subject to another.
Dryd.’s Eclog.

We have done our work, and are come within view of the end that we have been driving at.
Addison on the War.

5. To aim; to strike at with fury.
Four reges in buckram let drive at me.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

At Auck’s shield he drove, and at the blow
Both shield and arm to ground together go.
Dryd.’s Eclog.

6. To drive, in all its senses, whether active or neutral, may be observed to retain a sense compounded of violence and progress.
Dryd.’s Eclog.

To DRIVE. v. n. [from drip, dribble, dribble, drivel.]

1. To slaver; to let the spittle fall in drops, like a child, an idiot, or dotard.
I met with this Chreim, a dribbling old fellow, already leaning, shaking both of head and hands, half flesh, and yet much more of earth.
Dryd. Sicily.

No man could spit from him, but would be force to drive like some paralytic, or a fool.
Dryd. Sicily.

2. To be weak or foolish; to dote.

This driving love is like a great natural, that runs falling up and down to hide his humble.
Shaksp. Romeo and Juliet.

I hate to see a brave bold fellow sotted,
Made sour and senseless by wine, by love;
A driving hero, fit for a romance.
Dryd.

DRYVEL. n. s. [from drivel.]
1. Slaver; moisture shed from the mouth.
Besides th’ eternal drivel, that supplies
The stopping beard, from nostrils, mouth, and eyes.
Dryd.

2. A fool; an idiot; a driveller. This sense is now out of use.

What fool am I, to mingle that drive of speech among my public thoughts?
Sicily.

Millions of years this old drivell Cusip lives,
While still more wretched, more wicked, he doth mind.
Sicily.

DRYVeller. n. s. [from drivel.]
1. An idiot; a slaver;

an idiot; a slaver.
I have heard the arrozen drivellers commended for their showdew, even by men of tolerable judgment.
Dryd.

DRIVEN. Participle of drive.
They were driven forth from amongst men.
Job. xxx. 5.

DRIVER. n. s. [from drive.]
1. The person in a ship who gives any motion by violence.

2. One who drives beasts.
He from the many-peopled city files;
Contemns their labours, and the driver’s cries.
Sicily.

The driver runs up to him immediately, and beats him almost to death.
L’Estrange.
The multitude or common rout, like a drive of sheep, or an herd of oxen, may be managed by any noise or cry which their driver shall accusion them to.
South.

3. One who drives a carriage.
Not the forge driver with more fury lends
The sounding lash, and, ere the stroke descends,
Low to the wheels his phantom body bends.
Dryd. Trig.

To DRIVd. v. a. [drisien, Ger. to shed dew.]
To shed in small slow drops, as winter rains.

When the sun sets, the air doth drive dew.
Shaksp.

Though now this face of mine be hid
In un-consuming winter’s detided snows,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory.
Shaksp.

To DRIVE. n. v. to fall in short slow drops, and dribbling drops, that often do redound,
The finest drops doth in continuance wear.
Spen.

Her heart did melt in great compassion,
And dribbling tears did sate for pure affection.
Fairy Queen.

This day will pour down,
If conjuncture aught, no driving show,
But rattling storm of arrows bard with fire.
Milton.

The neighbouring mountains, by reason of their height, are more exposed to the dews and drizzling rains than any of the adjacent parts.
Addison on Italy.

DRIzzly. adj. [from drizzle.]
Shedding small rain.

This during winter’s drizzly reign be done,
Till the new ram receives the exulted sun.
Dryd. Virgil.

To DRIzz. v. n. To work sluggish and slowly; to ploil.
Let such vile vassals, born to base vocation,
Drudge in the world, and for their living droll,
Which have no will to live without bicycle.
Spen.

Desuetude does contract and narrow our faculties, so that we can apprehend only those things in which we are conversant; the driving peasant scarcely thinks there is any world beyond the neighbouring markets. Government of the Tongue.
DRO

DROLL. n.s. [droler, Fr.]

1. One whose business is to raise mirth by petticoats; a jester; a buffoon; a jack-pudding.

2. To give a heavy dull tone.

DROLLERY, n.s. [from droll. idle jokes to inform one.

They hang between heaven and hell, borrow the christians faith, and the atheists drollery upon it.

DROMEDARY. n.s. [dromedari, Ital.]

A sort of camel so called from its swiftness, because it is said to travel a hundred miles a day. Dromedaries are smaller than common camels, slennder, and more nimble; and are of two kinds; the larger, with two small humps, covered with hair, on its back; the other lesser, with one hairy eminence, and more frequently called camel: both are capable of great fatigue. Their hair is soft and shorn; they have no fauns and fore-teeth, nor horn upon their feet, which are only covered with a fleshly skin; and they are about seven feet and half high, from the ground to the top of their heads. See Camel. Calmet.

Straw for the horses and dromedaries brought they unto the place. 1 Kings. Mules, after these camels and dromedaries, and waggons fraught with mullets of war. Milton.

DRONE. n.s. [spoon, Sax.]

1. The bee which makes no honey, and is therefore driven out by the rest. The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum, Delivering o'er to executors pale.

The lazy yawning drone. Shaksp. Henry V.

Luxurious kings are to their people lost; They live, like drones, upon the publick cost.

All, with united force, combine to drive The lazy drones from the laborious hive. Dryden's Virgil.

2. A sluggard; an idler.

He sleeps by day More than the wild cat; drones live not with me, Therefore I part with him. Shaksp. Sit idle on the household hearth, A burdenous drone, to visitants a gueze. Milton.

It is my misfortune to be married to a drone, who lives upon what I get, without bringing any thing into the common stock. Addison.

3. The hum, or instrument of humming. Here while his canto-panche scan'd The mystic notes of his hand, He tipples palmistry, and dines On all her fortune-telling lines. Cleaveland.

To DRO. n.s. [from the noun.]

1. To live in idleness; to dream.

2. To pour in drops or single globules. His heavens shall drop down dew. Deut. xxxii. 23.

3. To let fall from a higher place. Others o'er chimney tops and turrets now, And drop their vials on the heads below. Dryden.

One only bag remain'd: Propp'd on her trusty staff, not half alight, And drop'd an awkward court'sy to the knight.

4. To let go; to dismiss from the hand, or the possession.

St. John himself will scarce forbear To hit his pan and drop a tear. Swift.

5. To insert indirectly, or by way of dissertation.

St. Paul's epistles contain nothing but points of Christian instruction, amongst which he seldom fails to drop in the great and distinguishing doctrines of our holy religion. Locke.

6. To utter slightly or casually.

Drop not thy word against the house of Isaac. Amos.

7. To quaff a master.

I have beat the hollow till I have worn out these shoes in her service, and not one penny left me to buy more; so that you must even excuse me if I drop you here. L'Estrange.

8. To let go a dependant, or companion, without further association.

She drudged him on to five-and-fifty, and will drop him in his old age, if she can find her account in another. Addison.

9. To suffer to vanish, or come to nothing.

Thus was the fame of our Saviour perpetuated by such records as would not give the traditional account of him to after-ages; and rectify it, if, by passing through several generations, it might drop any part that was material. Opinions, like fashions, always descend from those of quality to the middle sort, and thence to the vulgar, where they are dropped and vanish. Swift.

10. To bedrop; to speckle; to varigate with spots. Varis stellatus corpus guttis. Or sporting, with quick glance, Shew to the sun their way'd coats, drop'd with Milton.

To DROP. n.s.

1. To fall in drops, or single globules. The quality of mercy is not strain'd; It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath. Shak. Merchant of Venice.

2. To let drops fall; to discharge itself in drops.

The heavens dropped at the presence of God. Psalm liv. 8.

While cumb'd with my dropping deaths lay, The cruel nation, covetous of prey, Stain'd with my blood the unhospitable coast. Dryden's Ancel.

Beneath a rock he sigh'd alone, And cold Lycus wept from every dropping stone. Dryden.
3. To fall; to come from a higher place. Philosophers conceive that you dropped from the moon, or one of the stars. Gulliver's Travels.

4. To fall spontaneously.

5. To fall in death; to die suddenly.

6. To die.

7. To sink into silence; to vanish; to come to nothing; a familiar phrase.

8. To come unexpectedly.

9. To fall short of a mark.

10. That which falls in drops.

11. That which drops when the continuous stream ceases.

12. DROPPING. n. s. [from drop.]

13. DROPLET. n. s. A little drop.

14. DROPS. n. s. [drop and stone.] Spar formed into the shape of drops.

15. DROPSIC. adj. [from dropsy.] A plant of various species.

16. DROPSID. adj. [from dropsy.] Diseased with a dropsy; hydroptic; tending to a dropsy.

17. DROPSY. n. s. [hydrops, Lat. whence hydropis, thence dropsy, dropsy.] A collection of water in the body, from too lax a tone of the solide, whereby digestion is weakened, and all the parts stifled.

DROSS. n. s. [drop, Sax.]

1. The recrement or dross that have from the metal case.

2. Rust; incrustation upon metal.

3. Refuse; nothings; sweepings; any thing remaining after the removal of the better part; dregs; uncleanness; corruption.

4. Full of scoriaces or recuminent parts; full of dross.

5. Worthless; foul; unction.

6. A number of sleepy driven to a herd of oxen we regularly oppose, not a drove, but a flock, of sheep.

7. A crowd; a tumult.

8. Fat; if true alone, must consist pretends, the winters all his empty palaces laden. Set wide with doors, adorned with plated brass, where drives, as at a city-gate, may pass.

DROVER. n. s. [from drove.] One that fats oxen for sale, and drives them to market.

DROUGHT. n. s. [brugobe, Sax.]

1. Dry weather; want of rain.

2. Thirst; want of drink.

3. Droughty. adj. [from drught.] The state of wanting rain.

4. Wanting rain; sultry.

5. To suflace in water.

6. To overflow; to bury in an inundation; to deluge.

7. To immerse; to lose in any thing.

8. To lose in some thing that overpowers or covers.
DRU

Men are drowsy, and desire to sleep, before the fit of an ague, and do use to yawn and stretch.
Baron's Nat. Hist.
The flowers, call'd out of their beds, Start and raise up their drowsy heads; Closseland; drunken at last, and drowsy, they depart. Each to his house.
Dryden.

2. Heavy-dripping; causing sleep.
Sir Givyon, mindful of his young yeffe, Uprose from drowsy couch.
Fair Queen.
While thus she rested, on her arm reclining, The hoary willow waving with her: And feather'd quires that warbled in the shade, And purling streams that through the meadow stray.
In drowsy murmers lul'd the gentle maid.
Addison.

3. Stupid; dull.
These inadvertencies, a body would think, even then, with all his drowsy reasoning, could never have been capable of.

Dryden.

To DRUB. r. a. [druber to kill, Dan.] To thresh; to beat, to bang; to thump; to thwack; to cudgel. A word of contempt.
He that is valiant, and dares fight, Though drub'd, can lose honour by't.
Hudibras.
The little thief had been soundly drub'd with a good hand cement.
L'Estrange.
Though the bread be not mine, yet, if it had been less than thy weight, I should have been dрабд'd.
Locke.

DRUB. r. s. [from the verb.] A thump; a knock; a blow.
The blows and drubs I have receiv'd
Have bruis'd my body, and bereav'd
My limbs of strength.
Hudibras.

By setting an unfortunate mark on their followers, they have exposed them to innumerable drubs and contusions.
Addison.

To DRUDGE. r. n. [brecaxe to vex, Sax.

dragken, to carry, Dut.] To labour in mean offices, to toil without honour or dignity; to work hard; to slave.
And to crackle'st, and hoarse labour.
Hudibras.

In merriment, did droduce and labour.
Hudibras.
The poor slave little; we must learn to watch
Our labours late, and early morn.
Midst winter frosts; then, clad and fed with Sparing,
Rise to our toils, and d Anyone away the day.
Oviedo.
Advantages obtained by industry, directed by philosophy, can never be expected from dreading ignorance.
Galinie.

Soon he came to court.
Proffering for his service at the gate.
To drudge, draw water, and to ram or wait.
Dryden.
I made no such bargain with you, to live always drudging.
Dryden's Dedication, Eneid.

What is an age, in dull renown drudge'd o'er!
One little single hour of lost, more.
Granville.

DRUDGE. n. s. [from the verb.] One employed in mean labour; a slave, one doomed to servile occupation.

To conclude, this drudge of the devil, this diviner, laid claim to me.
Shakespeare. Comedy of Errours.

He sits above and laughs the while
At thee, ordain'd his drudge, to execute
What'er his wrath shall bid.
Milton's Par. Lost.

Art thou our slave,
Our captive, at the publick ill our drudge,
And du'rt thou, at our sending and command,
Dispute thy coming?
Milton's Agamemnon.

He is contented in their drudge, and
On and on errands gladly trudge.
Hudibras.
The hard master makes men serve him for Worthy, who rewards his drudge and slaves with Nothing but shame, vexation, and Tillington.

DRUDGER. n. s. [from drudge.]

1. A mean labourer.

2. The drudging-box; the box out of which flower is thrown on roast meat.

Druddery. n. s. [from drudge.] Mean labour; ignoble toil; dishonourable work; servile occupation. My old dame will be undone for one to do her husbandry and her drudgety.
Shakespeare.

Were there not instruments for drudgety as well as officers of drudge? Were there not people to receive orders, as well as others to give and assent?
L'Estrange.

She do not know the heavy grievances,
The toil, the labour, weary drudgeries,
Which they impose.
Southern's Oronoko.

To thee that drudgety of pow'r I give;
Cares be thy lot: reign thou, and let me live.
Dryden.

Paradise was a place of bliss, as well as immortal,
without drudgety, and without sorrow.
Locke.

Even Drudgety himself,
As at the car of sweets, or dusty

The palace stone, looks gay.
Thomson's Summer.
It is now handled by every dirty wench, and condemned to do her drudgety.
Swift's Meditations on a Broomstick.

DRUGGING BOX, n.s. [drudging and box.]
The box out of which flour is sprinkled upon roast meat.

But if it be too long, the cracking's pall'd,
Not by the drudging-box to be recalled.
Dryden's King's Court.

DRUGGINGLY. adv. [from drudging-] Laboriously; toilsomely.

He does now all the meanest and triflingest things themselves drudgingly, without making use of any inferior or subordinate minister.

Dryden's Meditations on a Broomstick.

DRUG. n. s. [drogue, Fr.]

1. An ingredient used in physic; a medicinal simple.

A foot described
Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds
Close sailing from Beigal, or the Isles
Of Ternate and Tidore, whence merchants bring Their spicy drugs.
Dryden's Par. Lost.

Judicious physic's noble art to gain,
He drugs and plants explor'd, alas! in vain.
Smith's Bright Helen's a mirth-inspiring bowl,
Temper'd with drugs of sov'reign use, I assage
The boiling bosom of tumultuous rage.
Pope's Odacny.

In the names of drugs and plants, the mistake
In a word may endanger life.

2. It is used sometimes for poison.

Mortal drugs I have; but Martine's law
Is death to any he that utters them.
Shakespeare.

And yet no doubts the poor man's draught conveys,

He dreads to poison in his homely bowl;
They fear the deadly drug, when gems divine
Exchange the cup, and sparkle is the wine.
Dryden.

3. Any thing without worth or value; any thing of which no purchaser can be found.

Each noble vice
Shall bear a price,
And virtue shall a drug become.
An empty name.
Was all her fame,
But now she shall be dumb.
Dryden's Allion.

4. A drudge. This seems the meaning here.

He from his first swalt proceeded
Thro' sweet degrees that this brief world affords,
To such as may the passive drugs of it
Freely command.
Shakespeare.

To DRUG. r. a. [from the noun.]

1. To season with ingredients, commonly medicinal.

The surfeited proneos
Do mock their charge with mocks.—I've drugg'd their possets.

That death and nature do content about them.
Shakespeare.

583
DRU

2. To tincture with something offensive.

 Hung and throv' content, and drinking dry'd as oft
Wit hatefull discourses, with'd their jaws
With son and enders fill'd. Milton's Par. Loss.

DRUGGET. n. s. A slight kind of woollen stuff.

In drugget dresses, of thirteen pence a-yard,
See Philip's son amidst his Persian guard. Swift.

DRUGGET. n. s. from drug. One who sells physical drugs.

Given to my fervent endeavours, I've seen dryheads
Do more than this in sport. Shakes. King Lear.

Dryden, a-drunken, a-thirst. Shakes.

3. To make arrows drunk with blood.

DEUT.

DRUNKARD. u. s. [from drunk.] One given to excessive use of strong liquors; one addicted to habitual ebriety.

Some blood drawn on no would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavours. I've seen drunkards Drunk more than this in sport. Shakes. King Lear.

My browsel cannot hide her wees.
But, like a drunkard, I must vomit them. Shakes.
God will not take the drunkard's excuse, that
He has so long accustomed himself to intemperate drinking,
That now he cannot leave it off. South.

DRUNKEN. adj. from drunk. 1. Intoxicated with liquor; inebriated.

O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!
Sirs, I will prate on this drunken man. Shakes. King Lear.

Drunkard men and women with their turnstools round;
They imagine that things come upon them; they See not well things afar off; those things that
They see near keep a place of their own,
And sometimes they see things double. Bacon.

2. Given to habitual ebriety.

DRUNKEN. adj. from drunk. 1. Intoxicated with strong liquors; one addicted to habitual ebriety.

Every going off from our natural and common temper, and our usual severity of behaviour, is a degree of drunkenness. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

3. Intoxication or inebriation of any kind; disorder of the faculties.

Passion is the drunkenness of the mind, and therefore in its present workings not controllable by reason. Spenser.

DIY. adj. [brug. Sax.] 1. Arid; not wet; not moist.

When God said, Be gether'd now, ye waters under heahn',
Into one place, and let dry land appear! Milton.

Or such elements the sport:
From clear to cloudy stuff, from hot to cold,
And dry to moist. Thomson.

2. Not rainy.

A dry March and a dry May portend a whole-some summer, if there be a showering April betwixt. Bacon.

The weather, we agreed, was too dry for the season. Addison.

4. To be dry to exhaust.

Rush Elenor, in an evil hour,
Dried an insensuable bowl, and thought
I exhal'd his surfity by rigorous
Imprudent: him death's iron sleep oppress. Philips.

5. To dry up.

Their honourable men famished, and their multitude dried up with thirst. Innes, v. 13.

6. To dry up. To deprive totally of moisture; to take all moisture away.
To DRY, r. u. To grow dry; to deprive of moisture; to be deprived of its moisture. DRY, n. [from dry.] That which has the quality of absorbing moisture.

The ill effects of drinking are relieved by this plant, which is a great dryer and opener, especially by perspiration. Temple.

DRY-EYED. adj. [dry and eye.] Without tears; without weeping. Dry in what heart of rock could long Dryed beheld? Adam could not, but wept. Milton.

DRYLY. adv. [from dry.] 1. Without moisture.
2. Coldly; frigidly; without affection.

The arid climate, conscious to himself how dryly the king had been used by his council, did strive to recover the king's affection. Bacon's Hen. VII.

Wouldst thou to honour and preferments climb, Be bold in mischief, dote on some mighty crime, Which dungoats, death, or banishment deserve? For virtue is but dryly praised, and stars.

Drayden's Jer. Am.

3. Jejune; barrenly; without ornament or embellishment.

Some dryly plain, without invention's aid. Write dull receipts how poems may be made. Pope.

DRYNESS, n. s. [from dry.]
1. Want of moisture; caitly.
The Africans are conceived to be peculiarly scented and tormented by the sun, by dryness of the soil, from want and defect of water. Bruce's J. T. Err.

Such was the discord which did first divide
Form, order, beauty, through the universe;
While dryness moisture, coldness heat resists.
All that we have, and that we are, subsists.

Dekker.

The narrow supplies an oil for the humidation of the bones and ligaments in the articulations, and particularly of the ligaments, preserving them from dryness and rigidity, and keeping them supple and flexible. Hayton the Creation.

Is the sea ever likely to be evacuated by the sun, or to be emptied with buckets? Why then must we fancy this impossible dryness, and then, upon that fictitious account, calumniate nature? Bentley.

2. Want of succulence.
If the field
His vacancy with his drooping knoll,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him for's.
Shakespeare. Antony and Cleop.

The difference of muscular fluids depends upon the hardness, tenderness, moisture, or dryness of the fibres.

Arbuthnot.

3. Want of embellishment; want of pathos; jejuneness; barrenness.

Their new flowers and sweetness do as much corrupt as others drainless and squalor, if they choose not carefully.

Ben Jonson.

Be faithful where the author excels, and paraphrase where penury of fancy or dryness of expression does it.

Garrick.

4. Want of sensibility in devotion; want of ardour; aridity.

It may be, that by this dryness of spirits, God intends to make us more fervent and resigned in our direct and solemn devotions, by the preference of our weakness.

Taylor.

DRY'Nurse. n. s. [dry and nurse.]
1. A woman who brings up and feeds a child without the breast.
2. One who takes care of another; with some contempt of the person taken care of.

Mrs. Quickly is his nurse, or his dray'nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Shakespeare.

DUB. n. s. [from dub.] 1. To feed without the breast.
As Romulus a wolf did rear,
So he was dray'nursed by a bear.

Hudibras.

2. To dry and shed. Without write or blot or bloodshed, treading above the shoes in the water.
He had embarked us in such disadvantage, as we could not return dryshod. Sidney.

Dryshod to pass, she parts the floods in twain;
And change into her native sect.
She would command themselves to bear away.

Fairy Queen.

Has honour's fountain then sunk it back the stream?
He has; and beating boys may dryshod pass,
And gather peltries from the naked ford. Dryden.

D'UAL. adj. [dualis, Lat.] Expressing the number two.

Modern languages have only one variation, and so the Latin; but the Greek and Hebrew have one to signify two, and another to signify more than two; under one variation the noun is said to be of the dual number, and under the other of the plural.

To DUB, v. a. [dubban zo npene, Sax. addubba till riddara, Islandick, to dub a knight. Addubba, in its primary sense, signifies to strike, knights being made by a blow with the sword.]

1. To make a man a knight.

Knights, knighted good mother! Basilisco like.
What! I am dub'd! I have it on my shoulder.
Shakespeare.

The robes which the kings then allowed to each knight, when he was dubbed, of green, or burnes, as they spake in that age, appear to be more of the old fashion.

Camden's Remains.

The king stood up under his cloth of state, took the sword from the lord mayor of London knight, Haywood on Ed. VI.

2. To confer any kind of dignity, or new character.

The jealous o'ergrown widow and herself:
Since that our brother dub'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty glorious in this monarchy. Sh. Ricl. III.

He Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. Shak.

Women coveted a husband's dart.

As a king hunting dub's a hunt. Cleaveland.

A plain gentleman, of an ancient family, is of better quality than a new knight, though the reason of his dubiousJohnson.

o poet! thou hast been disconcerter,
Hanging the monarch's hat so high,

If thou hast dub'd by star a nation,
That did but blaze, and rove, and die. Prior.

These demons make us dub,
With the name of legion club.

A man of wealth is dub'd a man of voice;
Wenus shall give him form, and Anthis birth. Pope.

DUB. n. s. [from the verb.]
A blow; a knock.

As skilful cooper hoop their tubs
With Lydian and with Prynge dian; Hadrianus.

DUBBING, n. s. [from dubious.]
A thing doubtful. A word not used.

DUBIOUS. adj. [dubius, Lat.]
1. Doubting; not settled in an opinion.
2. Uncertain; that of which the truth is not fully known.

No quick reply to dubious questions make. Den.
We also call it dubius, or dubiously propositional, when there are no arguments on either side.

Watts's Logick.

3. Not plain; not clear.

Satan with less tal, and now with ease
Wants on the calmer wave, by dubious light. Milton.

4. Having the event uncertain.
His utmost pow'rs with adverse pow'r oppos'd,
In dubious battle, on the plains of heav'n. Milton.

DUBIOUSLY. adv. [from dubious.] Uncertainly; without any determination.

Without write or blot or bloodshed, treading above the shoes in the water.

Alamannack wander in general, and talk dubiously, and leave to the reader the business of interpreting.

Swift.

DUBIOUSNESS. n. s. [from dubious.] Uncertainty; doubtfulness.

Doubt speaks with condemnation, not with the certainty of a goddess. Browne.

DUBITABLE. adj. [from dubito, Lat.] Doubtful; uncertain; what may be doubted.

DUBITATION. n. s. [dubitation, Lat.] The act of doubting; doubt.
Many of the ancients denied the antipodes; but the experience of our enlarged navigation can now assert them beyond all dubitation.

Doubitation may be called a negative perception; that is, when I perceive that what I see is not what I would see. Great.

DUCAL. adj. [from duke.] Pertaining to a duke, as a ducal coronet.

DUCAT. n. s. [from ducat.] A coin struck by dukes; in silver, valued at about four shillings and six-pence; in gold, at nine shillings and six-pence.

I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand ducats. Shak.

There was one that had not a den of debt; it was reported where his creditors were, that he was dead; one said, he hath carried five hundred hundred pieces of mine into the other world. Bacon.

DUCKE, n. s. [from duck.] To dip, to dip, to dip.

1. A water-fowl, both wild and tame.
The ducks, that heard the proclamation cried,
And fear'd a prosecution might betide,
Fell twenty mile from town their voyage take,
Observe in rushes of the liquid lake. Dryden.

Grubs, if you find your kind subject, turn ducks into it. Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. A word of endearment, or fondness.
Will you buy any tape or lace for your cap.
My dainty duck, my dear a's. Shak. Winter's Tale.

3. A declaration of the head; so called from the frequent action of a duck in the water.
Duck, shepherds, back; enough your play.
Till next sunny holyday.
Here be without duck or nod,
Other trippings to be trod.
Of lighter fuses, and such court guise
As mercury did first devise. Milton.

4. A stone thrown obliquely on the water, so as to strike it and rebound.
Neither cross and pile, nor ducks and drakes,
Are quite so ancient as handy-fades. Arbuthnot and Pope.

To DUCK. r. n. [from the noun.]
1. To dive under water as a duck.

The varlet saw, when to the Good he came,
How without stop or stay he fiercely leapt;
And deep himself he dived in the same,
That in the lake his lofty crest was steep.

Fairy Queen.

Let the laboured bark climb hills of seas
Olympus high, and duck again so low
As he'll from heaven. Shakespeare. Othello.

Thou art wickedly devout;
In Tiber ducking thrice by break of day. Dryden.

2. To drop down the head, as a duck.

As some raw beef goth sour in a bowl
When at a skirmish first he beares
The bullets whistling round his ears.

Will duck his head aside, will start,
And feel a trembling at his heart. Swift.

DUCES. n. s. [from ducem.]
The water of the sea, which formerly covered it, was in time exhausted and dried up by the sun. Homer.

Vol. I.
2. To bow low; to cringe. In Scottish dük, or jük, to make obeisance, is still used.

I cannot flatter and look fair.

Snoise in men's faces, smooth, deceitive, and con.

Duck with Fren French nods, and phisy ashamed. Shak.

The learned paste.

Duck to the golden fool. Shakesh. Timon.

To DUCK. v. a. To put under water.

Ducker. n. s. [from duck.]

1. A diver.

Duckingstool. n. s. [duck and stool.]

A chair in which scolds are tied, and put under water.

She in the duckingstool should take her seat,

Drest like herself in a great chair of state. Dornet.

Reclaim the obstinately unprovable and virulent women, and make the duckingstool more useful.

Addison's Freethinker.

Duckleeged. adj. [from duck and leg.]

Short legged.

Duckleg'd, short waisted, such a dwarf she is,

That as a head for a hat, and a leg for an under, she can.

Ducking. n. s. [from duck.]

A young duck; the brood of the duck.

Duckings, though hatched and led by a hen, if she brings them to the brink of a river or pond, presently leave her, and in they go.

Rain on the Creation.

Ev'ry morrow

Amid the duckings lies her vast tracery. Cary's Past.

Duckmeat. n. s. [duck and meat; lenz palustris.]

A common plant growing in standing waters.

To Duckoy. v. a. [mistaken for decoy;

the decoy being commonly practised upon ducks, produced the error.]

To entice a snare.

This fish hath a slender membranous string, which he projects and draws in at pleasure, as a serpent dith his tongue: with this he decoys little fishes, and preys upon them. Grew.

Ducoy. n. s. Any means of enticing and ensnaring.

Seducers have found it the most compendious way to their designs, to lead captive silly women, and make them the ducks to their whole family.

Denny of Piety.

Duckfoot. n. s. Black snakeroot, or Mayapple.

Duckweed. n. s. [duck and weed.]

The same with duckmeat.

That we call duckweed hath a leaf no bigger than a thyme leaf, but of a fresher green; and paxted forth a little string into the water, far from the bottom.

Duct. n. s. [dactus, Lat.]

1. Guidance; direction.

This doctrine, by fastening all our actions by a fatal decree at the foot of God's chair, leaves nothing to us but only to obey our fate, to follow the duct of the stars, or necessity of those iron chains which we are bound in.

2. A passage through which any thing is conducted: a term chiefly used by anatomists.

A duct from each of those cells ran into the root of the tongue, where both joined together, and passed forward in one common duct to the tip of it. Addison's Spectator.

It was observed that the chyle, in the thoracic duct, retained the original taste of the aliment. Arbutnot on Minervas.

Ductile. adj. [dactilis, Lat.]

1. Flexible; pliable.

Thick woods and gloomy night

Conceal the path, the spider from human sight.

One bough it bears; but wound'rous to behold!

The ductile wind and leaves of radiant gold.

Dryden's Aeed.

2. Easy to be drawn out into length, or extended.

All bodies ductile and tensile, as metals, that will be drawn into wires; wood and tow, that will be drawn into yarn or thread, have the appetite of not discontinuing strong.

Gold, as it is the purest, so is the softest and most ductile, of all metals. Dryden.

3. Tactile; obsequious; complying; yielding.

He generous thoughts instills

Of true nobility; forms their ductile minds

To human virtues.

Their design these leaders cannot desire a more ductile and easy people to work upon. Addis. Prec.

Ductility. n. s. [from ductile.]

1. Quality of suffering extension; flexibility.

Yellow colour and ductility are properties of gold: they belong to all gold, but not only to gold; for safron is also yellow, and lead is ductile. Vatt's Logick.

2. Obsequiousness; compliance.

Dudgeon. n. s. [dulcich, Germ.]

1. A small daggar.

It was a servile dudgeon,

Either for fighting or for duelling. Hudibras.

2. Malice; sullen malignant; ill will.

Civil dudgeon first grew high,

And men fell out they knew not why. Hudibras.

The cockp got this little in dudgeon. L'Estr.

Due. adj. The participle passive of over. [dë, Fr.]

1. Owed; that which any one has a right to demand in consideration of a compact, or for any other reason.

There is due from the judge to the advocate some commendation and gracing, where causes are well handled and fair pleaded. There is likewise due to the public a civil reprobaton of advocates, where there appear cannot, gross, neglect, or slight information.

Bacon.

A due reward and usefulness are but the due reward of innocence of me. More's Divine Dialogues.

A present blessing upon our faithful is neither originally due from God's justice, nor becomes due to us from his veracity.

There is a respect due to mankind, which should incline every of men to follow innocent customs. Watts.

2. Proper; fit; appropriate.

Opportunity may be taken to excite, in persons attending on such solemnities, a due sense of the vanity of earthly satisfactions. Atterbury.

3. Exact; without deviation.

You might see him come towards me beating the ground in so due time, as no dancer can observe that measure. Sidney.

And Eve were due at her hour prepared For dinner savoury fruits. Milton.

4. Consequent to; occasioned or affected by. Proper, but not usual.

The motion of the city drops may be in part due to some partial solution made by the various spirit, which may tamale them to and fro. Boyle.

Due. adv. [from the adjective.]

Exactly; directly; duly. The course is due east, or due west.

Due west; to the Pontick sea,

Whose icy current, and compulsive course,

No'er feels returning ebb, but keepeth on To the Frapolst and the Hellespont. Shak. Oth.

Due. n. s. [from the adjective.]

1. That which belongs to one; that which may be justly claimed.

My due from thee is this imperial crown,

Which, as immediate from thy place and blood, Derives itself to me. Shakesp.

The son of Duncan,

From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,

Thou better know'st

Effects of courtesy, due and greatness.

Thy half a' th kingdom thou hast not forgot,

Wherein I thee entitl'd. Shakesp. King Lear.

The due of him in no point want. Shaks. Cymb.

I take this garden not as given by thee,

But as my merit and my beauty's due. Dryden.

No popular assembly ever knew, or proposed, or declared, what should be power was their due. Swift.

2. Right; just title.

The key of this infernal pit by due,

And by command of heavens all-powerful king.

Milton's Par. lost.

3. Whatever custom or law requires to be done.

Befriend

Us, thy vow'd priests, till outmost end

Of all thy due be done, and none left out. Milton.

They pay the dead his annual dues. Dryden.

4. Custom; tribute; exactions; legal or customary perquisites.

In respect of the exorbitant dues that are paid at most other ports, this deservedly retains the name of free. Addison.

To Due. v. a. [from the noun.]

To pay as due; perhaps for endow. It is perhaps only in this single passage.

This is the latest glory of his praise,

That I thy enemy due thee withal. Shakesp.

Duel. n. s. [duellem, Lat.]

A combat between two; a single fight.

In many armies, if the matter should be tried by duel between two champions, the victory should go on the one side; and yet, if it be tried by the gross, go on the other side.

Duck your fight as a duel, or the local wound.

Of head or heel.

Twas I that wrong'd you; you my life have sought;

No duel ever was more justly fought. Walter.

To Due'l. v. n. [from the noun.]

To fight a single combat.

He must, at length, poor man! die daily at home, when here he might so fashionably and genteelly have been duelled or fluxed into another world.

The South.

To be challenging and fighting with a man is called dwelling.

Locke.

To Due'l. v. a. To attack or fight with singly.

Who single

Duell'd their armies rank'd in proud array,

Himself in array, now unequal match

To save himself against a coward arm'd,

At one spear's length. Milton's Agamemnoc.

Duell'. n. s. [from duel.]

A single combatant.

They perhaps begin as single duelers, but then they soon get their troops about them. Dec. of Piety.

Duellist. n. s. [from duel.]

1. A single combatant.

If the king ends the differences, the case will fall out no worse than when two duellists enter the field, where the worsted party hath his sword again, without further hurt.

Henceforth let poets, ere allow'd to write,

Be search'd like duelists before they fight. Dryd.

2. One who professes to study the rules of honour.

His hou'd arms Mung not lik'd; for his first day

Of bearing them in field, he threw'em away;

And hath no honour lost, our duelists say. B. Jon.

Duelllo. n. s. [Ital.] The duel; the rule of duelling.

The gentlemans will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you; he cannot by the duello avoid it. Shakesp.
DUENNA. n. s. [Span.] An old woman kept to guard a young lady.

I felt the ardor of my passion increase as the season advanced, till in the month of July I could no longer doubt that her dissemblance was admitted to the bath, saw her undressed, and the wonder displayed.

Abraham and Pope.

DUG. n. s. [deg gia to give suck, Island.]

1. A pop; a nipple; a teat: spoken of beasts, or in malice or contempt of human beings.

Of her there beard
A thousand young ones, which she daily fed,
Sucking upon her poisonous dugs; each one
Of every shape, yet all unfavoured.
Fair Q.

They are first fed and nourished with the milk of a strange dug.

Raleigh's History.

Then shines the goat, whose bruitish dugs supply
The infant Jove, and nourish his growing pride.

Creech.

2. It seems to have been used formerly of the breast, without reproach. It was a favorite squire that was the source
Of all my sorrow, and of these sad tears;
With whom, from tender dug of common nurse,
At once, I was her milkmaid of an ity.
Fair Q.

D. preter. and part. pass. of dig.

They had often found medals, and pipes of lead, as they dug among the rubbish.

Addison on Italy.

DUKE. n. s. [du: Fr. du, Lat.]. One of the highest order of nobility in England, in rank a nobleman next to the royal family.

The duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him this knight.

Shak. C. Lear. Aunurst, Surrey, and Exeter, must lose the names of duked, their titles, dignities, and whatsoever profits thereby rise.

Dan. Civ. W. Dukedom. n. s. [from duke.]

1. The seigniory or possessions of a duke.

Her brother found a wife,
Where he was last; Prospero his dukedom Is a poor isle.

Shake. Tempest. The cardinal never resigned his purple for the prospect of giving an heir to the dukedom of Tuscany.

Addison.

2. The title or quality of a duke.

DUBBRAINED. adj. [dub and brain.]

Stupid; doltish; foolish.

This arm of mine hath chastis'd
The petty rebel, dubtrain'd Buckingham.

Shake.

DULCET. adj. [dulcis, Lat.]

1. Sweet to the taste; luscious.

From sweet kernels press'd; she tempers dulceet creams; nor these to hold Wants she fit vessels pure.

Milton. 2. Sweet to the ear; harmonious; melodious.

I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song.

Shake. temple. Old Irish.

Rose like an exhalation, with the sound
Of dulcet symphonies, and voices sweet.

Milton.

DULCIFICATION. n. s. [from dulcify.]

The act of sweetening; the act of freeing from acidity, saltiness, or acrimony.

In colochar, the exactest calcination, followed by an elusion of all filth, does not reduce the remaining body into elementary earth; for after the salt of vitriol, if the calcination have been too faint, it is not out of the colochar the residue, not earth, but a mixt body, rich in medicinal virtues.

Boyle.

To DULCIFY. v. a. [dulcifier, Fr.]

To sweeten; to set free from acidity, saltiness, or acrimony of any kind.

A decoction of wild goor, or colchycint, though somewhat bitter, may be tried to the full; for only the outer bark be dulcified into another, by addition of flour or meal.

Brown. I dress'd him with a pledgit, dipp'd in a dulcet, picture of vitriol.

Witsman's Anatomy. Spirit of wine dulcifies spirit of salt; nitre of vitriol have other bad effects.

Abraham and Pope.

DIOLER. n. s. [dulcamella, Skinner.]

A medicinal instrument played by striking the brass wires with little sticks.

Ye hear the sound of the corset, flute, harp, sackbut, psalterie, dulcimer, and all kinds of music.

Dryden, III. 5.

To DULCORATE. v. s. [from dulcis, Lat.]

1. To sweeten.

The ancients, for the dulcorating of fruit, do commend swine's dung above all other dung.

Bac.

2. To make less acrimonious.

To make sweet or pleasant.

Totish mineral, as it is sold in the shops, is a rough medicine; but, being somewhat dulcorated, first procureth vomiting, and then salvation.

Witsman's Anatomy.

DULCINATION. n. s. [from dulcify.]

The act of sweetening.

Malt gathered a sweetness to the taste, which appeareth in the wort: the dulcination of things is worthy to be tried to the full; for that dulcification imparteth a degree to nourishment; and the making of things insalubrius to become alimental, may be an experiment of great profit.

Bacon.

DULCHEAD. n. s. [dull and head.]

A blockhead; a wretch foolish and stupid; a dunce.

This people be fools and dudleads to all good
But subtle, cunning, and bold in any mischance.

Bacon. Dul. n. s. [dull, Welsh; sole, Sax. dol mad, Dut.]

1. Stupid; doltish; blockish; unapprehensive; indolent; slow of understanding.

Such is their evil bap to play upon dull spirited men.

Hooker. He that hath learned no wit by nature, nor art, may complain of gross breeding, or comes of a very dull kind.

Bacon. Sometimes this perception, in some kind of bodies, is far more subtle than the sense; so that the sense is but a dull thing in comparison of it.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Every man, even the dulcast, is thinking more
Than the most eloquent can teach him how to utter.

Dryden.

2. Blunt; obtuse.

Meeting with Time, Slack thing, said I.

Dryden. Thy scy the is dull; whet it, for shame.

Herbert.

3. Unready; awkward.

Gynecia a great while stood still, with a kind of dull amazement, looking steadfastly upon her Sat.

Dryden. O help thou my weak wit, and sharpen my dull tongue.

Bacon. Memory is necessary to all conditions of life, that we are not to fear it should grow dull for want of exercise; if exercise would make it stronger.

Locke.

4. Hebated; not quick.

This people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears dull a wall of hearing.

Matth. XIII. 13.

The princess of Germany had but a dull fear of the greatness of Spurin, upon a general apprehension.

Now that fear is sharpened and pointed.

Bacon. 5. Sad; melancholy.

6. Soggish; heavy; slow of motion.

Thenceforth the waters waxed dull and slow.

And all that drank thereof did faint and feebly grow.

Spranger. 7. Gross; cloying; vile.

She excels each mortal thing.

Upon the dull earth dwelling.

Shake. 8. Not exhilarating; not delightful; as, to make dictionaries is dull work.

To open a volume.

9. Not bright: as, the mirror is dull, the fire is dull.

I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool.

To make the head, reckon, and sigh, and yield To christian intercessors.

Shak. Mer. of Venice.

10. Drowsy; sleepy.

To Dull. v. a. [from the adjective.]

1. To stupefy; to intariate.

So was she dullest with all, that we could see
Near as to hear her speeches, and yet she not perceive the hearers of her lamentations.

Sidney.

Those drugs she has
Will stupey and dull the sense awhile.

Shak. Cymb. 2. To blunt; to obtund.

Borrowing dulls the edge of industry.

Shake. This entrance of the battle did what the courage of the Spaniards, though it dulled their swords.

Bacon. 3. To sadden; to make melancholy.

4. To hebetate; to weaken.

Now forc'd to overflow with brackish tears.

The troubous noise did dull their distressed ears. Spenn. Nothing but more dulled the wits, or taken away the will of children from learning, than care in making of Latin.

Ascham. 5. To damp; to clog.

Prayers were short, as if when thrown out with a sudden quickness, lest that vigilant and erect attention of mind, which in prayer is necessary, should be wasted or dulled through continuance.

Hooker. In bodies, union strengtheneth and cherisheth and natural actions; and, on the other side, weakeneth and dulleseth any violent impression; and even so is it of minds.

Bacon. 6. To make heavy, or slow of motion.

Usury dulls and damps all industries, wherein money would be stirring, if it were not for the slug.

Bacon. 7. To sully brightness.

The breath dulls the mirror.

Bacon. DULLARD. n. s. [from dull.]

A blockhead; a dolt; a stupendous fellow; a dunce.

What will thou now be a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me? Shakes. Cymbeline. Thou must make a dullard of the world;

If they thought the cause of my death were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.

Shake. King Lear. DULLY. adv. [from dull.]

1. Stupidly; dooltishly.

It is not sufficient to imitate nature in every circumstance daily, literally, and meanly; but it becomes a painter to take what is most beautiful.

Dryden's Dunciad.

2. Slowly; sluggishly.

The air, if it be moist, dooth in a degree quench the flame, and howsoever maketh it burn more dully.

Bacon. 3. Not vigorously; not gaily; not brightly; not delightfully.

Not that I think those pantomimes, who vary action with the times,

Are less ingenuous in their art.

Those who do dullass not part.

Hudibras.

DULNESS. n. s. [from dull.]

1. Stupidity; weakness of intellect; indolency; slowness of apprehension.

Nor is the dulness of the scholar to extinguish,

But rather to inflame, the charity of the teacher.

South. 2. Shadwell alone my perfect image bears, Mature in dulness from his tender years.

Dryden.
2. Want of quick perception.
   Nature, by a continual use of any thing, growth to a satiety and dulness either of appetite or working.

3. Drowsiness; inclination to sleep.
   Here cease more questions;
   Th' art inclin'd to sleep. "Tha' is a good dulness, and give it way."
   Shaksp. Tempest.

4. Sluggishness of motion.
5. Dinness; want of lustre.
6. Huntness; want of edge.

DUM. adj. [dum] He was silent; dumb, Gothick; dumb, Sax. dum, Danish; dumb, dut. dull.

1. Mute; incapable of speech.
   It hath pleased himself sometime to unloose the very things even of dumb creatures, and to teach them to plead in their own defence, lest the cruelty of man should persist to afflict them.
   Hooker.

   They speak not a word;
   But like dumb statues or unbreathing stones.
   Ste'd. on no more.
   Shaksp. Rich. III.

   Some positive terms signify a negative idea; hid or detained by a cloud; dumb a denial of speech.
   Witty's Legke.

2. Deprived of speech.
   They sung no more, or only sung his name; Struck dumb, they all adm'd the godlike man.
   Dryden.

3. Mute; not using words.
   He is a proper man's picture; but alas! he can converse with a dumb show.
   "Dumb show." Alc. Merchant of Venice.
   His gentle dummy expression turn'd at length the eye of Eve to mark his play.
   Milton.
   Her humble gestures made the middle plain,
   Dumb eloquence persuading more than speech.
   Ronsconmon.

   For he who covets gain in such excess
   Does by dumb signs himself as much express,
   As if his words at length he show'd his mind.
   Dryden's Journal.

   Nothing is more common than for lovers to complain, relent, languish, despair, and die in dumb show.
   Addison.

4. Silent; refusing to speak.
   The old good ear withstood
   Th' intended treason, and was dumb to blood;
   Till tir'd with endless clamours, and pursu'd
   Of Istanes, he stood, and longer mutter.
   Dryden.

DUMPELL. adj. [dum] Mutely, without words.

DUMNESS. n.s. [dum].

1. Incapacity to speak.
2. Omission of speech; muteness.
   There was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked as they had heard of a word ransomed, or one destroyed.
   Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

   To th' dumness of the gesture
   One night interpret.
   Shak. Timon of Athens.

3. Refusal to speak; silence.
   S. she's; and then my discontent ends,
   And guilty dumbness, witness'd my surprise.
   Dryden.

DUN. n.s. v.a. [from dumb]. To confuse; to strike dumb, a low phrase.
   They had like to have dunned the justice,
   But his clerk cou'd in to his assistance.
   Spectator.

DUMP. n.s. [from dom stupid, dut.]

1. Sorrow; melancholy; sadness.
2. Sing no more, no more,
   Of the dump so dull and heavy.
   The gods of men were ever so,
   Sin. dum, fir the first, Sh. Mark Addo.
   Visit by night your lady's chamber window
   With some sweet consort;
   To their instruments
   Tune a deploring dump: the night's dead silence
   Will well become such sweet complaining grievance.
   Shaksp.

   Funerals with stately pomp;
   March slowly on in solemn dump, Hudibras.
   The squire who fought out bloody storms,
   By future bards be ballot'd into dumb.
   Dryden. Gay's Pastoral.

   Absence of mind; reverence.
   Locke uses dumps singularly.
   This shame dump cause to well-bred people,
   When it carries them away from the company.
   Locke.

DUMPISH. adj. [from dump.]

1. Sad; melancholy; sorrowful.
   New year, forth looking out of Janas' gate,
   Both seem to promise hope of new delight; and bidding an end
   And bidding one just past and good day.
   Shaksp.

   Bids all old thoughts to die in dump sighs.
   Spenser.

   The life which I live at this age is not a dead,
   Dumb, and your life; but cheerful, lively, and pleasant.
   Dryden.

DUMPLING. n.s. [from dump, heaviness.]

1. A sort of pudding.
   Pudding and the dumpling born to pot.
   Dryden.

DUNS. n.s. [dun, Sax. clamor.]

1. To claim a debt with vehemence and importunity.
   Borrow back, and borrow of thy belly;
   They'll never ask thee again.
   I shall be dunning thee every day.
   Dryden.

   Then thou didst not answer their parents, seldom they,
   Without a suit before the tribune pay.
   Dryden.

   I remember what she was won;
   Swift.

2. n.s. [from the verb.]
   A clamorous, importunate, troublesome creditor.
   Thus, while my joyless minutes tedious flow,
   With looks damnable, and silent pace, a dun,
   Horrible monster! hated by gods and men.
   To my aerial lover.
   Philips.

   It grieves my heart to be pulled by the sleeve
   By some rascally dun — Sir, remember my bill.
   Arbriton's John Bull.

DUNC. n.s. [A word of uncertain etymology; perhaps from dump, Dutch, stupid.]

1. A dullard; a dolt; a thick-skull; a stupid, insipid animal.
   Dance at the best, in streets be scarce allow'd
   To tickle, on thy stupid, the crowded crowd.
   Dryden.

   Was Epiphanis so great a charmer to imagine
   That to untrue, in itself, should be directly
   Oppos'd to the law of God.
   Dryden.

   I never knew thine, sing no more
   Without dunce of figure, who had credit enough to give rise to some new word.
   Swift.

DUNG. n.s. [duneg, Sax.]

1. The excrement of animals used to fatten ground.
   For dung, all excrement are the refuse and putrefactions of nourishment.
   Dryden's Nat. Hist. 358

   I judge the likeliest candidate for disfiguring the body of the tree in several places, one above the other; and the filling of the holes with dung,
   Mingled with the medicine; and the watering of the tops of dung with water and infusion of the medicine in dundeg water, once in three or four days.
   Dryden's Nat. Hist.

   For when from herbs the pure part must be win;
   From gross by 'stilling, this is better done
   By despit dungs than by the fire or sun.
   Donne.

   He soon began to think like me,
   And bless his ravish'd eyes to see
   Such order from confusion sprang
   Such guilty talk to end from dung.
   Swift.

   To DUN. v.a. [from the noun.] To manure with dung.
   It was received of old, that dunging of grounds
   When the west wind bloweth, and in the decease
   Of the unprofitable, that it is dunging.
   Dryden.

   There as his dream foretold, a cart he found,
   That carried compost forth to dung the ground.
   Dryden.

DUNCE. n.s. [from duneg, the tower in which prisoners were kept, whence all prisons emanently strong were in time called dungeons.]

1. A close prison.
   Generally spoke of a prison dark or subterraneous.

   Then up he took the slumbered senseless come,
   And ere he could out of his swoon awake,
   To his castle brought with hastly force,
   And in a dungeon deep him threw without remorse.
   Spenser

   We know not that the king of heaven's Breath
   Dung this place our dungeon; not our safe retreat
   Beyond his potent arm. Milton's Par. Lost.

   Now from the north
   Of Norumbega, and the Saco sea,
   Jungers their brazen dung, in ice and snow,
   And snow, and hail, come stormy gust and flaw.
   Milton.

   By imagination, a man in a dungeon is capable of entertaining himself with scenes and landscapes;
   More beautiful than any that can be found in the whole compass of nature.
   Addison.

DUNGFORE. n.s. [dung and forest.] A fork to dungs out from stables.

   Dungfores and paddles are common everywhere.
   Mortimer.

DUNGHILL. n.s. [dung and hill.]

1. An heap or accumulation of dung.
   Perhaps a thousand other worlds, that lie
   Remote from us, and latent in the sky,
   Are lighten'd by his beams, and kindly murst,
   Of which small earthly dung is the worst.
   Dryden.

2. Any situation of meaness.

   The poor be raiest from the dust,
   Ev'n from the dunghill lifts the just.
   Swift.

3. A term of reproach for a man meanly born.

   Out, dunghill! dar's thou beave a noblemans?
   Shaksp.

DUNHI. adj. Sprung from the dumphill; mean; low; base; vile; worthless.

   His dumphill thoughts, which do themselves to do to dirty dress, no higher dare aspire.
   Spenser.
The lymphedects, either dilated or obstructed, exonerate themselves into the foldings, or between the duplicatures of the membranes.

DUR

1. Doubleness; the number of two.

This duplicity was ill contrived to place one head at both extremes, and had been more tolerable to have set three or four at one.

2. Deceit; doubleness of heart or of tongue.

DURABILITY, n. s. [durable, Lat.]

The power of lasting; continuance; endurance.

3. Doubling.

DUPLICATE, adj. [duple, Lat.] Double; one repeated.

1. To be a duplicate. To be an exact repetition of the first number or quantity.

2. To fold together.

DUPLICATE, n.s. From duplicate.

1. A thing exactly like another; an exact repetition.

2. A fold; any thing doubled.

3. A sort of distance or length, the idea of which we got not from the permanent parts of space, but from the fleetly and perpetually passing parts of succession.

4. The act of doubling.

5. A fold; any thing doubled.

6. A kind of duplicity, either dilated or obstructed, exonerate themselves into the foldings, or between the duplicatures of the membranes.

7. A sort of distance or length, the idea of which we got not from the permanent parts of space, but from the fleetly and perpetually passing parts of succession.

8. Of heaven itself to pass from us in an instant, we should find ourselves not much concerned for the attainment of them.

9. Of heaven itself to pass from us in an instant, we should find ourselves not much concerned for the attainment of them.

10. Duplicity was ill contrived to place one head at both extremes, and had been more tolerable to have set three or four at one.

11. A fold; any thing doubled.

12. The duplicatures of the membranes.

DUPLICITY, n. s. [duplicis, Lat.]

1. Doubleness; the number of two.

This duplicity was ill contrived to place one head at both extremes, and had been more tolerable to have set three or four at one.

2. Do not affect duplicities nor triplicities, nor any certain number of parts, in your division of things.

3. DParticles proportion.

Thus, in a rank of geometrical proportions, the first term to the third is said to be in a duplicate ratio of the first to the second, or as its square to the square of the second: so in 2, 4, 8, 16, the ratio of 2 to 8 is a duplicate of that of 2 to 4, or as the square of 2 to the square of 4.

4. Phillips, Harris, &c.

It has been found, that the attraction is almost reciprocally proportional to the distance of the middle of the drop from the concourse of the glasses, viz. reciprocally in a simple proportion, by reason of the spreading of the drop; and its thickness each glass in a larger surface; and again reciprocally in a simple proportion, by reason of the attractions growing stronger within the same quantity of attracting surface. Newton's Opt.

DUPLICATE, n.s. Another correspondent to the first; a second thing of the same kind, as a transcript of a paper.

Nothing is more needful for perfecting the natural history of bodies, than the subjecting them to the fire; to which grave have been reserved duplicatures of the most considerable.

Woodward.

DUPICATATION, n. s. [from duplicate.]

1. The act of doubling.

What great pains had been taken concerning the quadrature of a circle, and the duplicature of a cube, and some other mathematical problems.

2. The act of folding together.

3. A fold; a doubling.

The peristome is a strong membrane, every where double; in the duplicatures of which all the visera of the plants are hid. Wissmann's Bot.

DUPLICATE, n. s. [from duplicate.]

A fold; any thing doubled.
DUSK. To DUSK. v. n. To grow dark; to begin to lose light or brightness; to have lustre diminished.

DU'KILY. adj. [from daskly.] With a tendency to darkness or blackness.

DU'KILSH. adj. [from dusk.] 1. Inclining to darkness; tending to obscurity.
   From his infernal furnace forth he threw
   Huge flames, that dimmed all the heaven's light, Fannel'd in darksmoke, and brimstone thence.
   - Spenser.

2. Tending to blackness; dark-coloured. Sigh is not contented with sudden departures from one extremity to another; therefore rather a dusky tint than an absolute black.
   - Wotton's Architecture.

DU'KILSHLY. adv. [from dusksli.] Cloudily; darkly.

The sawdust burned fair, till part of the candle consumed:
   The dust gathering about the snuff, made the snuff to burn dusky.
   - Bacon's Nat. Hist.

DU'SKY. adj. [from dusk; dushter, Hut.]
1. Tending to darkness; obscure; not luminous.
   Here lies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
   Chock'd with ambition of the meaner sort.
   - Shakespeare.

2. Tending to blackness; dark-coloured; not clear; not bright.
They did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got.
   - Shak.
It is not green, but of a dusky brown colour.
   - Bacon.

DUST. n. s. [sawt, Sax. duust, Erse.]
1. Earth or other matter reduced to small particles.
   The dust
   Should have ascended to the roof of heav'n,
   Rais'd by your populous troops.
   - Shakespeare.

2. The grave; the state of dissolution.
   The aspect, learning, physic, must
   All follow this, and come to dust.
   - Shakespeare. Gorb. 3. Thou.

To DUST. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To free from dust.
2. To sprinkle with dust.

DUSTMAN. n. s. [dust and man.] One whose employment is to carry away the dust.
   The dustman's cart offends thy clothes and eyes, when through the street a cloud of ashes flies.
   - Dryden.

DUSTY. adj. [from dust.]
1. Filled with dust; clouded with dust.
   All our yesterdays had lighted each
   The way to dusty death.
   - Shakespeare.

2. Covered or scattered with dust.
   Even Drudgey himself,
   As at the car he sweeps, or dusty beams
   The palace stone, looks gay.
   - Thomson's Summer.

DUCHESS. n. s. [duchesse, Fr.]
1. The lady of a duke.
   The duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess,
   Will be here.
   - Shakespeare, King Lear.

2. A lady who has the sovereignty of a dukedom.
   A territory
   Which gives title to a duke, or has a dukc for its sovereignty.

DUTCHEY-COURT. n. s. A court wherein all matters appertaining to the duchy of Lancaster are decided by the decree of the chancellor of that court.

DUTIFUL. adj. [from duty.]
1. Obedient; obsequious; respectful to those who have natural or legal authority.
   Great Ancestrals did dutiful care express
   And dutiful not push too far his great success.
   - Dryden.

2. Expressive of respect; giving token of reverence; respectful; reverential.

DUTIFULNESS. n. s. [from dutiful.]
1. Obedience; submission to just authority.
   Piety, or dutifulness to parents, was a most popular virtue among the Romans.

2. Reverence; respect.
   It is a strange kind of civility, and an evil dutifulness in friends and relatives, to suffer him to perish without reproof or medicine, rather than to seem unmannerly to a great sinner.
   - Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

DUTY. n. s. [from dut.]
1. That to which a man is by any natural or legal obligation bound.
   When ye shall have done all these things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

2. Acts or forbearances required by religion or morality. In this sense it has a plural.
   Good my lord,
   You have been true, bred me, lov'd me: I
   Return those duties back, as we right fit;
   Obey you, love you, and must honour you. Shak.

All our duty is set down in our prayers, because in all our duty we have the Divine assistance; and remember that you are bound to do all those duties, the doing of which you have prayed for the Divine assistance.

3. Obedience or submission due to parents, governors, or superiors; loyalty; piety to parents.
   Think't, thou that duty shall have dread to speak,
   When pow'r to that thy bows? To plainness ho.
   - Pope.

4. Act of reverence or respect.

Duty. They both alone,
   Did duty to their lady as became. Fairy Queen.

5. The business of a soldier on guard.
   The regiment did duty there punctually.
   - Milton.

6. The business of war; service.

7. Tax; impost; custom; toll.
   All the wines make their way through several duties and taxes, before they reach the port.
   - Addison.
DWE
DWARF. n. s. [deer, Sax. dwerg, Dut.] 1. A man below the common size of men. Get you gone, you dwarf! You diminishing, of kindling-knot-grass made. Shak. Such dwarfs were some kind of ape. Brow. They, but now who seem'd in bigness to surpass earth's giant sons, more than smallest dwarfs, in narrow rooms. Strong numberless. Milton's Par. Lost.
2. Any animal or plant below its natural bulk. In a delicate plantation of trees, all well grown, fair, and smooth, one dwarf was knotty and crooked, and the rest had it in derision. L'Entr. Saw off the stock in a smooth place; and for dwarf trees, graft them within four fingers in the ground. Mortimer.
3. An attendant on a lady or knight in romances. The champion stout, Effestones dismounted from his courser brave, And to the dwarf awhile his needless spear he gave. Spenser.
4. It is used often by botanists in composition; as, dwarf-cedar, dwarf-honeysuckle.
To DWF. n. s. [from the noun.] To hinder from growing to the natural bulk; to lessen; to make little. It is reported that a good strong canvas, spread over a tree grated low, soon after it put forth, will dwarf it, and make it spread. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The whole sex is in a manner dwarfed, and shrunk into a piece of beauty, that seems almost another species. Addison.
DWAR'FISH adj. [from dwarf.] Below the natural bulk; low; small; little; petty; despicable.
Their dwarfish pages were, As cherubins, all gilt. Shak. Henry VIII. And are you grow so high in his esteem, Because I am so dwarfish and so low? Shakespeare.
This unheard sauciness, and boyish troops, The king doth shun you; and is well prepared To whisht this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms, From out the circle of his territories. Shaks. King John.
A thicket close beside the grove there stood, With briers and branched cock-dung, and dwarf wood. Dryden.
We should have lost oaks and cedars, and other tall and lofty sons of the forest, and have found nothing but dwarf shrubs, and creeping moss, and insipid mushrooms. Bentley.
DWAR'FISHLY adv. [from dwarfish.] Like a dwarf.
DWAR'FISHNESS. adv. [from dwarfish.] Minuteness of stature; littleness.
'Tis no wonder that science hath not outgrown the dwarfishness of its pristine stature, and that the intellectual world is such a microcosm.

To DWAULE. n. a. [splean, Sax. to wander; dwaelen, Dut.] To be delicious; a provincial word mentioned by Janius.
To DWEEL. v. n. preterite dwelt, to dwell. [dwiaa, old Teutonic, is stay, delay; duela, Islandic, to stay, to stand still.]
1. To inhabit; to live in a place; to reside; to have an habitation.
If thy brother that dwelteth by thee be waxen poor, and sold unto thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bond-servant. Lev. xxv. 39. He shall dwell alone, without the camp shall his habitation be. Lev. xxi. 46.
John Haywood and Sir Thomas More, of a parish wherein I was born, dwelt and had possessions. Puchiam.
2. To live in any form of habitation.
Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles. Heb. xi. 9.
3. To be in any state or condition.
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than by destruction dwelt in double joy. Shak.
4. To be suspended with attention; to hang upon with care or fondness.
He in great passion all this white and dead dwelt; More burying his quick eyes her face to view, Than his dull ears to hear what she did tell. Spens.

To DWELL n. a. To inhabit. Not used.
I saw and heard; for we sometimes did dwell this wild, constrain'd by want, come forth To town or village nigh. Milton's Par. Regained.
DWEEL'LER n. s. [from dwelt.] An inhabitant; one that lives in any place. The houses being kept up, did dwelt contrary enforce a dweller; and the proportion of land for occupation being kept up, did of necessity enforce that dweller not to be beggar or cottager, but a man of some substance. Bacon's Hen. VII. Their cries soon waken all the dwellers near; Now murmuring noises rise in every street. Dryden.
DWEEL'LING n. s. [from dwelt.]
1. Habitation; place of residence; abode. His dwelling is low in a valley green, Under the foot of Rauracous mow bire. Fairy Q. Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever. Eze. xxvii. 35. If he have several dwellings, let him sort them, say, what he would entheth in the one he may find in the other. God will deign To visit of the dwellings of just men, Delighted. Milton's Par. Lost.
All dwellings being one, Flood overflow'd them, and with all their pomp Deep under water roll'd a sea cover'd sea, Sea without shore, flood without confine. Milton's Par. Lost.
The living few, and frequent funeral, then Proclaim'd thy wrath on this forsaken place; And now few those who are return'd again, I thy searching judgments to their dwellings trace. Dryden.
The force of fire ascended first on high, And took its dwelling in the vaulted sky. Dryden's Ovid.
DYE. See DIE.
DYING. The participle of die.
1. Expiring; giving up the ghost.
2. Tinging; giving a new colour.
DYNASTY. n. s. [dynastes.] Government; sovereignty.
Some account him fabulous, because he carries up the Egyptian dynasties before the flood, yea, and long before the creation. Hare's Origin of Mankind. Greece was divided into several dynasties, which our authors, as far as they have enumerated under their respective princes.

DYSCHARYIA. n. s. [dyscharyia.] An unequal mixture of elements in the blood or nervous juice; a distemper, when some humour or quality abounds in the blood.

DYSCENT. n. s. [dyssentere.] A looseness, wherein very ill humours flow off by stool, and are also sometimes attended with blood.

Dye. See Dye.
DYING. The participle of die.
1. Expiring; giving up the ghost.
2. Tinging; giving a new colour.
DYNASTY. n. s. [dynastes.] Government; sovereignty.

Some account him fabulous, because he carries up the Egyptian dynasties before the flood, yea, and long before the creation. Hare's Origin of Mankind. Greece was divided into several dynasties, which our authors, as far as they have enumerated under their respective princes.

DYSCHARYIA. n. s. [dyscharyia.] An unequal mixture of elements in the blood or nervous juice; a distemper, when some humour or quality abounds in the blood.

DYSCENT. n. s. [dyssentere.] A looseness, wherein very ill humours flow off by stool, and are also sometimes attended with blood.

To DWAULE. n. a. [splean, Sax. to wander; dwaelen, Dut.] To be delicious; a provincial word mentioned by Janius.
To DWEEL. v. n. preterite dwelt, to dwell. [dwiaa, old Teutonic, is stay, delay; duela, Islandic, to stay, to stand still.]
1. To inhabit; to live in a place; to reside; to have an habitation.
If thy brother that dwelteth by thee be waxen poor, and sold unto thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bond-servant. Lev. xxv. 39. He shall dwell alone, without the camp shall his habitation be. Lev. xiii. 46.
John Haywood and Sir Thomas More, of a parish wherein I was born, dwelt and had possessions. Puchiam.
2. To live in any form of habitation.
Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles. Heb. xi. 9.
3. To be in any state or condition.
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than by destruction dwelt in double joy. Shak.
4. To be suspended with attention; to hang upon with care or fondness.
He in great passion all this white and dead dwelt; More burying his quick eyes her face to view, Than his dull ears to hear what she did tell. Spens.

To DWELL n. a. To inhabit. Not used.
I saw and heard; for we sometimes did dwell this wild, constrain'd by want, come forth To town or village nigh. Milton's Par. Regained.
DWEEL'LER n. s. [from dwelt.] An inhabitant; one that lives in any place. The houses being kept up, did dwelt contrary enforce a dweller; and the proportion of land for occupation being kept up, did of necessity enforce that dweller not to be beggar or cottager, but a man of some substance. Bacon's Hen. VII. Their cries soon waken all the dwellers near; Now murmuring noises rise in every street. Dryden.
DWEEL'LING n. s. [from dwelt.]
1. Habitation; place of residence; abode. His dwelling is low in a valley green, Under the foot of Rauracous mow bire. Fairy Q. Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever. Eze. xxvii. 35. If he have several dwellings, let him sort them, say, what he would entheth in the one he may find in the other. God will deign To visit of the dwellings of just men, Delighted. Milton's Par. Lost.
All dwellings being one, Flood overflow'd them, and with all their pomp Deep under water roll'd a sea cover'd sea, Sea without shore, flood without confine. Milton's Par. Lost.
The living few, and frequent funeral, then Proclaim'd thy wrath on this forsaken place; And now few those who are return'd again, I thy searching judgments to their dwellings trace. Dryden.
The force of fire ascended first on high, And took its dwelling in the vaulted sky. Dryden's Ovid.
DYE. See DIE.
DYING. The participle of die.
1. Expiring; giving up the ghost.
2. Tinging; giving a new colour.
DYNASTY. n. s. [dynastes.] Government; sovereignty.
Some account him fabulous, because he carries up the Egyptian dynasties before the flood, yea, and long before the creation. Hare's Origin of Mankind. Greece was divided into several dynasties, which our authors, as far as they have enumerated under their respective princes.

DYSCHARYIA. n. s. [dyscharyia.] An unequal mixture of elements in the blood or nervous juice; a distemper, when some humour or quality abounds in the blood.

DYSCENT. n. s. [dyssentere.] A looseness, wherein very ill humours flow off by stool, and are also sometimes attended with blood.
EAD

EAG

EAGGER. adj. [eaggr, Sax. aivery, Fr.] 1. Struck with desire; ardently wishing; keenly desirous; vehement in desire; hotly longing.
   Of action eager; intent of thought, The chiefs your honourable danger sought.

EAGLE. n. s. [eagle, L. aquila, Lat. caller, Erse.] 1. A bird of prey, which, as it is reported, renews its age when it grows old. It is also said not to drink at all, like other birds with sharp claws. It is given out, that when an eagle sees its young so well grown as to venture upon flying, it hovers over their nest, and excites them to imitate it, and take their flight; and when it sees them weary, or fearful, it takes them upon its back. Eagles are said to be extremely sharp-sighted, and, when they take flight, spring perpendicularly upward, with their eyes steadily fixed upon the sun.

EAGLE-EYED. adj. [from eagle and eyed.] Sharp-sighted as an eagle.

EAGLEWING. n. s. [eagle and wing.] Sharp-sighted as an eagle.

EAGLE-WINGS. n. s. [eagle and wings.] Sharp-sighted as an eagle.

EAGLENESS. n. s. [from eagerness.] 1. Keenness of desire; ardour of inclination.

EAD. [ead ed.] in the compound, and ending in the simple names, denotes happiness or blessedness. Thus Eadward is a happy preserver; Eadulf, happy assistance; Eadgar, happy power; Eadwin, happy conqueror; which Macarius Eupolomenus, Fausta, Fortunatus, Felicianus, &c. do in some measure resemble. Ead may also in some cases be derived from the Saxon ead, which signifies easy, gentle, mild.

Gib. Camden.
8. Any prominences from a larger body, raised for the sake of holding it.

There are several vessels, which, if you offer to lift by the belly, you cannot stir them; but are soon removed, if you take them by the ears.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

A quitted night-cap with one ear.

Long Way of the World.

A pot without an ear.

9. The spike of corn; that part which contains the seeds.

He delivers to each of them a jewel, made in the figure of an ear of wheat, that they may eat. Later.

The leaves on trees not more

Nor beared ears in fields, nor seeds upon the shore.

Drieden.

From several grains he had sixty stalks, with very large ears, full of large corn.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

10. To be by the Ears.

To fall together by the Ears.

To go together by the Ears.

To fight;

To scuffle; to quarrel.

[In Dutch oorlogen.]

A familiar phrase.

Poor naked man beaten one another with shagged sticks, or daily fell together by the ears at fifty-cars.

More. Fools go together by the ears, to have knaves run away with the stakes.

Estranged.

All Asia now was by the ears,

And gods heat up for volunteers.

Prior.

11. To set by the Ears.

To make strife;

to quarrel: in low language.

A mean rascal sets others together by the ears without fighting himself.

Estranged.

She used to carry tales from one another, till she had set the neighbourhood together by the ears.

Arnhauth.

It is usual to set these poor animals by the ears.

12. EARLESS. adj. [from ear.] Without any ears.

Earless on high stood bashad's Defoe,

And Tutchin flagrant from the scourge below.

Pop.

EARRING. n. s. [ear and ring.]

Jewels set in a ring and worn at the ears; ornament of a woman's ear.

With gold and silver they increase his store,

And gave the precious earings which they wore.

Sedley.

A lady bestowed earings upon a favourite lammy.

Arnhauth.

EARSHOT. n. s. Reach of the ear; space within which words may be heard.

Gomes, stand you out of earshot—I have something to say to your wife in private.

Dryden's Spanish Friar.

EARWAX. n. s. [ear and wax.]

The excrement or exudation which smears the inside of the ear.

The ear being to stand open, because there was some danger that insects might creep in there;

Therefore hath nature forciexed or plastered over the sides of the hole with earwax, to entangle insects.

Boy in the Creation.

EARWIG. n. s. [cape and pizzag, a grub, Sax.]

1. A sheath-winged insect, imagined to creep into the ear.

Himself he on an earwig set.

Yet scarce he on his back could get,

So soft and high he did curvet, Dragyron's Nymphid.

Earwigs and snails seldom infect timber.

Earwig. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Doll never flies to cut her lace,

Or throw cold water in her face,

Because she heard a sudden drum,

Or found an earwig in a plum.

Swift.

2. By way of reproach, a whisperer; a prying informer.

EARWITNESS. n. s. [ear and witness.]

One who attests, or can attest any thing as heard by himself.

All present were earwitnesses, even of each particular laurel of a common indiscretion. Harker.

The histories of mankind, written by eye or ear-witnesses, are built upon this principle. Watt's Leg.

To EAR. f. n. [ear, Lat.] To plow; to till.

One may change my lands some my team, and give me leave to enjoy the crop.

Shaks. All's well that ends well.

Menceres and Menes, form infamous pirates.

Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound.

With rocks of every kind. Shak. Ant. and Cleop.

A rough valley, which neither ear nor soul.

Deuter. Five years, in the which there shall neither be hearing nor harvest.

Gen. viii. 6.

The field of love, with plough of virtue ear'd.

Fairfax.

To EAR. f. n. [ear] To shoot into ears.

EARL. adj. [from ear.] 1. Having ears, or organs of hearing.

2. Having ears, or ripe corn.

The covert of the thrice ear'd field

Saw stately Ceres to her passion yield. Pope's Odyssey.

EARL. n. s. [copl. Sax. coryll. Erse.]

A title of nobility, anciently the highest of this nation, now the third.

Thanes and kinsmen.

Henceforth be earl's, the first that ever Scotsman For such an honour m'd. Shak. Macbeth.

EARL-MARSHAL. n. s. [earl and mar- shal.] He that has chief care of military zelotannics.

The keeling troops through Athens take their way.

The great earl-marshals order their array. Dryden.

EARLDOM. n. s. [from earl.] The seigniory of an earl; the title and dignity of an earl.

The duke of Clarence having married the heir of the earl of Ulster, and by her having all the earldom of Ulster, carefully went about repressing rebels.

Barlow's Sir. of Ireland.

When I am king, claim thou of me.

The earldom of Hereford. Shaksp. Richard III.

EARLINESS. n. s. [from early.]

Quickness of any action with respect to something else:

as, earliness in the morning, the act of arising soon with respect to the sun; earliness of growth, the act of growing up soon in comparison with other things of the same kind.

The next morning, we having striven with the sun's earliness, were beyond the prospect of the highest turrets.

Sidney.

The goodness of the crop is great gain, if the goodness answer the earliness of coming up. Bacon.

EARLY. adj. [ear, Sax. before.] Soon with respect to something else: as, in the morning, with respect to the sun; in time, with respect to creation; in the season, in comparison with other products.

1. am a tainted wether of the flock.

Meatest for death: the weakest kind of fruit drops earlier to the ground, and so let me. Shak.

It is a curiosity to have several fruits upon one tree; and the more when some of them come early, and some come late. Shak.

God made all the world, that he might be worshiped in some parts of the world; and therefore, in the first and most early times of the church, what case did he manifest to have such places erected to his honor? Scal.
EAR

The aymphs, forsaking evry care and spring, Their early fruit and milk-white turtle bring.

Sickness is early old age; it teaches us diffidence in our earthly state, and inspires us with the thoughts of a future.

Oh soul of honour!
Oh early hero! Smith's Phaedra and Hippolytus.

EARLY a.d. [from the adject.] Soon;
betimes.

EARLY with the morn, with crimson ray;
The windows of bright heaven open'd had.

None in more languages can show
Those arts, which you so early know.
Water
The main business and earnest of the world is money, dominion, and power.
L'Estrange.
We shall die in earnest, and it will not become us to live in jest.

EARLILY. adv. [from the adject.] Soon; early; betimes.

EARLIEST. adv. [from the adject.]
1. Warmly; affectionately; zealously; importantly; intensely.

EARLIESTLY. adv. [from the adject.]

EARLILY. adv. [from the adject.]

EARNEST. adj. [earnestly, earnestly.]
1. Ardent in any affection; warm; zealous; importunate.

2. Intent; fixed.

EARNESTLY. adv. [from the adject.]
1. Eagerly; earnestly; seriously; seriously.

2. Solemnly; zeal; seriousness.

EARNESTNESS. n. s. [from the adject.]
1. Earnestness; earnestness; zeal; seriousness.

2. Solemnity; zeal; seriousness.

EARNESTLY. adv. [from the adject.]
1. The element distinct from air, fire, or water; soil; terrene matter.

2. The terraqueous globe; the world.
The country, by reason of its vast caverns and subterraneous fires, has been miserably torn by earthquakes, so that the whole surface is quite changed.

Addison on Italy.

Earthshaking. adj. [earth and shake].

Having power to shake the earth, or to raise earthquakes.

By the earthshaking Neptune's mace,
And Tethys' graven sceptre. Milton.

Now scarce withdrawn the fierce earthshaking pow'rs,
Jove's daughter Pallasha watch'd the far'ning hour;
Back to their caves she bade the winds to fly,
And hush'd the blustering tempests of the sky.

Pope.

Earthworm. n. s. [earth and worm.]

1. A worm bred underground.

Worms are found in snow commonly, like earthworms, and therefore it is not unlikely that it may rise into courts.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Composed or partaking of earth; terre-.

To survey his dead and earthy image.

Shake.

3. Inhabiting the earth; terrestrial.

These earthly spirits black and visous are;
I call up other gods of form more fair. Dryden.

D难以.

4. To relating to land.

Mine is the shipwreck, in a watery strait
And in an earthy, the dark dangerous time. Dryden.

5. Not refined.

Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak;
Lay open to my earthy gross conceptions;
Smother'd in errors, fever, weakly, shallow, weak;
And folded in the meaning of your words deceit. Shak.

Nay, more the mine.

So earthy, as to need the dulce material force Of eyes, or lips, or cheeks. Denham's Sophy.

EASE. n. s. [aie, ase].

1. Quiet; rest; undisturbed tranquillity; not solicitude.

We should not find her half so brave and bold
To lead it to the wars and to the seas.

Darius.

2. Freedom from pain; a neutral state between pain and pleasure.

That which we call ease is only an indolency, or a freedom from pain. L'Estrange.

It is a small crime to wound himself by anguish, of heart, to deprive himself of all the pleasures, or ease, or enjoyments of life? Temple.

3. Rest after labour; intermission of labour.

Give yourselves ease from the fatigue of waiting. Sert.:

4. Facility; not difficulty.

The willing metal will obey the hand,
Following with ease, if favour'd by thy face,
The iron obedient to the cunning sages, as a slave,
If, out of labour can the tree constrain,
And strength of stubborn arms and steel are vain.

Dryden.

5. Unconstraint; freedom from harshness, formality, forced behaviour, or conceits.

True ease in writing comes from art, not chance;
As those move easiest who have learnt to dance.

Pope.

6. At ease. In a state of undisturbed leisure; without pain; without anxiety.

Lucan content with praise, may lie at ease.

In costly grots and marble palaces. Dryden's Ju.

Men of parts and penetration were not likely to dispute at their ease, but were to act according to the result of their debates. Locke.

No body is under an obligation to know every thing; knowledge and science in general is the business only of those who are at ease and leisure. Locke.

To Ease. v. a. [from the noun].

1. To free from pain.

Help and ease children the best you can; but by no means bemoan them. Locke.

2. To assuage; to mitigate; to alleviate.

The weather made our labours easy, now there-

Dydr.

The, though he spake of such medicines as procure sleep, and ease pain, he doth not determine their dose. Athluthon.

Will be for sacrifice our burning ease for

And can our tears reverse his firm decrees? Prior.

3. To relieve from labour, or any thing that offends: with of before the thing.

If ever the gaiting storms we fear,
A song will help the bearer of the Stygian fear;
And that thou may'st not be too late abroad
Sing, and I'll ease thy shoulders of thy load. Dryd. in

I will ease you of these adversities. Jeath. i. 24.

No body feels pain that he wishes not to be eased of, with a desire equal to that pain, and in separable from it. Locke.

EASEFULL. adj. [ease and full].

Quiet; peaceable; fit for rest.

I spy a black, suspicious, threaten'ing cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun;

Ant. he attain his careful western shore. Shak. Henry VI.

EASEMENT. n.s. [from ease].

1. Assistance; support; relief from ex-

He has the advantage of a free lodging, and some other avenues.

2. In law.] A service that one neighbour has of another by charter or prescription, without profit; as a way through his ground, a sink, or such like. Conell.

EASILY. adv. [from easy].

1. Without difficulty.

Sounds move swiftly, and at great distance; but they require a medium well disposed, and their transmission is easily stopped. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

She ask'd the reason of his not;
She ask'd, but with an air and mine
That made it easily foreseen.

She feared too much to know. Prior.

2. To right pain, without disturbance; in tranquillity.

Is it not to him to fence all mankind to con- demn their universal opinions and designs, if, in stead of passing your life as well and easily, you resolve to pass it as ill and as miserable as you can?

Temple.

3. Readily; without reluctance.
EAS

I can easily resign to others the praise of your illustrious family. Druden's Ded. to State of Iona.

Not soon provok'd, she easily forgives; And much she suffers, as she much believes. Prior.

EASINESS. n. s. [from easy.]

1. Freedom from difficulty. Believe me, for these funtumits are not laid With half the easiness that they are rais'd. Ben Jonson.

Easiness and difficulty are relative terms, and relate to some power; and a thing may be difficult to a weak man, which yet may be easy to the same person, when assisted with a greater strength. Tiltsdon.

The seeming easiness of Pindarik verse has made it spread; but it has not been considered.

Druden.

You left a coquest more than half achiev'd, And for whose easiness I almost griev'd. Druden.

This ples, under a colour of friendship to reli- gion, invites men to it by the easiness of the terms it offers. Rogers.

2. Flexibility; compliance; readiness; not opposition; not reluctance. His yelding unto them in one thing might haply put them in hope, that time would breed the like easiness of condescending further unto them. Hooker.

Since the custom of easiness to alter and change laws is so evil, no doubt but to bear a tolerable sore is better than to ventur on a dangerous re- medy. Hooker.

Give to him, and he shall be hungry at your easiness; save his life, but, when you have done, look to your own. South.

The safest way to secure honesty, is to lay the foundations of it early in liberty, and an easiness to part with to others whatever they have or like themselves. Locke.

3. Freedom from constraint; not effort; not formality. Abstruse and mystick thoughts you must express With painful care, but seeming easiness; For truth shews brightest through the plainest dress. Reay.

4. Rest; tranquility; ease; freedom from pain. I think the reason I have assigned hath a great interest in that rest and easiness we enjoy when asleep. Eas.

EAST. n. s. [earth, Sax. heow, Erse.]

1. The quarter where the sun rises; oppo- site to the West. They counting forwars towards the East, did grow 180 degrees to the Portugals eastward. Abbot.

2. The regions in the eastern parts of the world. I would not be the villain that thou thinkest For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp, And the rich East to boot. Shakesp. Macbeth.

The gorous EAST, with richest hand, Pours on her kings barbarick, and gold. Milt.

EASTER. n. s. [earpe, Sax. ooster, Dut.] The day on which the Christian Church commemorates our Saviour's resurrection. Didst thou not fall out with a taylor for wear- ing his new doublit before Easter? Shakesp. Romeo and Juliet.

Victoria's unbrother-like heat towards the Easter churches, in the controversy about Easter, fomented that difference into a storm. Decay of Piety.

EASTERLING. n. s. [from East.]

1. A native of some country eastward to another. He oft in battle vanquished These spoilful, rich, and swarming Easterlings. Spenser.

EASILY. adj. [from East.]

1. Coming from the parts toward the East.
E.B.B

Eatable. n. s. Any thing that may be eaten.
Suit well your eatables to every age.

King's Art of Cookery.

Eater. n. s. [from eat] 1. One that eats anything.
The Caribees and the Canaries, almost all, are eaters of man's flesh. Abbot's Deacryp. of the World. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats.

Thidder his course he bends Through the calm firmament; but up or down, By centrick or eccentric, hard to tell. Milton.

To save appearances: they gird the sphere With centrick, and eccentric, scribbled o'er, Cycle, and epicycle, orb in orb.

E.A.T. adj. [eate, Sax.] Easy; not difficult. An old word.
What ease abroad, 'tis eat do amends.

What works not beauty, man's relenting mind Is eat to move with plaints and shows of woe.

The way was straight and eat. Fairfax.

E.A.TINGHOUSE. n. s. [eat and house.] A house where provisions are sold ready dressed.
An hungry traveller steps into an eatinghouse for his dinner. L'Estrange.

E.AVES. n. s. [eaye, Sax.] The edges of the roof which overhang the house.
Every night he comes With the music of all sorts, and songs composed To her unworthiness: 'tis nothing steads us To chide him from our ears; for he persists, As if his life lay not. Shak. All's well that ends well. His tears run down his beard, like Winter drops From eaves of reeds.

E.B. n. s. [ebbe, ½lloc, Sax. ½bbe, Dut.]
To eavesdrop. To catch what comes from the eaves; in common phrase, to listen under windows.
Eavesdropper. A listener under windows; an insidious listener.
Under our tents I'll play the eavesdropper, To hear if any mean to shriek from me. Shaksp.

E.B.B. n. s. [ebba, ṭ futuristic, Sax. ½bbe, Dut.]
1. The reflux of the tide towards the sea: opposed to flow.
The clear sun on his wide wat'ry glass God's hot, and of the fresh wave largely drew, As after thirst; which made their flowing shrunk From standing lake to tripping ed, that stole With soft feet towards the deep. Milton

The seas at stated times resworn, And shore the laden vessels into port; Then with a gentle ed retire again, And render back their cargo to the main.

Addison on Italy.

2. Decline; decay; waste.
You have already seen all the war, and brought all things to that low ed which you spoke of. Spranger in Ireland.

This tide of man's life, after it once tureen and declineth, ever runneth with a perpetual ed and falling stream, but never floweth again.

Raleigh's History.

E.B.U.

Thus all the treasure of our flowing years, Our ed life of for ever takes away. Ben Jonson.
The greatest age for poetry was that of Augustus Caesar, yet the same passion was then at its lowest ed, and perhaps sculpture was also declining. Dryden.

Near my apartment let him press her be, That I in hourly ed of life may see. Dryden.

What is the heart without it? Is it not this? To shed the slow remains, His last poor ed of blood in your defence. Addison's Cato.

To E.B. r. n. [from the noun.]
1. To flow back towards the sea: opposed to flow.
Though my tide of blood
Had proudly thus in the vessel stood,
Now it doth turn it's ed back to the sea. Shaksp. From the source of the fortune left their shore, And edd much faster than it flowed before. Dryden's Engr.

2. To decline; to decay; to waste.
Well, I am standing water:
— I'll teach you how to flow.
— Do so: to ed.

Hereof Tor is instructs me. Shaksp. Tempest. Or, be ed? the snuffing waves decay! For ever lovely streams! — Fairfax.

EBEN. n. s. [cenus, Lat.] A hard, heavy, black, valuable wood. Edmund.

ECB. n. s. [ebr抓住, Lat.] Drunkennesse; intoxication from strong liquors. Bohned.

EBULLITION. n. s. [ebullio, Lat.]
1. The act of boiling up with heat.
2. Any intense motion.
The dissolution of gold and silver disagree; so that in their mixture there is great ebullition, darkness, and, in the end, a precipitation of a black powder. Bacon.

Iron, in aqua fortis, will fall into ebullition with noise and emission; as also a flame and fuming exhalation, caused from the combustion of the sulphur of iron with the acid and nitrous spirits of aqua fortis. Brown's Virgile Examin.

3. That struggling or effervescence which arises from the mingling together any alkalized and acid liquor, an instability, violent motion of the parts of a fluid, occasioned by the struggling of particles of different properties.

Quinby.

When aqua fortis, or spirit of vitriol, poured upon filings of iron, dissolves the filings with a great heat and ebullition, is not the heat and ebullition produced by a violent motion of the parts of the fluid, and does not their motion argue, that the acid parts of the liquor rush towards the parts of the metal with violence, and run forcibly into its pores, till they get between its outward particles and the main mass of the metal? Quinby.

A violent cold, as well as heat, may be produced by this ebullition, which was shock, or any pure volatile alkali, dissolved in water, be mixed with an acid, an ebullition, with a greater degree of cold, will cause. Arbutnot on Alcmene.
ECHINUS. n. s. [Lat.] A hedgehog.

ECHO. n. s. [Gr. ; echo, Lat.] 1. Echo was supposed to have been once a nymph, who piped into a sound for love of Narcissus.

2. The return or perception of any sound.

3. The sound returned.

4. This term is used by modern architects in cornices of the Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite orders; and generally set next to the abacus, being carved with authors, arts, and oval medallions.

ECHO. v. n. To resound; to give the repercussion of a voice.

ECLIPSE. n. s. From εἴκλαπησ. The eclipse of a sun or moon.

1. An eclipse of the luminaries of heaven; the sun is eclipsed by the intervention of the moon; the moon by the interposition of the earth. The word originally signifies departure from the place, to which Milton alludes.

ECLIPSED. adj. [εἴκλαπθεν.] Selecting; chusing at will.

ECLIPSE. n. s. [εἴκλαπις.] A form of medicine made by the incorporation of oils with syrups, and which is to be taken upon a liquorice stick.

ECLIPSE. v. a. [from the noun.] To dark'en a luminary.

To ECHO. v. a. To send back a voice; to return what has been uttered.

ECONOMY. n. s. [εκονόμα.] A great circle of the sphere, supposed to be drawn through the middle of the zodiac, and making an angle with the Equinoctial, in the points of Aries and Libra, of 20° 30', which is the sun's greatest declination. This is by some called via solis, or the way of the sun, because the sun, in its annual motion, never deviates from this line. This line is drawn on the globe: but in the new astronomy the Eclipse is that path among the fixed stars, which the earth appears to describe. As an eye placed in the sun, as in its annual motion it runs round the sun from West to East. If you suppose this circle to be divided into twelve equal parts, they will be the twelve signs.

All stars that have their distance from the Eclipse northwards not more than twenty-three degrees and a half, may, in progression of time, have occlusion southward, and move beyond the equator.

The terraqueous globe had the same site and position, in respect of the sun, that it now hath: its axis was not parallel to that of the Eclipse, but inclined in like manner as it is at present.

You must conceive an imaginary plane, which passing through the centre of the sun and the earth,這正義 its own axis as far as the permanent: this plane is called the Eclipse, and in this the centre of the earth is perpetually carried, without the least deviation.

ECLIPSED. adj. Described by the eclipse line.

ECONOMY. v. a. [εκονομάται.] This word is often written, from its derivation, economy; but a being no diphthong in English, it is placed here with the authorities for different orthography.

1. The management of a family; the government of a household.

By St. Paul's economy the heir differs nothing from a servant, while he is in his minority; so a servant should not differ from a child in the substantial part.

2. Distribution of expense.

3. Frugality; discretion of expense; laudable parsimony.

ECONOMY. n. s. [εκονομα. This word is often written, from its derivation, economy; but a being no diphthong in English, it is placed here with the authorities for different orthography.

1. The management of a family; the government of a household.

By St. Paul's economy the heir differs nothing from a servant, while he is in his minority; so a servant should not differ from a child in the substantial part.

2. Distribution of expense.

3. Frugality; discretion of expense; laudable parsimony.

I have no other notion of economy, than that it is the parent of liberty and ease. Swift to Bolingbroke.

4. Disposition of things; regulation.

All the divine and infinitely wise ways of economy that God could use towards a rational creature, oblige mankind to that course of living which is most agreeable to our nature.

5. The disposition or arrangement of any work.

In the Greek poets, as in Plautus, we see the economy and disposition of poems better observed than in Terence.

If this economy must be observed in the minutest parts of an epic poem, what soul, though sent into the world with great advantages of nature.

ECS
cultivated with the liberal arts and sciences, can be sufficient to inform the body of so great a work?
Dryden's Delicia, to the Enrild.

System of matter; distribution of everything active or passive to its proper place.

These the noisier parts, the good retail. Blacken.

ECONOMIC. adj. [from economy.]

1. Pertaining to the regulation of a household.
Her quickening pow'r in every living part,

Doth as a nurse, or as a mother care;

And doth employ her economic art,

And busy care, her household to preserve.

In common affairs, having proposed the government of a family, we consider the proper means to effect it.

Edwards.

2. Frugal.
Some are so plainly economical, as e'en to desire that the seat be well watered, and well swelled.

Watson's Architecture.

ECPRHRACKTS. n. s. [see eff rae].
Such medicines as render rough humours more thin, so as to promote their discharge.

Procure the blood a free course, ventilation, and transpiration, by suitable purges and ephracticks medicines.

Harvey.

ECTASY. n. s. [hystea].
Any passion by which the thoughts are absorbed, and in which the mind is for a time lost.

To follow them swiftly,

And hinder them from what this ecstasy

May now provoke them to.

Shakesp. Tempest.

Tony.

No longer joy there, but an ecstasy.

Sucking.

Whether we call ecstasy be not dreaming with our eyes open, I leave to be examined.

Leche.

2. Excessive joy; rapture.

O love, be moderate! allay this ecstasy! Shaks.

The religious pleasure of a well-disposed mind moves gently, and therefore constantly; it does not affect the body and ecstasy but is like the pleasure of health, still and sober.

South.

Each delighted, and delighting, gives

The pleasing reverses which it receives.

Prior.

A pleasure, which no language can express;

An ecstasy that mothers only feel,

Plays round the heart.

Philip's Distress Mother.

3. Enthusiasm; excessive elevation and absorption of the mind.
He bow'd me well, and oft would beck me sing;

Which did I do, he on the tender grass

Would sit, and basken even to ecstasy.

Milton.

4. Excessive grief or anxiety. This is not now used.

Signs and groans, and shrieks that rend the air,

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems

A modern measure.

Shakesp. Macbeth.

Better be the dead,

Than on the torture of the mind to lie

In restless ecstasies.

Shakesp. Macbeth.

5. Madness; distraction. This sense is not now in use.

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled out of tune, and harsh,

That unison of soul, and feature of blown youth,

Blasted with ecstasy.

Shakesp. Hamlet.

ECSATISED. adj. [from ecstasy.]

Revish'd; filled with enthusiasm.

These are as common to the inanimate things as to the most ecstasied soul upon earth.

Norra.

ECSATICAL. adj. [see ekaalv].

1. Ravished; rapturous; elevated beyond the usual bounds of nature.

There doth my soul in holy vision sit,

In pensive trance, and anguish, and ecstasis.

Milton.

When one of them, after an ecstastical manner, fell down before an angel, he was severely rebuked,

And hidden to worship God.

Stillingfleet.

In trance ecstastik may they range, as bright clouds descend,

And angels watch the round.

Pope.

2. Raised to the highest degree of joy.

To gain Poesieusin one employ's his schemes;

One grasps a C ecrops in ecstastick dream.

Pope.

3. Tending to external objects. This sense is, I think, only to be found once, though agreeable enough to the d rivation.

I find in me a great deal of ecstastical love, which continually carries me out to good without my self.

Norrington.

ECTYPE. n. s. [scritto].
A copy.

The complex ideas of substances are ecotypes, copies, but not perfect were; not adequate copies.

Ecureil. n. s. [Fr. ecqueus, Lat.]
A place covered for the lodging or housing of horses.

Eduacius. adj. [célare, Lat.]
Eating; voracious; devouring; predatory; ravenous; rapacious; greedy.

Ecaditas. n. s. [see ecaditas].
Voraciously; greediness; rapacity.

The wolf is a beast of great edacity, and digestion; it may be the parts of him that confound the hores.

Bacon.

To EDDER. v. a. [probably from edge.]
To bind or interweave a fence. Not in use.

To add strength to the heddle, edder it; which is, to bind the top of the stakes with some small bobs on each side.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

EDDER. n. s. [from the verb.]
Such fencewood as is commonly put upon the top of fences. Not in use.

In hopping and falling, save edder and stake.

These hedges, as wealdeth, to mind or not to make.

Tusser.

EDDY. n. s. [ed backward, again, and e water, Sax.]
1. The water that by some repercussion, or opposite wind, runs contrary to the main stream.

My prayers as a bullrush upon a stream; if they sink not, 'tis because they are bound up by the strength of the current, which supports their lightness; but they are carried round again, and return on the eddy where they first began.

Dryden.

2. Whirlpool; circular motion.

The wild waves master'd him, and suck'd him in,

And swelling eddies dimple on the main.

Dresden.

So, where our wide Nundum wasted extends,

Suddenly impetuous hurricanes descend,

Wheels through the air, in circling eddies play,

Tear up the sands, and sweep whole plains away.

Addison's Cato.

EDDY. adj. Whirling; moving circularly.

And chaff with eddy winds is whirl'd around,

And dancing leaves are lifted from the ground.

Dryden's Virgil.

EDMATEOS. adj. [see edyma].
Swelling; full of humours; commonly written oedematous.

A soreness obstructing the glands may be watery, edematous, and chilinous, according to the viscosity of the humour.

Arbuthnot.

EDENTED. adj. [dentatus, Lat.] Deprived of teeth.

Dict.

EDGE. n. s. [cège, Sax.]
1. The thin or cutting part of a blade.

Seize upon File; give to the edge o' the sword.

His wife, his babies.

Shakesp. Macbeth.

2. A narrow part rising from a broader.

So narrow their ground they've, and then plow it upon an edge.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

3. Brink; margin; extremity.

The rives which pass very near to the edge of any body, are bent a little by the action of the buoy.

We have, for many years, walked upon the edge of a precipice, while nothing but the slender thread of human life has held us from sinking into endless misery.

Rogers.

Yes, the last pen for freedom let me draw.

When truth stands trembling on the edge of the law.

Pope.

4. Sharpness of mind; proper disposition for action or operation; intenseness of desire.

Give him a further edge,

And drive his purpose into these delights.

Shakesp. Hamlet.

But when long time the wretches thoughts return'd

When want had set an edge upon their mind,

Then various cares their working thoughts employed.

And that which each invented, all enjoy'd.

Creech's Maioli.

Silence and solitude set an edge to the genius, and cause a greater application.

Dryden. Differency.

5. Keenness; temperament of temper.

Alate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord!

That would reduce these bloody days again.

Shakesp. Rich. III.

6. To set Teeth on Edge. To cause a tingling uneasiness in the teeth.

A harsh grating tune setteth the teeth on edge.

Boccaccio.

To EDGE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To sharpen; to enable to cut.

There sat she rolling her altaring eyes,

To edge her champion's sword, and urge o'er wing.

Dryden.

2. To furnish with an edge.

I fell'd a long a mane of bearded face,

His limbs all cover'd with a shining case;

So wond'rous hard, and so secure of wound.

It made my sword, though edg'd with flint, redoubled.

Dryden.

I rid over haging hills, whose tops were edge'd with groves, and whose feet were watered with winding rivers.

Pope.

4. To exasperate; to embitter.

By such reasons the simple were blind, and the malicious edge.

Hayward.

He was indigent and low in money, which perhaps might have a little edge his despairation.

Wotton's Life of D. of Buckingham.

6. To put forward beyond a line.

Edging by degrees their cloaths forwards, they were in a little time got close up to one another.

Locke.

To EDGE. v. n. [perhaps from es backward, Sax.] To move forward against any power; going close upon a wind, as if upon its skirts or border, and so sailing slow.

I must edge upon a point of wind.

And make slow way.

Dryden's C PIEWART.

EDGED. participial adj. [from edge.]

Sharp: not blunt.

Wind that subsile or edged quantities do prevail over blunt ones.

Digby on Botany.

EDGING. n. s. [from edge.]
1. What is added to any thing by way of ornament.
EDIF.

The girdark which I wore for you to wear,
And bord'rd with a ros'ry edging round.
Dryden.
A woman branches out into a long dissertation upon the edging of her Petticoat.
Addison's Spect.

2. A narrow lace.

EDGELESS. adj. [from edge.] Blunt; obtuse; unable to cut.

To-mor-o-w in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edges sword; despat and die.
They are edgeless weapons it hath to encounter.
Decy of Pity.

EDGETOOL. n.s. [edge and tool.] A tool made sharp to cut.
There must be no playing with things sacred,
Now felling with edged tools.
L' Estrange.

Nurses from their hands keep edged tools. Dorset.
I shall exercise upon steel, and its several sorts; and what sort is fittest for edged tools, for springs.
Mason.

EDGewise. adv. [edge and wise.] With the edge put into any particular direction.
Should the flat side be objected to the stream, it would soon be turned edgeth by the force of edging.
Bagot.

EDIBLE. adj. [from edo, Lat.] Fit to be eaten; fit for food.
Some flesh is not edible, as horses and dogs. Bar. II. 24.
Wheat and barley, and any seeds, and vegetables, are made either edible or quatable by man's art and industry.
More against Atheism.
Some of the fungus kind, gathered for edible measure, have produced a deficiency of breathings.
Arbuthnot.
The edible creation decks the board.
Prior.

EDICT. n.s. [editum, Lat.] A proclamation or tend of pronouncement; a law promulgated.
When an absolute monarch commanded his subjects that which seemed good in his own discretion, hath not his edict the force of a law?
Hocker.
The great King of kings,
Hath in the table of his law commanded
That thou shalt do no murder; will you then Spare at his edict, and kill a man?
Drayton.

Severe decrees may keep our tongues in awe,
But to our thoughts what edict can give law?
Dryden.
The ministers are always preaching, and the governors putting out edicts against gaming and fine cloaths.
Addison.

EDIFICATION. n.s. [dificatio, Lat.]
1. The act of building up man in the faith; improvement in holiness.
Our blessed Saviour told us, that we must account for every idle word, not meaning that every word not designed for edification, or less prudent, shall be reckoned for a sin.
Taylor.

2. Improvement; instruction.
Out of these magazines I shall supply the town with what may lead to their edification.
Addison's Guardian.

EDIFICE. n.s. [edificium, Lat.] A fabric; a building; a structure.
My love was like a fair house built on another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice by mistaking the place where I erected it.
Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

God built
So spacious, and his line stretch't out so far,
That man may know he dwells not in his own;
An edifice too large for him to inhabit.
Millon.

The edifice, where all were not to see it, was built Upon their heads and on his own he pull'd it. Mitth.
As Tencall pillars over their original to this country, the are in some way always give them a place in edifices rais'd in Tuscany.
Addition on italy.

He must be an idiot that cannot discern more strokes of workmanship in the structure of an animal than in the most elegant edifice.
Bentley.

EDIFY. v.s. [from edify.] One that improves or instructs another.
To EDIFY. v.a. [edific, o, Lat.]

1. To build.
There was a holy chapel edified,
Wherein the hermit wont to pray
His holy things each morn and eventide. Spenser.

A lofty temple, and perfumed an altar to thy name.
Chapman.

2. To instruct; to improve.
He who speakest no more than edifyth, is undeservedly reprehended for much speaking.

Men are edified when either their understanding is taught somewhat whereof, in such actions, it behoves all men to consider, or when their hearts are moved with any affiance suitable thereto.

Life is no life, without the blessing of a friendly and an edifying conversation.

He gave, he taught; and edifty'd the more,
Because he shew'd, by proof, 'twas easy to be poor.
Dryden.

3. To teach; to persuade. This is now either obsolete or ludicrous.
You shall hardly edify me, that those nations might not, by the law of nature, have been subdued by any nation that had only policy and useful virtue.

E'DILIE. n.s. [edilia, Lat.] The title of a magistrate in old Rome, whose office seems in some particulars to have resembled that of our justices of peace.
The edile, ho! let him be apprehended.
Shaksp.

EDITION. n.s. [edita, Lat.]
1. Publication of anything, particularly of a book.
This English edition is not so properly a translation, as a new composition upon the same ground.

2. Repudication; generally with some revival or correcting.
These are of the second edition.
Shaksp.
The business of our redemption is to rule over the defaced copy of the creation, to reprint God's image upon the soul, and to set forth nature in a second and a fairer edition.
South.
I cannot go so far as he who published the last edition of Dryden's Fables, Preface.
The Code, composed hastily, was forced to undergo an anemidation, and to come forth in a second edition.
Baker.

EDITOR. n.s. [editor, Lat.] Publisher; he that revises or prepares any work for publication.
When a different reading gives us a different sense, or a new elegance in an author, the editor does very well in taking notice of it. Addis. Speir.
This momentous got into all editions by a mistake of the stage editors. Pope's Notes on Shaksp.

To MAKE TO EDUCATE. v.a. [ducato, Lat.] To breed; to bring up; to instruct youth.
Their young succession all their cares employ; They breed, they brood, instruct and educate.
Addison.

And make provision for the future state. Dryad, Fr.
Education is worse, in proportion to the grandeur of the parents; if the whole world were under one monarch, the heir of that monarch would be the worst educated mortal since the creation.
Swift on Modern Education.

EDUCATION. n.s. [from educate.] Formation of manners in youth; the manner of bringing youth to manhood.
Education and instruction are the means, the one by use, the other by precept, to make our natural faculty of reason both the better and the sooner to judge rightly between truth and error, good and evil.

They have agreed in the necessity of a strict education, which consists in the observance of moral duties.
Swift.

EDUCATE. v.a. [duco, Lat.] To bring out; to extract; to produce from a state of occultation.
That the world was educed out of the power of space, that give as a reason of its original in this language, to grow rich, were to educate money out of the power of the pocket.
Giovanni.

This matter must have lain eternally condered to its beds of earth, were there not this agent to educe it.
Woodward.

The eternal art educes good from ill.

Grafts on this passion our best principle.

Pope.

EDUCATION. n.s. [from educ.] The act of bringing anything into view.

To EDUCATECORATE. v.a. [ducileis, Lat.] To sweeten; a chemical term.

EDUCULATION. n.s. [from edulcorate.] The act of sweetening.

To EEN. v.a. [ecean, ecane, ecan, Sax. eak, Scotch, eck, Frse.]
1. To make bigger by the addition of another piece.
2. To supply any deficiency. See EKE.

Hence endless penance for our fault I pay.
But that redoubled crime, with vengeance new,

EEIL. n.s. [ed, Sax. adel, Ger.] A serpentine slimy fish, that lurks in mud.
Is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin contains the eye? Shaksp.

The Cockney put the edd'r 'th' nasty alive.
Shaksp.

E'EN. adv. Contracted from e'en. See EVEN.

Says the satyr, if you have a trick of blowing hot and cold out of the same mouth, I have e'en done with you.
L' Estrange.

EFF. n.s. Commonly written Eff. A small lizard.

EFFABLE. adj. [effabilis, Lat.] Expressive; utterable.

Diet.

TO E'EFFACE. v.a. [effacer, Fr.]
1. To destroy any thing painted, or carved.
2. To make no more legible or visible; to blot out; to strike out.
Characters on dust, the first breath of wind effaces.

It was ordered, that his name should be effaced out of all public records, and Addison on italy.

Time, I said, may happily efface
That cruel image of the king's disgrace.
Prior.

Oh say it fail'd to polish or refine.
And shunt Shakespeare scarce efface'd a line. Pope.

3. To destroy; to wear away.
Nor our admission shall wear him to disgrace.
Nor length of time our gratitude efface.
Dryd. En.

EFFECT. n.s. [effectus, Lat.]
1. That which is produced by an operating cause.
You may see by her example, in herself were, and of others believed, that neither folly is the cause of vehement love, nor reproach the effect.
Swift.

Ineffect. Ed. Firth.

Effect is the substance produced, or simple idea introduced into any subject, by the exerting of power.
Swift.

We see the pernicious effects of luxury in the ancient Romans, who immediately found themselves poor as soon as this vice get footing among us.
Addison on italy.

2. Consequence; event.
No man, in effect, doth accompany with others, but he learns ere he is aware; some gesture, or word of fashion.
Pope.

To say of a celebrated piece that there are faults in it, is, in effect, to say that the author of it is a dunce.
Addison.

3. Purpose; meaning; general intent.
They spake to her to that effect.

2 Chron.
4. Consequence intended; success; advantage.

Christ is become of no effect unto you. Gal. v. a. He should depart only with a tide, the effect whereof he could not possess of before, he desired it. Clarkenden.

The institution has hitherto proved without effect, as it has abolished both of the most heinous crimes. Prior.

5. Completion; perfection.

Not so worthily to be brought to heretical effect by fortune or necessity, like Ulysses and others, as by one’s own choice and working. Sidley.

Scandalant art shall carve the fair effect, and full achievement oft all the great designs. Prior.

6. Reality; not mere appearance.

In shew, a marvellously indifferently composed senate ecclesiastical was to govern, but in effect one only man should, as the spirit and soul of the residue, do all in all. Hooker.

State and wealth, the business and the crowd, seems at this distance but a darker cloud; and to him, who rightly things esteemeth, No other in effect than what it seems. Denham.

[In the plural.] Goods; moveables. What of this profit?

Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murther! That cannot be, since I am still possesst Of those effects for which I did the murther,
But my crown, mine own ambition, and my green. Shakespeare.

The emperor knew that they could not convey away more of Alcinous’s Spectator.

To EFFECT. t. a. [eficce, Lat.]

1. To bring to pass; to attempt with success; to achieve; to accomplish as an agent.

Being consul, I doubt not t’ effect All that you wish. Ben Jonson.

2. To produce as a cause.

The error of that strength of sulphur put into a purple colour, was effect’d by the vinegar. Boyle on Colours.

Effective. adj. [from effect.] Performable; practicable; feasible.

That a pot full of ashes will still contain as much water as it would without them, is not effectable upon the strictest experiment. Brown’s Fug. Err.

Effective. adj. [from effect.]

1. Having the power to produce effects; efficacious; effectual: with of.

They are not effect of any thing, nor leave no work behind them. Bacon.

If any mystery, rite, or sacrament be effect of any spiritual blessings, then this must more, as having the prerogative and principalitie above every thing else. Bacon.

There is nothing in words and stiles but suitableness, that makes them acceptable and effective. Gower.

2. Operative; active; having the quality of producing effects.

Nor do they speak properly who say that since conscience doth all things; for time is not effect, nor bodies destroyed by it. Brown’s Fug. Err.

3. Producing effects; efficient.

Whosever is an effectual real cause of doing his neighbour wrong is criminal, by what instrument soever he does it. Taylor.

4. Having the power of operation; useful: as, effective men in an army.

Effectively. adv. [from effective.]

Powerfully; with real operation.

This effectively resists the devil, and suffers us to receive no hurt from him. Taylor’s Rule of Liv. Holy.

Effectless. adj. [from effect.]

Without effect; impotent; useless; unmeaning.

It shall clop off my hands; In bootless prayer have I been held up, And they have serv’d me to effectless use. Shakespeare.

Effector. n. s. [effector, Lat.]

1. He that produces any effect; performer.

2. Maker; Creator.

We commemorate the creation, and pay worship to that infinite Being who was the effecter of it. Derham.

Effectual. adj. [eficctual, Fr.]

1. Productive of effects; powerful to a degree adequate to the occasion; operative; efficacious.

The reading of scripture is effectual, as well to lay the first foundation, as to kind degrees of farther perfection, in the fear of God. Hooker.

The communication of thy faith may become effectual, by the acknowledging of all good things. Phil. vi. 6.

2. Veracious; expressive of facts. A sense not in use.

Reprieve my allegation, if you can; Or else conclude my words effectual. Shakespeare.

Effectually. adv. [from effectual.]

In a manner productive of the consequence intended; efficaciously.

Sometimes the sight of the altar, and decent preparations for devotion, may compose and recover the wandering mind more effectually than a sermon. South.

A subject of that vast latitude, that the strength of one man will scarcely be sufficient effectually to carry it on. To EFFECTUATE. v. a. [effectru, Fr.]

To bring to pass; to fulfil.

He found means to acquaint himself with a nobleman, to whom discovering what he was, he found him a fit instrument to effectuate his desire. Sidney.

Effeminacy. n. s. [from effeminate.]

1. Admission of the qualities of a woman; softness; unmanly delicacy; mean submission.

But foul effeminacy held me yok’d Her bond slave: O indignity, O blot To honour and religion! Milton’s Agamites.

2. Lasciviousness; loose pleasure.

So long as idleness is quite shut out from our lives, all the sins of wantonness, softness, and effeminacy are covered. Taylor.

Effeminatis. adj. [effeminatus, Lat.]

1. Having the qualities of a woman; womanish; soft to an unmanly degree; voluptuous; tender; luxurious: of persons.

The king, by his voluptuous life and mean marriage, became effeminis, and less endeavored of honour. Bacon.

2. Resembling the practice of a woman; womanish: of things.

After the slaughter of so many peers, Shall we at last conclude effeminis peace? Shakesp. From man’s effeminis slackness it begins, Who should better hold his place. Milton.

The more effeminis and soft his life, The more his fame to the world doth grow. Dryden.

3. Womanlike; soft without reproach. A sense not in use.

As well we know your tenderness of heart, And gentle, kind, effeminis remorse. Shakespeare.

To EFFEMINATE. v. a. [effeminis, Lat.]

To make womanish; to weaken; to emasculate; to unmans.

When one is sure it will not corrupt or effeminis children’s minds, and make them fond of trifles, I think all things should be contriv’d to their salvation. Locke.

To EFFEMINATE. p. r. To grow womanish; to soften; to melt into weakness.

In a slothful peace both courage will effeminis, and manners corrupt. Pope.
EFF

That they are carried by the manipulation of a rule, is evident; but what that regulating efficiency should be, is not easily determined. Glaucus.

Sinking against conscience has no special productive efficiency of this particular sort of sinning, more than of any other.

South.

A peace will be made; to enlighten the understanding in the truth of Christianity, upon the account of a natural efficiency: a will so disposed, will engage the mind in a severe search.

South.

Gravity does not proceed from the efficiency of any contingent and unstable agents; being entirely owing to the direct concourse of the power of the Author of nature.

Woodward.

Efficient, n. s. [eficio, Lat.]

1. The cause which makes effects to be what they are.

God, which moveth near natural agents as an efficient only, doth otherwise move intellectual creatures, and especially his holy angels. Hooker.

2. He that makes; the effector.

Observations of the order of nature carry the mind up to the admiration of the great efficient of the world.

Efficient, adj. Causing effects; that makes the effect to be what it is. Spence.

Your answering in the final cause, makes me believe you are at a loss for the efficient. Collier.

Collin's Thought.

To EFFIGIATE. v. a. [effigio, Lat.] To form in semblance; to image.

Effigiation, n. s. [from effigiate.] The act of imaging; or forming the resemblance of things or persons. Dicht.

Effigies. n. s. [efigies, Lat. effigy is Effigy. from being in effigy.] Resemblance; image in painting or sculpture; representation; idea.

We behold the species of eloquence in our minds, the effigies or actual image of which we see in the organs of our hearing.

Draper's Discourse, Pref.

Observe those numerous wrang in effigies. Spence.

The gods have sard from the devastating sea. Lat.

Efflorescence. n. s. [effloresce, Lat.]

1. Production of flowers.

Where there is less heat, there the spirit of the plants is digested, and seared from the greazer juice in efflorescence.

Wiser's Surgery.

2. Excrescences in the form of flowers.

Two white sparry incrustations, with efflorescences in form of shrubs, formed by the trickling of water.

Woodward.

3. [In physick.] The breaking out of some humours in the skin, in distempers called exanthematos; as in the measles, and the like.

Quiny.

A wart beginneth in the cutis, and seemeth to be an efflorescence of the serum of the body.

Wiser's Surgery.

Efflorescent, adj. [effloresce, Lat.]

Shooting out in form of flowers. Yellow efflorescent sparry incrustations on stone. Woodward.

Effluence. n. s. [effluo, Lat.] That which issues from some other principle. Bright effluence of a bright essence increase. Milton.

These scintillations are not the ascension of the air upon the collision of a hard bodies, but rather the inflammable effluence discharged from the baches collided.

Brown.

From the bright effluence of his deed They hover that reflected light, With which the lasting lamp they feed, Whose beams dispel the dauns of curious night. Prior.

EffluVia. n. s. [from effluo, Lat.]

Effluvium. n. s. These small particles which are continually descending from the body, and the subtilty of which appears from their being able, a long time together, to produce very sensible effects, without any sensible diminution of the body from whence they arise. Quincy.

If the earth were an electrified body, and the air but the effluvium thereof, we might believe that the earth, and by effluxus, bodies tending towards it, were. Brown.

Neither the earth's diurnal evoluation upon its axis, nor any uniform evoluation of the earth, the air, or atmosphere, can perswade you, that the earth, can produce gravity. Woodward.

If these effluvia, which do upward tend, because less heavy than the air, ascend; Why do they ever from their height retreat, and Why return to seek their central seat? Blackman.

Efflux. n. s. [from effluo, Lat.]

1. The act of flowing out.

Through the copious efflux of matter through the orifice of a deep ulcer, he was reduced to a skeleton. Harvey.

2. Effusion; flow.

The first efflux of man's pietie, after receiving of the faith, was the selling and consecrating their possessions. harmonium.

3. That which flows from something else; emanation.

Prime clearer, light! Of all material beings, first and best! Watts.

Effulgent, adj. [from effluo, Lat.]

1. The act of flowing out.

By effluxion and attraction bodies tend towards the earth.

Brown.

2. That which flows out; effluvium; emanation.

There are some light effluvia of spirit from spirit, when men are one with another; as from body to body.

To EFFORCE. v. a. [efforere, Fr.]

1. To force; to break through by violence. In all that room was nothing to be seen. But huge great iron ceders and coffers strong. All bard'd with double bands, that ne'er could be won. Them to enflorce by violence or wrong. Fairy Quo.

2. To force; to ravish; to violate by force.

Then 'gan her beauty shine as brightest sky. And burnt his beasty heart 'ef forc her chastity. Speer.

3. To strain; to exert with effort or vehemence. This word is not now used.

The palmer bent his car into the noise. To whate'er he called so importantly; again he heard a passionate voice. That bad him come in haste. Speer.

To EFfORM. v. a. [formare, Lat.] To make in any certain manner; to shape; to fashion.

Merciful and gracious, thou gavest us being, raising us from nothing, and efforming us after the own image. Taylor.

Efformation. n. s. [from efforma.] The act of fashioning or giving form to.

Nature begins to set upon her work of efformation. More.

They pretend to sove phenomena, and to give an account of the production and efformation of the universe.

Effort. n. s. [effort, Fr.] Struggle; strain; vehement action; laborious endeavour.

If, after having gained victories, we had made the same efforts as we did, to lossthem, France could not have withstood us.

Addison on the State of the War.

Though the same, with all diffusive joys, But only to a terrible blaze, We prize the stronger effort of his power, And always set the gun above the bow. Pope.

Effusion. n. s. [effusio, Lat.] The act of digging up from the ground; destruction.

He set apart annual sums for the recovery of manuscripts, the effusion of coins, and the procuring of rarities. Arbuthnot.

Effaxable. adj. [effrangible, Fr.] Dreadful; frightful; terrible. A word not used.

Pestilential symptoms declare nothing a proportional efficient of their effaxable nature but arseneal French. Harvey.

Effrontery. n. s. [effronterie, Fr.] Impudence; shamelessness; contempt of reproach.

They could hardly contain themselves within one unworthy act, who had effrontery enough to court or counteract the grace of Charles. Watts.

Others with ignorance and inefficiency have self-admiration and effrontery to set up themselves.

A bold man's effrontery, in company with women, must be owing to his low opinion of them, and his high one of himself. Chatter.

To EFFUSILGE. v. n. [effusilo, Lat.] To send forth lustre or effusion. I know not that this word is used.

The topaz charms the sight. Like the hand of golden yellow streams of light. Savage.

Effulgence. n. s. [effusio, Lat.] Lustre; brightness; purity; splendour.

On thee Impress'd, thy effulgence of his glory abides. Milton.

Thy lustre, highest effulgence, can dispel The clouds of error, and the gloom of hell. Blackman.

Effulgent. adj. [effulgens, Lat.] Shining; bright; luminous.

Now shall the efjulgant emanations fly Through the blue gulph of interposing sky! Blackman.

Looks out effulgent, from amid the flash Of broken clouds. Thomson's Spring.

Effumability. n. s. [fumus, Lat.] The quality of flying away, or vapouring in flames. An useful word, but not adopted.

They seem to declare many things by the smell; or, if I may coin such a word, effumability. Boyle.

To EFFUSE. v. a. [extusus, Lat.] To pour out; to spill; to shed.

He fell, and, deadly pale, Gloom'd out his soul, with gushing blood effus'd. Milton.

At last emerging from his nostrils wide; And gushing mouth, effus'd the bloody tide. Pope's Odyssey.

Effuse. n. s. [from the verb.] Waste; effusion. Not used.

The air hath got into my deadly wounds, And much effusio of blood doth make me faint. Shakesp.
EGR

2. Eminently bad; remarkably vicious.

This is the usual sense.

We may be held to conclude, that these last times, for innocence, pride, and egregious contempt of all good order, are the worst. - Hooker's Preface

Egregious mortifier! Shaksp. Cymbeline.

And hence th' egregious wizard shall foredoom

The head of Louis and the fall of France.

Egregiously.

Egress, n. s. [egresus, Lat.] The power or act of going out of any place; departure.

Gates of burning adamant,

Bard'd over us, prohibit all egress. - Milton.

This water would have been locked up within the earth; and its egress utterly deceived, had the strata of stone and marble remained continuous. - Wood's Nat. Hist.

Egression. n. s. [egressus, Lat.] The act of going out.

The vast number of troops is expressed in the swarms; their tumultuous manner of issuing out of their ships, and the perpetual egression, which seemed without end, are imagined in the bees pouring out. - Pape.

Ecret. n. s. A fowl of the heron kind, with red legs.

Bailey.

Eriot. n. s. [negret, Fr. perhaps from aigre sour.] A species of cherry.

The sour-cherry, which incline more to white, is sweeter than the red; but the eriot is more sour. - Boscawen.

To Ejaculate. v. a. [ejaculat, Lat.] To throw; to shoot; to dart out.

Being rooted so little way in the soil, nothing near so deeply as the quills of fowls, they are the more easily ejaculated. - Green's Maecenas.

The sticky magnet from the center draws.

This strong, though subtle force, through all the parts:

Its active rays, ejaculated thence, irridate all the wide circumference. - Blackmore.

Ejaculation. n. s. [from ejaculate.]

1. The act of darting or throwing out.

There seemeth to be acknowledged, in the act of envy, an ejaculation or irrigation of the eye. - Bacon's Essay.

There is to be observed, in those dissolution which will not easily incorporate, what the effects are; as the edification, the precipitation to the bottom, the ejection towards the top, the suspension in the midst, and the like. - Bacon.

2. A short prayer darted out occasionally, without solemn retirement.

In your dressing let there be ejaculations fitted to the several actions of dressing; as at washing your hands pray God to cleanse your soul from Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

Ejaculatory. adj. [from ejaculate.]

1. Suddenly darted out; uttered in short sentences.

The continuance of this posture might incline to ease and drowsiness; they used it rather upon some short ejaculatory prayers, than in such large devotions. - Duppa's Devotion.

2. Sudden; hasty.

We are not to value ourselves upon the merit of ejaculatory recitations, that take us by fits and starts. - L'Estrange.

To Ejec.t. v. a. [exicte, ejectum, Lat.] To throw out; to cast forth; to void.

Diverse creatures sleep all the Winter; as the bear, the hedge-hog, the bat, and the bee; these all wax fat when they sleep, and egret not. - Bacon's Natural History.

The act of throwing out the digested food at the natural vents.

The animal soul or spirits manage as well their spontaneous actions as the natural or involuntary exertions of digestion, egret, and circulation. - Holte's Origin of Mankind.

Eggs. n. s. [eggs, Sax. ongh, Erse.] 1. That which is laid by feathered and some other animals, from which their young is produced.

An egg was found having him many years at the bottom of a mount, where the earth had somewhat overgrown it; and this egg was come to the hard ness of a stone, and the colours of the white and yolk perfect. - Shaksp.

Eggs are perhaps the highest, most nourishing, and exalted of animal food, and most indigestible. - Arbuthnot.

Egret. v. a. To egret, to egret a. [from egresus.]

Purging out; dispersing.

The North-cast spends its rage; there in summer.

Wharm's the wide air. - Thomson's Spring.

Eght. n. s. [egrea, Sax.] A newt; an eft; a small kind of lizard that lives generally in the water.

Reptiles are beneficial to the places where they are kept, by clearing them of snakes, adders, and efts, upon which they will live. - Morton. Hooch. - Dryden's Homer.

Efts. adv. [e'tt, Sax.] Soon; quickly; speedily; shortly. Obsolete.

Eft through the thick they'rehard one ruddy rash,

With noise whereof he from his lofty head.

Down fell to ground, and creek'd into a bush,

To hide his coward head from dying streaks.

Quite consumed with flame.

The idea is of that eternal maid;

For so at least I have preserved the same,

With hands profane, from being eft thrown. - Dryden.

Eftsoons. adv. [e'st and group.] Soon afterwards; in a short time; again. An obsolete word; formed, as it seems, by the conjunction of two words of the same meaning.

He in their stead sometimes placed Englishmen, who possessed all their lands. - Spencer's State of Ireland.

Eftsoons the nymphs, which now had flowers their fill,

Boum and ha't is to see that silver brood. - Spencer.

The Germanm hath laid the Turks, whereof it was to be thought that new wars should eftsoons ensue. - Kudler's History.

Eftsoons, O sweetheart kind, my love repay,

And all the year shall then be holiday. - Gay's Past. - E. G. [exempli gratia.] For the sake of an instance or example.

Eger. n. s. [See Eager.] An impetuous or irregular flood or tide.

From the peculiar disposition of the earth at the bottom, where the revolutions are made, may arise these efts and flows in some estuaries and rivers; as is observable about Trent and Humber at Earsnest, and about the estuary of Firth of Fowes.

To Egest. v. a. [eger, Lat.] To throw out food at the natural vents.

Our blessed Lord commanded the representation of his death, and sacrifice on the cross, should be made by breaking bread and effusion of wine.

Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

If the flood-gates of heaven were any thing distinct from the forty days rain, their effusion, 'tis likely, was at the same time when the abyss was broken open.

Burton's Theory.

2. Waste; the act of spilling or shedding.

When there was but as yet one only family in the world, no means of instruction, human or divine, could prevent effusion of blood. - Hooker.

Stop effusion of our Christian blood.

And allah, dam a.—Shakesp. Henry VI.

Yet shall be restored, since publick good

For private interest ought not be witheld,

To save th' effusion of any people's blood.

- Dryden's Homer.

3. The act of pouring out words.

Endless and senseless effusions of digested prayers, oftentimes disgrace, in most mancerate manner, the worthiest part of Christian duty towards God.

4. Bounteous donation.

Such great force the grace of Christ had then upon men as, out of that which precious was the vine,

To pour it up.

For the hands of God.

The crocodile of Egypt is the lizard of Italy, and the eft in our country. - Nicholas.

Eght. adv. [e'tt, Sax.] Soon; quickly; speedily; shortly. Obsolete.

Eft through the thick they'rehard one ruddy rash,

With noise whereof he from his lofty head.

Down fell to ground, and creek'd into a bush,

To hide his coward head from dying streaks.

Quite consumed with flame.

The idea is of that eternal maid;

For so at least I have preserved the same,

With hands profane, from being eft thrown. - Dryden.

Eftsoons. adv. [e'st and group.] Soon afterwards; in a short time; again. An obsolete word; formed, as it seems, by the conjunction of two words of the same meaning.

He in their stead sometimes placed Englishmen, who possessed all their lands. - Spencer's State of Ireland.

Eftsoons the nymphs, which now had flowers their fill,

Boum and ha't is to see that silver brood. - Spencer.

The Germanm hath laid the Turks, whereof it was to be thought that new wars should eftsoons ensue. - Kudler's History.

Eftsoons, O sweetheart kind, my love repay,

And all the year shall then be holiday. - Gay's Past. - E. G. [exempli gratia.] For the sake of an instance or example.

Eger. n. s. [See Eager.] An impetuous or irregular flood or tide.

From the peculiar disposition of the earth at the bottom, where the revolutions are made, may arise these efts and flows in some estuaries and rivers; as is observable about Trent and Humber at Earsnest, and about the estuary of Firth of Fowes.

To Egest. v. a. [eger, Lat.] To throw out food at the natural vents.
EIG

Infernal lightning sallys from his throat.
Ejected spurs upon the billows float.

Eighth, [adj. [from eightieth.] The next in order to the seventh and tenth.
Eighthieth. adj. [from eightieth.] The next in order to the seventieth and ninth.

EIGHTIETH. adj. [from eighty.] The next in order to the seventy-ninth and tenth.
Eighty is the sum of ten times eight.

EIGHTSCORE, adj. [eight and score.] Eight times twenty; an hundred and sixty.

Eight times twenty; an hundred and sixty.

Eighty! Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.

Eighty years I have been in the church.
Eighty years I have been in the church.
ELA

It is there elaborately shewn, that patents are good.

ELABORATION. n. s. [from elaborate.] Improvement by successive operations.

To what purpose is there such an apparatus of vessels for the elaboration of the sperm and such a tedious process of generation and nutrition. Ray.

To ELANCE. v. a. [rancer, Fr.] To throw out; to dart; to cast as a dart.

While by unerring hand elanc'd
Another, and another dart, the people
Joyfully repeated it!

Hard and steady, but that once elanc'd, must ever Irreconcile.

To ELAPSE. v. n. [elapsus, L.] To pass away; to glide away; to run out without notice.

There is a decided season, a learning time in youth, which, suffered to elapse, and no foundation laid, seldom curries. Churcias.

ELASTICAL adj. [from b. & L. Latin.] Having elasticity.

ELASTICITY. n. s. [from elastick.] Force in bodies, by which they endeavour to restore themselves to the posture from whence they were displaced by any external force.

A lute-string will bear an hundred weight without rupture; but at the same time cannot exert its elasticity: take away fifty, and immediately it will raise itself from the ground. Arbuthnot.

A fermentation must be excited in some assignable place, which may expand itself by its elastic principle, and break through where it meets with the weakest resistance. — Bentley.

ELATE. adj. [elatus, Lat.] Flushed with success; elevated with prosperity; lofty; haughty.

Oh, thoughtless mortals! ever blind to fate! Too soon deserted, and too soon elate! Pope.

I, of mind elate, and scorning fear, Thus with new taws insult the monster's ear. Pope's Odyssey.

To ELATE. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To elevate with success; to puff up with prosperity. 2. To exult; to heighten. An unusual sense.

Or truth, divinely breaking on his mind, Elates his being, and unfolding his power. Thomson.

ELATERIUM. n. s. [Lat.] An insipiated juice, light, of a friable texture and an acid and pungent taste. It is procured from the fruit of a wild cucum- ber. It is a very violent and rough purge.

ELATION. n. s. [from elate.] Haughtiness proceeding from success; pride of prosperity.

God began to punish this vain elation of mind, by withdrawing his favours Atterbury.

ELBOW. n. s. [elboga, Sax.]
1. The next joint or curvature of the arm below the shoulder.

In some fair evening, on your elbow laid, You dream of triumphs in the rural shade. Pope.

2. Any flexure or angle.

Fruit trees, or vines, set upon a wall between elbows, the branches of stone, ripen more there than upon a plain wall. Bacon.

3. To be at the Elbow. To be near; to be at hand.

Stilt will be come. Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home: Quick, quick; fear nothing, I'll be thy elbow. Shaksp. Othello.

ELBOWCHAIR. n. s. [elbow and chair.]
A chair with arms to support the elbows.

Swans and elbowa chairs, in the operas of D' Albeian, have danced upon the English stage with good success. Gray.

ELBOWROOM. n. s. [elbow and room.]
Room to stretch out the elbows on each side; perfect freedom from confinement. Now my soul hath elbowroom; It would not out at windows nor at doors. Shaksp. 2. H. 3. Dec. 1. Rhymes.

ELBOWS. n. s. [elbow or room.]

To Elbow. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To push with the elbow. One elbow him, one jostles in the hole. Spenser's Faerie Quest. —F. J. Y. 1.

2. To push; to drive to a distance: to encroach upon.

It thrusts and stretches out, And elbows all the kingdom round about. Dryg.

If fortune taketh not for thy boy bohimes, He'll make mad work and elbow out his neighbours. Dryg.

TO ELBOW. v. n. To jut out in angles.

ELD. n. s. [elab, Sax. eld, Scottish.]
1. Old age; decrepitude.

Her heart with joy unwonted i' th' swell'd, As feeling wondrous comfort in her weaker eld. Spenser.

Thy blazed youth

Becomes assuaged, and doth beg the arms Of palp'd eld. Shaksp. Measure for Measure.

He thought it was his due he should not wear, If likewise be some fair one wedded not.

Thereby to wipe away th' infamous blots Of long unseeded head and childless eld. Milton.

2. Old people; persons worn out with years.

They count him of the green-hair'd eld. Champ.

ELDER. adj. The comparative of eld, now corrupted to old. [elab, elabon, Sax.] Surpassing another in years; survivor; having the privileges of primogeniture; opposed to younger.

They bring the companions of younger daugh- ters conforming themselves in attire to their elder sisters. Hooker.

Let still the woman take

An elder than herself; so wears she to him, So sways she level in her husband's heart. Shaksp.

How I firmly an resolv'd, you know;

That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter, Bezer or heave her head to be an elder. Shaksp.

Among the Lacedemonians, the chief magis- trates, as they were, so were they called, elder magistrates. Herod. Eldest.

The elder of his children to come acquire a de- gree of authority among the younger, by the same means the father did among his brothers. Temple.

Fame's high temple stands;

Stupendous pile; not read by mortal hands!

What'ee! proud Rome, or artful Greece beheld, Or elder Babylon, it's frame excelled. Pope.

ELDERS. n. s. [from elder.]
1. Persons whose age gives them a claim to credit and respect.

Rebuke not an elder, but intreat him as a father, and the younger men as brethren. 1 Tim. v. 1. Our elders say.

The blushing youth their virtues awe disclose, And from their seats the reverend elders rise. Sandys.

2. Ancestors.

Says the goose, If it will be no better, c'en one your head as your elders have done before you. L'Estrange.

I lose my patience, and I own it too, When works are consur'd, not as bad, but new:
While, if our elders break all reason's laws,
Those fools demand not pardon, but applause. Pope.

3. Those who are older than others.

Many nations are very superstitious and dilig- ent observers of old customs, which they received by continued tradition from their parents, by recounting of their hard and chronicles, in their songs, and by daily use and example of their elders. Spenser's Ireland. As the board, and in private, it very well becomes children's innocency to pray, and their elders to say Amen. Hooker.

4. Among the Jews. Rulers of the people.

6. [Among Presbyterians.] Laymen introduced into the kirk-potlity in sessions, presbyteries, synods, and assemblies.

Flea-bitten syllog, an assembly brew'd
Of clerks and elders ana; like the rude
Chaos of presbytery, where laymen ride.
With the tune woolpack clergy by their side.
Clerical.

ELDERS. n. s. [elar, Sax. sambucus.]
The name of a tree.

The branches are full of pith, having but little wood; the flowers are monopetalous, divided into several segments, and expand in form of a rose: these, for the most part, collected into an umbel, and are succeeded by soft succulent berries, having three seeds in each. Miller.

Look for thy reward
Amongst the nettles at the elder tree,
Which overladeth the mouth of that same pit.
Shakep.

ELDERSHIP. n.s.[from elder.]
1. Seniority; primogeniture.

The world, while it had scarcity of people, underwent no other dominion than paternity and eldership.

That all should Allhech adore, 'tis true;
But some respect is to my birthright due: My claim to her by eldership I prove.

Dryg. Dryg's Ind. Emp.

Nor were the eldership
Of Assyrians worth our lens of fears,
If Memnon’s interest did not prop his cause. Rowe.

2. Presbytery; ecclesiastical senate; kirk- session.

That controversy sprang up between Beza and Erastus, about the matter of communications: whether there ought to be in all churches an eldership, having power to communicate, and a part of that eldership to be of necessity certain chosen out and set apart from the church. Hooker, Pref.

ELDEST. adj. The superlative of eld, now changed to old. [elab, elabon, elabba, Sax.]

1. The oldest; that has the right of primogeniture.

We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest Malcolm, whom we name hereafter.

The prince of Cumberland. Shakep. Macbeth.
ELE

The mother's and her eldest daughter's grace, it seems, had brib'd him to prolong his visit. Dugald.

2. The person that has lived most years. Eldest parents signifies either the eldest men and women that have had children, or those who have longest had issue. Locke.

ELECAMpane. n. s. [helenium, Lat. ] A plant, named also starwort. Botanists enumerate thirty species of this plant. Miller.

The Germans have a method of candying elec- trum, as they do ginger, to which they prefix it and call it German spice. Hill's Materis Med.

To ELECT, v. a. [electus, Lat. ]

1. To choose for any office or use; to take in preference to others.

Henry his son is chosen king, though young; And Lewis of France, elected first, beguile's Daniel. This prince in gratitude to the people, by whose consent he was chosen, elected a hundred senators out of the communers.

2. In theology.] To select as an object of eternal mercy. Elect. adj. [from the verb. ]

1. Chosen, taken by preference from among others. You have here, lady, And of your choice, these revered fathers, Yea, and the whole elect of the land, who are assembled To plead your cause. Shaks. Hen. VIII.

2. Chosen to an office, not yet in pos- session.

The bishop elect takes the oaths of supremacy, and assumes the name; and then the dean of arches reads and subscribes the sentences. Aylgib's Parergon.

3. [In theology.] Chosen as an object of eternal mercy. A vicious liver, believing that Christ died for none but the elect, shall have attempts made upon him to reform and amend his life. Hammond.

Some have a choice of peculiar grace, Elect above the rest: so is my will. Milton.

ELECTION. n. s. [electio, Lat. ]

1. The act of choosing; the act of selecting one or more from a greater number for any use or office; choice.

If the election of the minister should be commit- ted to several parish, do you think that they would choose the meest? Whittig.

Him, not thy election, But nature necessity, is long. Milton

As charity, is nothing can more increase the lustre and beauty than a prudent election of objects, and a fit application of it to them. Sprunt.

2. The power of choice.

For what is man without a moving mind, Which hath a judging wit, and choosing will? Now if God's power sh' were election bind, Her motions then would cease, and stand all still. Davies.

3. Voluntary preference.

He calls upon the smilers to turn themselves and live by what he has set before us life and death, and referred it to our own election, which we will choose. Roper.

4. Discrimination; distinction; discrimination.

The discovering of these colours cannot be done but out of a very universal knowledge of things which so eleceth men's judgment and election, as it is the less apt to slide into error. Bacon.

In favour to use men with much difference and election is good, for it maketh those preferred more thankful, and the rest more officious. Bacon.

5. [In theology.] The predetermination of God by which any were selected for eternal life. The concept about absolute election to eternal life, some enthusiasts entertaining, have been more curious respecting the mystery of election. Brethren.

6. The ceremony of a publick choice.

I was sorry to hear with what partiality, and popu- lar heat, electors were carried in many places. King Charles.

Since the late dissolution of the club, many persons put up for the next election. Add. Spectator.

ELECTIVE, adj. [from elect.]

1. Regulated or bestowed by election or choice.

I will say positively and resolutely, that it is impossible an elective monarchy should be so free and absolute as an hereditary. Bacon.

The change of their government, from elective to hereditary, has made it seem hitherto of less force, and mitter for action abroad. Temple.

2. Exercising the power of choice.

To talk of compelling a man to be good, is a contradiction; for where there is force, there can be no choice; whereas all moral goodness consisteth in the elective act of the understanding willing. Grew's Cosmologia Serr.

ELECTIVELY, adj. [from elect. ] By choice; with preference of one to another.

How or why that should have such an influence upon the spirits, as to drive them into those modes electively, I am not fortunate enough to dis- cern.

They work not electively, or upon proposing to themselves the objects in question. Great Elec- tor.

Elector. n. s. [from elect. ]

1. He that has a vote in the choice of any officer.

From the new world her silver and her gold Came, like a tempest, to confound the old; Feeding with these the brisk electors Swerved. Altogether she gave us emperors and popes. Haller.

2. A prince who has a voice in the choice of the German emperor.

ELECTORAL. adj. [from elector. ] Having the dignity of an elector.

Electorate. n. s. [from elector. ]

The territory of an elector.

He has a great and powerful king for his soninlaw; and can himself command, when he pleases, the whole strength of an elector in the empire. Addison's Freepholder.

ELECTOR. n. s. [electrum, Lat. ]

1. Amber; which, having the quality when warmed by friction of attracting bodies, gave to one species of attraction the name of electricity, and to the bodies that so attract the epithet electric.

2. A mixed metal.

Change silver plate or vessel into the compound stuff, being a kind of silver elect, and turn the rest into coin. Bacon.

ELECTRICALLY. adj. [from electrom.] See ELECTRIC.

1. Attractive without magnetism; attractive by a peculiar property, supposed once to belong chiefly to amber.

By electric bodies do I conceive not such only as take up light bodies, in which number the ancients only placed jett and amber; but such as, conveniently placed, attract all bodies palpable.

An electrometer. Err. An electrometer body can by friction excite an exhuberance of attraction to sublinit, and yet so potent, as by its emission to cause so sensible diminution of the weight of the electrick body, and to be expanded through a sphere, which diameter is above two feet, and yet to be able to carry up lead, copper, or leadgold, at the distance of above a foot from the electrick body. Newton.

2. Produced by an electrick body.

If that attraction were not rather electrical than magnetic, it was wonderous what Helmont delivered concerning the transfer of electricity: that if a peice of white paper, or a white cloth, or the end of one's finger, be held at about a quarter of an inch from the glass, the electrick vapour, ex- cited by friction, will, by bumping against the white paper, cloth, or finger, be put into such an agitation as to emit light. Newton's Opticks.

ELECTRICITY. n. s. [from electrick. See ELECTRE. ] A property in some bodies, whereby, when rubbed so as to grow warm, they draw little bits of paper, or such substances, to them. Quincy.

Such was the account of electricity, but the industry of the present age, first excited by the experiments of Gray, has discovered in electricity a multitude of philosophical wonders. Bodies electrified by a sphere of glass, turned nimbly round, not only emit flame, but may be fitted with such a quantity of the electric cal vapour, as if discharged at once upon a human body, would endanger life. The force of this va- pour has hitherto appeared instantaneous, persons at both ends of a long chain being seem'd to be struck at once. The philosophers are now undertaking to intercet the stroke of lightning.

ELECTRICITY. n. s. [electrum, Celius Aurel, which is now written elec/try. ] A form of medicine made of powders and fashionable, in the consistency of honey. Electuaries made up with honey or syr- up, when the consistence is too thin, ferment: and when too thick, candy. By both which the ingredients will be altered or impaired. Quincy.

We meet with divers electuaries, which have no ingredient, except sugar, common to any two of them.

Eleemosynary. adj. [from eleemosynarii. ]

1. Living upon alms; depending upon charity. Not used.

It is little better than an absurdity, that the cause should be an eleemosynary for its subsistence to its effects, as a nature posterior to and de- pendent on itself. Glasse's Sequs.

2. Given in charity. This is the present use.

Eleemosynary.

1. Beauty rather soothing than striking; beauty without grandeur; the beauty of propriety not of greatness. St. Augustine, out of a kind of elegance in wri- ting, makes some difference. Raleigh's Hist.

These questions have more propriety, and eleg- ancy, understood of the old world. Burnet.

2. Any thing that pleases by its nicety. In this sense it has a plural.

My compositions in gardening are altogether Pulcinella, and run into the beautiful wideness of nature, without the nicer elegancies of art. Spect.

ELEGANTLY. adv. [from elegant.]

1. Pleading by minutest beauties.

Tribe themselves are elegant in him. Pope.

There may't thou find some elegant retreat.

2. Nice; not coarse; not gross.

Polite with candour, elegant with ease. Pope.

ELEGANT, adj. [elegantus, Lat. ]

1. In such a manner as to please.

Now read with them those organic arts which enable men to discourse and write perpsecuously, elegantly, and according to the finest style of beauty, to love, or lowly. Milton.

In a poem elegantly writ.

2. Neatly; nicely; with minute beauty; with pleasing propriety.

ELE 606
ELEPHANT, adj. [elephas, Lat.]

1. Used in elegies.
2. Pertaining to elegies.
3. Mournful; sorrowful.

Let elegy play the esbatel, and
Soft as the breath of distant ferns. Gay's Trivia.

ELEGY, n. s. [elegius, Lat.]

1. A mournful song.
He hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies upon brambles, all forsooth defying the name of Ross.

2. A funeral song.
So on Musander's, when death is nigh, The mournful swan sings her own elegy. Dryg.

3. A short poem without points or affected elegancies.

ELEMENT, n. s. [elementum, Lat.]

1. The first or constituent principle of any thing.
If nature should interrut her course, those principal and mother elements of the world, whereas all things in this lower world are made, should lose the quality which now they have. Bacon.

A man may rationally retaine doubts concerning the number of those ingredients of bodies, which some call elements, and others principles. Boyle.

Simple substances are either spirits, which have no manner of composition, or the first principles of bodies, usually called elements, of which other bodies are compounded. Watts.

2. The four elements, usually so called, are earth, fire, air, water, of which our world is composed. When it is used alone, element commonly means the air.
The king is but a man; the violet smells to him as doth to me; and the element sweats to him as it doth to us. Shakes.

My dearest sister, fare thee well;
The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort. Shakes. Ant. and Cleop. The king.

Contending with the fruitful elements, Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, Or swell the curled waters. Shakes. K. Lear.

3. The proper habitation or sphere of any thing: as water of fish.
We are simple men; we do not know she works by charms, by spells, and such daubry as is beyond our element. Shakes.

Our instruments may, in length of time, Become our elements. Milton.

They shew that they are out of their element, and that logick is none of their talent. Baker on Learning.

4. An ingredient; a constituent part.
Who set the body and the hubs
Of this great spool together, as you guess?
—One sure that promises no element
In such a business. Shakes. Henry VIII.

5. The letters of any language.

6. The lowest or first rudiments of literature or science.
With religion it fareth as with other sciences; the first delivery of the elements thereof must, for like consideration, be framed according to the weak and slender capacity of young beginners. Hooker.

Every parish should keep a petty schoolmaster, who should bring up children in the first elements of letters. Speer.

F. E. L. E. He is supplied with a trunk, or long hollow cartilage, which hangs between his teeth, and serves him for hands. His teeth are the ivory.

He loves to hear,
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes. Shak.

The elephant hath joints, but not for courtesy; his legs are for necessity, not pleasure. Shak.

2. Ivory; the teeth of elephants.
High on the gate, in elephant and gold,
The crowd shall Caesar's Indian war behold. Dryden's Furgi.

ELEPHANTIASIS, n. s. [elephantiasis, Lat.] A species of leprosy, so called from covering the skin with incrustations like those on the hide of an elephant.

ELEPHANTINE, adj. [elephantinus, Lat.] Pertaining to the elephant.

To ELEVATE, v. a. [elevo, Lat.]

1. To raise up aloft.
This subterranean heat or fire, which elevates the water out of the abyss. Woodward.

2. To exalt; to dignify.
Now rising fortune elevates his mind,
He shines unclouded, and adorns mankind. Spenser.

4. To elevate with violent pride.
To mix him swift, hope elevates, and joy
Brightens his crest. Milton.

5. To lessen by detraction. This sense, though legitimately deduced from the Latin, is not now in use.
When the judgments of learned men are alleged against you, what do you but either elevate their credit, or oppose unto them the judgments of others as learned? Hooker.

ELEVATE, part. adj. [from elevated]
Exalted; raised aloft.
The elephant as the king of beasts stood, With tow'r'd temples proudely elevate.

On seven small hills.

ELEVATION, n. s. [elvatio, Lat.]

1. The act of raising aloft.

2. Exaltation; dignity.
Angels, in their several degrees of elevation above us, may be endowd with more comprehensive faculties. Locke.

3. Exaltation of the mind by noble conceptions.
We are therefore to love him with all possible application and elevation of spirit, with all the heart, soul and mind. Norris.

4. Exaltation of style.
His style was an elegant perspicuity, rich in phrase, but seldom any bold metaphors; and so far from timid, that it rather wanted a little elevation. Hutton.

5. Attention to objects above us.
All which different elevations of spirit unto God, are contained in the name of prayer. Hooker.

6. The height of any heavenly body with respect to the horizon.
Some latitudes have no equinoctial days, as those which have more than seventy-three degrees of northern elevation, as Nova Zembla. Brown's Vol. Err.

607
ELI

Eleva*tor. n. s. [from elevate.] A raiser or lifter up, applied to some chirurgical instruments put to such uses. Quiney.

ELEV. adj. [elevate, Sax.] Ten and one; one more than ten.

Had I a dozen sons, and none less dear than March, that elfin knight, he needed for the country, than one volupturnously forfeit out of action. Shak.

ELEVENTh. adj. [from eleven.] The next in order to the tenth.

In the eleventh chapter he returns to speak of the building of Balder. Reigh's Hist.

ELF. n. s. plural elves. [elf, Welsh. Baxter's Gloss.]

1. A wandering spirit, supposed to be seen in wild unrequested places; a fairy.

Through this house giveth glimmering light, By the dead and drowsy fire; Every elf, and fairy sprite, Hop as light as bird from brier. Shak.

Whose midnight roams by some forest side, Or fountain, some belated peasant sees, Or dreams be seen.

Thus the king of elfs and little fairy queen

3. A devil.

The devil may angels seem, we paint them elves;

Blanket my neck with, elf all my hair in knots. Shak.

ELFIN. adj. [from elf.] Relating to fairies; elish; belonging to elves.

Now when that idle dream was in his breast, Unto that elfein knight he bade his fly, Where he slept soundly.

ELFLOCK. n. s. [elf and lock.] Knots of hair twisted by elves.

That this very Mab,

That plaits them with fleth, and makes the elf locks in foul sluttish twist,

Which, once untied, doth misfortune bring.

ELICIT. v. a. [elicit, Lat.] To strike out; to fetch out by labour or art. Although the same truths may be elicited, and explicated by the contemplation of animals, yet they are more clearly enquired in the contemplation of man. Hes's Origin of Mankind. He elicits those acts out of the mere impression of the things.

ELICIT. adj. [elicitus, Lat.] Brought into act; brought from possibility to real existence.

It is the virtue of homility and obedience, and not the formal elicite act of meekness; meekness being ordinarily annexed to these virtues. Hume. The schools dispute whether, in morals, the external action superadds any thing of good or evil to the internal act of the will.

ELICITION. n. s. [from elicit, Lat.] That elicitation which the schools intend, is a deducing of the power of the will into act; that drawing which they concur in, is merely from the apprehension of the object. Bramhall.

ELIDE. v. a. [elido, Lat.] To break in pieces; to crush.

ELK

We are to cut off that wherewith they, from whose objections proceed, by forficates, when the force and strength of the argument is elided. Hooker.

ELIGIBILITY. n. s. [from eligibilis.] Worthiness to be chosen.

The business of the campus will be not to judge concerning the nature of things, but to choose them in consequence of the report made by the understanding, and to their eligibitatis, as Faber's Sermon.

ELIGIBLE. adj. [eligibilis, Lat.] Fitte to be chosen; worthy of choice; preferable.

A British ministry ought to be satisfied, if, allowing to every particular man that his private scheme is virtuous, they can persuade him, that next to his own plan, that of the government is the most eligible. Addison's Freeholder.

If they really think, that going on with the war was more eligible for their country than the least abatement of those conditions? Swift.

That the most plain, short, and lawful way to say good end, it more eligible than one directly contrary in some or all of these qualities. Swift.

Certainly, in a deep distress, is more eligible than suspicion. Clayville.

ELIGIBILITY. n. s. [from eligibile.]

ELIMINATION. n. s. [elimino, Lat.] The act of banishing; the act of turning out of doors; rejection.

ELISION. n. s. [elisio, Lat.]

1. The act of cutting off; as, can't thee attempt, there is an elision of a syllable. You will observe the abbreviation and elision, by which sounds of most obscure sounds are joined together, without any softening of himself to intervene. Swift.

2. Division; separation of parts.

The cause given of sound, that it would be an elision of the air, whereby, if they mean any thing, they mean a cutting or dividing, or else an attenuating of the air, is but a tenor of the hand. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

ELIXATION. n. s. [elixus, Lat.] The act of boiling or stewing any thing.

Even to ourselves, and more perfect animals, water perfumes no substantial nutrition, serving for nutrition, dilution of solid aliments, and its extraction in the stomach. Brown.

ELIXIR. n. s. [ambick.] A medicine made by strong infusion, where the ingredients are almost dissolved in the menstruum, and give it a thicker consistence than a tincture. Quin.

For when we call our horses, and our women, and our children, When cordials and elixirs fail, On your pale cheek he dropp'd the shaw's, Their virtue was such that every person meeting with it was affected. Waller.

2. The liquor, or whatever it be, with which chemists hope to transmute metals to gold.

No chemist yet the elixir got, But glorifies his pregnant pot, If by the way he bin belied; Some odorous thing, or medicinal. Danae.

3. The extract or quintessence of any thing.

In the soul, when the supreme faculties more regularly, the inferior passions and affections following, there arises a serenity infinitely beyond the highest quintessence and elixir of worldly delights. South.

4. Any cordial or invigorating substance.

What wonder then, if fields and regions here Breathe forth elixir pure! Milton's Par. Lost.

ELK. n. s. [mite, Sax.]

The elk is a stately animal of the stag kind. The neck is short and slender; the ears nine inches in length, and four in breadth. The colour of its coat in Whitby grey, in Summer, it is pale. Some of the male elk are short and thick near the head, where it by degrees ex-
E L O

The power of fluent speech.
A trained doctor of physic, of bold, and of able eloquence. Wotton.

2. Power of speaking; speech.
W mots of taste, too long forborne, at first essay Gave elevation to the mute, and taught
The tongue not made for speech to speak thy praise.
Milton.

3. The power of expression or diction; eloquence; beauty of words.
The third happiness of this poet's imagination is elevotion, or the art of the eloquent or adorning that thought so found, and varied, in apt, significant, and sounding words. Dryden. As I have endeavoured to adorn it with noble thoughts, so much more to express those thoughts with eloquence. Dryden.

E L O G Y. n. s. [eloge, Fr.] Praise; panegyric.
Buckingham lay under millions of misdeeds, which at the prince's arrival did vanish his enemies and elogies. Hotten. If I must say all I know of the elogies received concerning him, I should offend the modesty of our author. Bosile. Some excellent persons, above my approbation or elogy, have considered this subject. Hotten. As an eloquence is the voluntary departure of a wife from her husband to live with an adulterer, and with whom she lives in breach of the matrimonial vow. Dryden. The negligent husband, trusting to the efficacy of his principle, was undone by his wife's elopement from him. Arhobian.

E L O P E M E N T. n. s. [from elope.]
Departure from just restraint; rejection of lawful power: commonly used of a wife. Some are called Elopements of Elements of Speech.

To E L O I N E, v. t. [eloiner, Fr.] To put at a distance; to remove one far from another. Now disused. From wordy care himself he did elain, and greatly shunned mainy exercise. Fairy Queen. III. 1. I'll tell thee now, dear lord! what thou shalt do To anger destiny, as she doth us; How I shall stay though she eloine me thus, And how posterity shall know it too. Donne.

To E L O N G A T E, v. t. [from longus, Lat.]
1. To lengthen; to draw out; to protract, to stretch.
2. To put farther off.
The first star of Ariés, in the time of Meton the Athenian, was placed in the very intersection, which is now elongated and moved eastward twenty-eight degrees. Brown's Vulg. Errors.

To E L O N G A T E, v. n. To go off to a distance from any thing.
About Cape Frio Brasilia, the South point of the compass varieth twelve degrees unto the West; but elongating from the coast of Brasilia, towards the shore of Africa, it varieth eastward. Brown's Vulg. Errors.

E L O N G A T I O N. n. s. [from elongate.]
1. The art of stretching or lengthening itself.
To this motion of elongation of the fibres is owing the union or conglutination of the parts of the body, when they are separated by a wound. Arbuthnot on Anniiments.

2. The state of being stretched.
3. [In medicine.] An imperfect luxation, when the ligament of any joint is so extended or retracted as to lengthen the limb, but yet not let the bone go quite out of its place. Quincy.

E l o g i a t i o n s are the effect of a humour soaking upon a ligament, thereby making it liable to be stretched, and to be thrust quite out upon every little force. Wrenn's Surgery.

E L I S

4. Distance; space at which one thing is distant from another.
The distant points in the celestial expanse appear to the eye in so small a degree of elongation from each other, as bears no proportion to what.

Glaucine's Seriph. E 1

5. Departure; removal.
Nor then had it been placed in a middle point, but that of descent, or elongation.
Brown's Vulg. Errors.

To E L O P E, v. a. [loopen to run, Dut.]
To run away; to break loose; to escape from law or restraint.

It is necessary to treat women as members of the body politic, and the great numbers of them have eloped from their allegiance. Addison's Freeholder. What from the dame can Paris hope? She may as well from him elope. Prior. The fool whose wife elope some time a quere. For matrimonial solace dies a martyr. Pope.

E L O Q U E N C I A. n. s. [elocuencia, Lat.]
The power of speaking with fluency and elegance; orator's art. Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant More learned than the ears. Shakespeare's Coriolanus. Athens or free Rome, where eloquence flourished'd since mute. Milton. His infant softness pleads a milder doom, And speaks with all the eloquence of tears. Leigh. Eloquent language uttered with fluency. Say she be mute, and will not speak a word; Then I'll commend her volubility, and Say she utters piercing eloquence. Shakespeare. Fit words attended on his weighty sense, And mild persuasion flow'd in eloquence. Pope's Od.,

E L O Q U E N T. adj. [elocuens, Lat.]
Having the power of oratory; having the power of fluent and elegant speech. The Lord of hosts doth take away the captain of city, and the horn and the shield, and the comb, and the crown, and the eclipson orator. Isaiah, iii. 8. O death! all eloquent, you only prove What dust we do see on, when 'tis man we love. Pope.

E L V E S.

The plural of elf. See Elf.

Whose midnight revels by some forest side, Or fountain, some belated peasant sees, Or rests upon a lonesome throne; Milton. Ye sylphs and syphilis to your chief give ear; Elys, fairies, genii, elves and demons hear. Pope.

E L V E L O C K. n. s. [from elves and lock.]

1. In any other place.
There are here divers trees, which are not to be found elsewhere. Abbot's Descrip. of the World. As he proved that Pison was not Ganges, or Ganges, Nilus: so where to find them elsewhere he knew not. Raleigh's History. For, if we chance to fix our thoughts elsewhere, Though our eyes open be, we cannot see. Davies. Henceforth oracles are ceas'd, and thou no more with pomp and sacrifice Shall be enquir'd at Delphos, or elsewhere. Milton. Although seasoned bodies may and do live near as long in London as elsewhere, yet new-comers do not shun our mortality. Pope.

2. In other places; in some other place.
The which elsewhere claim, that injury is offered to the nearest minister, when the magistrate appointeth him what to wear, think the thing of so great an extent as the common judges where it is fit for the minister to stand. Hooker. Let us no more contend, nor blame each other, blunder enough elsewhere. Milton. Each New, base man, thy idle threats elsewhere! My mother's daughter knows not what to fear. Pope. If it contradict what he says elsewhere, it is no new or strange thing. Tullianus.

To E L U C I D A T E, v. a. [elucido, Lat.] To explain; to clear; to make plain.
To elucidate a little the matter, let us consider it. Boyle.

E L U C I D A T I O N. n. s. [from elucidate.]
Explanion; exposition;
We shall, in order to the elucidation of this matter, subjoin the following experiment. Boyle.

E L U C I D A T O R. n. s. [from elucidate.]
Explaner; expositor; commentator. Obscurity is brought over them by the course of ignorance and age, and yet more by their peculiar elucidation. Abbot.

To E L U D E, v. a. [elude, Lat.]
1. To escape by stratagem; to avoid any mischief or danger by artifice.
Several pernicious vices, notorious among us, escape or elude the punishment of any law yet inv. In. He who looks no higher for the motives of his conduct than the resentments of human justice, whenever he can presume himself escaping enough to elude, rich enough to brine, or strong enough to resist it, will be under no restraint. Rogers.

2. To mock by an unexpected escape.
A gentle Delian becumber from the plain, Then, hid in shades, eludes her eager swains; But feigns a laugh to see me search around, And by that laugh the willing fair is found. Pope.

E L U D I B L E. adj. [from elude.]
Possible to be defeated.
There is not any common place more insisted on than the happiness of trials by juries; yet if this blessed part of our law be eluded by power and artifice, we shall have little reason to boast. Swift.

E L Y S I A N. The plural of elf. See Elf.
Knots in the hair superstitiously supposed to be tangled by the fairies.

From the like might proceed the fears of polluting electives, or complicated hairs of the head. Brown's Palm. Err.

ELVISH. adj. [from elves, the plural of elf; it had been written more properly elfish.] Relating to elves, or wandering spirits.

Thou elorn marki, abortive, rioting hog! The slave of nature, and the son of hell! Shakep. No more hath been so hold, or of the latter in the old, those elorn spirits to unhold, which he from others reading. Drayton.

ELUMINATED. adj. [elumino, Lat.] Weakened in the loins. Dict.

ELUSION. n. s. [elusio, Lat.] An escape from enquiry or examination; a fraud, an evasion.

An appendix, relating to the transmutation of metals, describes the intestines and elusions of those who have pretended to it. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

ELUSIVE. adj. [from elude.] Practising elusion; using arts to escape.

Elude of the holday day, she gives
Fond hopes to all, and all with hopes deceives, Pope.

ELUSORY. adj. [from elude.] Tending to elude; tending to deceive; fraudulent; deceitful; fallacious.

It may be feared they are but partitive flights, ambuscade retreats, and elusory delusion. Brown's Palm. Err.

To ELUITE, v. a. [eluo, Lat.] To wash off. The more od'y any spirit is, the more pernicious; because it is harder to be eluted by the blood. Arbuthnot An Alemants.

To ELUTRIATE, v. a. [eluatio, Lat.] To decoct; or strain out.

The pressure of the air upon the lungs is much less than it has been computed by some; but still it is something, and the alteration of one tenth of its force upon the lungs must produce some different in estruating the blood as it passes through the lungs. Arbuthnot on Airs.

ELYSIAN. adj [elusius, Lat.] Pertaining to Elysium; pleasant; deliciously soft and soothing; exceedingly delightful.

The river of life, through midst of heaven.

Bells of golden sounds his amber stream. Milton.

ELYSIUM. n. s. [Lat.] The place assigned by the heathens to happy souls; any place exquisitely pleasant.

To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth, So should'st thou either turn my flying soul, Or I should laciate it into thy body, And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium. Shak. Hec. VI.

EM. A contravention of them.

For he could join and counterfeit New words with little or no voice with.

And when with stilly voice he spoke 'em, the ignorant for current took 'em. Hidibris.

To EMACIATE, v. a. [emacio, Lat.] To waste; to deprive of flesh.

Men after long emaciating diets wax plump, fat, and almost new. Bacon.

All dying of the consumption, die emaciated and lean. Gravant's Bills of Mortality.

To EMACIA. v. n. To lose flesh; to pine; to grow lean.

He emaciated and plaid away in the too anxious enquiry of the sea's reciprocation, although not drowned therein. Brown.

EMACIATION. n. s. [emaciatio, Lat.] The act of making lean.

1. The act of making lean.

2. The state of one grown lean.

3. Searchers cannot tell whether this emaciation or leanness were from a phthisis, or from a hectic fever.

EMACULATION. n. s. [emaculo, Lat.] The act of freeing any thing from spots or foulness.

EMANANT. adj. [emanans, Lat.] Issuing from something else.

The first act of the divine nature, relating to the world, and its administration thereof, is an emanant act; the most wise counsel and purpose of Almighty God terminate in those two great transient or emanating acts or works, the work of creation and providence. Hare's Origin of Mankind.

To EMANATE, v. n. [emanuo, Lat.] To issue or flow from something else. Dict.

EMANATION. n. s. [emanatio, Lat.]

1. The act of issuing or proceeding from any other substance.

Aristotle said, that it stemmed from conatus and emanation from God, the infinite and external Mind, as the light issues from the Sun. South.

2. That which issues from another substance; an efflux; effluvium.

The experience of those profitable and excellent emanations from God, may be, and commonly are, the first motive of our love. Taylor.

Another way the Pope is delivered by the natural emanation, or continued effluviation, which, after some distance, retracted itself; as in syrups, oils, and viscosities, which spum, at length retire into their former dimensions. Brown.

Such were the features of her heav'nly face; Her limbs were formed with such grace.

So faultless was the frame, as if the whole had been an emanation of the soul. Dryden.

The letters, every judge will see; were no means efforts of the genius, but emanations of the heart. Pope.

Each emanation of his fire
That burns on earth, such true he inspires;

And each act he prospers, each charm he can create;

Whatever he gives, are given for you to hate. Pope.

EMANATIVE. adj. [from emanu, Lat.] Issuing from another. Dict.

To EMANCIPATE, v. a. [emancipo, Lat.] To set free from servitude; to restore to liberty.

Having received the probable inducements of truth, we become emancipated from testimonial engagements. Brown.

By the twelve tables, only those were called unto the instantaneous succession of their parents that were in the parents power, excluding all emancipated children.

They emancipated themselves from dependence. Arbuthnot.

EMANCIPATION. n. s. [from emancipate.] The act of setting free; deliverance from slavery.

Obstinate in opinions holds the dogmatist in the chains of error, without hope of emancipation. Clavellis's Specis.

To EMARGINATE, v. a. [margo, Lat.] To take away the margin or edge of any thing. Dict.

To EMASCULATE, v. a. [emasculo, Lat.]

1. To castrate; to deprive of virility.

When it is found how many ewes, suppose twenty, one ram will serve, we may gain nine, to threethous.; for if you emasculate but ten, you shall, by prouious copulation, hinder the increase. Gronov.

2. To effeminate; to weaken; to strike by unmanly softness.

From wars and from affairs of state abstain; Women emasculate a monarch's reign. Dryden.

Dissipate his principles, triumph over our understandings, emasculate our spirits, and spoil our temper. Collier.

EMASCULATION. n. s. [from emasculata.]
EMB

Straight to the ships, Aeneas took his way,
Embark'd his men, and skil'd along the sea.
Dryden's Enid.

To EMBARK. v. n. 1. To go on shipboard.
I should with speed embark,
And with their embassies return to Greece.
A. Phillips.

2. To engage in any affair.
To EMBARRASS, v. a. [embarress, Fr.] To perplex; to distress; to entangle.
I saw my friend a little embarrassed, and turned away.
Spotsator.

EMBARRASSMENT. n. s. [from embarrass.] Perplexity; entanglement.
Let your method be plain, that your hearers may run through it without embarrassment, and take a clear view of the whole.
Watts's Legics.

To EMBASE. v. a. [from base.]
1. To vittate; to depauperate; to lower; to deprave; to impair.
Grains are annual, so that the virtue of the seed is not worn out; whereas in a tree it is embased by the ground.
Bacon.
I have no service or ignoble end, in my present labour, which may, on either side, restrain or ennoble the freedom of my poor judgment. Colton.
I will embase them with a crown of thorns, than exchange that of gold for one of lead, whose embossed flexibleness shall be forced to bend.
King Charles.
A pleasure high, rational, and angelical: a pleasure embased with no appendant sting; but such a one as being honey in the mouth, never turns to gall or gravel in the belly. South.

2. To degrade; to vilify.
Joy of my life, full oft for loving you
I bless my lot, that was so lucky plac'd;
But then, more your own mishap
That are so much by so mean love embas'd. Spens.

EMBASSADOR. n. s. [See Ambassador.] One sent on a public message.
Mighty Jove's embassador appear'd
With the same message.
Davenant.
Myself, my king's embassador will go.
Dryden.

EMBASSADRESS. n. s. A woman sent on a public message.
With fear the modest matron lifts her eyes,
And to the bright embassador replies.
Garth & Hov. Davenant.

EMBASSAGE. n. s. [It may be observed, that though our authors write almost indiscriminately embassage, or ambassador, embassage, or embassage; yet there is scarcely an example of embassy, all concuring to write embassy.]
1. A public message; a message concerning business between princes or states.
Fresh embassy and suits,
Nor from the state nor private friends, hereafter,
Will I advent to.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

When he was at Newcastle he sent a solemn embassage unto James King of Scotland, to treat and conclude a peace with him. Bacon's Hen. VII.

The peace polluted thus, a chosen band
He first commisions to the Latin land,
In threat'ning the English.
Dryden's Enid.

2. Any solemn message.
He sends the angelon embassies with his decrees.
Taylor.

3. An errand in an ironical sense.
A bird was made fly with such art to carry a written embassage among the ladies, that one might say, If a live bird, how taught? If dead, how made?
Shaker. Rich. II.

EMBATTLE. v. a. [from battle.] To range in order or array of battle.
The English are embattled.
To horse! you gallant princes, strive to horse!
Shakep.

I could drive her from the ward of her reputation, her marriage-row, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me.
Shakep.

On their embattled ranks the waves return,
And never with the sea.
Milton's Par. Lost. Shaker.

Embattled nations strive in vain
The hero's glory to retain:
Streams armed with rocks, and mountains red with fire,
In vain against his force compare.
Prior.

To EMBATTLE. v. n. To be ranged in battle array.
The night
Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle.
By the second hour of the morn.
Shakep.

To EMBAVY. v. a. [from buynier to bathe, Fr.]
1. To bathe; to wet; to wash. Not used.
In her lap a little babe did play
His cruel sport;
For in her streaming blood he drownd
His little hands, and tender joints embay'd.
Fairy Queen.
Every sense the humour sweet embay'd,
And, slum'ring soft, my heart did stay away.
Fairy Queen.

2. [From boy.] To inclose in a bay; to land lock.
If that the Turkish fleet
Be not inshel'd and embay'd, they're drownd's.
Shakep.

To EMBELLISH. v. a. [embellir, Fr.]
To adorn; to beautify; to grace with ornaments; to decorate.
How much more beautious had the fountain been.
Embellis'd with her first created green,
Where crystal streams through living turf had run,
Contemtued with an urn of native stone.
Dryd. Joc.
The names of the figures that embellished the discourses of those that understood the art of speaking, are not the art and skill of speaking.
Locke.

That which was once the most beautiful spot of Italy, covered with palaces, embellished by emperors, and adorned by poets, has now nothing to show but ruins.
Addison on Italy.

EMBELLISHMENT. n. s. [from embellish.]
Ornament; adventitious beauty; decoration; adscititious grace; any thing that confers the power of pleasing.
Cultivate the wild licentious savage
With wisdom, discipline, and liberal arts.
Addison's Cato.
Apparitions, visions, and intercourses of all kinds between the dead and the living, are the frequent and familiar embellishments of the legends of the Roman church.
Afterbury.

EMERING. n. s. The ember days. A word used by old authors, now obsolete.
For causes good so many ways,
Keep emming well, and lasting days;
What law commands, we ought to obey,
For Friday, Saturday, and Wednesday.
Tusher.

EMBERS. n. s. [Without a singular oxiyoy, Sax. ashes; enimrny, Islandick. hot ashes or cinders.] Hot cinders; ashes not yet extinguished.
Take hot embers, and put them about a bottle filled with new heem, almost to the very neck; let the bottle be well stopped, lean it fly out, and continue it, renewing the embers every day for the space of ten days.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.

If the fire will not, some still removed place will fit,
While glowing embers through the room.
Teach light to counterfeit a glow.
Milten.
EMB

If you draw your beard in an emblem, show a dandscape of the country natural to the beast.

Poecham on Drawing.

Emblematical. adj. [from emblemata.]

1. Comprising an emblem; allusive; occultly representative.

In the well fram'd models,
With emblematic skill and mystick order.
Shakespeare.

2. Dealing in emblems; using emblems.

By tongue and writing to our friends explain
What does your emblematical word mean.
Prior.

EMBLEMATIST. n. s. [from emblem.]

Writers or inventors of emblems.

These fables are still maintained by symbolical writers, emblematicists, and heralds.

Brain's Vulg. Fr.

EMBOLISM, n. s. [embolism.]

1. Intercalation; insertion of days or years to produce regularity and equation of time.

The civil constitutions of the year were after different manners in several nations; some using the same number, but in divers fashion; and some following the moon, finding out emblemes or equations, even to the addition of whole months, to make the number of the years whole.

2. The time inserted; intercalary time.

Any thing inserted and actuated in another, as the suckers in a pump.

Our members make a sort of an hydraulic engine, in which a chemical liquor, resembling blood, is driven through elastick channels by an embolus,
like the heart.

To EMBOSSE. v. a. [from bosse a pro-tuberation, Fr.]

1. To form with protuberances; to cover with something rising into lumps or bunches.

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the brachet verge of the salt fosse;
Which once a day, with his embroidered fustick,
The turbulent surge shall cover.

Shakespeare, Timon.

Thou art a bile,
A plague sore or embroidered carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood.

Shakespeare, King Lear.

Boles and blains must all his flesh emboss,
And all his people.

Million's Par. Lost.

All crowd in heaps, as at a night alarm
The bees drive out upon each other's backs,
'Embos their hives in clusters.

Shakespeare, Don Quixote.

2. To engrave with relief; or rising work.

EMBOSAM'T. n. s. [from emboss.]

Any thing standing out from the rest.

I wish, also, in the middle, a fair main,
With three ascents and alleys, enough for four to walk a-breast; which I would have to be perfect circles, without any bulwarks or embozzments.

Bacon's Essays.

Remembrance.

1. Relief; rising work.

They are at a loss about the words pendens;
Some fancy it expresses only the great embozzment of the figure, others believe it hangs off the helmet in alto relievo.

Addison on Italy.

To EMBOTTLE. v. a. [bouteille, Fr.]

To include in bottles; to bottle.

Storim, finest fruit
Embottled, long as Priamean Troy
Withstood the Greeks, endures.

Philostratus.

To EMBOWEL. v. a. [from boulwe.]

To exsanguinate; to deprive of the entrails; to exenterate.

The schools,
Embouwelled of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to appear.

Shakespeare, Othello.

Embowell'd I will see thee by and by;
'Till then, in blood, by noble Percy lye.

Shakespeare, Henry IV.

Embowell'd with outrageous noise the air;
And all her entrails tore.

Milton's Par. Lost.

Fossils and minerals that th' embowelled earth
Dispels.

Thus.

To EMBRACE. v. a. [embrasser, Fr.]

1. To hold fondly in the arms; to squeeze in kindness.

Embrace again, my son! be foes no more;
Nor stain your country with her children's gore.

Shakespeare.

2. To seize ardent or eagerly; to lay hold on;
to welcome; to accept willingly any thing offered.

I take it, your own business calls on you,
And you embrace th' occasion to depart.
Shakespeare.

At first, her mother earth she bow'ds her feet,
And thus embrace the world, and worldly things.

Dryden.

3. To comprehend; to take in; as, natural philosophy embraces many sci-ce.

They who are represented by the wise virgins, embraced the profession of the Christian religion,
as the foolish virgins also had done.

Tillotson.

4. To comprise; to inclose; to contain;
to encompass; to encircle.

Low at his feet a spacious plain is plac'd,
Between the mountain and the stream embrac'd.

Dryden.

5. To admit; to receive.

Penton. Have you another joy?
What cannot be eschew'd, must be embraced.
Shakespeare.

If a man may be assured of any thing, without having examined, what is there that he may not embrace for truth?

Leckey.

6. To find; to take.

Fleming, his son,
Whose grace is no less material to me
Than is his father's: I must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour.

Shakespeare, Macbeth.

7. To squeeze in a hostile manner.

To EMBRACE. v. n. To join in an embrace.

Let me embrace with old Vicentio;

Shakespeare.

And wear we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Shakespeare.

EMBRACEMENT. n. s. [from embrace.]

1. Clasp; fond pressure in the arms; hug.

Thames, the most lov'd of all the ocean's sons
By his old sire, to his embraces runs.

Denham.

2. An hostile squeeze; crush.

These beams, squeezing with any man, stand upon their hinder feet, and so this did being ready to give me a shrewd embracement.

Sidney.

EMBRACER, n. s. [from embrace.]

The person embracing.

Yet are they the greatest embracers of pleasure of any other upon earth; and they esteem of pearls as pebbles, so they may satisfy their gust, in point of pleasure or revenge.

Hovel.

EMBRASURE. n. s. [embrasure, Fr.]

An aperture in the wall, through which the cannon is pointed; battlement.

To EMBRACE. v. a. [from brace.] To decorate; to embellish; to deck; to grace;
to adorn. Not now in use.

So, both agree their bodies to engrave;
The great earth's womb they open to the sky,
And, with sad expressive, inclose it.

Embrace. Fairy Q.

To EMBROCADE. v. a. [from embroidered.]

To rust any part diseased with medicinal liquors.

I returned her a glass with oil of roses and vintage, to embrocate her arm.

Wiseman on Infam.

EMBROCADATION, n. s. [from embroidered.]

1. The act of rubbing any part diseased with medicinal liquors or spirits.

2. The lotion with which any diseased part is washed or embrocated.

We endeavoured to ease by nottable and endeleat cataphatic, and embrocations of various sorts.

Wiseman's Surgery.

To EMBROADER, v. a. [broder, Fr.]

To border with ornaments; to decorate with figured work; to diversify with needlework; to adorn a ground with raised figures of needlework.
EMB

Such an accumulation of favours is like a kind of embroidering, or lifting of one favour upon another. —Wotton.

Embroider'd so with flowers it had stood, that it became a garden of a wood. —Waller.

Let no virgin be allowed to receive her lover, but in a tent embroidered. —Sp. No. 060.

Embroider'd purple clothes the golden beds; this slave the bow, and that the table spreads. — Pope.

EMBROIDERER. n.s. [from embroider.] One that adorns clothes with needle-work.

Blue silk and purple, the work of the embroiderer. —Dryden.

EMBROIDERY. n.s. [from embroider.] 1. Figures raised upon a ground; variegated needlework.

Write, in embrod'd tens, flow'rs purp'd, blue and white, like sapphire, pearl, in rich embroidery. —Shakespeare.

Laces and embroidery are more costly than either warm or comedy. —Bacon’s Advice to Villiers.

Next these a youthful train their vowe express'd, with feathers crownd, with gay embroidery dress'd. — Pope.

2. Variegation; diversity of colours.

If the natural embroidery of the meadows were helpt and improved by art, a man might make a pretty landscape of his own possessions. —Spectator, No. 111.

To EMBROIDER. v. a. [brociller, Fr.] 1. To disturb; to confuse; to distract; to throw into commotion; to involve in troubles by dispersion and discord.

I had no passion, design, or preparation, to embroidery my kingdom in a war. —King Charles.

Rumour next, and chance, and tumult and confusion, all embroidery, and discord with a thousand various months. — Milton.

When she found her venom spread so far, the royal house embroil’d in civil war, Bah’d she on her dusky wings she eaves the skies. —Dryden.

2. To perplex; to entangle.

The Christian antiquities at Rome, though of a fresher date, are so embroidered with fable and legend, that one receives but little satisfaction. —Addison on Italy.

3. In the following passage the word seems improperly used for broil or burn.

That knowledge, for which we boldly attempt to pride God’s cabinet, should, like the coal from the ashes, serve only to embroider and consume the sacrilegious invaders. —Dryden.

To EMBROIDER. v. a. [brochill, brochel.] To inclose in a brochel.

Men, which choose
Law practice for more gain, boldly repute,
Worse than embrod’éd drummets prostitute. —Don. Embray.

EMBRYO. n.s. [from Latin.] 1. The offpring yet unfinished in the womb.

The bringing forth of living creatures may be accelerated, if the embryo ripens and perfects sooner. —Bacon.

An exclusion before conception, before the birth can be near the name of the parent, or so much as properly called an embryo. —Brown's Vulgar Errours.

The earth was form’d, but in the womb as yet of waters, embryo immaterial inviolate. — Milton’s Paradise Lost.

In that dark womb are the signs and rudiments of an embryo world. —Burnet’s Theory.

When the embryo careful nature breedes, See how she works, and how her work proceeds. —Blackmore.

EME

While the promis’d fruit
Lies yet a little embryo, unperceiv’d
Within its crassum and crux
Thomson’s Spring.

2. The state of any thing yet not fit for production; yet unfinished.

The company little suspected what a noble work I had then in embroidery. —Swift.

EME. n.s. [name, Sax.] Uncle. —Now obsolete.

Whilst they were young, Castalian their eme, Was by the people chosen in their stead; Who on him took the royal diadem, And greatly well it long governed. —Spenser.

EMENDABLE. adj. [emendo, Lat.] Capable of emendation; corrigible.

EMENDATION. n.s. [emendo, Lat.] 1. Correction; alteration of any thing for the better.

The essence and relation of any thing in being, is fitted, beyond any emendation, for its action and use: and shews it to proceed from a mind of the highest understanding. —Grene.

2. An alteration made in the text by verbal criticism.

EMENDATOR. n.s. [emendo, Lat.] A corrector; an improver; an alterer for the better.

EMERALD. n.s. [meravde, Fr. smaragdus, Lat.] A green precious stone.

The emerald is evidently the same with the ancient smaragdus; and, in its most perfect state, is perhaps the most beautiful of all the gems. The rough emerald is usually of a very bright and naturally polished surface, and is ever of a pure and beautiful green, without the admixture of any other color. The oriental emerald is of the hardness of the sapphire and ruby, and is second only to the diamond in lustre and brightness. —Hill on Fossils.

Do you not see the grass how in color they mock the emerald? —Shakespeare.

The emerald is a bright grass green; it is found in fissures of rocks, along with copper ores. —Hill on Fossils.

Not deeper verdure dies the robe of Spring,
When first she gives it to the southern gale,
Then the green emerald shows, Thomson’s Summer.

To EMERGE. v. n. [emerge, Lat.] 1. To rise out of any thing in which it is covered.

They emerged, to the upper part of the spirit of wine, as much of them as lay immersed in the spirit. —Boyle.

The mountains emerged, and became dry land again, when the waters retired. —Burnet’s Theory.

Thests, not unmindful of her son,
Emerging from the deep, to beg her boon, Thomson’s Homer.

2. To issue; to proceed.

If the prison was turned about its axis that way, which made the rays emerge more obliquely out of the second refracting surface of the prism, the image soon became an inch or two longer, or more. —Newton’s Opticks.

3. To rise; to mount from a state of depression or obscurity; to rise into view.

Darkness we see, emerges into light; And shining suns descend to sable night. —Dryden’s Fables.

When, from dewy shade emerging bright, Aurora streaks the sky with orient light; Let each deplore his death. —Pope’s Odyssey.

Then from ancient gloom emerge’d A rising world. —Thomson’s Summer.

EMERGENCE. n.s. [from emerge.] 1. The act of rising out of any fluid by which it is covered.

We have read of a tyrant, who tried to prevent the emergence of murdered bodies. —Brown’s Vulgar Errours.

EMERGENCY. n.s. [from emerge.] 1. The act of rising out of any fluid by which it is covered.

2. The act of rising or starting into view.

The emergency of colours, upon coalition of the particles of such bodies, as were neither of them of a colour of that mixture whereof they are ingredients, is very well worth our attentive observation. —Addison.

Was the white colour of all refractions light, at its very first emergence, where it appears as while as before its incidence, is compounded of various colours. —Newton’s Opticks.

3. Any sudden occasion; unexpected casualty.

Most of our rarities have been found out by casual emergency, and have been the works of time and chance rather than of philosophy. —Glanvill’s Scepticks.

4. Pressing necessity; exigence. A sense not proper.

In any case of emergency, he would employ the whole wealth of his empire, which he had thus amassed together in his subterraneous exchequer. —Addison’s Frenehed.

EMERGED. adj. [from emerge.] 1. Rising out of that which overwhelms or obscures it.

Love made my emergent fortune once more look Above the main, which now shall hit the stars. —Ben Jonson.

Immediately the mountains huge appear, And their broad bare backs upheave Into the clouds. —Milton.

2. Rising into view, or notice, or honour.

The man that is once hated, both his good and his evil deeds oppress him; he is not easily emergent. —Ben Jonson.

3. Proceeding or issuing from any thing.

The stoics held a fatality, and a fixed unalterable course of events; but they held also, that they fell out by a necessity emergent from and inherent in the things themselves, which God himself could not alter. —Dryden.

4. Sudden; unexpectedly casual.

All the lords declared, that, upon any emergent occasion, they would mount their servants upon their horses. —Dryden.

EMEROS. n.s. [corrupted by ignorance of] Emeroids. —A want pronunciation from hemorrhoides, ausserhoides.] Pleasant swellings of the hemorrhoidal veins; piles.

He destroyed them, and smote them with emerods. —1 Sam.

EMERSON. n.s. [from emerge.] The time when a star has been observed by its too near approach to the sun, appears again.

The time was in the heliacal emergence, when it becomes at greatest distance from the sun. —Brown’s Vulgar Errours.

EMERY. n.s. (smiris, Lat. esmiril, Fr.] Emery is an iron ore, considerably rich. It is found in the island of Guernsey, in Tuscany, and many parts of Germany. It has a near relation to the magnet. The lapidaries cut the ordinary gems on their wheels by sprinkling the wetted powder over them, but it will not cut diamonds. It is useful in cleaning and polishing steel. —Hill on Metals.

EMETICAL. adj. [from emet.] Having the quality of provoking vomits.

Various are the temperaments and operations of the stomach; some purgative, some emetic, and some audorific. —Hale.

EMETICALLY. adv. [from emetical.] In such a manner as to provoke to vomit.

It has been complained of, that preparations of silver have produced violent vomits; whereas we have not observed dumfick silver to work emetically, even in women and girls. —Boyle.
EMI

EMISSION. n. s. [emission, Lat.] Sparkling; flying off in small particles, as principally liquors. Iron, in aqua fortis, will fall into emulsion, with noise and emittance, as also a crust and tincture emitted. Bown.

EMICTION. n. s. [from emission, Lat.] Urine; what is voided by the urinary passages.

Gravel and stone grind away the flesh, and effuse the blood apparent in a surging emittance. Harvey on Consumptions.

To EMIGRATE. v. a. [emigrare, Lat.] To remove from one place to another.

EMIGRATION. n. s. [from emigrare.] Change of habitation; removal from one place to another.

We shall have with many countries, either by victories, or by emigrations, or intestine commotions. Hale.

EMINENCE. n. s. [eminentia, Lat.]

1. Prominent height.
2. Summit; highest part.
3. A part rising above the rest.
4. A place where one is exposed to general notice.

5. Exaltation; conspicuousness; state of being exposed to view; reputation; celebrity; fame; preceptum; greatness.

6. Supreme degree, whatever pure thing in the body enjoy'st, and pure thou wert created, we enjoy.

7. Notice; distinction.

Let your remembrance still apply to Banque; Present him emittance both with eye and tongue. Shaksp.

8. A title given to cardinals.

EMINENT. adj. [eminentia, Lat.]

1. High; lofty.
Thou hast built unto thee an eminent place. Es. Satan, in gesture proudly eminent, Stood like a tow'r. Milton.

2. Dignified; exalted.
Rover for your sake shall push her conquests on, and bring new titles home from nations won; To dignify so eminent a son. Dryd. Ju. 3. Conspicuous; remarkable.
She is eminent for a sincere piety in the practice of religion. Addison's Freeholder.

EMINENCY. n. s. [eminentia, Lat.]

Eminent be my lord.

In Grecian arms, the wonder of his face. Glover.

EMINENCYLY. adv. [from eminent.]

EMM

1. Conspicuously; in a manner that attracts observation.
Thy love, which else
So eminently never had been known. Milton.

Lady, that in the prime of earliest youth, Wise was the broad way and the green, and
With those few steps eminently seen,
That labour up the hill of heavenly truth. Milt. Such as thou hast solemnly elected,
With gifts and graces eminently adorned.
To some great work. Milton's Agamemnon.

2. In a high degree.
All men are equal in their judgment of what is eminently best. Dryden.

That simplicity, without which no human performance can arrive to perfection, is no less eminently in this. Swift.

EMISSARY. n. s. [emissarius, Lat.] 1. One sent out on private messages; a spy; a secret agent.
Clifford, an emissary and spy of the king's, fled over into Handers with his privity.

You shall neither eat nor sleep, Nor, nor forth your window peep, With your emissary coming to fetch in the forms go. Ben. Jonson's Underwood. The Jesuits send over emissaries, with instructions to permeate themselves members of the several sects. Huet.

2. That emits or sends out. A technical sense.
Wherever there are emissaries, there are absorbent vessels in the skin; and, by the absorbent vessels, mercury will pass into the blood.

EMISSION. n. s. [emissio, Lat.] The act of sending out; vent.
Tickling cattle; laughter; the cause may be the emission of the jowles, and so of the breath by a flight from stilulation. Bacon.

Populosity naturally requireth transmigration and emittance of population. Brown's Ldg. Errors. Cover them with glasses; but upon all warm and benign emissions of the sun, and sweet showers, give them air. Fenton.

Afection, in the state of incumence, was hastily pitched upon its right object; it flamed up in direct fervour of devotion to God, and in collateral emissions of charity to its neighbour. South.

To EMITT. v. a. [emittio, Lat.]

1. To send forth; to let go; to give vent to.
These baths continually emit a manifest and very sensible heat; why, some of them, at some times, send forth an actual and visible flame. Woodard's Natural History.

The soil, being fruitful and rich, emits steam, consisting of volatile and active parts.

2. To let fly; to dart.
Pay sacred reversion to Apollo's song. Last, wrathful, the far-shooting god emit his fatal arrows. Prior.

3. To issue out juridically.
That a citation be valid, it ought to be decreed and emitted by the judges authority, and the instance of the party. Agrippa.

EMENNAGOGUES. n. s. [eminens and agis.] Medicines that promote the courses, either by giving a greater force to the blood in its circulation, or by making it thinner.
In the case of certain fevers arising out of the spleen, the medicines called at four times the same day, and dispensing with the life of the patient, are chiefly resorted to. Quinney.

EMMET. n. s. [menete, Sax.] A ant; a pisistrata.
When bees come to the ground fall by the weight of an emmet.
Or when a rich ruby's just price be worth the be the weight of a walnut. Sidney.

EMP

To EMWEW. v. a. [from new.] To mew or coop up.

This outward sighted deity, whose settle'd visage and deliberate word, Nips youth? 'tis head, and fellows doth emwe.
As faulcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil. Shakespeare.

To EMVYE. v. a. [eumvoir, Fr.] To excite; to rouse; to put into emotion.
Not used.

One day, when his high courage did emwe, He pricked forth. Dryden.

EMWOLLIET. adj. [emwillens, Lat.] Softening; suppiling.
Barley is emwollient, moistening, and expectorating. Arbuthnot.

Driuretics are decoctions, emulsions, and olis of emwollient vegetables, so far as they relax the urinary passages; such as relax ought to be tried before such as stimulate. Arbuthnot.

EMWOLLIENTS. n. s. Such things as soft and soften the asperities of the humours, and relax and supple the solids at the same time. Quinney.

Emwollients ought to be taken in open air, to hinder them from perspiring, and on empty stomachs. Arbuthnot.

EMULATION. n. s. [emulatio, Lat.] The act of softening.
Emulation is remedied by bathing, or anointing with oil and warm water; the cause is, for that all imitation is a kind of contention and competition of the parts, and anointing gives a relaxation or emollietion. Bacon.

Powerful menstrual are made for its emulation, whereby it may receive the tincture of minerals. Tiptree.

EMWOLLIUMENT. n. s. [emwollium, Lat.] Profit; advantage.
Let them consult how politic they were, for a temporal emwoilmation to throw away eternity. South.

Nthing gives greater satisfaction than the sense of having discharged a great deal of business to public emwolliation. Tiptree.

EMONGST. prep. [so written by Spen-

EMOTION. n. s. [emotion, Fr.] Disturbance of mind; vehemence of passion, or pleasing or painful.
I will appeal to any man, who has read this poet, whether he finds not the natural emotion of the same passion in himself, which the poet describes in his tragic persons? Dryden.

Those rocks and oaks that such emotion felt, were rural maids whom Orpheus taught to melt. Grosvenor.

To EMPALE. v. a. [empaler, Fr.]

1. To fence with a pale.
How happy's he, which hath due place assign'd T'his beasts, and disinterred his wod?: Empale himself to keep them out, not in; Can sow, and dares trust corn where they have been.

2. To fortify.
All that dwell rear enemies empale villages, to save themselves from surprize. Raleigh's Essays. The English empaled themselves with their pikes, and therewith bare off their enemies. Hayward.

3. To incele; to sluit in.
Round about her work she did empale With a fair border wrought of sundry flow'rs. Spenser.

Keep yourselves in breath, And when I have the bloody Hectic found, Empale him with your weapons round about. Shaksp.
EMP

They have emp’d within a zodiack
The free-born sun, and keep the twelve signs awake
To watch his steps; the Goat and Crab contriv’d
And fright him back. Done.

Thank my charms,
I now emp’d me in my glass.
Crotalean.
Impeactable, emp’d with circling fire,
Yet unconsum’d.
Milton’s Par. Lost.

4. To put to death by spitting on a stake fixed upward.
Who can bear this, resolve to be emp’d?
His skin feel’d, and roasted yet alive! Southern.
Let them each be broken on the rack.
Then, with what life remain’d, emp’d and left
To write at leisure round the bloody stake. Addis.
Nay, I don’t believe they will be contented with having one, if they talk of emp’d, or breaking on the wheel.
Arbuthnot.

EMPAANELL. n. s. [from panne, Fr.]
The writing or entering the names of a jury into a parchment schedule, or roll of paper, by the sheriff, which he has summoned to appear for the performance of such public service as juries are employed in. Cowel.

Who can expect upright verdicts from such packed, corrupt juries? Why may we not be allowed to make exceptions against this so incompetent empi’ric.

To EMPAANELL. v. a. [from the noun.
To summon to serve on a jury. A law term.

I shall not need to empaanell a jury of moralists or divines, every man’s own breast sufficiently instructing him. Government of the Tongue.

EMPAREANCE. n. s. [from parler, Fr.]
It signifieth, in common law, a desire or petition in court in a day to pause what is best to do; and it is sometimes used for the conference of a jury in the cause committed to them. Cowel.

EMPA’SM. n. s. [empæz.] A powder to correct the bad scent of the body.

To EMPA’SSION, v. a. [from passion.
To move with passion; to affect strongly; to throw off from equanimity.

Unto my eyes a picture so presented were,
Picturing that which I in mind embrac’d,
That yet those sights empassion me full near.
Spenser.

The temple of empassion, thus began. Milton.

To Em’PéO’PE, v. n. [from people.
To form into a people or community.

He wonder’d much, and gan enquire
What stately building durst so high extend
Her lofty towers unto the starry sky,
And what unknown nation there empaesled were?
Spenser.

EMPERESS. n. s. [from emperor, now written empress.

1. A woman invested with imperial power.
Long, long, may you on earth our empress reign,
Ere you in heaven a glorious angel stand. Davies.

2. The queen of an emperor.
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome’s royal mistress, mistress of my heart. Shak.

EMPEROUR, n. s. [emperor, Fr. imperator, Lat.] A monarch of title and dignity superior to a king: as the emperor of Germany.

Charles the emperor,
Under present to see the shone his aunt,
Makes visitation. Shakesp. Hen. VIII.

EMPERY. n. s. [empire, Fr. imperium, Lat.] Empire; sovereignty; dominion.
A word out of use.
A nay not, and fasten’d to an empire,
Would make the great’st king double. Shakesp.

Take on you the charge
And kindly government of this your land;
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empire your own. Shak.

For EMPHASIS, n. s. [empæsz.] A remarkable stress laid upon a word or sentence; particular force impressed by style or pronunciation.
Oh, that brave Caesar!
—Be eloqued with such another emphasis. Shak.

Emphasis not so much the time as certain grandeur, whereby other syllable, syllable, word, or sentence is rendered more remarkable than that, brevity, by a more vigorous pronunciation, and a longer stay upon it. Holder.

These questions have force and emphasis, if they be understood of the antediluvian earth.
Burnet’s Th.

EMPHATICAL. adj. [empæztal.

1. Forcible; strong; striking.
Where he endeavours to dissuade from cari¬ ousing appetites, how emphatical is his reasoning! Athol.

In proper and emphatical terms thou diest paint

2. Striking the sight.
It is commonly granted, that emphatical colours are light itself, modified by refractions.
Boyle on Col.

EMPHATICALLY. adv. [from emphatical.

1. Strongly; forcibly; in a striking manner.
How emphatically and divinely does every word proclaim the truth that I have been speaking of! South.

2. According to appearance.
What is delivered of the iniquity of dolphins,
must be taken emphatically, not really, but in ap¬ pearance, when they leap above water, and sud¬ denly shoot down again. Brown.

EMPHYSÉMA. n. s. [empæzéma.
Emphyséma is a light puffy humour, easily yielding to the pressure of the finger, arising again in the instant you take it off. Wisem. on Phys.

EMPHYSÉMATOUS. adj. [from empæzéma.
Bloated; puffed up; swollen.
The signs of a gangrene are these: the inflammation loses its redness, and becomes darkish and livid; the tenseness of the skin goes off, and feels to the touch flabby or empahasematous; and vesicles, filled with ichor of different colours, spread over the surface. Emplast. Surg.

To EMPERICE. v. a. [from pierce.
To pierce into; to enter into by violent appulse.
The weapon bright,
Taking advantage of his open jaw,
Ran through his mouth with so important might.
That deep emperice’d his darksome hollow jaw.
Spenser.

EMPIRE. preterit and part. from To pitch, or pitch. [See Pitch.] Set; first, fastened,
But he was wary, and ere it empight
In the meant mark, advanc’d his shield atween
Spenser.

EMPER. n. s. [empire, Fr. imperium, Lat.

1. Imperial power; supreme dominion; sovereign command.
Assert, ye fair ones, who in judgment sit,
Your ancient empire over love and wit. Rowe.

2. The region over which dominion is extended.
A nation extended over vast tracts of land, and numbers of people, arrives in time at the ancient name of kingdom or modern of empire. Temple.

SERIUS POMPEIUS.
Had been the third to Caesar, and commands.
The empire of the sea. Shakesp. Ant. and Clesp.

3. Command over any thing.

EMPIRIC. n. s. [empêrik.] This word seems to have been pronounced empirick by Milton and empirick by Dryden.
Milton’s pronunciation is to be preferred.] A trier; an experience; such persons as have no true education in, or knowledge of physical practice, but venture upon hearsay and observa¬tion.

The name of Hippocrates was more effectual to persuade such men as Galen, than to move a silly empirick.
Hooke.

That every plant might receive a name, according unto the diseases it causeth, was the wish of Paracelsus; a way more likely to multiply empiricks than harmless. Brereton.

Such an aversion and contempt for all manner of innovators, as physicians are apt to have for empiricks, is apt to prevent their adoption. Sugi.

To illiterate writer, empirick-like applies
To each disease unsafe chance remedies.
The learned in school, whence science first began, did still make use of the anatomy of man. Dryden.

EMPIRICALLY. adj. [from the noun.

1. Experimentally; according to experience.

We shall empirically and sensibly deduce the causes of blackness from originals, by which we generally observe things designated.
Brown’s Fulg. Err.

2. Without rational ground; charlatanically; in the manner of quacks.

EMPIRICISM. n. s. [from empirick.] Dependence on experience without knowledge, or by quantity.

EMPLASTER. n. s. [empæzæter. This word is now always pronounced, and generally written plaster. An application to a sore of an oleaginous or viscous substance, spread upon cloth. See Plaster.

All emplasters, applied to the breasts, ought to have a hole for the nipples. Wiseman’s Surgery.

To EMPLASTER. v. a. [from the noun.
To cover with a plaster.
They must be cut out to the quick, and the sore emplastered with tar. Mortimer’s Husbandry.

EMPLASTICK. adj. [empæzæterik.] Viscous; glutinous; fit to be applied as a plaster. Resin, by its emplastick quality, mixed with oil of roses perfects the concoction. Weis. Surg. Emplastick applications are not sufficient to defend a wound from the air. Arbuthnot on Air.

To EMPOLEAD. v. a. [from plead.] To indict; to prefer a charge against; to accuse.
To deface and torture them, their tyrannous masters did often empolead, arrest, cast them into prison, and thereby consume them to worse than nothing. Hoggarde.
EMPLOYMENT. n. s. [from employ.]
1. Business; object of industry; object of labour.
2. Business; the state of being employed.
3. Office; post of business.

If any station, any employment upon earth be honourable, was.
Lest your sounds, instead of interesting the public weal, have their hearts wholly set to get or keep employments.
Call not your stocks for me; I serve the King.
Lest your employment was sent to you. Sh.L.C.
To EMPLOY. v. a. [employer, Fr.]
1. To destroy by poison; to destroy by venomous food or drugs; to poison.
Leaving no means unattempted of destroying his British vassal, such triumphs heackst to empisoon him.
Suff. Mushrooms cause the insidious, or more in the stomach of them may suffocat and empisoon.
2. To taint with poison; to envenom.
This is the more usual sense.

EMPISONER. n. s. [empisoneiner, Fr.]
One who destroys another by poison.
He is vehemently suspected to have been the poisoner of his wife, thereby to make vacant the Addison's Freeholder.

EMPLOYMENT. n. s. [empisoneination, Fr.]
The practice of destroying by poison.
It were dangerous for secret empisoneinants.

EMPOR'I'ICK. adj. [emporikos.]
That which is used at markets, or in merchandize.

EMPORIUM. n. s. [emporion.]
A place of merchandize; a mart; a town of trade; a commercial city.
And while this 'emporium we prepare,
That those who now disdain our trade to share,
Shall rob like pirates on our wealthy coast.
Dryd. I take the prosperous estate of this great empisonein to be owing to those instances of charity.
Addison's Freeholder.

To EMPO'VERISH. v. a. [pawre, Fr.]
To make poor; to depauperate; to reduce to indigence.
Since they might talk better as they lay together, they employed their cloaths to stuff their bed, which for that night, might well scorn the shrine of Venus.
Suff. By your strange doubling, and tells us you excel
No less in courage than in singing well;
Wine, unconsider'd, you let your country know.
They had empisone'd themselves, not you, R.H.
For sense of honour, if it empisone'd a man,
In his esteem, neither honour nor sense.
South. To strow my bed, 'till the empisone'd Spring
Confess her want.

EMPISHER. n. s. [from empo'verish.]
One that makes others poorer.

EMPISHERMENT. n. s. [from empo'verish.]
Depauperation; cause of poverty; drain of wealth.
But now, and then some, it is no great burden upon her, nor any great empisoneishment to her coffers.
Suff. From appeals for justice, or particularities for favour or preference to another country, are so many grievous empishenments.
Suff. 'Tis for Ireland.

EMPLOY. v. a. [from power.

EMP. Antiquity thought thunder the immediate voice of Jupiter, and emploied them of iniquity that referred it to natural casualties.

Dufresnoy, town Atterbury.

To EMPLOY. v. a. [employer, Fr.]
1. To busy; to keep at work; to exercise.
It is used both as agent; as, the king employed the minister; or cause, as, the publick credit employed the minister.
For the last, in compass of the year.
Thy vineyard must employ the stude stey
To turn the globe.

2. In the following quotations it is used with in, about, to, and uponi, before the object. To seems less proper.
These princial learning was applied to the course of the stars, and the rest was employed in displaying the brave exploits of their princes.Temp.
Our reason is often puzzled, because of the imperfection of the ideas it is employ'd about.
Lest the proper business of the understanding is not that which men always employ it to.
Lest Labour in the beginning gave a right of property, wherever any one was pleased to employ it upon what was common.
Addison's Freeholder.

3. To use as an instrument.
The cleanly cheese-press she could never turn; Her awkward fist did not 'er employ the churn.
Gay.

4. To use as means.
The money was employed to the making of gal-

5. To use as materials.
The labour of those who fell'd and framed the timber employed about the plough, must be charg'd on labour.
Addison.

6. To commission; to intrust with the management of any affairs.
Jonathan and Jahaziah were employed about this matter.

7. To fill up with business.
If you're idle your employ'd
All his force on you he tries,
But watchful and employ'd,
Addison.

EMPLOY. v. a. [from the verb.]
1. Business; object of industry.
Present to grasp, and future still to find.

EMPLOYABLE. adj. [from employ.]
Capable to be used; proper for use.

EMPLOYER. n. s. [from employ.] One that uses or causes to be used.

That man of great trade, and is owner or employ of much shipping, and continues and increases in trade and shipping.
Child of Trade.
brazen one of Tydides, was emption or commutation.

Arbuthnot on Coins.

EMPT, adj. [emert. Sax.]
1. Void; having nothing in it; not full.
2. Empty; having nothing of substance.

Arbuthnot.

EMPTINESS, n. [emert. n.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. adj. [emultor. Lat.]

Arbuthnot.

EMPTOR GRAND. n. [emultor.]

Arbuthnot.
3. Factious; contentious.

Whose glorious deeds, but in the fields of late
Made envious missions 'mongst the gods them-

elves,
And did great Mars to faction. Shakesp.

Emulously. adv. [from envious.] With desire of excelling or outhing another.

So tempt them he, and enviously vie
To drive a voice, that enemies would not buy. Gram.

Enmity. n. s. [enmity, Lat.] A form of medicine, by bruising oily seeds and kernels, and drawing out their substances with some liquor, that thereby becomes milky.

Quincies.

The aliments is dissolved by an operation resulting that of making an emulsion; in which operation the oily parts of nuts and seeds, being gently ground in a marble mortar, are gradually mixed with some watery liquor, or dissolved into a sweet, thick, turbid, milky liquor, resembling the chyle
in an animal body.

Emunctories. n. s. [emunctorium, Lat.]

Those parts of the body where any thing excrementitious is separated and collected, to be in readiness for ejection.

Quinque.

Superfusor matter disolves from the body under their proper emunctories.

Browne's Tagg. Err.

There are receptacles in the body of man, and emunctories to drain them of superfluous choler.

Discoursing of the lungs, I shew that they are the grand emunctories of the body; that the main end of respiration is continually to discharge and expel an excrementitious fluid out of the mass of blood.

Hooke's Nat. Hist.

The regimen in quinques, which proceed from an obstruction of the glands, must be to use such warm liquors as relax those glands, such as, by stimulating, open the emunctories to secrete the humours.

En. An inseparable particle borrowed by us from the French, and by the French formed from the Latin in. Many words are uncertainly written with en or in.

Many words en is changed into em for more easy pronunciation.

To Enable. v. a. [from able.] To make able; to empower; to supply with strength or ability.

If thou wouldst evade them, be so wise to me the shadow of thy gentle wing,
I should enabled be thy acts to sing. Spenser.

His great friendship with God might enable it, and his compassion might incline him. Arbuthnot.

He points out to him the way of life, strengthens his weakness, restores his hopes, and enables him to walk and persevere in it.

Regers. To Enact. v. a. [from act.]

1. To act; to perform; to effect. Not now in use.

In true balancing of justice, it is flat wrong to punish the thought or purpose of any before it be enacted. Spenser.

Valiant Talbot, above human thought,
Enabled with word and lance. Shakesp.

2. To establish by law; to decree.

It is enacted in the laws of Venice,
If it be proved against an alien,
He secks the life of any citizen,
The party, against which he doth contrive,
Shall seize on half his goods. Shakesp.

The senate were authors of all counsels in the state,
and what was by them consulted and agreed, was proposed to the people, by whom it was enacted or commanded. Temple.

3. To express by a action.

I did enact Hector. Shakesp.

Enact. n. s. [from the verb.] Purpose;
determination.

Enactor. n. s. [from enact.]
ENC

2. To subdue by charms or spells.

Arcadia was the charmed circle, where all his spirits for ever should be enchanted. Sidney.

John thinks them all enchanted; he queries if Nick had not given them some inexcusable Arabothn.

3. To delight in a high degree.

One whom the music of his own vain tongue
Doth ravish like enchantments, harmony. Shaks.

Too dear I prize'd a fair enchanting face; Beauty enchant is beauty in disgrace. Pope.

ENCHANTER. n. s. [enchaunt, Fr.] A magician; a sorcerer; one who has spirits or demons at his command; one who has the power of charms and spells.

Such phaums, such appuritions, are enchantments which men applaud in themselves, conjured up by the magic of a strong imagination, and only seen within that circle in which the enchanters stands.

Decay of Poetry.

Gladio, by valour and stratagem, put to death tyrants, enchanters, monsters, and knights. Speak.

Artim, that black enchantress, whose dire arts Euslaw'd our knights, and broke our virgin hearts. Granville.

ENCHANTINGLY. adv. [from enchant.] With the force of enchantment. It is improperly used in a passive sense in the following.

He's gentle; never school'd, and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly belov'd. Shaks.

ENCANTMENT. n. s. [enchantment, Fr.]

1. Magical charms; spells; incantation; sorcery.

The Turks thought that tempest was brought upon them by the charms and enchantments of the Persian magicians. Knolles.

2. Irresistible influence; overpowering delight.

Warmth of fancy will carry the loudest and most universal applause, which holds the heart of a reader under the strongest enchantment. Pope.

ENCHANTRESS. n. s. [enchantress, Fr.]

1. A sorceress; a woman versed in magical arts.

Tell bunting bag! enchantress, hold thy tongue. Shaks.

I have it by certain tradition, that it was given to the first Enchanter by an enchantress. Tacit.

2. A woman whose beauty or enchantments give irresistible influence.

From this enchantress all these ills are come; You are not safe 'till you pronounce her doom. Dryden.

Oft with th'o' enchantress of his soul he talks; Sometimes in crowds distress'd. Thomson.

To ENCHANGE, v. a. [enchaun, Fr.]

1. To infix; to enclose in any other body so as to be held fast, but not concealed.

The polit'd divinity, being more gentle and beheld; Or Parian marble, when cachet'd in gold. Dryden.

Words, which, in their natural situation, shine like jewels; each enchanting bow, gold, look, when transposed into notes, as if set in lead. Felton.

2. To adorn by being fixed upon it.

What see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem, Enchad with all the honours of the world! Shaks. They burn and, household gods deface; To drink in bowls which glist'ring gems encase. Dryden.

3. To adorn by raised or embroidered work.

When was old Sirewood's head more quarterly carded, Or look'd the earth more green upon the world, Or nature's crimson more enclosed and hid. Ben Jonson.

ENCEAISON. n. s. [encaision, old law Fr.] Cause; occasion.

ENC

Certs, said he, well mote I should to tell
The fond enchant of that me hitter led. Fairy Q.
To ENCLOSE. v. a. [from circle.] To surround; to environ; to enclose in a ring or circle; to enthrall.

That stranger gorgeous Laplander realm obeys, A realm defended with encircling seas. Pope.

Beneath a sculptur'd arc he sits enthron'd: The peers encircling, from an awn full. Pope.

ENCIRCLED. r. s. [from circle.] A circle; a ring.

In whose enclosures if ye gaze, Your eyes may tear a lover's maze. Sidney.

ENCLITICS. n. s. [from in, i., e.]

Particles which throw back the accent upon the foregoing syllable.

To ENCLOS:\u00e9. v. a. [enclose.] 1. To encompass things or grounds common by a fence.

The protector caused a proclamation to be set forth against enclosures, commanding that they who had enclosed lands, accustomed to be open, should open them to the public.
As much land as a man may fill, and can use the product of, so much he by his labour encloses from the common.
For enclosing of land, the usual way is with a bank set with quick.
ENCLOSURE. n. s. [from enclose.]

2. To encompass; to encircle; to surround; to encompass; to shut in between other things; to include.

The fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper; they shall be set in gold in their enclosures. Ex. xxvii. 20.

The peer now spreads the glittering forse wide,
T'envelopes the lock; now joins it, to divide. Pope.

3. To hold by an exclusive claim.

ENCLOSER. n. s. [from enclose.]

1. One that encloses or separates common fields in several distinct properties.

If God had laid all common, certainly
Man would have been th'encloser; but since now
God hath impa'd us, on the contrary, Man breaks the fence. Herbert.

2. Any thing in which another is enclosed.

ENCLOSED. n. s. [from enclose.]

1. The act of enclosing or environing any thing.

The membranes are for the comprehension or enclo'sure of all these together. Wiltia.

2. The separation of common grounds into distinct possessions.

Enclosures began to be frequent, whereby amble land was turned into pasture. Barwn. the Heven. Vili.

Touching enclosures, a company of lands inclosed are thereby improved in worth two or three parts at the least. Hayward.

3. The appropriation of things common.

Let no man appropriate what God hath made common; that is against justice and charity, and by miraculos accidents God hath declar'd his displeasure against such enclosure. Taylor.

4. State of being shut up in any place; encompassed, or environed.

This expresses particularly the enclo'sure of the waters within the earth. Bur雾.'s Theory.

For the young, during its enclo'sure in the womb, there are formed membranes inclosing it, called fencements.

5. The space enclosed; the space comprised within certain limits.

And all, that else this world's enclo'sure base
Bath great or glorious in mortal eye,
Adorns the person of her Majesty, Fairy Queen.

They are to live all in a body, and generally within the same enclosure; to marry among themselves, and to eat no meats that are not in their own way. Addition's Spectator.

6. Several; ground enclosed; ground separated from the common.

ENC

Tis not the common, but the enclosure must make him rich. Smol.

ENCOURAGE. n. s. [encourage.] A panegyrist; a proclaimer of praise; a praiser.

The sight of Jesu is the great encourager of the Chinese. Locke.

ENCOURAGING. adj. [from encourage.] Encouraging.

ENCOMIATICAL. adj. [from in, en., e.]

ENCOMIATION. n. s. [from encourage.]

Laudatory; containing praise; bestowing praise.

ENCOURAGEMENT. n. s. [from encourage.]

To go round any place; as, Drake en'couraged the world.

ENCOURAGEMENT. n. s. [from encourage.]

Circumlocution; oblique tendency of talk.

By this encouragement and drift of question, That they do know my son, come you more near. Shak.

ENCOURAGE, adv. [Fr.] Again; once more.

A word used at publick shows when a singer, or fiddler, or buffoon, is desired by the audience to do the same thing again.

To the same notes thy sons shall hum or snore, And all thy yawning daughters cry encore. Dry.

ENCOUNTER. n. s. [encounter, Fr.]

1. Duel; single fight; conflict.

Thou hast best me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt myself and me. Shaks.

He's leave this keen encounter of our wits, And fall something into a slacker method. Shaks.

Pallas th'encounter seeks; but ere he throws To Tuscan Fides thus addressed his vows: O sacred stream, direct my flying dart, And give to pass the proud Halesus' heart. Dry.

2. Battle; fight in which enemies rush against each other.

Two thick clouds With heav'n's artillery fought, came rattling On over the Caspian; then stand front to front, Hove a ring a'round, 'twill signals the bow. To join such dark encounter in mid air. Milton.

3. Eager in warm conversation, either of love or anger.

The peaking coromna comes to me in the instant of our encounter, after we had spoke the prologue to our comedy. Shak.

4. Accidental congress; sudden meeting.

Propitious Pallas to secure her care, Around him spread a veil of twilight, air, Round th'encounter of the vulgar crowd. Pope.

5. Accrosing; transient or unexpected address.

But in what habit will you go along?—
Like a woman; for I would reveal the loose encroaches of lascivious men. Shak.

Those parts of Brutus
Is ours already; and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours. Shak.
To Encounter. n. a. [from the n.]
1. To meet face to face: to front.
   If I must die,
   I will encounter darkness as a bride,
   And hug it in mine arms.
   Shakespeare, Macbeth.

2. To attack; to meet in the front.
   Which way so ever we turn, we are encountered with dead evidences and sensible demonstrations of a Deity.
   Tillotson.

3. To oppose; to oppugn.
   Jurors are not bound to believe two witnesses, if the veracity of the fact does reasonably encounter them.

4. To meet by accident.
   I am most fortunate thus to encounter you:
   You have ended my business, and I will merily
   Accept any you have.
   Shakesp. Coriolan.

Encounter. n. n.
1. To rush together in a hostile manner;
to conflict.
   Encounter so,
   As doth the fury of two desperate men,
   Which, in the meeting, fall and die.
   Shakespeare.
   Five times, Marches,
   Have I fought with thee, so often hast thou beat me,
   And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
   as often as we eat.
   Shakespeare. Coriolan.

2. To engage; to fight: it has with before the thing.
   Our war.
   Will turn into a fruitful combick sport,
   When ladies crave to be encountered with, and
   Of the wars of their Husbands, of the Turks.
   Those who have the most dread of death, must be content to encounter with, whether they will or not.
   Hale.

3. To meet face to face.
4. To come together by chance.

Encounter, n. s. [from encounter.]
1. Opponent; antagonist; enemy.
   The lion will not kick with his feet, but he will strike such a stroke with his tail, that he will break the back of his encounter with it. More.
   The doctrines of the reformations have the kept the field against all encounters. Afterbury.

2. One that loves to accost others.
   An old term.
   Oh these encounters! so gilt of tongue,
   They give a cocking welcome ere it comes; and wide uncasp the tables of their thoughts.
   To every ticklish leader, Shaks, Tullis and Cresida.

Encouragement. n. a. [encourager, Fr.]
1. To animate; to incite to any thing.
   They encourage themselves in an evil matter.
   Ps. Isiv. 5.

2. To give courage to; to support the spirits; to inspiri; to embolden.
   Kinds of music encourage men and make them warlike, or make them soft and effeminate. Bacon.

3. To raise confidence; to make confident.
   I doubt not but there are ways to be found, to assist our reason in this most useful part; and this the judicious Hooker encourages me to say. Locke.

Encouragement. n. s. [from encourager.]
1. Incitement to any action or practice; incentive.

2. Encourage of confidence.
   Such strength of heart
   Thy conduct and example gives;
or small
   Encouragement Godolphin, wise and just. Philips.

3. Favour; countenance; support.
   For when he dies, farewell all honour, bounty,
   All generous encouragement of arts. Ovats's Orphan.
   The approach of immorality will lie heaviest against established religion, because those who have no religion will profess themselves of that which has the encouragement of the law. Rogers.

Encourager. n. s. [from encourager.]
One that supplies incitements to any thing; a favourer.

Live then, thou great encourager of arts,
Live ever in our thankful hearts.

As the pope is a master of polite learning, and a great encourager of arts; and so at Rome these immediately thrive, under the encouragement of the Addison.

Addison.

To ENCROACH. v. a. [accroacher, from ever a hook, Fr.]
1. To make invasions upon the right of another; to put a hook into another man's possessions to draw them away.
   Those Irish captains of counties have encroached upon the queen's freeculls and tenants. Spencer.

2. To advance gradually and by stealth upon that to which one has no right; upon the subject.
   This hour is mine; if for the next I care, I grow too wide,
   And do encroach upon death's side. Herbert.
   Tis police, let house from under ground,
   Before she drives diseases and afright;
   And every moment rises to the sight,
   Aspiring to the skies, encroaching on the light.
   Dryden.

To ENCROACH. v. n.
1. To creep on gradually without right.
   The superstitious that rest, voluntarily,
   And degrees mingling itself with the rites,
   Even of every divine service, done to the true only God,
   Must be considered of as a creeping and encroaching evil.
   'Til' encroaching ill you early should oppose;
   Flatter'd, tis worth, and by indulgence grows.
   Dryden.

2. To pass bounds.
   They fabled how the serpent, whom they call'd Ophiom, with Eurymache, the Encroaching Eve perhaps, had first the rule
   Of high Olympus, Milton, Pet. Lat.
   Next, feasted with hedges and deep ditches round,
   Exclude th'encroaching cattle from thy ground,
   Dryden.

Encroacher. n. s. [from encroach.]
1. One who seizes the possession of another by gradual and silent means.
   The bold envious,
   Gain by degrees huge tracts of land,
   Till Neptune, with one general sweep,
   Turns all to ground. Swift.

2. One who makes slow and gradual advances beyond his rights.
   Full dress creates dignity, augment consciousness, and keeps at distance an encroacher. Clarissa.

Encroachment. n. s. [from encroach.]
1. An unlawful gathering in upon another man. For example; if two men's grounds lie together, the one presses too far upon the other; or if a tenant owe two shillings rent-service to the lord, and the lord takes three; so the Spencer encroached to themselves royal power and authority.
   But this usurper his encroachment proud
   Stays not on man: to God his tow'r intends Siege, and defiance.
   Milton's Par. Let.

2. To advance into the territories or rights of another.
   As a man had a right to all he could employ his labour upon, so he had no temptation to labour for more than he could make use of: this left no room for controversy about the title, nor for encroachment on the right of others.
   Locke.

The ancient Romans made many encroachments on the sea, and laid the foundations of their pa-lines within the very borders of it. Addison on Italy.

The people, since the death of Solon, had already made great encroachments.

Swift.

To ENCUMBER. v. a. [encumber, Fr.]
1. To clog; to load; to impede.
   We have, by this many years' experience, found that the utmost genius, and knowledge, and encumbered with any notable inconvenience.
   Hooker.

2. To entangle; to embarrass; to obstruct.
   The verbal copier is encumbered with so many difficulties at once, that he can never disentangle himself.
   Dryden.

The god awak'd,
And thrice in vain he shook his wing,
Encumber'd with his vest, without defence.

Dryden.

Prior.

3. To load with debts; as, his estate is encumbered with mortgages.

Encumbrance. n. s. [from encumber.]

1. Clog; load; impediment.
   Philosophers agreed in despising riches, at best, considering them as unnecessary encumbrances or burdens.
   Temple.

Dead limbs are an encumbrance to the body; instead of being of use to it. Addison's Freecull.

2. Excessence; useless addition.
   Stip from the hawking. Alp's their piny load,
   The huge encumbrance of his, like Jack woods. Thomson.

3. Burthen upon an estate.
   In respect of the encumbrances of a living, conider whether it be sufficient for his family, and to maintain hospitality.

Encyclopaedia. n. s. [encyclopaedia.]

1. Circular; sent round through a large region.
   This council was not received in patriarchal seas, which is evident from Phocyl's encyclopædic epistle to the patriarch of Alexandria. Stillington.

2. The circle of sciences; the round of learning.
   In this encyclopaedia and round of knowledge, like the great wheels of heaven, we must observe two circles, that while we are daily carried about,
   and whirled on by the swing and rapt of the one,
   we may maintain a natural and proper course in the sober wheel of the other. Brown's Vulg. Err.

   Every science borrows from all the rest, and we cannot attain any single one without the encyclo-

3. Glanville.

This art may justly claim a place in the encyclopedia, especially such as serves for a model of edu-

4. Arbuthnot.

Encysted. adj. [encysted.]

Encased in a vesicule or bag.

Encysted tumours borrow their names from a cyst or bag in which they are contained.

Sharp's Surgery.
1. The extremity of the length of any thing materially extended. Of bodies that have equal dimensions we do not use end: the extremity of breadth is side.

2. Extremity or last part in general. The extremity and bounds of all bodies we have no difficulty to arrive at; but, when the mind is there, it finds difficulties in bordering its progress into this endless expansion: of that it can neither find, nor conceive any end. Locke.

3. The last particle of any assignable duration.

4. The conclusion or cessation of any action.

5. When end is not used materially, it is opposed to beginning. Better is the end than the beginning thereof. Eccles.

6. The conclusion or last part of any thing; as, the end of a chapter; the end of a discourse.

7. Ultimate state; final doom. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace. Psalms.

8. The point beyond which no profession can be made. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits end. Ps. cxlvii.

9. Final determination; conclusion of debate or deliberation. My guilt be on my head, and there's an end. Shakespeare.

10. Death; fate; decease. I determine to write the life and the end, the nature and the fortunes of George Villiers. Wharton. The soul receives intelligence, By her near genius, of the body's end. And so imparts a sadness to the sense. Daniel's Cis. 'Tis the great business of life to fit ourselves for our end, and no man can live well that hath not death in his eye. L'Estrange. Remember Mike's end. Wedg'd in that timber which he strove to rend. Roscommon.

12. Cession; period. What is the sign of the end of the world? Matthew. Great houses shall have an end. Amos.

13. Limit; termination. There is no end of the store. Nahum.

14. Abolition; total loss. There would be an end of all civil government if the assignment of civil power were by such institution. Locke.

15. Cause of death; destroyer. Take heed you daily not before your king, Lest he that is the supreme King of kings Confound your hidden falsehood, and award Either of you to be the other's end. Shak, rich. III.

16. Consequence; conclusive event; conclusion. O, that a man might know The end of this day's business, it came! But it sufficeth that the day itself shall end. Shakespeare. The end of these things is death. Rom. vii. 24.

17. Fragment; broken piece. Thus I clothe my naked villian With old end and toil'n form of Holy writ, And seem a saint. Shakespeare, Richard III.

18. Things intended; final design; the termination of intellectual prospect. Wisdom and the wise have framed one and the same thing to serve commodiously for divers ends, and of those ends any one may be sufficient cause for continuance, though the rest have ceased. Hooker. All those things which are done by him, have some end for which they are done; and the end for which they are done, is a reason of his will to do them. Hooker.

19. N. S. [From endamege.] Damage; loss. These flags of France that are advanced here, Have hither march'd to the endamege. Shakespeare.

20. To endanger. To put into hazard; to bring into peril. Every one desires his own preservation and happiness, and therefore hath a natural dread of every thing that can destroy his being, or endanger his happiness. Addison's Spectator. He rais'd the rest, To force the foes from the Lavinian shore, And Italy's endameger'd peace restore. Dryden's En. My kingdom claims your birth; my last defence, Of our endager'd fleet, may claim your confidence. Dryden. Volatile salts never exist in an animal body; the heat required to make them volatile, endangers the animal. Arbuthnot. The interest endager'd is our title to heaven. Rogers.

21. To incur the danger of; to hazard. He that turneth the humours back, and maketh the wound bleed inward, endangereth his own ulcers. Baron.

22. To endanger. [From dear.] To make dear; to make beloved. All those instances of charity which usually endanger each other, sweetness of conversation, frequent acknowledgement, all significations of love must be expressed towards children. Taylor. And in the mixture of all these appears a variety, which all the rest endures. Desharnais. The only thing that can endanger religion to your practice, will be to raise your affections above this world. Wake.

23. To endanger. [From endear.] The cause of love; means by which any thing is endear'd. Her first endearments, twining round the soul. Thomson.

24. The state of being endear'd; the state of being loved. Is not the separate property of a thing the great cause of its endearment amongst all mankind? South.

25. When a man shall have done all that he can to make his own friend, and adapted his power to create endearment between them, he may, in the end, be forced to write vanity and frustration. South.
END

ENDEAVOUR. n.s. [devoir, Fr. endeur, -voir.] Labour directed to some certain end; effort to obtain or avoid.

My studied purposes went Beyond all man's endeavours. Shaksp. Hen. VIII.

Hear's doth divide
The story of the main in many functions, Setting Endeavour in continual motion. Shakesp.

Here their appointment we may best discover, And look on them when the same subject. Dryden.

The bold and sufficient pursuers their game with more passion, endeavour, and application, and thereby more success and victory. Pope.

She could not make the least effort towards the producing of anything that hath vital and organic parts.

Such an assurance as will quicken men's endeavours for the obtaining of a lesser good, ought to animate men more powerfully in the pursuit of that which is infinitely greater. Ticklina.

This is the hinge on which the liberty of intellectual beings, in their constant endeavours after, and steady prosecution of, true felicity, Lecke.

To Endeavour. v.r. [from the noun.] To labour to a certain purpose; to work for a certain end. It has commonly after before the thing.

I could wish that more of our country clergy would endeavour after a handson education. Addis.

Of such as those who met rewards who could exceed. And those were prizes, who’d but endeavour’d well, Pope.

To Endeavour, v.a. To attempt; to essay.

To pray, repentance, and obedience due, Though but endeavour’d with sincere intent, Mine ear shall not be slow, mine ear not shut. Milton.

Endeavourer. n.s. [from endeavour.] One who labours to a certain end. He appears an humble endeavours, and speaks honestly to no purpose. Rymer’s Tragedies.

Endecagon. n.s. [tɛndɛˈgɔn]. A plain figure of eleven sides and angles.

Endemic. adj. [ɪndɛmɪk]. Peculiar to Endemic.

A country; used of any Endemic. Disease proceeding from some cause peculiar to the country where it reigns; such as the scurvy to the northern climes. Quincy.

While being a consumption under the notion of a pandemic, or endemic, or rather a venereal disease, to England. Harvey.

Solemnly, from the frequency of the plants springing up in any region, could gather what endemic diseases the inhabitants were subject to. Ray.

Endemical disease is what is common to the people of the country. Arbuthnot on Air.

What demonstrates the plague to be endemic to Egypt; its invasion and going off at certain seasons. Arthaboth.

To Endenz, v.a. [from denizen.] To make free; to enfranchise.

The English tongue hath been beautified and adorned by other tongues, by enfranchising and endenizing strange words. Camden.

To En dici t. v.a. [enditer, Fr. dictum.

To Endite. § Lat.

1. To charge any man by a written accusation before a court of justice as, he was endicted for felony. It is often written indict.

2. To draw up; to compose; to write.

How shall I fort unto me indite,
When neither I can read nor he can write. Gay.

How to show man in these his useful rules rid,
When to repress, and when indulge our flights! Pope.

To Endite. v.a. To compose.

Your battles they hereafter shall indite,
And draw the image of our Mars in flight. Waller.

Endic tment. n.s. [from endite.] A Endic tment. bill or declaration made in form of law, for the benefit of the commonwealth; or an accusation for any offence offered unto jurors, and by their verdict found to be true, before an officer can have power to punish the same offence. Cowell.

The necessity that the species of the crime be described in the libel or articles, which our English lawyers call an indictment or information. Addis.

We never bring any indictment at all against them, but think commendably even of them. Hooker.

The hand-writing against him may be cancelled in the court of law, and yet the indictment ran on in the court of conciseness. South.

Attend the court, and thou shalt briefly find
In that court place the manners mankind;
Hear the indictments, then return again,
Call thyself wretch, and, if thou darst, complain. Dryden.

Endive. n.s. [endive, Fr. intyburn, Lat.]

A plant.

Endive, or succory, is of several sorts; as the white, the green, and the curled. Mortimer.

Endless. adj. [from end.] 1. Having no end; being without conclusion or termination.

Nothing was more endless than the common method of counting emperors by an enumeration of particular passages in them. Peppe.

2. Infinite in longitudinal extent.

As it is pleasant to the eye to have an endless prospect, so it is some pleasure to a finite understanding to view a series of endless excellences. Ticktall.

3. Infinite in duration; perpetual.

None of the heathen, how curious soever in searching out all kinds of outward ceremonies, could ever endow to resemble herein the church's care for the endless good of her children. Hooker.

But after labours long, and sad delay, Bring them to joyous rest, and endless bliss. Spens.

All our glory extinct, and happy state,
Here swallowed up in endless misery! Milton.

4. Incessant; continual.

All the priests and friars in my realm,
Shall in proportion sing her endless praise. Shakesp.

Each glowing Blunt shall endless smiles bestow,
And soft Turkish cows may make her glow.

Pope.

Endlessly. adv. [from endless.]

1. Incessantly; perpetually.

Though God’s promise has made a sure entail of grace to all those who humbly seek, yet it no where engages that it shall imperfectly and endlessly renew its assaults on those who have often repulsed it. Deoy of Picty.

2. Without termination of length.

Endlessness. n.s. [from endless.]

1. Extension without limit.

2. Perpetuity; endless duration.

3. The quality of being round without an end.

The tropick circles have,
Yea, and those small ones, which the poles engrave,
All the same roundness, evenness, and all.

Endless. adj. [and most]. Remotest; furthest; at the farther end. Dict. To ENDORESE. v.a. [endorse, Fr. dor-sam, Lat.]

1. To register on the back of a writing; to superscribe.

A French gentleman speaking with an English of the law salique, the English said that was meant of the women themselves, not of men claiming women. The French gentleman said, Where do you find this law answered, Look on the backside of the record of the law salique, and there you shall find it endorsed. Bacon’s Advancement.

Upon credence letters was endorsed this superscription, To the king who hath the sun for his herald. Milton’s Par. Reg. Regendum.

Endorsement. n,s. [from endorse.]

1. Superscription; writing on the back.

2. Ratification.

Th’ endorsement of supreme delight,
Writ by a friend, and with his blood. Herbert.

Endow. v.a. [indotare, Lat. endowaire, Fr.]

1. To enrich with a portion.

He shall surely endow her to his wife. Exodus.

2. To supply with any external goods.

An alms-bouse. I intend to endow very handsomely for a dozen superannuated husbands. Addis.

3. To enrich with any excellence.

I at first with two fair gifts Created him endued; ’twas with happiness And immortality; that fondly lost,
This other serv’d but to eternize woe. Milton. Among those who are the most richly endowed by nature, and accomplished by their own industry, how few are there whose virtues are not obscured. Addison.

God did never command us to believe, nor his ministers to preach, any doctrine contrary to the reason he hath pleased to endow us with. Swift.

4. To be the fortune of any one.

I do not think So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endow a man but him. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

Endowment. n.s. [from endow.]

1. Wealth bestowed to any person or use.

2. The bestowing or assuring a dower; the setting forth or severing a sufficient portion for a vicar towards his perpetual maintenance, when the benefice is appropriated. Cowell.

3. Appropriation of revenue.

A chapel will I build, with large endowment. Dryden.

4. Gifts of nature. In this sense it is commonly plural.

By a desire of fame, great endowings are not suffered to lie idle and useless to the publick. Addis.

If providence suffices me even in the blemishes of these creatures, how much more does it discover itself in their several endowments, according to the condition in which they are posted! Addition. To ENDUE. v.a. [indoe, Lat.]

1. To supply with mental excellencies; to invest with intellectual powers.

Endue them with thy holy spirit. Con.; Prayer.

Wisdom was Adam’s instructor in Paradise: wisdom endued the fables, before the law, with the knowledge of holy things. Hooker.

These banish’d men that I have kept withial, Are men endued with worthy qualities. Shakesp.

With what ease,
End’d with royal virtues as thou art.
Might’st thou expel this monster from his throne?

Milton.

Whatsoever other knowledge a man may be endued withal, he is but an ignorant person who does not know God, the author of his being. Tauler.
END
Every Christian is endued with a power; whereby he is enabled to resist and conquer temptations. Timlton.

2. In the following passage it seems incorrectly printed for endow. Leah said, God hath endued me with a good dowry. Gen.

ENDURE. n. s. [from endure.]
1. Continuation; lastings.

Some of them in virtue of great antiquity and continuance, others more fate and of less endurance. Locke.

2. Patience; sufferance.

Great things are done by patience. Great things of small One can create; and in what place soever Thrive under evil, and work ease out of pain. Through labour and endurance. Milton.

Their fortune was most admirable in their presence and endurance of all evils, of pain, and of death. Temple.

I would fain know whether that man takes a rational course to preserve himself, who refuses the endurance of these higher troubles, to secure himself from a condition infinitely more miserable. South.

I should have 'e'en some pains to bring together myself and your accusers, and have heard you, without endurance further. Shaksp. Henry VIII.

To ENDURE. v. a. [endure, Fr. durare, Lat.]
To bear; to sustain; to support unbroken.
The hardness of bodies is chiefly due to the jejuneness of the spirits, and their impurity with the tangible parts, which make them not only hard, but fragile, and less enduring of pressure. Bacon.

Both were of shining steel, and wrought so pure, As might the thickest arms endure. Dryd.

2. To bear with patience.

So dear I love him, that with him all deaths I could endure; without him, live no life. Milton.

The god bants usually the easy and the rich, the nice and the lazy, who grow to endure much, because they can endure little. Temple.

By those own tongues thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Shaksp. Cymbeline. Taking into the city all such things as they thought needful for the enduring of the siege, they destroyed all the rest. Knowle's Hist.

3. To undergo; to sustain.

I wish to die, yet dare not death endure. Dryd.

4. To continue in. Not used.
The deer endures the womb but eight months, and is complete at six years. Brown's Fable. Er.

To ENDUR. v. n.
1. To last; to remain; to continue.
Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life. John.

Doth the crown endure to every generation? Pecora.

By being able to repeat measures of time, or ideas of stated length of duration in our minds, we can imagine duration, where nothing does really endure or exist. Locke.

A charm that shall to age endure Anon.

The mind benevolent and pure.

2. To brook; to bear; to admit.
For how can I endure to see the evil which shall come unto the destruction of my kindred? Hath. vii. 6.

Our great English Jers did not endure that any king or emperor reign in England but themselves may, they could hardly endure that the crown of England should have any power over them. Davies.

ENDOUR. n. s. [from endure.]
1. One that can bear or endure; sustainer; sufferer.

They are very valiant and harsly; for the most part great endurers of cold, labour, hunger, and all hardships. Spenser.

2. Continuer; later.

Endwise, adv. [end and wise.] Erectly; uprightly; on end.
A rude and unpolished America, peopled with slothful and naked Indians, living in pitiful huts and cabins, made of poles yet enduring. Ray on the Creation.

To ENCAGE. v. a. [encage, Lat.] To kill; to destroy.
Some plagues partake of such a pernicious degree of malignity, that, in the manner of a most presentment pox, they excrete in two or three hours, suddenly corrupting or extinguishing the vital spirits. Prior.

ENEMY. n. s. [enemi, Fr.iniemus, Lat.]
1. A publick foe.
All these statues speak of English rebels and Irish enemies, as if the Irish had never been in condition of subjects, but always out of the protection of Government. Milton.

The enemy thinks of raising three thousand men for the next summer, Additon on the War.

2. A private opponent; an antagonist.
I say unto you, love your enemies. Matt.

3. Any one who regards another with malicevolence; not a friend.

Kent in his revenge. Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service. Improper for a slave. Shaksp. King Lear.

4. One that dislikes.
He that despises any monstrous ambition, ought to be looked on as an enemy to truth and knowledge. Bacon. Bold is the critic, who dares prove These heroes, that have friends to love; and, whether he be for or against them, that they were enemies to war. Prior.

5. [In theology.] The fiend; the devil.
Defend us from the danger of the enemy. Common Prayer.

ENERGETICK. adj. [energetic.
1. Forceful; active; vigorous; powerful in effect; efficacious.
These miseries entered the body, are not so energetic as to venerate the entire mass of blood in the Instant. Diet.

2. Operative; active; working; not at rest.
If then we will conceive of God truly, and, as far as we can, we must look upon him not only as an eternal Being, but also as being, eternally energetic. Gros.

ENERGY. n. s. [energys.
1. Power not exerted in action.
They are not efficacious of any thing, nor leave no work behind them, but are energies merely; for their working upon mirrours, and places of echo, doth not alter any thing in those bodies. Bacon.

2. Force; vigour; efficacy; influence.
Whether with particles of heavenly fire The God of nature did his inspirer; Or earth, but new divided from the sky, And plant still, remain'd eti'l etereal energy. Dryden.

God thinketh with operation infinitely perfect, with an omnipotent as well as an eternal energy. Gros.

Beg the blessed Jesus to give an energy to your imperfect prayers, by his most powerful intercession. Smolbrige.

3. Faculty; operation.
Matter, though divided into the subtlest parts, moved swiftly, is senseless and stupid, and makes no approach to vital energy. Locke.

How can concussion of atoms beget self-consciousness, and powers and energies that we feel in our minds? Beccley.

ENEF
4. Strength of expression; force of significatio; spirit; life.
Who did ever, in French authors, see The comprehensive English energy? B. Com.
Swift and ready, and familiar communication is made by speech; and, when animated by eloquence, it acquires a greater life and energy, ravishing and captivating the hearers. Holder.
Many words deserve to be thrown out of our language, and not a few anticipated to be restricted on account of their energy and sound. Swift.

To ENERVATE. v. a. [enervo, Lat.] To weaken; to deprive of force; to emasculate.
Great empires, while they stand, do enervate and destroy the forces of the nations which they have subdued, resting upon their own protecting forces. Bacon.

Sheep's fondness often encounter those who are bred like fondlings at home. On each enervate string they taught the note. Pope.

To pant, or tremble through an eunuch's throat. Pope.

Footmen exercise themselves, whilst their enervated lords are softly lodging in their chariots. Addison du Baudu and Pope.

ENERVATION. n. s. [from enervate.]
1. The act of weakening; emasculatio.

2. The state of being weakened; effeminacy.

To ENERVE. v. a. [enervo, Lat.] To weaken; to break the force of; to crush.

We shall be able to solve and enervate their force. Dryg.

Such object hath the power to soften and tame Severest temper, smooth the rugged'st brow, and with voluptuous hope dissolve. Milton.

To ENFE'AMISH. v. a. [from fanish.] To starve; to fanish; to kill with hunger. Dict.

To ENFA'EEBLE. v. a. [from feeble.] To weaken; to enervate; to deprive of strength.

I've helped a lady, The princess of this country; and the air won't Revingously enfeebles me. Shaksp. Cymbeline. My people are with sickness much enfeebled. Shaksp.

Much hath hell debauch'd, and pain Enfeeb'd me, to what I was in hea'n! Milton.

Some employ their time in affairs below the dignity of their person, and being called by God, or the republic, to bear great burdens, do enfeebles their understandings by worldly and brutish business. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

Sure, nature form'd me of her softest mold, Enfeebled all my soul with tender passions; And sunk me even below my own weak sex. Addinton.

To ENFO'EFF. v. a. [jeoffamentum, low Lat.] To invest with any dignities or possessions. A law term.

If the eldest son enfo'eff the second, reserving hommage, and that hommage paid, and then the second son dies without issue, it will descend to the eldest as heir, and the seignory is extinct. Hale.

ENFE'OFFMENT. n. s. [from enfo'eff.]
1. The act of enfo'effing.
2. The instrument by which one is invested with possessions.

To ENFETTER. v. a. [from fetter.] To bind in fetters; to enchain. Not in use.

His soul is so enfetter'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list. Shaksp.

ENFIL'ADE. n. s. [Fr.] A straight passage; any thing through which a right line may be drawn. Military term.
To Enfilade. v. a. To pierce in a right line.

To Enfranchise, v. n. 1. To admit to the privileges of a freeman. 2. To free or release from custody. 3. To free from the duties of a debtor.

To Engage, v. a. 1. To make liable to a debt. 2. To engage to deliver. 3. To engage to bring into a party.

To Enfranchise, n. s. [from enfranchise.]
1. Investiture of the privileges of a denizen. 2. Release from prison or slavery.

To Enforce, v. n. 1. To give strength to; to strengthen; to invigorate. 2. To make or gain by force.

Enforcement, n. s. [from enforce.]
1. An act of violence; compulsion; force offered. 2. Sanction; that which gives force to a law. 3. The rewards and punishments of another life, which the Almighty has established as the enfranchisement of his law, are of weighty enough to determine the choice. Locke.

Motive of conviction; urgent evidence. The same truth that is evident by light, and his assumption of our flesh to his divinity, was an enforcement beyond all the methods of wisdom that were ever made use of in the world. Hammond.

Pressing evidence. More than I have said, the leisure and enforcement of the time forbids to dwell on. Shakesp. Rich. III.

Enfrounced, adj, [from enforce.]
Mixed with lightning; enforceable. Heart cannot think what courage and what cries, with foul enforced smoke and flashing fire, the hell-born beast forth out of the skies. Every Queen.

Enfranched, adj. [from enfranchise.]
To engage yours. Thete rope. rebel. To engage your.

To Engage. v. a. [engager.]
To engage an appointment or contract. To bind by an agreement or conveyance.

To Enfranchise. v. n. [from enfranchise.]
1. To admit to the privileges of a freeman. 2. To free or release from custody.

Enfranchisement, n. s. [from enfranchise.]
1. Investiture of the privileges of a denizen. 2. Release from prison or slavery.

Enforce, v. n. 1. To give strength to; to strengthen; to invigorate. 2. To make or gain by force.

Enforcement, n. s. [from enforce.]
1. An act of violence; compulsion; force offered. 2. Sanction; that which gives force to a law. 3. The rewards and punishments of another life, which the Almighty has established as the enforcement of his law, are of weighty enough to determine the choice. Locke.

Motive of conviction; urgent evidence. The same truth that is evident by light, and his assumption of our flesh to his divinity, was an enforcement beyond all the methods of wisdom that were ever made use of in the world. Hammond.

Pressing evidence. More than I have said, the leisure and enforcement of the time forbids to dwell on. Shakesp. Rich. III.

Enfrounced, adj, [from enforce.]
Mixed with lightning; enforceable. Heart cannot think what courage and what cries, with foul enforced smoke and flashing fire, the hell-born beast forth out of the skies. Every Queen.

Enfranched, adj. [from enfranchise.]
To engage yours. Thete rope. rebel. To engage your.
This bastard love is engendered betwixt lust and violence.

2. To produce; to form.

On nature thou, who of the selfsame mettle, Whereof the proud child, arrogant man, is built, Engender art the black, and adder blue. Shak.

Again, if souls do other souls beget,

To be by themselves, or by the body's price:

If by themselves, what doth their works betoken,

But the bright soul engender every hour? Daniel.

3. To excite; to cause; to produce.

Say, can you fast? Your stomachs are too young,

And abstinence engenders maladies. Shak.

The presence of a king engenders love

Amongst his subjects and his royal friends. Shak.

That engenders thunder in his breast,

And makes his heart these oppositions feel. Shak.

It unloads the mind, engenders thoughts, and animates virtue. Addison.

4. To bring forth.

Vice engenders shame, and folly brooks o'er grief. Prior.

To ENGINE. v. n. To be caused; to be produced.

Thick clouds are spread, and storms engendered.

ENGINE. n.s. [engin, Fr. ingegno, Ital.]

1. Any mechanical complication, in which various movements and parts concur to one effect.

2. A military machine.

This is our engine, towers that overthrow;

Our speck that hurls, our sword that wounds our foes.

Fairf.

3. Any instrument.

The sword, the arrow, the gun, with many terrible engines of death, will be well employed.

He takes the scissors, and extends

The little engine on his fingers ends. Pope.

4. Any instrument to throw water upon burning houses.

Some cut the pipes, and some the engines play;

And some, more bold, mount ladders to the fire. Dryden.

5. Any means used to bring to pass, or to effect. Usually in an ill sense.

Prayer must be divine and heavenly, which the devil with all his engines so violently opposes. "Lambs's Rules for Devotion.

They had th'ealest engines been, to near

His fortunes up into the state they were. Daniel.

ENGINEER. r.s. [ingenieur, Fr.] One who manages engines; one who directs the artillery of any army.

For 'tis the spirit that has the engineer

Heap'd with his own petard. Shak. Hamlet.

Him thus engag'd,

Diserving from ear, some engineer. Dryden.

Next to guide to 'm incuring charge, desist'd,

By one nice shot, to terminate the war. Phillips.

An author, who points his satire at a great man,

Is like the engine who signalized himself by this ungenerous addition. Add."n.

ENGINERY. n.s. [from engine].

1. The act of managing artillery.

They may descend in mathematicks to fortification, architecture, enginey, or navigation. Milton.

2. Engines of war; artillery.

We saw the foe

Approaching, gross and huge, in hollow column

To engird, to inclose; to surround; to environ; to encompass.

My heart is thron'd with grief,

My body round engirt with misery;

For what's more miserable than discontent?

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine. Shak.
 commodity, in order to sell it at a high price.

A new sort of engravers, or letter-cutters, having the feeding and supplying this numerous body of workmen in the woddle manufactories, out of their own shrouifies, set the price upon the work done by the hand, andandler.

Engrossment n. s. [from engross.] Appropriation of things in the gross; exorbitant acquisition.

Our thief, an assax’t with wax, our mouths with honey:

We bring it to the live; and, like the bees,
Are murder’d for our pains! This bitter taste
I like but little; but I do not think it worse, as I shall not feel the dying father. Shakesp.

Those held their immediate engrossments of power and favour by no other tenure than pre-

To Engrave. v. a. [from guard.] To protect; to defend; to surround as guards. Not used.

A hundred knights! yes, that on ev’ry dream
He may engrave his dazzle with their pow’rs.
And hold our lives at mercy. Shakesp. King Lear.

To Enhance. v. a. [hauzser, enhasser, Fr.] 1. To lift up; to raise on high. A sense now obsolete.

Of them high at once their hands enhanc’d,
And bent up once their huge blows did down.

2. To raise; to advance: to heighten in price.

The desire of money is every where the same:
its vent varies very little, but as its greater scru-

And enhances its price, and increases the scramble.

Locke.

3. To raise in esteem.

What is it but the experience of want that en-enhances the value of plenty? "*F’Strange."

The remembrance of the difficulties we now undergo, will contribute to enhance our pleasure.

A h.

4. To aggravate; to increase from bad to worse.

To believe or pretend that whatever our hearts incite is the will of God within us, is the principle of villany that hath acted in the children of disobedience, enhanced and improved with circumstances of greater impudence than the most abom-inated villains were guilty of. *Hammond.

The relation those children bore to the priesthood, contributed to enhance their guilt, and increased their punishment.

ENHANCEMENT. n. s. [from enhance.]

1. Encrease; augmentation of value.

Their yearly rents are not improved, the landlords making no less gain by lines than by enhanced rents.

Bacon.

2. Aggravation; increase of ill.

Jocular slanders bare, from the slightness of the temptation, an enhancement of guilt.

ENIGMA n. s. [enigma, Lat. anura]. A riddle; an obscure question; a position expressed in remote and ambiguous terms.

The dark enigma will allow
A meaning; which, it well I understand,
From sanctity will free the god’s command.

Dryden.

A custom was amongst the ancients of proposing enigma at festivals, and adjudging a reward to him that solved it.

Pope.

ENIGMATICAL adj. [from enigma.]

1. Obsolete; ambiguously or darkly expressed.

Your answer, sir, is enigmatical. Shakesp.

Enigmatical deliveries comprehend useful verities; but being mistaken by liberal expositors at first, they have been misunderstood by most since.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

Whilst they affect enigmatical obscurity, they puzzel the readers of their divulged processes.

Boyle.

Athensw gives instances of the enigmatical pro-positional use in Athens, and of the forfeitures and rewards upon the solution or nonsolution.

Broome’s Notes on the Odyssey.

2. Cloudy; obscurely conceived or apprehended.

Faith here is the assent to those things which came to us by hearing, and are so believed by adherence, or dark enigmatical knowledge, but hereafter are seen or known demonstratively. Hammond.

ENIGMATICALLY. adv. [from enigma.]

In a sense different from that which the words in their familiar acceptation imply.

Homer speaks enigmatically, and intends that these monsters are merely the creation of poetry.

Broome.

ENIGMATIST n. s. [from enigma.] One who deals in obscure and ambiguous matters; maker of riddles.

That I may deal more innocuously with my reader than the abovementioned enigmatist has done, I shall present him with a key to my riddle.

Addison.

To ENJOIN. v. a. [enjoindre. Fr.] To direct; to order; to prescribe. It is more authoritative than direct, and less imperious than command.

To satisfy the good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he’ll enjoin me to. Shakesp. Much ADO.

Monks and philosophers, and such as do continuously enjoine themselves. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

It endeavours to secure every man’s interest, by enjoining that truth and fidelity be invariably preserved. Tillotson.

ENJOINER n. s. [from enjoin.] One who gives injunctions.

ENJOINMENT n. s. [from enjoin.] Direction; command.

Critical trials should be made by publick enjoine-ment, whereby determination might be settled be-

To ENJOY. v. a. [joir, enjoir, Fr.] 1. To feel or perceive with pleasure; to have a pleasing sense of; to be delighted with.

I could enjoy the pains of death,
And smile in agony. Addison’s Cato.

2. To obtain possession or fruition of.

Edward the saint, in whom it pleased God, righteous and just, to let England see what a blessing sin and iniquity would not suffer it to enjoy.

Hooker.

He, who to enjoy
Plato’s elysium, leap’d into the sea,
Cleonibrus. Milton’s Par. Lost.

3. To please; to gladden; to exhilarate; to glad; to delight. This sense is usual with the present or future tense of the word, and is derived from enjoined.

Creatures are made to enjoy ourselves, as well as to serve us.

More.

When a man shall, with a sober, sedate, disborical lancone, look upon and enjoy himself in the sight of his neighbour’s sin and shame, can he plead the instigation of any appetite in nature?

South.

To ENJOY. v. n. To live in happiness.

Then shall I be no more!
And Adam, wedded to another Eve,

ENJOYMENT n. s. [from enjoy.] Pleasure; happiness; fruition.

To ENLARGE. v. a. [enlargir, Fr.] 1. To make greater in quantity or appearance.

The wall, in lustre and effect like glass,
Which o’er each object casting various dyes,
Enlarges some, and others multiplies. Pope.

2. To increase any thing in magnitude; to extend.

Where there is something both lasting and scarce, and so valuable to be hoarded up, there men will not be apt to enlarge their possessions of land.

Locke.

3. To encrease by representation; to magnify; to exaggerate.

To Dilate. v. t. To extend.

O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged. 2 Cor. vi. 11.

4. To set free from limitation.

Though she appear honest to me, yet at other places she enlarged her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Shakesp.

5. To extend to more purposes or uses.

It hath grown from no other root than only a desire to enlarge the necessary use of the word of God, which desire hath begotten an error, enlarging it farther than soundness of truth will bear.

Hooker.

6. To amplify; to engravise.

This is that science which would truly enlarge men’s minds, were it studied.

Locke.

Could the mind, as in number, come to so small a part of extension or duration as excluded divisibility, that would be the indivisible unit, or idea; by repetition of which it would make its more enlarged ideas of extension and duration.

Locke.

7. To release from confinement.

Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That ruff against our person. Shakesp. Henry V.

8. To diffuse in eloquence.

They enlarged themselves upon this subject with all the invidious insinuations they could devise. Clarendon.

To ENLARGE. v. a. [from enlarge.]

1. To expatiate; to speak in many words.

They appointed the chancellor of the Exchequer to enlarge upon any of those particulars.

Clarendon.

This is a theme so unpleasant, I delight not to enlarge on it; rather with the memory of it were extinct. Decay of Piety.

2. To be further extended.

The caliph obtained a mighty empire, which was in a fair way to have enlarged, until they fell out and among themselves. Raleigh.

ENLARGEMENT n. s. [from enlarge.]

1. Encrease; augmentation; farther extension.

The king afterwards enlarged the constant obedience of the city with enlargement both of liberties and of revenues. Hampard.

ENL

The ocean, which, so long our hopes confin'd,
Could give no limits to his waster mind.
Our bounds enlargement was his latest toil,
Nor hath he left us prizers to his isle.

Waller.

There never were any islands, or other con-derable parcels of land, unassayed or unassayed; no any barrier or partition of earth, but comes down to the continent by the mud that is carried down into the sea by rivers. Woodrow.

The common in Homer generally pursued the enlargement of their power by more set quarters of one entire assembly against another. Swift.

The Greek tongue received many enlargements between the time of Homer and that of Plutarch. Swift.

2. Release from confinement or servitude. Lenitive.

At our enlargement what are these due fees? Shakespeare.

If thou holdest thy peace at the time, then shall their enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place. Esther, iv, 14.

3. Magnifying representation.

And all who told it, added something new; and all who heard it, made enlargements too. Pope.

4. Expatiating speech; copious discourse. He concluded with an enlargement upon the vice and corruptions which were got into the army. Clarendon.

ENLARGER. n. s. [from enlarge.] Amplifier; one that encreases or dilates any thing.

We shall not contentiously return, but confer what is in us unto his name and honour, ready to be swallowed in any worthy enlarger. Brown.

To ENLARGE. r. a. [from light.] To illuminate; to supply with light; to enlighten.

Wit from the first has shone on ages past, Enlights the present, and shall warm the last. Pope.

To ENLIGHTEN. r. a. [from light.]
1. To illuminate; to supply with light. God will enlighten my darkness. Psalms. As the sun shineth to the whole world, so there is no faith but this one published, the brightness whereof must enlighten all that come to the knowledge of the truth. Hooker.

2. To quicken in the faculties of vision. His eyes, were enlightened. Sam. Love never fails to master what he finds; the fool enlightens, and the wise he blinds. Dryden.

3. To instruct; to furnish with encrease of knowledge.

This doctrine is so agreeable to reason, that we meet with it in the writings of the enlighten'd heathens. Spectator.

To he who enlightens our understanding, corrects our wills, and enables us to submit our actions to the law of God. Rogers.

4. To cheer; to exhilarate; to gladden.

5. To illuminate with divine knowledge.

Those who were once enlighted. Hebrews.

ENLIGHTENER. n. s. [from enlighten.]
1. Illuminates the one that gives light. O, sent from heaven, Enlightner of my darkness! glorious things Thou hast reveal'd. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. Instructor.

To ENLIEK. r. a. [from link.] To chain to; to connect. Enlink to waste and desolation. Shak. Hen. V.

To ENLIVEN. r. a. [from life, live.]
1. To make quick; to make alive; to animate.

2. To make vigorous or active. The great oaks thus radially bright, Primitive unions and origin of light, Enliven worlds denied to human sight. Prior.

ENN

In a glass-house the workmen often fling in a small quantity of fresh coals, which seems to dis- turn the fire, but very much enlivens it. Swift.

3. To make sprightly or vivacious.

4. To make gay or cheerful in appearance. ENLIVENED. n. s. [from enliven.] That which animates; that which puts in motion; that which invigorates. But the enlivening of the general frame, is one, its operation still the same: its principle is in itself; while ours works, as conferences war, with mingled power. Didden.

To ENLIVEN. v. n. [enluminer, Fr.] To illumine; to enlighten; not in use.

For having yet, in his declension spright, Whose love before their life they do prefer. Spenser.

ENLIGHTEN. n. s. [from enemy; as if enemy, immity, immity.]
1. Unfriendly disposition; malevolence; aversion.

Their being forced to their books, in an age at enmity with all restraint, has been the reason why many have not raised it. Locke.

2. Contrariety of interests or inclinations; mutual malignity.

They shall within this hour, On a dissolution of a dot break out In bitterest enmity. Shakespeare, Coriolanus.

Between thee and the woman I will put enmity; and between thine and her seed: her seed shall bruise thy head, thou bruise his heel. Milton.

How far those controversies, and appearing enmities of those glorious creatures, may be carried, is not my business to shew or determine. Dryden.

Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Jam. iv. 4. You must firmly be convinced, that every sin you commit sets you at enmity with heaven, and will, if not forsaken, render you incapable of it. Wake.

4. Malice; mischievous attempts.

I abjure all roofs, and cluse To wage against the enmity of all. Shakespeare.

He who performs his duty in a station of great power, must seeds incur the utter enmity of many, and the high displeasure of more. Atterbury.

To ENMARE. r. a. [from marble.]
To turn to marble; to harden. Obsole.

Their dying to delay, Thou do'lt enmure the proud heart of her. To ENMESH. r. a. [from mesh.] To net: to entangle; to entrap. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net. The shall cover them all. Shak. Othello.

To ENPIERCE. r. a. [from pierce.] To transfix.
I am too sore enpierced with his shaft To sour with his light feathers. Shakespeare.

ENNEAGON. n. s. [from nine and aion.] A figure of nine angles.

ENNTEATICAL. adj. [from ennt and teatical.] ENNTESEICAL days, are every ninth day of a sickness; and ennntrical years, every ninth year of one's life. To ENROBE. r. a. [enmolibri.]

1. To raise from commonalty to nobility. Many fair promises Are given daily to enable those, That scarce some two days since were worth a noble. Shakespeare.

ENO

2. To dignify; to aggrandize; to exalt, to raise. God, raised up the spirit of this great person, and ennobled his courage and conducted with the entire overflow of this mighty host. South.

To be ennobling to, or ennoble; to ennoble. Alas! not all the blood of all the Howard's. Pope.

3. To elevate; to magnify.

None so lovely, sweet and fair, Or do more ennable love. Waller.

4. To make famous or illustrious. The Spaniards could not in invading Ireland, but only ennobled some of the coasts thereof, with shipwrecks. Bacon.

ENNOBLEMENT. n. s. [from ennable.]

1. The act of raising to the rank of nobility. He added, during parliament, to his former creations, the ennoblement or advancement in nobility of a few others. Bacon.

2. Exaltation; elevation; dignity.

The eternal wisdom enriched us with all ennable, not in the measures of any annexed goodness. Glanville.

ENODATIEN. n. s. [enodatio, Lat.]

1. The act of uniting a knot.

2. Solution of a difficulty. Dict.

ENORMITY. n. s. [from enormous.]

1. Deviation from rule; irregularity.

2. Deviation from right; depravity; corruption.

We shall speak of the particular abuses and enormities of the government. Spens. State of Ireland. That this law will be always sufficient to bridge or restrain enmity, no man can warrant. Hooker.

There are many little enormities in the world, which our preachers would be very glad to see removed; but at the same time dare not meddle with them, for fear of betraying the dignity of the pulpit. Locke.

3. Atrocious crime; flagitious villany; crimes exceeding the common measure. In this sense it has a plural.

It is not a bare speculation that kings may run into enormities; the practice may be proved by history. Swift.

ENORMOUS. adj. [enormis, Lat.]

1. Irregular; out of rule; not regulated by any stated measure.

Wallowing, mowelden, enormous in their guilt. Milton.

Nature here

Want'd, as in her prime; and play'd at will
Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweets,
Wild above rule, or art, enormous bliss! Milton.

2. Excursive; beyond the limits of a regular figure.

The enormous part of the light in the circumference of every lucid point, ought to be less dis- cernible in shorter telescopes than longer, because the shorter transmit less light to the eye. Newton's Opticks.

3. Disordered; confused.

From this enormous state, and seek to give Losses their remedies. Shakespeare. King Lear.

4. Wicked beyond common measure.

5. Exceeding in bulk the common measures; always used with some degree of dislike, or horror, or wonder, giant shepherd here his flock maintains,

Far from the rest, and solitary reigns.

A form enormous! far unlike the race
Of human birth, in stature, or in face. Pope's Odyssey.

ENORMOUSLY, adv. [from enormous.]

Beyond measure.

627
One who could ever espouse a notion so enormous and senseless, as that the world was framed by chance.

ENORMOUSNESS. n. s. [from enormous.] Immeasurable excess.

When those who have no opportunity to examine with their own eyes, see the enormity of our works, but what should hinder them from measuring the master by the disciples?

Decay of Piety.

ENOUGH, adj. [enoh, Sax. genah, Gothic; genog, Dut.] It is not easy to determine whether this word be an adjective or adverb; perhaps, when it is joined with a substantive, it is an adjective, of which eno is the plural. In other situations it seems an adverb; except that after the verb To have, To be, either expressed or understood, it may be accounted a substantive. It is pronounced as if it were written enuff. In a sufficient measure; so may satisfy; so may suffice.

Why wouldst thou go, with one consent they cry, When thou hast gold enough, and Emily? Dryden.

Who then was not enough for our hearts, they by consent separated, and enlarged their pasture.

Enough, n. s.

1. Something sufficient in greatness or excellence.
   This enough for me to have endeavoured the union of my country, whilst I continued in publick employments. Temple.
   We are all enough for our present happiness, we desire not to venture the change, being content, and that is enough. Locke.
   Enough for me to list these swains, First in those fields I sing the silvan strains. Pope.
   I could not quarrel with the present age; it had done enough for me, in making and keeping you two my friends. Pope.

2. Something equal to a man's powers or faculties.
   Some great defects and main errors in his nature, customs, and proceedings, he had enough to do to save and help, with a thousand little industries and watches. Bacon.

Enough.

1. In a sufficient degree; in a degree that gives satisfaction.
2. It notes a slight augmentation of the positive degree; as, I am ready enough to quarrel; that is, I am rather quarrel-some than peaceable.
3. I am apt enough to think, that this same binnacle of a stronger and a weaker, like unto masculine and feminine, doth hold in all living human at the same thing.
4. It is sometimes pleasant enough to consider the different notions which different persons have of the same thing.
5. They are now in prison at Florence; and, as it is said, they are very enough. Addison and Steele.
6. Sometimes it notes diminution; as, the song is well enough; that is, not quite well, though not much amiss.

ENOW. The plural of enough. In a sufficient number.

The earth hath since born enow bleeding witnesses, that it was no want of true courage. Sidney. The walls of the church there are enow coutented to build; the marbles are polished, the roots shine with gold, the altar hath precious stones to adorn it, and of Christ's ministers no choice at all. Hooker.

Man hath selfish foes enow besides, That day and night, for his destruction wait. Milton.

My conquering brother will have slaves enow, To great cruel vows for victory of the earth. Dryden.

There are at Rome enow modern works of architecture to employ any reasonable man. Addison.

ENGLISH. adj. [Fr.] By the way.

To Enrage. v. a. [enrager, Fr.] To irritate; to provoke; to make furious; to exasperate.

To The justice of their quarrel should not so much encourage as enraged them, being to revenge the dishonour done to their king, and to chastise deceitful enemies. Dryer.

Enraged at this, upon the bawl I flew.

And that which most enraged me was, ‘twas true.

To Enrange. v. a. [from range.] To place regularly; to put in order.

To In their jaw
Three ranks of iron teeth enraged were. Fairly Q.

As fair Diana, in fresh summer's day,
Beholds her nymphs enrage'd in shady wood. Fairly Queen.

To Enrank. v. a. [from rank.] To place in orderly ranks.

No leisure had to enrapt his men. Shakesp.

To Enrapt. v. a. [from epept]: the particle pretensive seems to be enrapt.

1. To throw into an ecstasy; to transport with enthusiasm.
   I myself
Am, like a prophet, suddenly enrapt.
   To tell thee, that this day is ominous. Shakesp.

2. In the following quotation it seems erroneously written for enraptured; involv'd, wrap up.

Nor hath he been so enrapt in those studies as to neglect the polite arts of painting and poetry. Arth. and Pope.

To Enrapture. v. a. [from rapture.]

To transport with pleasure; to delight highly.

To Enravish. v. a. [from ravish.]

To throw into ecstasy; to transport with delight.

Frail men, whose eyes seek heavenly things to see, At sight thereof, so much enravish'd be? Spenser.

ENRIVISHMENT. n. s. [from enravish.]

Extasy of delight.

They contrive a kind of splendor from the seemingly obscure vail, which adds to the enravishments of her transported admirers. Glascow's Socippus.

To Enrich'em v. a. [enravish, Fr.]

To have rhum through cold.

The physiologus is enquiring where the party hath taken cold or enravished. Harvey.

To Enrich. v. a. [enricher, Fr.]

1. To make wealthy; to make opulent.
   The king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him daughter. 1 Sam. xvii. 59.
   Henry is able to enrich his queen, And not to seek a queen to make him rich. Shak.
   Great and glorious Rome, queen of the earth, So far enricht, and with the spoils enricht.
   Of nations. Milton's Paradise Regain'd.
   Those are so unambitious to rob others, without enriching themselves. Drakham.

2. To fertilise; to make fruitful.

To see the sweet brooks in silver ryes creep, Enrich the meadows, and supply the deep. Blake.

3. To store; to supply with augmentation of any thing desirable.

There is not any one among them that could ever enrich his own understanding with any certain truth, or ever edify others with it. Raleigh's History.

ENRICHMENT. n. s. [from enrich.]

1. Augmentation of wealth.

2. Amplification; improvement by addition.

I have procured a translation of that hook into the general language, not without great and ample additions, and enrichment thereof. Bacon's Holy War.

It is a vast hindrance to the advancement of our understandings, if we spend too much of our time and pains among infinites and unsearchables. Watts.

To Enrindle. v. a. [from ridge.]

To form with longitudinal protuberances or ridges.

He had a thousand noses,
Horns walk'd and way'd like the enridged sea; It was some kind.

Shakesp. King Lear.

To Enringle. v. a. [from ring.]

To bind round; to encircle.

Ivy so
Enrings the barkly fingers of the elm. Shakesp.

To Enripen. v. a. [from ripe.]

To ripen; to mature; to bring to perfection.

The Summer, how it ennripen'd the year;
And Autumn, what our golden harvests were. Donne.

To Enrobe. v. a. [from robe.]

To dress; to clothe; to habit; to invest.

Her mother hath intended, That, quaint in green, she shall be loose enrol'd, With ribbands pendant, flaring 'bout her head.

Shakesp.

To Enroll. v. a. [enroller, Fr.]

1. To insert in a roll, list, or register.

There he enrolled amongst the king's forces thirty thousand men of the Jews.

1 Mac. x. 56.

We find ourselves enrolled in this heavenly family as servants, and as sons.

Spratt.

2. To record; to write down; to inscribe.

He swore consent to your succession; His oath enrolled in the parliament. Shakesp.

Laws, which none shall find Left them enrol'd, or what the spirit within Shall on the heart engrave. Milton's Paradise Lost.

To Enroll. v. a. [inroll.]

To inwrap.

From his infernal furnace forth he threw
Huge flame, that dinned all the heaven's light, Enroll'd in dusky smoke and brimstone blue.

Fairly Queen.

To Enroller. n. s. [from enroll.]

He that enrols; he that registers.

To Enrolement. n. s. [from enroll.]

Register; writing in which anything is recorded; record.

The king himself caused to be enrolled, and testified by a notary public, and delivered the enrolments, with his own hands, to the Bishop of Salisbury.

To Enro'd. v. a. [from root.]

To fix by the root; to implant deep.

He cannot so precisely weed this land, As his mistakes present occasion; His foes are so enrolled with his friend.

That, plucking to unex an enemy, He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.

Shakesp.
To enviroin; to surround; to encircle; to include.

Upon his royal face there is no note
How dreads an army hath encrowned him. Shaks.
ENS. n. s. [Lat.]

1. Any being or existence.
2. [In chemistry.] Some things that are pretended to contain all the qualities or virtues of the ingredients they are drawn from in a little room.

ENSAMPLE. n. s. [ensample, Ital.] Example; pattern; subject of imitation.

This orthography is now justly disused.
Such life should be the honour of your light;
Such death, the sad ensample of your sight.

Ye have us for an ensample. Spenser.

PHI. II. 17.

Such as would be willing to make use of our ensample to do the same thing, where there is not the same necessity, and fear to follow, may not be able to reach our practice for their excuse.

Sanderson.

To ENSAMPLE, v. a. [from the noun.]
To exemplify; to shew by example;
To give as a copy.

I have followed all the ancient poets historical,
First, Homer, who, in the person of Agamemnon,
Ensampled a good governor and a virtuous man.

Spencer.

To ENSANQUINÉ, v. o. [sangue, Lat. ensanquüer, Fr.] To smear with gore; to suifie with blood.

With cruel tournament the squadrons join,
When cattle pastur'd late; now scatereid lies,
With carcases and arms, the ensanguin'd field Deserted. Wilt's Paradise Lost.

To ENSCHÉDÈUÈ, v. a. [from schedule.]
To insert in a schedule or writing.

You must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands,
Ensched'd here.

Shaks.

To ENSCÔNCÈ, v. a. [from soconer.]
To cover as with a fort; to secure.

Ham.

I myself sometimes, hiding mine honour in my necessity, and fear to shudder, to hedge, and to lurk; and yet your rage will enconce your rages, your cata-mountain look'st under the shelter of your honours,
Shaks.

She shall not see me, I will ensconce myself behind the arras.

Shaks.

Merry Wives of Windsor.

We make tribes of terrors, enconcing ourselves in seeming knowledge and stealth.

Shaks.

A sort of error to enconce

Absurdity and ignorance.

This be courageously invovled,
And having entered barricado'd,
Ensconce'ed himself as formidable
As could be, undermet a table.

Huillbræs.

To ENSÉAM, v. a. [from sewn.]
To sow up; to inclose by a sewn or juncture of needlework.

A name engraven in the resterity of the temple,
one stole away, and ensawed it in his thigh.

Camden.

To ENSÉAR, v. o. [from sear.]
To catarcise; to stanch or stop with fire.

En cas thou fertile and conception wou'dh.
Let us no more bring out th' ingrateful man. Shaks.

To ENSÉAR, v. a. [from sear.]
To enconce in a chest or cabinet; to preserve and secure as a thing sacred.

He seems
A phœnix, gaz'd at all; as that sole bird,
When to enshrine his reliques in the sun's
Bright temple, to Egyptian Theses he flies.

Milton.

To ENSÉAR, v. o. [from scrine.]

The state of servitude; slavery; abject subjection.

The children of Israel, according to their method of stoning, after merities, and thereupon returning to a fresh enquiring to their enemies, had now passed seven years in cruel subjection. Shaks.

Ensley, v. s. [from esnare.]
He that reduces others to a state of servitude.

What indignation in her mind,
Against enagers of mankind!

Swift.

To ENSÈ, v. a. [ensuer, Fr.]
To follow; to pursue.

Flee evil and dog good; seek peace, and ename it.

Common Prayer.

But now these Epicures begin to smile,
And with my doctrine is more at length true;
And that I fondly do myself beguile,
While these receiv'd opinions I ename.

Davies.

To ENSÈ, v. a. [ensuer, Fr.]

1. To follow as a consequence to promises.

Let this be granted, and it shall hereupon plainly ensue, that the light of scripture once shining in the world, all other light of nature is therewith in such sort drowned, that now we need it not. Huker.

2. To succeed in a train of events, or course of time.

The mans was noble.
But with his last attempt he whip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhor'd.

Huker.

Bishops are placed by collation of the kings,
without any precedent election or confirmation ensing.

Hayward.

Of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue.

Matt.

With mortal heat each other shall pursue;
What wars, what wounds, what slaughter shall ensue!

Dryden.

Impairs then those hills which may ensue.

To me, but those who with importent hate
Pursue my life.

Rous's Ambitious Stepmother.

Then were Gracious gracefull way'd her fao;

Pope.

To ENSÈRANCE, n. s. [from ensure.]

1. Exemption from hazard, obtained by the payment of a certain sum.

2. The sum paid for security.

To ENSÈRANCER, n. s. [from ensurance.]
He who undertakes to exempt from hazard.

The vain enxurers of life,
And they who most perform'd, and promis'd last,
Ev'n Short and Hobbes, forsook th'unequal strife.

Dryden.

To ENSÈ, v. a. [from sure, assur.]

1. To ascertain; to make certain; to secure.

It is easy to entail debts on succeeding ages, but how to ensure peace for any term of years is difficult enough.

Swift.

2. To exempt any thing from hazard by paying a certain sum, on condition of being reimbursed for miscarriage.

To ENSÈRANCE, n. s. [from ensure.]
One who makes contracts of ensurance; one who for a certain sum exempts any thing from hazard.

Tentacular. n. s. [from table.]

Tentacular.

The architrave, frise, and cornice of a pillar; being in effect the extremity of the flooriw, which is either supported by pillars, or by a wall, if there be no columns.

Harris.

Entail n. s. [feudum tollitum, from the French entaille, cut, from taille to cut.]

1. The estate entail'd or settled, with regard to the rule of its descent.

2. The rule of descent settled for any estate.

3. Engraver's work; inlay. Obsolete.

Weil it appeared to have been of old.
A work of rich entail, and curious mold.
Woven with mingles and wild imagery.

Fair Q.

To ENTAIL, v. a. [tailleur to cut; entaille, Fr.]

1. To settle the descent of any estate, so that it cannot be by any subsequent possessor bequeathed at pleasure.

1. Here entra'il.
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever. Shak.
Had Richard unconstrained design'd the throne, A king can give no more than his own.
The title stood entra'il'd, had Richard had a son. Dryd.
2. To fix unalienably upon any person or thing.
Now ever had a privilege of infallibility entra'il'd to all he said. Dryg. on Bedes.
The intermperate and unjust transmit their bodily infirmities, and deliverances to their children, and entra'il a secret curse upon their estates. Tituban.
3. To cut.Obsolete. In the following passage it is neuter.
The mortal steel, dispices entra'il'd, Deep in my breast, quite through the walls, That a large purple stream adown their gianteaus falls.

To En'ta'me. v. a. [from tame.] To tame; to subjugate; to subdue.
To not your inky brows, your black silk hair, Your bulky gargles, and your check of cream, That can en'tame my spirits to your worship. Shak.

To En'tangle. v. a. [A word of uncertain etymology.]
1. To inwrap or insnare with something not easily extricable, as a net; or something adhesive, as briars.
2. To lose in multiplied involutions; as in a labyrinth.
3. To twist, or confuse in such a manner as that a separation cannot easily be made; to make an entangled knot.
4. To involve in difficulties; to embarrass; to perplex.

Now all labour
He knew not how to wrestle with desperate contingencies, and so abhorred to be entangled in such.

Clarend.
5. To puzzle; to bewildcr.
The duke, being questioned, neither held silence as he might, nor constantly denied it, but entangled himself in his doubtful tale. Hogward.
I suppose a great part of the difficulties that perplex mens thoughts, and entangle their understandings, would be easily resolved.

Locke.
6. To entangle by captious questions or artful talk.
The Pharisees took counsel how they might en'tangle him in his talk. Matt. xx. 15.

7. To distract with variety of cares.
Now that warrs entangleth himself with the affairs of this life. 2 Tim. ii. 4.

8. To multiply the intricacies or difficulties of a work.

ENTAnglement. n. s. [from entangle.]
1. Involvement of any thing intricate or adhesive.
2. Perplexity; puzzle.
The most improved spirits are frequently caught in the entanglements of a tenacious imagination. Glanville's Specus.
There will be no greater entanglements, touching the notion of God and his providence. More. It is to fence against the entanglements of equivocall words, and the arts of sophistry, that distinctiveness be here multiplied. Leake.

ENTAngler. n. s. [from entangle.] One that entangles.

To En'ter. v. a. [enter, Fr.]
1. To go or come into any place.
I with the multitude of my redeem'd, Shall enter heaven's long absent. Metam. A king of repute and learning entered the lists against him. Atterbury.
2. To initiate in a business, method, or society.
The eldest being thus enter'd, and then made the fashion, it would be impossible to hinder them. Locke.
3. To introduce or admit into any counsel, They of Rome are enter'd in our counsell.
And know how we proceed. Shaks. Coriolanus.
4. To set down in a writing.
Mr. Pang, have you enter'd the action?
It is enter'd. Shaks. Henry IV.
Agues and fevers are entered promiscuously, yet in the few bills they have been distinguished. Grant Th. n. v.
1. To come in; to go in.
Be not slothful to go and to enter to possess the land.
Other creature here.

2. To penetrate mentally; to make intellectual entrance.
He is particularly pleased with Livy for his manner of telling a story, and with Sallust for his entering into eternal principles of action. Addison.
They were not capable of entering into the numerous concurring springs of action. Watts.
3. To engage in.
The French king hath often entered on several expensive projects, on purpose to dissipate wealth. Addison to the War.

4. To be initiated in.
O pity and shame, that those who to live well
Enter'd so fail,' should turn aside! Milton.
As soon as they once entered into a taste of pleasure, pithiness, and magnificence, they fell into a thousand vanities, conspiracies and divisions. Add.

ENTER'D. n. s. [enter and deal.]
Reciprocal transactions. Obsolete.
For he is practis'd well in policy, And thereto doth his courting most apply: To learn the enticed princes strange.
To mark them intent of counsels, and the change of states. Hubber's Tale.

ENTERING. n. s. [from enter.]
Enterance; passage into a place.
It is laid waste, so that there is no house, nor enter ing in.

To Enter'lace. v. a. [entrelasser, Fr.]
To intermix; to interweave.
This lady walked outright, 'till she might see her enter new and fine close arbours; or other branches so lovingly entrelac'd one another, that it could resist the strongest violence of the sight. Sain.

ENTER'céle. n. s. [entrelace, Lat.] A rupture from the bowels pressing through or dilating the peritoneum, so as to fall down into the groin. The remedy in such cases, is chiefly by trusses and bolsters. Quincy.
If the intestine only is fallen, it becomes an enter'celce; if the omentum or epiploon, epiplocele; and if both, enteroplocele. Sharp's Surgery.

ENTER'MPHALOS. n. s. [epiphage and osis.] The anatomical account of the bowels and internal parts.

ENTER'PALLANCE. n. s. [entree and parler, Fr.] Parley; mutual talk; conference, During the enterprailance the Scots discharged against the English, not without breach of the laws of the field. Shaks. Henry V.

ENTER'PRALDER. n. s. [entre and plead.] The discussing of a point incidentally falling out, before the principal cause can take end. For example: two several persons, being found heirs to land by
7. To admit with satisfaction.

Entertainment. n. s. [from entertain.]

1. He that keeps others in his service.

It was, according to that constitution of mind, not very comprehensive or forecasting of future events after all, but an entertainer of fortune by the name of...

2. He that treats others at his table.

He shews both to the guests and to the entertainer their great mistake.

3. He that pleases, diverts, or amuses.

Entertainment. n. s. [from entertain.]

1. Conversation.

2. Treatment at the table; convivial provisions.

Arrived there, the little house they fell, Ne knew for entertainment where none was; Rest is their feast, and all things at their will; The oldest mind the best entertainment has.

Fair Queen.

3. Hospitable reception.

4. Reception; admission.

It is not easy to imagine how it should at first gain entertainment, but much more difficult to conceive how it should be universally propagated. Till there was the entertainment of their great Madrid, Waller.

5. The state of being in pay as soldiers or servants.

Now, and in other times, when entertainments are no comedies, but five-act farces.

Gog.

Entertained, adj. [entire and tissue.]

Entwined or intermixed with various colours or substances.

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial.

The entertained robe of gold and pearl. Shakesp.

Enthroned, r. a. [from throne.]

1. To place on a regal seat.

The mercy is above this accepted way; It is enthroned in the hearts of kings; It is an attribute to God himself. Shakesp.

2. To invest with sovereign authority.

This pope was no sooner elected and enthroned, but that he began to exercise his new ripeness. P Mime.

Enthusiasm. n. s. [enthusia.]

1. A vain belief of private revelation; a vain confidence of divine favour or communication.

Enthusiasm is founded neither on reason nor divine revelation, but rises from the concords of a warmed or overweening brain. Locke.

2. Heat of imagination; violence of passion; confidence of opinion.

3. Elevation of fancy; exaltation of ideas.

Imagery, is, in itself, the very height and life of poetry, which, by a kind of enthusiasm, or extraordinary emotion of soul, makes it seem to us that we behold those things which the poet postulates. Dryden.

Entertainer. n. s. [from entertain.]

1. One who vainly imagines a private revelation; one who has a vain confidence of his intercourse with God.

Let an enthusiast be principled that he or his teacher is inspired, and act upon an immediate communication of the Divine Spirit, and you in vain bring the evidence of clear reason to his doctrine. Locke.

2. One of a hot imagination, or violent passions.

Chapman seems to have been of an ardent turn, and an enthusiast in poetry. Pope's Trig. to the Ill.

3. One of revealing or exalted ideas.

At last divine Cecilia came, Lvestress of the vocal frame; The sweet enthusiast, from his sacred store, Enlarg'd the former narrow bounds, and added length to solemn sounds, With nature's mother-wit, and arts unknown before. Dryden.

Enthusiastic. adj. [entire, Fr. integer, Lat.]

1. Whole; undivided.

It is not safe to divide, but to enthrone the entire, still in general. Bacon's Collection of Good and Evil.

2. Unbroken; complete in its parts.

An antique model of the famous Laocoon is entire in those parts where the statue is maimed. Addison on Italy.

Water and earth, composed of old worn particles and fragments of particles, would not be of the same; nor could the texture now, with the earth composed of entire particles in the beginning.

3. Full; complete; comprising all requisites in itself.

The church of Rome hath rightly considered that publick prayer is a duty entire in itself, a duty requisite to be performed much oftener than seems can be the case.

An action is entire when it is complete in all its parts; or, as Aristotle describes it, when it consists of a Legis Sovereign, and an end. Spect.

Sincerely; earnest.

Love's not love, When it is mingled with regards that stand Aside from th' entire point. Shakesp. King Lear.

He run a course more entire with the king of Aragon, but more laboured and observant with the Persian Sea. Bacon.

5. Firm; sure; solid; fixed.

Entire and sure the monarch's rule must prove, Who founds her greatness on her subjects love. Prior.

7. Unmingled; unallayed.

Wraith shall be no more Then she, and in thy presence joy entire. Milton.

8. In full strength; with vigour unabated; with power unbroken.

Then back to fight again, new breath and energy, with. Spencer.

Entirely, adv. [from entire.]

1. In the whole; without division.

Euphrates, running, sunketh partly into the lakes of Chaldea, and falls not entirely into the Indian Sea. Raleigh.

2. Completely; fully.

Here finish'd he, and all that he had made View'd, and beheld all was entirely so. Dryden.

General consent entirely altered the whole frame of their government. South.
ENTRALLS. n. s. without a singular. [entrailles, Fr. tréces.]
1. The intestines; the inward parts; the guts.
What hast thy fierce heart so parch'd thy entrails:
The words, Shakesp., Henry VI.
The entrails are all without bones; save that a bone is sometimes found in the heart of a stag.
Bacon's Natural History.
I tear that harden'd heart from out her breast,
With which her entrails makes my hungry hounds feast.
Dryden.

2. The internal parts.
A precious ring that lightens all the hole,
And shews the ragged entrails of this pit. Shakesp.
He had brought to light but little of that treasure,
That lay so long hid in the dark entrails of America.
Locke.
The earth hath lost,
Most of her rilis, as entrails; being now
Wondeed no less for marble than for gold.
Ben Jonson.

To ENTRAIL. v. a. [entrailare, Ital.]
To mingle; to interweave; to diversify.
Over him, art striving to compare
With nature, did a green disper'd,
Framed of wanton ivy, flowing fair,
Through which the fragrant egantine did spread.
Him prickling pears entrail'd with roses red.
Fair Qy.
A little wicker basket,
Made of fine twigs, entrail'd curiously,
In which they gather flowers. Spenser's Faethal.

ENTRANCE. n. s. [entrant, Fr.]
1. The power of entering into a place.
Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Shakesp.
He that enters the place of the understanding,
And impartially keeps it, truth is sure to find both an entrance and a welcome too.
South.

2. The act of entering.
The reason, that I gather, he is mad,
Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner.
Of his own door being shut against his entrance.
Shakesp.

Better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways. Shakesp.
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances. Shakesp.

3. The passage by which a place is entered, avenue.
He charged them to keep the passages of the hilly country; for by them there was an entrance into Judea.
Judith.

Perdita did conclude, that the principal entrance was never to be regulated by any certain dimensions,
